BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1900. NO. 11

Editorial Paragraphs.

Wall Street thinks that it has a good thing in Secretary Gage.

The House will be lucky if it can recognize its gold standard bill when the Senate gets through with it.

How the British must feel at hearing that Alger claims that their trouble vindicates his errors? This is worse than all their defeats.

The Republicans say that the Democrats have no issue for next year. Wrong: If they had nothing else, Mark Hanna alone would be sufficient.

From recent experience, it would seem to be in order to move the Treasury Department of the government to New York City, and place it in charge of the National City Bank.

Senator Cullum of Illinois has made himself solid with the bounty jumpers, deserters and pension attorneys, by his bill pardoning all deserters and making them eligible to pensions.

How much better off has this prosperity made the laboring man with his wages raised 10 per cent. and the prices of everything he buys raised thirty to forty per cent. by the trusts?

Our great and good friend, the Sultan of Sulu, is said to object to having his salary paid in Mexican dollars, while his sovereign, William McKinley, stipulates for gold or its equivalent.

A plank in the next Democratic platform in opposition to the government going into the banking business, and the National banks taking part in the business of governing the country, should be incorporated.

Great Britain is likely to meet with a sad disappointment if she relies on having the United State as an ally if the worst comes to the worst. The Filipinos might give her advice as to the risk of banking on William McKinley.

Commissioner Chamberlain of the Navigation Bureau hits the protective tariff a hard blow when he says in his annual report that the extension of our merchant marine is required for the carrying of American goods abroad.

Senator Hoar wants the administration to tell just what it means to do with the Philippines. This is too cruel. The President should not be asked to make up his mind in a hurry, even though he might save thousands of lives, both of Filipinos and Americans.

McKinley's plan of relieving the money market by depositing internal revenue receipts in the hands of a bank whose officers engaged in bringing about the stringency, looks much like another instance of placing the lamb under the guardianship of the wolf.

Twenty years ago, the War Department cost the country $32,000,000 a year; today, it is costing $230,000,000 a year. All this money must be paid by the working men of the country, who have had nothing whatever to say regarding the war that has been inaugurated in the Philippines.

Of course the administration opposes the cutting down of southern representation in the Republican National Convention. The administration has always been able to secure a practically solid vote for renomination from the southern delegates. Harrison's renomination was entirely due to their support.

Secretary Gage should really preserve better harmony in the Treasury Department. Just as he is getting ready to supply a third dose of prosperity to the forlorn New York speculators, his Director of the Mint comes out in a statement that all such actions will only make speculation fiercer and the ultimate crash more certain.

ADDRESS

Issued By the Republicans.

"In 1898 the late Democratic candidate for Governor, with a few partisan associates, conceived the idea of passing an election law which would disfranchise the Republicans of Kentucky. The bill was denounced in unmeasured terms by many Democrats and many newspapers of that faith. However, unfortunately for the State, it became a law, and under its provisions the rights of all who opposed the Goebel Democracy have been totally disregarded. The whole election machinery was placed in the hands of the Goebel element. Election commissioners and officers of election, purporting only to be Republicans were appointed in many counties and precincts, known to be physically, mentally and in some instances morally incompetent (selected on that account), were appointed as Republican election officers in many localities. Hundreds of ballots were thrown out without excuse; many legal voters were denied the right to vote, and illegal votes taken. Challengers and inspectors were in many instances denied admission, while in many others they were forcibly ejected from the election booths.

"The Mayor of Louisville arrogated to himself the power to issue a proclamation, prohibiting people from assembling at the polls, in open defiance of the provisions of the Constitution, and 248 extra police were appointed and used to intimidate and browbeat the free men of that city. On the afternoon preceding the election eighty-seven election officers, who had been appointed to represent the Republican party, were summarily dismissed and a like number appointed in their places, who could be relied upon to favor the Democratic conspirators. The firemen were turned loose, too, and did assist the police in the intimidation of the voters, and in this way at least 10,000 persons who would have voted the Republican ticket were so alarmed that they did not attend the election.

"In addition, voters were intimidated, and many similar frauds perpetrated in Covington, Lexington and other cities of the Commonwealth, causing a loss of not less than 6,000 votes to the Republican ticket. In some of the counties actual force was employed and voters were driven away from the polls, and with a few exceptions frauds were committed in all of them. Every ballot that even bore a finger print, voted for the Republicans, was thrown out in the count. It can not be doubted that at least 40,000 votes were lost to the Republican party by these unlawful and outrageous tactics. Large sums of money, collected from Democratic officials, saloons, gambling houses, poolrooms, breweries and other sources, in and out of the State, were used to corrupt the voters of the State. Voters were hired to refrain from voting, to mutilate their ballots, or to vote the Goebel ticket. Whole precincts, that gave Republican majorities, were thrown out, and the Goebel Democratic committees and candidates inaugurated a saturnalia of crime, corruption and force.

"In Kenton county the regular Republican organization was ignored, and a few bolters allowed to name the officers of election. The Republican emblem was given to the bastard political organization, which caused confusion and lost many votes to the Republican ticket. The most high handed intimidation was resorted to by the police and others, and not even the semblance of decency was observed. In Fayette county a ballot box was stolen, and no election held in two Republican precincts, and the most outrageous frauds and intimidations were perpetrated. Notwithstanding all this, the Republican ticket was elected by a plurality of more than two thousand, although Democratic counties were held back in order that full time might be given to doctor the returns. When this announcement was made the conspirators set themselves to work to steal the State and prevent the will of the people from being carried into effect.

"In the county of Nelson they undertook to rob the Republicans of 1,188 votes cast for Gov. Taylor because of a mistake of one letter in his name made by a Democratic official. Precincts which gave Republican majorities were thrown out in various localities. Some of these attempts at grand larceny were prevented by Democratic judges, who held their oaths superior to the partsian work which the conspirators desired they should do.

"One of the election commissioners, it is charged, and the charge is not denied, offered to wage money that Mr. Goebel would be elected, and proved his consistency, at least, by deciding that he had been elected, while the remaining two took the stump for the Goebel ticket.

But the attempt to fraudulently procure certificates was futile. Nevertheless, the conspirators were unwilling to stay their hand A meeting of a few Democrats was called who, it was known, would be willing to go to any extremity to accomplish their ends, and these gentlemen advised a contest in order that an excuse might be afforded the candidates for making the same and an opportunity given to procure by fraud the offices which an outraged people had decreed should go to others. Ashamed of the conduct, and knowing that some excuse must be made even to many of their own party, a remarkable address has been promulgated and for the first time in the one hundred and eight years of the State's existence there is a contest over the offices of Governor and Lieutenant Governor."

It defends Gov. Bradley in calling out troops, says the charge that tissue ballots were used is flimsy, as like ballots were used in Democratic counties, that the Democrats set the precedent in the use of injunction, and concludes by saying.

"The charge of corruption at the hands of the Louisville and Nashville railroad is only a repetition of a slander worn threadbare in the late campaign, and even if true, which is denied, does not involve the Republican party and was more than offset by the corruption fund collected by the complainants from the sources named in this address. These conspirators have deliberately invaded the liberty of the people, and every fraud has been committed which political ingenuity could devise. No semblance of fairness was shown in the selection of election officers in a large majority of the localities in the State, and yet the people have tripumhed. We now appeal to the patriotic citizens of the Commonwealth, irrespective of party, to frown down this attempt to commit an awful crime, and to assist in removing from the statutes the odious measure, conceived in corruption and brought forth in iniquity, which has been the fruitful source of so much disturbance, anxity and excitement to the people of Kentucky."

SENATOR JONES, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee regards the prospects for victory this fall much brighter than they were at the beginning of 1896. He says Bryan's name will be the only one mentioned for the Presidency in the convention.

When the Boer war began, how the administration organs belaboured those who had protested against the Philippine war, declaring that the British supported their government, even though they opposed its acts. But some how, we don't hear very much of British unanimity of late.

THE General Assembly was organized by the Democrats. South Trimble, of Frankfort, was elected Speaker of the Lower House. In the joint caucus, last nihght, Blackburn received 84 votes as the Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator, insuring his election. The sensation of the session to date is Senator Harrell's expose, at the Monday night's Democratic caucus, of John Whallen's effort to bribe him to remain out of the caucus. He says the amount he was to receive was $4,500, and he delivered two keys to a box in a Louisville safety-vault, which he said contained the money. Whallen is under $10,000 bond.

The Present Contest.

[Western Argus.]

The contest for Governor and Lieutenant Governor will come before the Legislature; that is, the first step taken will be the drawing by lot of a Committee in each House to hear the contest. This is done on the third day of the session, and within twenty-four hours thereafter the joint committee must meet and organize by electing a Chairman and a Secretary, and fixing a day for hearing the case. It will require six members of the Committee to agree on a report, and that report is submitted to each House of the General Assembly for action. The action of the General Assembly is final.

This contest, with the contest for State offices going on before the State Election Board, will make things lively for the coming two months and a half. The Legislative session expires on March 13th, and the Gubernatorial contest must be decided before the session closes.

We believe that if Senator Goebel should be installed in the Governor's chair, and there is very little doubt on this point, that he will order an extra session of the General Assembly to cousider such laws and matters as he will bring before that body.

There never has been a contest for Governor in Kentucky. In the year 1792 Gen. Logan denied that Governor Garrard had been elected Governor, but the people of that day did not elect Governors of Kentucky. The Governor was chosen by electors of the State Senate by ballot, and the State Senators were selected in the same manner.

There was no real contest made by Gen. Logan, and Gov. Garrard held the office for the term, and was elected under the new Constitution for a second term. At this last election citizens entitled to suffrage were entitled to vote.

The present contest will be carried on without any precedent to guide it in its course. It will be interesting in many particulars, and coming in the last year of the nineteenth century, it will pass into history for the guidance of future generations.

FIGURERS FOR FARMERS.

The farmer who carefully notes comparative prices will not easily be deceived by the administration cry of "progressive prosperity." The fact of the matter is that the farmer is getting the worst of it all the time, and with increasing regularity. He takes note of the prices prevailing a year ago, and two years ago, and finds that it takes more and more of the products of his toil to buy the things he must have in his business. A year ago a farmer could buy a 100 lb. keg of steel nails with a bushel and three pecks of wheat. To-day he must trade five bushels and a peck of wheat for a 100-lb. keg of steel nails. Oats are today worth 5 per cent. more than they were this time last year, but the iron pipe which the farmer must have for his wind-mill has increased 112 per cent. Today the farmer's corn is worth less than 3 per cent. more than it was this time last year, but the barbed wire he must have to protect his grain fields and meadow land, has increased 110 per cent. The farmer's potatoes are today worth 50 per cent. less than they were this time last year. Lumber, which the farmer must have to keep his outbuildings in repair, is worth 50 per cent more. When a farmer hauls a load of hay to town he discovers that it is not worth more than it was this time last year, while the rope he must have for his farm use is sold for 115 per cent. more.

The farmer who ponders these facts—and farmers are pondering thereon—cannot be convinced that he is receiving his share of "prosperity." He notes that the prosperity is all showered on the trusts, and that he is forced to give more and more of the products of his toil for the things he must have.—Omaha World Herald.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

Has world-wide fame for marvelous cures. It surpasses any other salve, lotion, ointment or balm for Cuts, Corns, Burns, Boils, Sores, Filons, Ulcers, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Chapped Hands, Skin Eruptions; Infallible for Piles. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence.

From the fact that the British have seized our flour ships destined for Delagoa Bay, would seem to indicate that they believe it might be easier to starve the Boers than to whip them.

The Turtle Club Banquet.

Burlington's most unique social function, last week, was the Turtle Club Banquet on Thursday night at the residence of Deputy Sheriff Allphin. It was just 7 o'clock when Secretary A. B. Rouse called the roll, and ascertained that all the members except four were present, the absentees being Ed Hawes, Edwin Gaines, W. C. Brown and H. W. Blyth. Immediately after the roll call the members of the club and their invited guests assembled at the festal board in the spacious dining hall. Covers for fifty had been laid, and the menu was served in six courses, several of the wives of members of the club officiating as waiters. The last course was introduced by bringing to the table a large bowl of Roman Punch, a signal for the humorously inclined to begin the real merry-making of the occasion. J. M. Lassing the then president and ex officio toastmaster stated that after the toast feature of the evening was disposed of the club had some very important business to transact.

James L. Clore, candidate for the presidency of the club was called on to respond to the toast, "How to catch a Loggerhead Turtle," but being so hoarse he could scarcely speak above a whisper, pleaded bad voice and was excused. Other members of the club who are not orators were excused also.

Dr. Furnish responded to the toast. "Proposed ammendments to the fish law." The Doctor's remarks were elaborate and frequently applauded. This toast was intended expressly to ascertain the Senator's views on this, to the club, a very important law. The sentiments expressed by him were highly pleasing to the members.

"Why attorneys always obey the laws," was responded to by D. E. Castleman in his usually happy style. At the close of his remarks which received generous applause, he stated that at the request of his friend Clore he would read for the edification of the members a few verses of original poetry. Following is the poem:

One day not long ago,
The Club with hearts aglow,
And appetites that gnawed for turtle meat,
Set out to bag a few—
To fry and boil and stew,
For a Loggerhead is very hard to beat.

On the banks of old Gunpowder,
With voices ringing louder
Than Balaam's steed of old could bray,
The festive Loggerhead,
We dragged out of his bed,
And the finny tribe, O, how we did dismay!

But, alas and lack-a-day!
There was a man named Gray,
Who hath his spies on every sea and land;
These went before Judge Greene,
And told him what they'd seen,
And horrors! how he soaked the Turtle Band.

To the law we did resign,
And like men we paid the fine,
And we're here with hearts both brave and gay;
Here's the toast that I propose,
Of its truth the whole Club knows,
"Never hunt for Turtles in the light of day!"

Oh, the stars shine bright,
On the Turtle Club to-night.
Our hearts are so happy and gay;
And we wont go to bed,
Till we paint the old town red,
As we did Gunpowder creek, far away.

Oh! weep no more, my brethren,
Oh! weep no more, I say,
For we do not think we ought,
Catch a Turtle and get caught,
So we'll let them live until the Judgment day.

The president stated that the next thing in order was the election of officers for the ensuing year, the first to elect being a president. For that office half a dozen nominated James Clore, and the remaining members gave the nomination a hearty second, and his election was by acclamation and unanimous. He again pleaded bad voice and was excused from making a speech of thanks. J. F. Blyth and Charlie Westbay went through for vice-presidents without opposition, and Arthur Rouse was again entrusted with the offices of secretary and treasurer. The entire slate went through without a scratch.

At the conclusion of the election D. E. Castleman suggested that it was unconstitutional for a charter member to attempt an effeminate appearance, and called attention to the fact that Charles Westbay was wearing his hair parted in the middle. A motion to exclude the offending member was made and carried without permitting him to be heard, and his career as vice-president was made very brief. The retiring president stated that no dues would be collected before next term of the Circuit Court and possibly not until after the August term. This information was given in view of the fact that the club will not meet on Gunpowder for at least several months.

At this point in the proceedings J. M. Eddins arose and in a most eloquent speech on behalf of Sam Johnson, of Erlanger, presented the club with a box of good cigars. Each "smoking member" of the club responded to Mr. Eddin's speech by taking one of the cigars. Mr. Johnson was then extended a vote of thanks and made an onary member of the club, of which action Mr. Eddins was directed to wire him at the club's expense.

The ladies who assisted in preparing the supper were extended a vote of thanks as were also Mr. and Mrs. Allphin, who threw open their residence for the entertainment of the club.

NOTES

The ladies enjoyed the banquet very much.

Each plate was supported by a large paper turtle.

Several new members were received, quite a number being ladies.

The principal meeting of the club will be held on the river next summer.

Bert Gaines did an awfully hard day's travel to be present. He had his appetite with him.

Sheriff Beall and Circuit clerk Duncan have been the most liberal contributors to the club's success.

Among the remarks made by Jeff Eddins was this: "Sam Johnson is a man who never forgets his customers when in trouble."

This club has developed into the strongest organization in the town, and such proceedings as those of Thursday night will increase its popularity.

In publishing the poetry in connection with the proceedings of the club the RECORDER, in this instance departs from its policy in regard to poetry, but it does not throw down the bars.

"How to collect fines from members of the club," was Sheriff Beall's toast, mention of which was omitted at the proper place. He entertained the club a few minutes on the subject; but it seems he is not so much interested in the fines as in the question of costs.

[N. Y. Journal.]

One of the most important tasks that will confront Congress at its coming session will be the passage of some measure calculated to carry out the intent of the Interstate Commerce Law, which has practically become a dead letter.

At the recent session of the subcommittee of the Industrial Commission at Chicago evidence was given that through discriminating rebates given so a combination of capitalists Mr. Phil D. Armour and four associates were in absolute control of the grain markets of the West.

In the absence of competition, these men can pay the farmers starvation prices for their grain. Or, if necessary to crush competition the discrimination in their favor by the railroads enables them to pay two or three cents more per bushel than any competitor can profitably afford.

In other words, the railroads are the foundation stones upon which is built a most unjust system of trusts sovereignty. Their system of rebates in favor of big combinations is nothing less than highway robbery. The fact that Armour owns 18,000 cars enables him to make vast sums on the mileage of his cars alone.

Chas. Counselman, one of the Big Five, testified before the committee that he and his four fellow conspirators met daily and fixed the price of grain for the following day. They are undoubtedly enabled to do this through freight discrimination on the railroads. This discrimination in some instances is as high as nine cents a 100 pounds in their favor as against flour for export.

This discrimination has shut down or put upon half time most of the large flour mills throughout the country. Every day the railroads are strengthening their position as unprincipled and extortionate dealers in the country's merchandise.

Nothing short of government ownership of railroads will abolish the evil. It is becoming more evident every day that the corporations have no more regard for the laws of the country than for the thousands of small dealers whom they ruin annually.

William Rockefeller's new and rare orchid, which is valued at $1,000, is a cross between a Lindleyanum and a Candatum. There are only seven plants of this variety in existence. It took Mr. Rockefeller's gardener five years to get the orchid to flower properly.

In the United States the first-class passenger fares last year averaged 2.14 cents per mile. In England the first-class fare is 4 cents per mile, the third-class for inferior service is 2 cents per mile; in Prussia the service is 2.99 cents per mile and in France 2.36 cents per mile.

The order of decoration worn by the German emperor, according to a Berlin newspaper, are worth about 1,000,000 marks, or a little over $230,000. The kaiser's principal and most valuable decorations are the insignia of the black eagle, the order of the Toison d'Or. In all he has over 200 crosses, badges and other insignia.

Miss Emma Siboni, of Milwaukee, who has been commissioned by the Dowager empress of Russia to paint a miniature of her on ivory, was born in Denmark 22 years ago, and came to America when her parents died. She first established herself in Chicago as a portrait painter, but lately has confined her attention to miniature work.

Probably the smallest monarch in the world reigns over the Hindoo vassal state of Bhopaul and governs a people of more than a million souls. This dwarf is a woman, Djhan-Begum by name, but although she is about 50 years old, she does not appear larger than a child of 10. Her diminutive size does not prevent her, however, from holding the reigns of government with a firm hand.

The production of petroleum in the world is 5,000,000,000 gallons, of which 2,500,000,000 are produced in the United States of America, 2,250,000,000 in Russia, 87,000,000 in Austria, 72,000,000 in Sumatra, 30,000,000 in Java, 29,000,000 in Canada, 24,000,000 in Roumania, 15,000,000 in India, 5,000,000 in Japan, 7,000,000 in Germany, 3,000,000 in Peru, and the smaller remainder in Italy and other countries.

Miss Agnes Irwin, dean of Radcliffe college, who was recently chosen by Gov. Wolcott to serve on the Paris exposition commission, is a great-daughter of Benjamin Franklin. She was born in Washington in 1841, and is the daughter of Wm. Wallace Irwin, Her maternal grandfather was Richard Bache, grandson of Franklin. Her mother's mother was a daughter of Alexander J. Dallas.

The anniversary of Washington's death has started comment in Maryland newspapers over the condition of the senate chamber at Annapolis, where Washington resigned his commission as commander-in-chief. The Annapolis Capital calls for a restoration of the senate and house of delegates to the original design and decoration of Washington's day. Since that time, incredible as it now seems, the original decoration has been obliterated by tawdry and florid work.

The briefest biography in the congressional directory is that of a Missouri congressman. It simply says: "Dorsey W. Shackleford (Democrat), of Jefferson City, was elected to the fifty-sixth congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Richard P. Bland, June 19,1899, receiving 19,321 votes." The longest biography is that of Chauncey M. Depew. It occupies nearly a page in the directory. Nothing has been allowed to escape from the hour he was born to the day he was elected to the senate.

The "Empty Stocking" club, of Baltimore, a club for the distribution of presents for children at the Christmas season, was greatly successful this year. The Academy of Music was filled with hundreds of the little beneficiaries of the club's kindness. There was an entertainment of music and dancing and a realistic visit of Santa Claus. The empty stockings of the children were really filled and Christmas in hundreds of homes in Baltimore is the brighter for this thoughtful kindness.

Italy once had a plague that killed 10,000 persons daily. Five hundred a day died in Rome. In one year 200,000 citizens of Constantinople died. The epidemic of 1847-1849 was the worst ever visited on man; in Asia 23,000,000 perished by it, and in Europe 25,000,000. In London 200 persons were buried daily in the Charterhouse yard. It was called "Black Death." The plague in England in 1741 destroyed more people than the continual wars for the 15 preceding years. "Sweating sickness," prevailed in England for three years.

IMPORTANT STEP

Gen. Buller, it is Said, Will Renew His Attempt to Relieve Ladysmith.

Boers Still Keep Their Guns in the Vicinity of Kimberley, and Are Able to Summon Reinforcements Rapidly.

London, Dec. 30.—The latest special dispatches from Chievely Camp hint darkly at some important movement as imminent. This is interpreted with some misgivings to men that Gen. Buller contemplates a renewal of his attempt to relieve Ladysmith.

It is reported by the same dispatches that the Boers have not retired to the north bank of the Tugela river, being afraid that the swollen stream may bar their retreat. They are also moving their langers nearer Ladysmith, probably with the intention of putting further pressure on the garrison, which now seems to be suffering pretty heavily from bombardment. It is difficult, however, to conceive that Gen. Buller would make another frontal attack, especially now that the river is rising, and an additional indication that this is not his purpose is the fact that he has removed his headquarters back to Frere. The Boer movement northward from the Tugela is quite in keeping with the enemy's usual plan of securing a safe line of retreat. It is known that further artillery is due to arrive for Gen. Buller, but the belief here is that his forces even then will be too weak. He may, however, be animated by a desire to accomplish something before the arrival of Lord Roberts and to satisfy the keenness of his men to retrieve their defeat.

The reported engagement with Kaffirs is very vague, and can not be explained pending the arrival of later dispatches. The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, brother-in-law of Lord Lansdowne, says the war office would countenance a scheme to enroll volunteers in a sort of preparatory stage, in order to learn drills and the like.

The Rothchilds have donated £2,000 to the Buckinghamshire volunteer fund. It is estimated that £200,000 will be contributed privately to volunteer funds throughout the country. Already the fund for the relief of the families of soldiers exceeds £500,000.

Kimberley, Friday, Dec. 22, via Modder River, Wednesday, Dec. 27.—Before dawn to-day a detachment of the mounted forces with artillery and light infantry moved out in a westerly direction. Boer artillery from Kamperdam opened fire at Otos kopje, Kimberley fort replying with 20 shells.

The British force reconnoitered outposts along Lazaretto ridge, the Boer patrols retreating.

Having accomplished this and having discovered Boer reinforcements approaching from Wimbledon ridge, Col Chamier, with the Royal artillery, exchanged a dozen shells as soon as the guns could be limbered up. Some 500 Boers poured in a heavy fire from their earthworks, the British finally retiring with the loss of one horse.

The movement showed that the Boers were still keeping their guns in the vicinity of Kimberley and are able to summon reinforcements rapidly. It also showed their proneness to vacate a position immediately when weaker than the opposing force.

The number of members of the house of commons who have volunteered for the front threaten seriously to reduce the government's majority when parliament re-assembles.

London, Dec. 30.—During the continued lull in the military operations in South Africa the papers are filled with letters and articles criticizing the government and the campaign, and suggesting remedies, improvements and alterations in the plans and the like.

It is now estimated that the war will cost £60,000,000 ($300,000,000), and it is suggested that the sinking fund of the national debt should be suspended for five or six years, in order to defray the cost.

Cape Town, Thursday, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Cradock reports heavy firing in the direction of Stormberg. It is supposed this is connected with Gen. Gatacre's attempt to reopen communication with the Indwe collieries.

London, Dec. 30.—The war office has received a dispatch saying that the Indwe colliery line is now working again.

London, Dec. 30.—Dispatches from all parts of South Africa emphasize the great enthusiasm among the troops and public occasioned by the appointment of Gens. Roberts and Kitchener.

A dispatch from Ladysmith says: "The Boers have mounted another howitzer on Surprise hill, replacing the gun captured in the sortie of the rifle brigade. While they watch us nightly with a searchlight and bombard the place daily, they show no signs of assaulting the town. They probably think they can starve us out but we have plenty of provisions.

"The total casualties since the siege began are 70 men killed and 236 wounded.

Gen. Cronje reports from the Modder river December 24 that the Boers captured two British forts at Kurnman December 17.

According to a dispatch from Ladysmith, dated Wednesday, December 20, the heat then was intense, being 101 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade. There were many cases of enteric fever in the town at that time but not enough to cause alarm. On the other haud, reports from Boer sources on the continent assert that typhoid fever is epidemic in Ladysmith.

The Transvaal government, according to information supplied by Boer sympathizers threatens to "reduce the rations of British prisoners if Great Britain stops the entry of food by Delagoa bay."

REMINDERS.

The British Lion—Yes, I think I shall remember the Boers for a time.

GERMAN STEAMER AGROUND.

She Struck About a Quarter of a Mile Off Dungeness—In a Bad Condition.

London, Dec. 30.—A large German mail steamer whose name has not yet been ascertained, has gone aground during a terrific gale in the East bay about a quarter of a mile off Dungeness, the southern extremity of Kent. Heavy seas are breaking over the vessel and the life boats are unable to reach her. Fears are entertained for the safety of the passengers.

The signals of distress were observed from the Sandhead lighthouse.

London, Dec. 30.—It was learned Saturday morning that the steamer aground near Dungeness is the Pelotas, of the Hamburg-South American line. She was bound from Santos to Rotterdam.

Places for Instructing Supervisors.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The census bureau has announced the following places and dates where supervisors in various sections will assemble for instructions in taking the census of 1900.

Charlotte, S. C., January 4, 1900; Atlanta, January 5; New Orleans, January 8; Houston, Tex., January 5; Memphis, January 11, and Cincinnati, January 12.

Assistant Director Wines has been ordered to give the instructions.

Guns for Cape Town.

London, Dec. 30.—The Daily Mail asserts that several guns have been removed from the forts at Plymouth by night, and that these will be sent to Cape Town.

A dispatch from Calcutta says about 3,000,000 persons are receiving famine relief. The government is spending nearly two lakhs of rupees daily.

BUBONIC PLAGUE

Several Cases of the Terrible Disease Has Appeared at Honolulu.

The News Creates Some Alarm Among the California State Officials and City Officers of San Francisco.

San Francisco, Dec. 30.—The news of the breaking out of the plague in Honolulu brought here by the transport Centennial, has created some alarm among the state and city health officials and every precaution is being taken to prevent a possible admission of the disease into this city. The transports Centennial and Newport, which arrived Wednesday night, and the Tartar, which arrived from Manila Thursday, are now at the quarantine station undergoing fumigation and will be detained at Angel island for some time. The steamer Gaelic is due here Friday from the Orient via Honolulu and will be sent to quarantine and held there until all possible danger is over.

News from reliable sources from the Orient states that the disease is prevalent in China and Japan to an unusual extent and that the officers at Manila have taken precautions to prevent the plague from getting a foothold there. News from Bombay is to the effect that the plague is rampant in India, and in view of these conditions the authorities in this city and every port on the Pacific coast will take strenuous precautions to prevent the introduction of the bubonic plague on this coast.

San Francisco, Dec. 29.—Mail advices received late Thursday night from Honolulu give additional details of the bubonic plague which has appeared there and indicate that the conditions are not very alarming. Five deaths have occurred, one native and four Chinese. No deaths have occurred since December 12, when the disease first appeared.

A quarantine system for island vessels was established and a district practically co-extensive with Chinatown was put in quarantine. Volunteer inspectors were called for and the work of cleaning the district was at once begun. The next day the national was called out and has since been doing duty guarding the quarantine district.

Chinatown, the seat of the trouble, is now undergoing a thorough cleaning and it is believed that the scourge has been stamped out. It is thought the germs of the plague were brought from Kobe, Japan, on the Norwegian steamer Thyena, which arrived at Honolulu November 28 with 700 Japanese emigrants.

San Francisco, Dec. 30.—The steamer Gaelic arrived Friday from the Orient. The Gaelic was sent to quarantine owing to the plague scare, but her cabin passengers were allowed to land. A press correspondent at Honolulu sends the following under date December 23:

"There have been no new cases of plague since last advices. There have been several sudden deaths and in each instance rumor assigned the plague as the cause. Investigation proved otherwise. On the 19th the quarantine over Chinatown was lifted and business is now going on as usual in that department. There have been no deaths by plague since the 12th inst. Up to that time five victims were reported. The board of health now claims but two deaths were caused by the scourge, the remaining cases being doubtful or suspicions.

The council of state will be asked to appropriate $100,000 with which to carry out the present plan of altering and improving Chinatown in conformity with the sanitary programme of the board of health.

PUBLISHER'S WILL.

Late Owner of the Youth's Companion Leaves an Estate of $2,500,000.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29.—The will of the late Daniel Sharp Ford, publisher of the Youth's Companion, filed for probate in the Middlesex county probate court Thursday, disposes of an estate of about $2,500,000. The will gives $77,000 direct to public charitable and religious institutions, mostly in Massachusetts and provides annuities for others.

The will also bequeaths $350,000 to the Baptist Social Union, subject to conditions, among them, that it shall become a corporation within two years after the testator's death. This sum is to be used for the erection of a building for the use of the union.

Of the residue one-sixth goes to the American Baptist Home Mission Union and one-ninth each to several other New England charities.

Ex-Congressman Griffin Dead.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 30.—Ex-Congressman Michael Griffin, head of the state tax commission, died suddenly Friday evening of apoplexy in his office.

New Skating Record.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 29.—The fastest skating ever done in the world for half a mile and a quarter mile straight away was accomplished Thursday on Lake Minnetonka, near this city. Norval Baptie, of Bathgate, N. D., lowered the quarter-mile record of 31 1-4 seconds, made by John S. Johnson, to 28 1-3 seconds. After a rest of 20 minutes Baptie started for the half-mile record of Joe Donahue, of New York, and Olaf Rudd, of Minneapolis, and lowered it from 105 2-5 to 1:00 2-5. The records are official.

FILIPINO STRONGHOLD TAKEN

Gen. Otis Reports an Important Engagement—Supplies Captured and Many Insurgents Killed.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The adjutant general received a message from Gen. Otis, telling of the capture of a mountain stronghold beyond Montalban, northeast of San Mateo, formerly supposed to be impregnable, and the capture of many prisoners and a large quantity of arms and ammunition. The dispatch is as follows:

"Manila, Dec. 30.—Col. Lockett, with regiment, two battalions 46th (Col. Schuyler), one 47th (Col. Borst) and company 27th infantry, two guns, Capt. Vandusen, attacked the enemy 600 strong on mountain stronghold beyond Montalban, northeast San Mateo. Large number killed and wounded; 24 taken prisoners. Lockett captured one cannon; 40 rifles, 20,000 rounds ammunition, 500 pounds powder, arsenal fortifications, all food supplies and considerable other property. This captured point located on mountain trail and formerly supposed to be impregnable. Our casualties, Lieut. Enslow, 47th cavalry and five enlisted men wounded, mostly slightly. Private Matson, 45th infantry, drowned.

First Lieut. Edward R. Taylor, 12th infantry, was run over by a train crossing the Agno river near Bautista on the 26th instant and died in a few hours.

"OTIS."

Manila, Dec. 30.—10:10 p. m.—The insurgents who evacuated the coast towns between Dagupan and Vigan fleeing to the mountains before the advancing Americans, are returning in small bands to the towns the Americans do not occupy, terrorizing the natives and Chinamen, who showed friendship for the Americans. The natives and Chinamen are seeking the protection of the American garrisons.

Col. Wesson's cavalry, which is scouting in the vicinity of Trinidad found evidence of Filipino soldiers being in that vicinity, but it was impossible to bring about an engagement.

The recent increase in the garrison of Namacpacan against a threatened rebel attack on Christmas day, averted trouble.

Col. Luther R. Hare, of the 33d infantry, who has been following a party of American prisoners, lost track for three days about December 20, over such signs and evidences of their passage that they customarily left behind them. It is thought the prisoners were separated and conveyed to remote parts of the mountains, thus increasing the difficulties of Gen. Young's troops to effect a rescue.

Gen. Wheeler, who was recently in Manila, requesting an appointment south in the line of the expected campaign, is now at Panique.

EDUCATIONAL CONVENTION.

Many Interesting Addresses Were Made and Officers Elected.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 30. — The Southern Educational association concluded its labors Friday and the most successful convention in its history is ended. At the morning's session Hon. John W. Abercrombie, superintendent of public instruction of Alabama, delivered an eloquent address on "Education in the old and in the new south."

Dr J. H. Kirkland, Vanderbilt university, Nashville; Dr. E. A. Alderman, president University of North Carolina; S. C. Gilbreath, University of Nashville, were among the other speakers. Miss Patty Hill, of Louisville, Ky., was elected president of the kindergarten department.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows. President, Dr. R. R. Fulton, University of Mississippi; vice president, Dr. Junius Jordun, University of Arkansas; secretary, P. P. Claxton, Greensboro, N. C.; treasurer, John D. Yerby, Mobile, Ala.

ADAMS ON THE STAND.

President of the Knickerbocker Club Testifies Again Molineux.

New York, Dec. 30.—In the Molineux poisoning case Friday, John D. Adams, of the Knickerbocker Athletic club, was the chief witness. He said he was not a handwriting expert, but that he was familiar with the handwriting of Molineux, and that when the case first appeared in the newspapers he was struck with the resemblance between Molineux's writing and the address of the poison package. He collected a number of specimens of the defendant's writings from the records of the club, and turned them over to the prosecution. He said that he was sure that the poison package was addressed by Molineux.

Ex-Congressman Howard in the Race

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 30.—Ex-Congressman M. W. Howard was in Birmingham Friday conferring with populist leaders with reference to entering the race for United States senator. It is understood Howard will make the race.

Indebtedness to Country Banks.

New York, Dec. 30.—Harper & Brothers' indebtedness to country banks, it was said Friday by Thomes, familiar with the reorganization affairs of the company, would amount to $1,700,000, and negotiations are under way for the organization of a protective committee, representing the banks holding the paper of the firm. Many of the banks purchased the paper on Harper & Brothers without investigation, and it follows now that they have a number of unsecured claims.

HE WANTED THE TROUSERS.

A young fellow on the South side has a negro valet, an old-fashioned southern darky.

"Here, Jeff; I want those trousers cleaned and pressed to-day," he said, pointing to a rather loud-striped garment that Jeff has long had his eyes on.

Next morning Jeff brought the trousers back with a big grease spot still prominent on one knee.

"Can't you get that spot out?" said the owner of the trousers.

"No, sah."

"Did you try turpentine?"

"Fo', de Lawd, I done saccharated 'em wid turpentine."

"Did you try coal oil?"

"Yes, sah; po'ed a quart ob ile on 'em."

"Did you try a hot iron?"

"Puty nigh bu'nt 'em up!"

"Did you try benzine?"

"Done tried benzine an' kerosene, and all de other zines, an' 'tain't tech dat grease spot."

"Well, did you try 'em on?" queried the master with a twinkle in his eye.

"Yes, sah," replied Jeff, with alacrity, "an' dey's a puffect fit, grease spot an' all, sah."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Cheerfully Indorsed.

She handed the check to the paying teller. She was calm and collected, as if it was an everyday matter.

"Madam," said the teller, gently, "you have forgotten to indorse it."

"Indorse it?" with a little worried smile.

"Yes, you must write your name on the back here to show that you will repay this bank in case the issuer of this check should fail to answer our call."

"Oh!" she said, accepting the pen.

When the teller looked at the check again this is what he read:

"The —— bank has always paid up what it owes, and you need have no worry. Therefore I indorse this check. Very truly yours, Mrs. J. R. Blanks."—Syracuse Herald.

AN ADDRESS.

It Is Issued by the Democratic State Committees of Kentucky.

The Grounds of the Contest to Be Made For the State Officers by the Late Democratic Candidates.

The address issued by the democratic state committees, setting forth the grounds of the contests to be made for the state offices by Mr. Goebel and the other democratic candidates, is as follows:

The democratic party of Kentucky, through its several state committees, has unanimously declared that the best interests of the party, as well as justice, demands that contests shall be made by every candidate on the democratic ticket for the respective offices to which they were nominated. The committees feel that it is proper that they should, in a concise form, state the grounds upon which they base their action.

The state board of election commissioners, at its recent session, issued certificates of election to all of the republican candidates for the state offices, but the board expressly declared in the opinion that it rendered that it acted simply as a canvassing board, without power or authority, as it construed the law, to inquire into the legality or validity of any votes. The board went further and in substance expressed the opinion that, if clothed with the authority to go behind the returns and determine the matters in contention, the certificates of election would not have been issued to the parties who received them.

We feel that in the light of the action of this board the democratic party can not do less than carry its contention to the tribunals created by law for its determination.

The grounds upon which the contest is based consist of the protest against the use of tissue ballots in many of the overwhelming republican counties of the state. The use of these ballots is not only in violation of the letter of the law, but is in utter and open defiance of the spirit of the law, and the use of the ballots furnishes, not prim facie, but conclusive evidence of purposed fraud.

Another ground of contest is because of the plain violation and defiance of the law by the late republican governor of the state, who, whilst actively engaged in the making of stump speeches and the prosecution of a partisan political canvass, ordered out the military, and, in violation of both law and precedent, assumed personal command of the troops in the metropolis of the state, parading the streets of Louisville on the day of the election with his soldiers and Gatling guns, invading the voting booths and forcing into them, against the protest of the lawfully appointed election officers, pretended inspectors and challengers, who, the highest court of the state has decided, has no lawful right to be present.

The issuance of the certificates of election to the republican candidates is contested upon the further ground that both a federal and a state judge, without warrant of law and in defiance of every prompting of fair dealing and decency, interfered with the holding of the state election; the one by menacing charges to a grand jury and by the employment of deputy United States marshals; and the other by issuing every mandamus and injunction asked for by the republican party, which latter judicial acts have been declared by the supreme judicial tribunal of the state to have been unlawful.

Another ground is the use in the interest of the republican party of an immense corruption fund contributed by the most powerful railroad corporation of the commonwealth, whereby many thousands of votes were bought against the democratic party and its candidates, because that party in the platform adopted in its state convention dared to advocate measures of relief demanded by the people of the commonwealth.

Attention is called to the fact that, although the most heated political campaign that ever occurred in the commonwealth preceded the recent election, yet over ten thousand legally registered democratic voters failed to vote in the city of Louisville alone. This fact can only be accounted for by the unlawful use of the military power of the commonwealth by the republican governor, and by the unlawful use of the judicial power by a partisan judiciary, whereby wholesale intimidation was effected.

These are the principal grounds upon which the democracy of Kentucky rests the contests that it has declared shall be instituted. If the law requiring all elections in this state to be held by secret ballot is to be openly and flagrantly defied in republican counties and republican districts, and if elections are to be determined by the counting of votes so given, then we have reached the end of free and fair elections in Kentucky. If the future of our people is to be determined with the military arm of the state dominating the citizen in the deposit of his ballot, then elections have become worse than a farce, and made simply the prelude to a tragedy in which the last semblance of individual liberty and popular government is to be sacrificed.

There can be no greater menace to popular rights and the freedom of the citizen than the employment of the military arm of the government for the furtherance of partisan purposes, unless it be the more insidious and cowardly practices employed in the recent election by both federal and state judges, at the dictation of one of the parties of the contest. Upon no conceivable ground can a federal judge either justify, excuse or palliate his interference in an election for state officers only; whilst the action of Judge Toney, by decision of the court of appeals, is stripped of every semblance of excuse, and, left in its native deformity, it is to be condemned, rebuked and denounced by the people who were its victims.

No more important question confronts the people of the commonwealth than the question whether a great corporation owned, not in Kentucky, not in the United States, but in Europe, can buy an election, and thus control the making, construction and execution of the laws. Even now the hirelings of this corporation boast that it will buy control of the general assembly of the commonwealth, and thereby prevent the enactment of laws the people desire, and prevent the democratic candidates from obtaining possession of the offices to which they were duly elected.

Both before and since the election on November 7, 1899, the republican party has continuously employed threats of violence and practice of intimidation; nor have they even desisted yet.

To all this threatening the democracy has replied that it would stand upon the law; that it would carry its contentions to the tribunals which the law has established for their decision, and to the verdict of these tribunals alone it would bow in submission.

If the board of election commissioners had no authority to pass upon the question at issue (as it declared it had not), we simply propose to go to those who have this authority, and abide by the judgment that may be rendered. What the law shall declare to be ours we claim. We ask no more; we will take no less.

Should the practices herein complained of pass without protest, the presidential election of next year, and all other elections hereafter held within the limits of Kentucky, would fail to afford an opportunity to the people of the state to express their sentiments at the polls. If the most important rights of the citizens are to survive in Kentucky the laws governing elections must be fairly enforced; judges must be taught that their judicial powers are not to be exercised upon the demand and in the interest of either a political party or a corporation to which they may owe an allegiance even superior to that which they owe to the law. The great corporate monopolies must be taught that, elections can not be bought by them, and governors must be made to know that in times of profound peace the law of the commonwealth is not to be pushed aside by the bayonet.

Your committees are not unaware of the fact that the contests now proposed to be inaugurated should not be entered upon for light or trivial reasons; that consideration of a personal or partisan character should be ignored in deciding upon so grave and important a step; that the passions usually aroused in a heated campaign should be given a proper cooling time, and that only considerations of an overwhelming public necessity should be allowed to control. We believe these conditions have been observed. Not willing to trust our own judgments in a matter so profoundly affecting the interests of the state, we summoned in joint council with us a large number of the wisest and most conservative citizens from all parts of the state. It was the unanimous verdict of these gentlemen that a blow had been struck at the very vitals of free government by the methods and practices enumerated, and that every consideration that can impel free men to act for the protection of their most sacred rights demands that the foul wrongs inflicted on the state shall be redressed through the agencies appointed by law.

In the proceedings to accomplish this end it is but just to say that the ambition of no man or candidate has been considered. The situation rises above the individual, and becomes one of grave peril to the citizenship of the whole state; and the candidates of the democratic party, in obedience to the supreme duty of the hour, are used merely as the instruments by which these wrongs may be rectified and the dignity and honor of the state vindicated.

These are the reasons that have moved your committees to the inauguration of these contests, and we confidently expect the democracy of Kentucky to vindicate the action we have taken.

A UNIQUE BOYCOTT.

The Chicago Unionists Will Refuse to Buy Non-Union Bread After January 1.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—A unique boycott of non-union bread is to be inaugurated January 1 by the union bakers of Chicago. The organizations have formed a plan to get their wives, daughters, sisters and relatives to refuse to purchase all the bread except such as bears the label of trades union bakers.

More than 7,000 of the organized journeymen bakers are in this scheme and they are to have the active support of the 100,000 members of Chicago's other unions. It is to be a fight upon an alleged combination or trust of local bakeries, which are asserted to be oppressively opposed to organized labor.

Troops for the Philippines.

New York, Dec. 26.—One thousand troops are assembling and drilling at Fort Sheridan, Davids Island, for duty in the Philippine islands. About 500 of the soldiers will go to the infantry, 300 to the cavalry and 200 to the hospital corps and artillery to take the places of those who have been discharged or have died. Thirty-five officers who have been assigned to service in the Philippines are also assembling at the fort and are assisting in drilling the recruits. It is expected that the entire force will sail on the United States transport Sumner, via the Suez canal, January 15.

A Negro Runs Amuck.

Buffalo, Wyo., Dec. 26.—A Negro named Lucius Miller, employed at a Union Pacific grading camp, armed himself with a pitchfork, and swearing he would kill every man in camp, started on his mission. He cracked the heads of several graders and was having everything his own way when he went to the contractors' supply wagon, where he met Troy Pendleton, a white man. Pendleton watched his chance, whipped out his revolver and fired full in the Negro's face. Miller fell to the ground mortally wounded and died not long afterward.

Opening of the Holy Door.

Rome, Dec. 26.—The pope solemnly inaugurated the Holy Year by performing the impressive ceremony of opening the holy door of St. Peter's cathedral at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. The ceremony was performed in the vestibule, which was handsomely decorated, in the presence of the papal officers, the members of the diplomatic corps, leading members of the Roman nobility and a number of specially invited guests.

Roland Reed Seriously Ill.

New York, Dec. 26.—Roland Reed, the actor, is seriously ill at St. Lukes hospital, suffering from appendicitis, and his fall engagements for the holiday week have been cancelled. Up to Monday night no surgical operation had been performed, and the surgeons had not decided whether or not one would be necessary. They are hopeful of recovery.

Attempted Murder and Suicide.

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 26.—Peter J. Holbert, an electrician of this city, shot his wife and then turned the weapon on himself, inflicting wounds from which he died. Mrs. Holbert will recover.

TARIFF FOR TRUSTS ONLY.

Republican Legislation Looks Toward the Upbuilding of Monopolies.

In a pamphlet entitled "The United States Merchant Marine on the Oceans," issued by the Marine Review of Cleveland, O., Mr. E. T. Chamberlain, United States commissioner of navigation, reviews the progress of the world's maritime nations.

This review is especially interesting as containing a frank republican confession of the truth that there is now no good reason why a high protective tariff should be maintained by this country. In speaking of the marked increase of interest in the establishment of an American merchant marine, Mr. Chamberlain attests to the necessity for such a marine service by stating that it is demanded for the carrying of American goods abroad. "Our manufactures have developed so rapidly," he says, "that the place the home market filled in the political discussions of 15 or 20 years ago is now filled by the foreign markets."

Save as a factor in the further strengthening and fostering of the trust system it is difficult to see. In the light of this authoritative republican utterance, why the tax of a high protective tariff should be imposed on the American people. It certainly is not needed for the protection of American manufacturers from foreign competition, since American manufacturers thus so successfully compete in foreign markets that their home trade has become of secondary importance. And surely the foreign manufacturer, thus undersold in his own markets, cannot undersell Americans in American markets, with freight, insurance and other legitimate and unavoidable charges added to the cost of his production.

It will be interesting to hear a republican plea for the Dingley tariff under these acknowledged conditions that shall indicate anything beyond a determination to uphold the trust control of American markets by making exorbitant prices for trust goods possible. Already, thanks to the tariff, Americans pay more for American manufactures than the same American goods are sold for in foreign markets. If this means anything but a wrongful tax on American consumers for the sole benefit of American trust organizations its further meaning is not apparent on the face of the figures. The American people will be blind indeed if they now fail to see that the present protective tariff is nothing more nor less than an arbitrary levy for trust benefit at their expense, upheld by the republican party at trust dictation. — St. Louis Republic.

EXPANSION EXPENSIVE.

Large Bills of Expense Will Follow the Republican Policy of Imperialism.

Economy and expansion are not companions. This fact is demonstrated by Secretary Gage, who estimates that the expenses of the present congress will be about $1,250,000,000.

Expansion has a large and magnificent sound when the word is spoken by a typical imperialist like Mark Hanna, but it also implies a large and magnificent bill of expenses.

One of Hanna's pet schemes of expanding commerce is to subsidize American ships. That means that a business which don't pay under nominal conditions can be made profitable if the government will only furnish the money to make the profit.

Republican editors are not unanimously in favor of this kind of expansion and the Philadelphia Ledger, a sound republican newspaper, takes occasion to say:

"A determined and persistent effort, sustained by a powerful combination, is about to be made in behalf of granting ship subsidies. If $9,000,000 to rich corporations, which seem to look upon a raid on the treasury as a simple and easy method of making money, Senator Lodge has introduced a bill appropriating $11,000,000 for a Pacific cable; the Nicaragua canal project is waiting a favorable opportunity, and Senator Cullom, not satisfied with the enormous yearly expenditures of $145,000,000 for pensions, has fathered a bill for removing the disabilities of soldiers who deserted or were dishonorably discharged, on the ground that the time has arrived when the government can be magnanimous and forgive any little indiscretion of the soldiers of the civil war.

"In the grand rush of imperialism there seems danger that some of our legislators will lose not only their sense of dignity in prying open the treasury, but the sense of ordinary integrity."

These words are timely and should be carefully considered by the advocates of expansion. But it remains for the people to cast out of power the party which favors expansion at the expense of the people who pay the taxes.—Chicago Democrat.

Trusts Protected.

It is certain that the prevalence of trusts in the United States is due in large measure to an undue tariff protection given certain American manufacturers. There is reason to believe that one of the most effective blows which could be leveled against a trust combination would be to permit the entrance into the United States, on equal terms with the trust product, of the similar product of foreign manufacturers—This would tend to restore the competition which the formation of the trust has ended and to break the monopoly the trust has created. This fact alone raises trusts to the dimensions of a national issue. So it will remain unless the present congress takes drastic action to end the abuse. There are ways a-plenty for those who seek them and willing hands can find their tools.—St Louis Republic.

TROUBLE BETWEEN FRIENDS

An Open Rupture Between the Allied Forces of Boodle and Buncombe.

If there was any one thing which the tariff protectors felt entitled to count upon it was the full and unremitting care of their interests by the McKinley administration. Mr. McKinley was the great panjandrum of the tariff system and Mr. Hanna was his prophet. And both of them assured the beneficiaries of that system that never—no, never—would there be any action on the part of the administration which would tend to weaken the right of the tariff barons to plunder the rest of the population. It was precisely upon the strength of this representation that Mr. Hanna, in the summer of 1896, took his trusty skillet in his hand and proceeded to extract from the protected manufacturers grease sufficient to lubricate the machinery of the republican party—the results being made evident at the election in November. The famous "fat-frying" tour was successful only because the tariff barons reposed confidence in the firm of Mc & Mac. It appears that that confidence is ill requited.

At all events there is much dissension over reciprocity bills, as well as over the proposed measure which would establish free trade between the United States and our new colonial possession of Puerto Rico. The views of the administration respecting the beauty of a prohibitive tariff have undergone some change during the last 18 months, owing to the expansion policy which is now dearest to the heart of the president and Mr. Hanna. The views of the tariff beneficiaries are naturally unchanged, and there the issue is joined. The administration desires to let down the bars a trifle so that trade can "follow the flag." The contributors to the fat fund of 1896 demand the fulfillment of their contract. The result is much bitterness on both sides.

It is amusing, indeed, to listen to some of the recriminations. "Selfishness," plaintively declares the Washington correspondent of an administration organ, "jumps to the front in an effort to defeat every reciprocity measure proposed by the government." That is, the administration seeks to wriggle out of its contract with the protected manufacturers, and those gentlemen respond by lobbying to defeat such a consummation. And Mr. Kasson, the reciprocity commissioner, wails bitterly that "if these 30 articles in a treaty in which the United States have the advantage and one in which something is given to the other nation, nothing is said in this country about the 30, but all the people interested in the other one—whether it be rice or sugar or tobacco or cotton or sausages—raise a howl and pelt the senate with appeals to reject the whole thing."

This is very sad, indeed, but it was to have been expected. How can the administration make fish of one tariff beneficiary and flesh of another? Was it not nominated in the bond that a wall should be built around the entire country which should keep out competition absolutely? And of what value is a wall which contains a gate through which foreign rice or sugar or tobacco or flies or bees or sausages may enter to the great injury of honest gentlemen who paid large sums to elect Mr. McKinley president? How can that statesman defend his course in seeking to repudiate his contract?

He may try to do it, but he will fail. What is more to the purpose, his efforts toward a measure of commercial freedom are also likely to fail. For, as the disconsolate correspondent already quoted admits, the tariff barons swing the senate about as they please, and, though the sovereign may command, he cannot execute. The firm of Mc & Mac will be forced to carry on its contract willy nilly, and, as it will do so under compulsion, it can claim no credit for the proceeding.

The cheerful feature of the situation is the open rupture between the hitherto allied forces of boodle and buncombe. When certain people fall out certain other people are likely to get their own. —Chicago Chronicle.

The End of Quay.

Quay has seemed an irresistible power in Pennsylvania politics, but persistent fighting on the part of a determined opposition has had its effect. Apparently the downfall of Pennsylvania's "boss" is now in sight, Press dispatches from Washington indicate that Quay will not be seated as senator. In that event he is not likely to recover the prestige he lost when he failed of reelection at the hands of the last Pennsylvania legislature. The opposition, encouraged by results already achieved, will be greatly strengthened for further contests with Quay. The success of the movement against Quay in Pennsylvania, undertaken with little real hope of accomplishing results, is full of encouragement for the enemies of "bossism" everywhere. No "boss" is invulnerable, no matter how strongly he may seem to be intrenched.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——It needs no prolonged meditation on the part of president or congressmen to determine the power that may be exercised to "check the monopolies" which deal in articles protected under the McKinley-Wilson-Dingley tariff system. It needs only the courage promptly to assert the power of removing the tariffs upon the products of the trusts. It is evident that President McKinley is lacking in that sort of courage. He has run away from his opportunity to strike an effective blow at the root of the trust evil, preferring to shift the entire responsibility to the shoulders of congress, which means that no legislation whatever in restraint of trust formation and operation is to be looked for at the hands of the congress now beginning its labors. —Rochester Herald.

"KAH-PEE-KOG" CLUB.

BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

"DO YOU realize, gentlemen," said Smith, as the members of the Kah-pee-kog club gathered around the evening fire, "that this is to be our last evening together in these woods for at least a year? To-morrow our vacation in the Muskoka lake district ends, and by to-morrow evening, if nothing unlooked for happens, we will have landed up the door of the Alhambra, reeled in our line for the last time this year, stored our boats, and the night train on the Grand Trunk will be carrying us swiftly back to the states and to our various vocations.

"Without going into particulars, or mentioning names, it has occurred to me that this would be an excellent time to confess our prevarications so that we may quit this beautiful spot with a clear conscience. I would suggest—"

"To what do you refer, Brother Smith?" asked the Pastor.

"To put it in plain English," said Smith, "I think we have all had more or less, and that now would be a good time to tell the truth."

"I presume that you realize that there are exceptions to that statement of 'all,' Brother Smith," said the Pastor. "Now, I—"

"I made no exceptions, and intended none," said Smith. "As for myself, I am here to state now that I have lied; lied as big as I knew how and still make it a lie that might believed, and I guess you fellows swallowed it without much question."

"I have not believed a single thing you have said about fish since you have been here," said the Pastor.

"Nor I," echoed the others.

"The biggest lie that I have told since I have been here was that one about the number of bass Yorker and I caught in Henley lake. We were trying to outdo the Pastor, and did so far as the lie was concerned, and if he did not believe our story, it was because his own was not true. What we—"

"I shall have to refer this matter to the congregation when we reach home, Brother Smith," put in the Pastor.

"I would advise you not to," replied Smith, "but as I was going to say, what we did catch that day was all in the boat when we returned, and, as several members of this club counted them, it will not be disputed when I say there were 138 bass of over the legal length."

"It was only 128, for I counted them together with Husky Bill," said Tice.

"What is the matter of ten bass more or less, anyway?" replied Smith. "But there, gentlemen, in my confession, 138 bass instead of the five or six hundred that I told about, and I believe that even no one will feel better if they follow my example."

"I believe that the advice Smith gives us is good," said Yorker, "and I realize how as I never did before the enormity of the lie I told in reference to the muskellunge I caught in Crane lake."

"You don't need to make any confession of that," said the Pastor, "for everybody knew that it was a lie when you told it."

"It seems to me that I remember distinctly of your going to Crane lake to fish for muskellunge on the strength of that story," replied Yorker. "And it was not as bad as your Crown island bass story at that."

"My veracity is not in question at the present time," replied the Pastor.

"No, we will hear from you later," said Yorker, "provided, of course, your conscience is not too elastic. But to return to my Crane lake story, I simply wish to say that I did catch a muskellunge, and that it did upset our boat, but that was due to our awkwardness, rather than the size of the fish, for when we got it on shore, which we finally did, it only weighed 42 pounds."

"You told me the truth of that Crane lake story the day we were at Healy lake together," said Smith, "and you said it only weighed 37 pounds."

"What is a matter of five pounds more or less in the size of a muskellunge?" said Yorker, and Bill Reeves nudged Husky Bill when Smith did not reply.

"I have told so many different tales regarding the size and weight of fish that I have caught in these Ontario lakes and rivers," said Tice, "that I hardly know where to begin my confession."

"Why not straighten out the Moon river story of 38 muskellunge, 79 bass and 120 trout in ten hours?" asked Husky Bill.

"That might be a good place to begin at, as that story was exaggerated somewhat. The truth is that I only caught 35 muskellunge, 60 bass and no trout at all, for I did not fish for them. There are any number of trout in that stream and its tributaries, however, and I do not doubt that it would be quite possible for a man to catch as many fish as I said I had caught in the Moon river in the length of time I claimed to have fished. In reality I only fished nine hours and three-quarters. As for the other stories I have told about fishing in Kah-pee Kog and the surrounding lakes, I can cover all of them with the single statement that I never caught more than 110 bass in any one day in any of these lakes, but that, I imagine, is better than any of the rest of you ever did, if the whole truth was known."

"Gentlemen," began the Pastor, "when Brother Smith started this little experience meeting, I did not realize the good that it was to accomplish. In fact, I was afraid it would result in more harm than good, and that the prevarications—I cannot bring myself to the point of calling them lies—that have been told by several of you around these evening fires would only be again exaggerated, and that some of you at least would return to your homes with an added weight upon your conscience. It has pleased me greatly to listen to such confessions as have been made this evening, and I am sure that you feel the better for having made them. There is one thing for which I am sorry, and that is that Brother Barnes is not here to retract the story he told of catching more fish than I caught at Crown island several years ago. I am sure that had Brother Barnes been with us to-night he would have been moved to tell the real truth of that story, and so remove a load from his conscience."

"What are you going to do about that story of yours that started the trouble?" asked Tice.

"I wish to say in regard to anything that I may have told since I have been here, that to now deny the story, and offer a so-called confession would be but a farce and a lie in itself. When I told of those 500 bass myself and a friend caught in one day—"

"You said 500 before," said Smith.

"Possibly I did, but 500 was the correct number, and I only wished to correct my former statement."

"I guess those bonds you put up guaranteeing the Pastor's reputation will be declared forfeited when you get home," said Husk Bill to Smith, as they walked back to the clubhouse.

"Well, it has taught me a lesson anyway," replied Smith, "and I won't be so foolish again very soon. I am sorry for his sake as well as my own."

B. R. Gaines, the corn-king of this part of the country, is now engaged in hauling corn from Indiana. Many thousand bushels have been brought across the river this year.

The cold weather now on us will furnish the first, and probably the last opportunity, for getting ice for next summer's use. The weather prophets all agree that we are to have very little winter.

F. P. Walton has purchased a pair of gilts of Ben H. Scranton, breeder of Poland China hogs, of Rising Sun, Indiana. He saw Mr. Scranton's ad. in the RECORDER, or he never would have known of his existence. It pays to advertise your business.

Mr. Thomas Whitaker, ran a very narrow escape going home from the school entertainment. His horse was blind and he couldn't see very well himself, and the horse ran off the bridge at John Jackson's and got tangled in the wire fence, and mixed up generally. Fortunately he escaped without a scratch.

The school entertainment given by Prof. Hann was a very nice affair, and reflects credit on him for the interest manifested in his school. The house was full to overflowing and good order prevailed. Rev. Hoover was present and was the recipient of a handsome lap-robe and horse blanket, presented by the ladies of his church and others.

Your correspondent visited Petersburg the other day, and was struck with the rush of business. There was a constant stream of vehicles of various descriptions on the streets. The rush was especially apparent about Mr. Beidel's mill, where wagons were being loaded with coal at 12 cents per bushel and with flour, bran and other mill products. That mill has falleu luto good hands.

Union.

"Misfotunes never come alone" and neither do misqultoes.

Rev. Davis preached Sunday night at the Presbyterian church.

J. M. Lassing was shaking hands with the boys here, Christmas.

Golden Grange will have an all day meeting, beginning at 10 a. m., January 13.

Mr. George Guillon, of Carrollton, is visiting in Union, the guest of Miss Mary Hedges.

Gran Rouse must have a fine eye or else he could not kill 14 rabbits and birds out of 17 shots.

J. H. G. Blanton, of Friauger, was enjoying Christmas with relatives and friends in Union.

Miss Bessie Harter, of Covington, was the guests of Mrs. J. W. Conner during the holidays.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs P. T. Fall, Saturday, January 6th.

J. W. Conner, L. H Voshell, John Garrison, W. M. Rachal and others began filling their ice houses Monday.

Hunting Bears in Africa has always been a dangerous business for the English, says the "war expert" of the Union Blade.

All persons indebted to me will please come forward and settle by the first of next February. Very Respectfully,

JAS. BRISTOW.

Mr. John Holzworth will begin the new Year as a subscriber for the Recorder. Mr. H. is a hustler and the Recorder wishes him a happy New Year for himself and family.

Some one expressed a desire to wake up 100 years in the future and see how much the world had progressed. Dr. L. quietly remarked that he would prefer staying here and see it progress.

J. W. Kenuedy and James A. Huey went into the ice-preserving business on the 1st and had their ice-houses filled by Saturday evening with a prime article from 3 to 5 inches thick.

"Santa" visited the Baptist Sunday-school, Saturday eve., at 3 o'clock and distributed lots of nice presents to the children. The children of the Presbyterian church also received a call from Santa, Sunday eve. and they too were made happy with a nice treat.

The gentleman who wrote that epistle on the "Goose bone" as an infallible symptom of coming events that do not cast their shadows before—such as 5° below zero weather when it is expected to be 30° above, had better come over and consult Tom Judge or J. L. Frazier, before making any more prophecies.

James H. Fall, of Alexandria, Ind., was at home two days during the holidays. As record clerk of the American Plate Glass Co., one of the largest trust concerns of America, he is prepared to know that they will do business, whether small glass concerns sink or swim. The Company has orders 15 months ahead and make plate glass that equals any "French Plate." In Jan. they turned out a plate 144x208 inches, clear as a crystal.

Your correspondent has passed safely through the hours, days, evenings, and months of 1899, and it is likely our passing through will only be known by the doors we have left open, the fences we have gates upset, words said that ought not to have been said, deeds done that will never be recorded on the credit side of the ledger, etc., but during 1900 we hope to shut the doors, put up the fences, replace the broken gates, make amends for misdeeds, but by spoken and worse spelled words. This we hope to do if a bad temper and a worse disposition don't upset the englue of good intentions that has pulled us up on the road of better resolutions many a time, and run off the track and upset before a mile had been traveled.

J. W. Williams and family met with an accident Christmas morning that was harmless in its results, and yet their escape from death was almost a miracle. On their way to Erlanger in the family carriage, and when going down a long hill on the "Rice 'pike," the breast strap broke on one horse, letting the yoke drop down, causing the team to come unmanageable, and they dashed down the hill at a dangerous speed. The situation became desperate, and Joe knew something had to be done, and that quickly; so all the skill of 20 years' experience in handling horses was brought into play, and watching his chances, as the carriage swayed back and forth over the rocks, and was nearing a narrow, high bridge spanning a ravine, he headed for the hill, succeeded in swinging the horses into the bank, breaking the pole, harness and other accouterments, but saved the lives of himself and family.

Verona.

Hodge Hudson is home on a vacation.

The postoffice will be moved into L. J. Hume's store.

G. B. Johnson contemplates ruuuing a daily meat market.

Rev. Lucas, of Walton, attended church here, Sunday.

Lafe Myers, our genial dentist, is able to be in his office again.

The young folks have had a merry Xmas visiting and attending socials.

C. L. Craven, wife and little son, Harry, of Cincinnati, are home on a week's vacation.

Nearly all the students of the League arrived Sunday to resume their work Monday morning.

Five pupils of the public school will be examined before the County Board, this month, for certificates of graduation.

J. G. Hudson has just issued a circular to the families and members of this and other communities, outlining the plan for Bible readings, this year. It is very suggestive, and will do well to follow its instructions.

The public school has recently added 46 more volumes to its library, which now makes a total of 118; all the supplementary reading recommended by the State is included; also, many recommended in the Illinois course of study. All pupils and patrons of the school are entitled to the free use of this library.

The man who said the gooseboue this year, foretold the mildest winter known—he or the goose, seems to be slightly in error; for we have had one week of continual zero weather, and we know not how much longer it may last. We suggest that this weather prophet make another examination and see whose fault it is.

The new Methodist Church was dedicated Sunday, Rev. Green, of Warsaw, preached the dedicatory sermon, which elicited much praise. About $105 was subscribed which covered all indebtedness leaving a balance of about $50 to expend for pews. Notwithstanding the intense cold weather, a large coucregation was present, quite a number of whom were from a distance.

Four degrees below zero here Sunday night.

Born—To W. M. Whitson and wife, a fine girl.

Rev. Holmes is pastor of the Methodist Church at this place.

Mrs. Mack Watson is very sick and is threatened with typhoid fever.

Mrs. William Flug's father died near Flingsville, and was buried Monday.

We wish the RECORDER and its many readers and correspondents a happy New Year.

J. G. Hudson will give a Bible Reading at the Methodist Church, Sunday the 14th of January.

John E. Roberts is sonjourning in Edina, Mo. John is well pleased with the country out there.

L. C. Roberts and wife entertained several of their friends with a turkey dinner on Christmas day.

Dave Ringo, near Concord, had the misfortune to have his little daughter burned to death, a few days since.

Everything passed off very quietly here during the holidays. You know there is never much bourbou drauk in Verona during that period.

Kenuedy & Roberts, tobacco merchants of this place, have dissolved partnership, and the firm will be run in the name of J. G. Kenuedy, hereafter.

A. C. Roberts and wife entertained with a turkey dinner, last Thursday, J. M. Powers and wife, Robert O. Powers and family, Mrs. Mattie Rausom, L. C. Roberts and daughter, and Mrs. T. A. Johnson.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

In the matter of Henry Kroger, Bankrupt. Sale of Real Property.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale rendered by George B. Winslow, Referee, October 11, 1899, in the above cause, I shall proceed to offer for sale and sell at the Court House door in Burlington, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public outcry on the 5th day of February, 1900, at 1 o'clock p. m. upon a credit of six and twelve months, the following described property, to-wit: Lying and being in Florence, Boone county, Kentucky, and bounded as follows:—Bounded on the East by the Covington and Lexington Turnpike; on the North by Henry Odenwald's lot; on the West by an alley and on the South by the property owned by Abel Carpenter and others and contains about one-fourth of an acre.

This property will be sold free from any dower right of Mary Kroger, wife of bankrupt, Henry Kroger. For the purchase price the purchaser with approved security or securities must execute bonds bearing 6 per cent. interest from day of sale until paid, and having the force and effect of a judgment.

J. M LASSING,
Trustee of Henry Kroger.

Local News.

The schools are in progress again.

Born, last night, to William Lucas and wife, a 10 pound son.

Rev. and Mrs. Hoover dined several of their friends, last Friday.

Several ice houses have been filled with a good quality of crystalized water.

Mrs. M. L. Riddell entertained the charaders most laudsomely, Thursday night.

F. A. Utz, of Florence, is a collector for the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of this county.

The custom of ringing the old year out and the new year in was duly observed here last Sunday night.

One swallow does not make a summer, neither does one cold spell, unless a very long one, make a winter.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Castleman entertained quite a number of their friends one evening during the holidays.

The telephone line from Hamilton to Beaver has been staked off, and some of the poles scattered along the route.

The RECORDER received the proceedings of the last session of the K. P. A., last week. It is gotten up in nice style.

Some of the thermometers registered two degrees below zero, Saturday at 6 a. m., and 6 bellow at same hour Sunday.

The weather the past week would have been very hard on the wheat had it not been for the light blanket of snow.

The many friends of Uncle Absalom Aylor will be glad to hear that he is recovering from the injury he received recently.

The ice harvest began here Friday morning. A very good quality of ice about four inches thick was taken off of the creek.

Con Zellers and Elia Cleveland, colored, were married Thursday, the principal local event among the colored people, last week.

The commissioners set off to Morgan Beemon 28 acres and the improvements as a homestead. This leaves 12 acres that will be sold.

At last accounts, Jordon Beall, of the Hebron neighborhood, who had his foot amputated, week before last, is getting along nicely.

Tony Bentler brought a load of very fine Woolper grown turkeys in last Thursday afternoon to dress for the New Year's market.

"Just where we are at" as to time seems to be a puzzle. Some say in the 18th, some say in the 19th and some say in the 20th century.

They say that George Sleet, of Beaver, is getting very anxious to move to his Grant county farm, which is said to be au excellent tract of land.

Farmer Sandford's holiday record is five straight turkey dinners, one supper and the gout. He requests his friends to take warning by him.

Smith, the negro who haudled his gun with such alacrity, in Florence, on Tuesday night of last week, is now in jail here awaiting the coming of Circuit Court.

The Odd Fellows' Lodge at this place elected the following officers: W. T. Davis, N. G; E. L. Riley, V. G.; John Bachelor, Secretary; J. G. Furnish, Treasurer.

The Sheriff, County Clerk, Attorney and Judge, were busy a day or two last week, preparing an exhibit of the county's affairs to lay before the fiscal court yesterday.

You must now write it 1900, but no doubt the change will considerably inconvenience those who have been using the 18 in recording dates for the last 1899 years.

Tony Bentler's team broke through the ice in crossing the creek south of town, one morning last week, and had to be cut out. Fortunately neither of the horses was hurt.

Claims amounting to $535, against the Sheep Fund have been filed. If no more claims are filed between now and the 11th inst., there will be money enough to pay in full.

James C. Clore, of Bulittsville, rode the third Masonic goat last night. At the close of the exercises in the lodge room, the brethreu to the number of about 20, repaired to B. B. Allphin's where an excellent supper was served.

The supervisors of tax are at work on the 1900 tax book If you have any complaint to make because your property is assessed too high, or too low, or not enough of it, now is the time to step up to the captain's desk and make it known.

Tuesday morning Roy Clutterbuck found a nest made of trash in a bunch of bananas, and proceeded to investigate it, when, to his surprise, he found a large tarantular that was taking his winter nap. It had eight legs covered with a fuzzy substance, and when standing it was at least two inches tall. They have the ugly thing in a glass jar at the store of Clutterbuck Bros.

Reuben Hager, of East Bend, was in town last Thursday. Knowing that he is a man who keeps posted in all things pertaining to the crops in his neighborhood he was asked about the outlook for wheat down in his locality, and he said he sowed his crop in September and it came up at once and the fly had injured it considerably, but where wheat came up late it does not seem to have been attacked by the fly, and looks well.

A Pretty Home Wedding.

Last Wednesday the home of Mrs. Mary Craven was the scene of a pretty wedding. The contracting persons were Miss Cordie, the daughter of Mrs. Craven, and Mr. Harvey Tanner. The large parlor was filled with relatives and friends of both parties, when to the strains of Mendelsohn's wedding march, rendered by Mrs. Geo. Craveu, the bride and groom were met by the Rev. Hoover, who, in a solemn and tender manner, pronounced the ceremony binding tiese two together.

After the congratulations a bountiful dinner was served to those present. The bride, who is a pretty brunette, was attired in white mull, trimmed with ribbon and lace, and adorned with bride's roses and fern. The groom wore conventional black. After dinner the bride donned a pretty grey suit with jacket to match, and they left for Covington, to be the guests of relatives

They received some very nice presents. From Mrs. Mary Craveu, dinner set; Miss Rose Smith, vinegar set; Mrs. Nettie Kelly, fruit dish; Miss Edith Craven, flower vase; Mr. and Mrs. John Craven, toilet set and pair of towels; Mrs. Belle Rouse, pound cake; Mrs. E. V. Rouse, half-dozen hemstiched napkins and fruit dish; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Rouse, set of silver knives and forks.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The following seems to be the dirt the heathenish intentions that is brought to our mind through the actions of a majority of the leaders of a free government. The declaration of Independence is their foundation, but who have fallen to the temptatiou of greed and gain—who have got so rotten as to seek after and destroy the homes of a weak race—who have only asked for the foundation that any man should stand upon, but you must bow and humble yourself to a few, who have more of a brutish heart than a godly heart.

You are not capable of self-government—we must control your possessions—your gold is better than your blood—you must be controlled by our laws eveu though they be British laws—we cau not give you a free government and teach you how to live. It will be following too close to the divine law. We are seeking after gold—yours we must have or spill the life-blood God has poured into your veins.

Our foundation means expausion by mutual agreement—if you wont agree we will step from the foundation and use the blood of our land to rob you of your possesions, your happiness—make desolate your home. We will throw starvation at your door for the loved ones you have left behind. We pretend to be Christians. Money is our god. We wear a Christian look in a free land to blind the unheeding man. God forbid that such Christians should ever enter heaven without a duration of the torments of hell to equal and cancel all the willful deeds that are presented upon a nation under the cover of unjust laws, the future of christianity and working for the people's interest. May God's power be with the Boers of South Africa. J. E. HALL.

A man who does uot take his home paper, but occasionally answers advertisements in "story papers" has had some interesting experiences, says an exchange. He learned that by sending one dollar to a Yankee he could get a cure for drunkeuuess. Sure enough he did. It was to "take the pledge and keep it." Later on he sent fifty two-cent stamps to find out how to raise turnips successfully. He found out. "Just take hold of the tops and pull." Being young he wished to marry, and sent thirty-four one cent-stamps to a Chicago firm for information as to how to make an impression. When the answer came it read, "Sit down on a pan of dough." That was a little rough, but he was a patient man, and thought he would yet succeed. The next advertisement he answered read, "How to double your money in six months." He was told to convert his money into bills, fold them, and he would see his money doubled. The next time he sent for twelve useful household articles, and got a packet of needles. He was slow to learn, so he sent a dollar to find out "how to get rich"—"Work like the devil and never spend a cent." That stopped him, but his brother wrote to to learn how to write a letter without pen or ink. He was told to use a lead pencil. He paid five dollars to learn how to live without work, and was told on a postal card, "to fish for suckers as we do."

Having sold out my Hotel, "The Burlington," I desire to thauk the good people of Boone county for their liberal patronage and favors for the last seven years, and hope, in the near future, to cast my lot among them, and try and help to get the state back into the Democratic fold. Yours Truly,
H. W. SMITH.

Rev. J. F. Carney, pastor of the Universalist church will preach here next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Morning subject:—"Can the sufferings of the Human Race justify the existence, and goodness of an allwise Creator. Evening subject. A lecture to young men. Theme:—"The Skepticism of the 19th Century; its cause and consequencies."

Mr. Joe Scott, of Florence, was greatly surprised, one day last week, when the report came to him that his cattle were found, that were missing for three months, and that it was by a mistake that the cattle were driven into a pasture two miles from his home. He wishes to thank each and every one for their kindness for inquireing for them, and also the Recorder. X.

The Fiscal Court convened yesterday with Judge Roberts presiding and all the justices present. The following was the most important business transacted up to the time of going to press:

Pauper practice in Burlington precinct, including jail and county infirmary, awarded Dr. Rouse, of Limaburg, for year 1900, at $175.—Jerry Blyth was reelected keeper of county infirmary, and salary fixed at $225.—The sheriff was allowed 708 white, and 120 colored delinquents, 254 delliquent dogs and 22 bitches.

Burlington Lodge, No. 264, F. & A. M., elected the following as officers on the 27th ult.: N. E. Riddell, W. M; A. B. Rouse, S. W.; J. M. Lassing, J. W.; W. L. Riddell, Secty; Dudley Rouse, Treas.; W. T. German, S. & T.

An exchange speaks of three of the most stingy men on record. The first will not drink as much water as he wants unless it comes from his neighbor's well. The second forbids his family to write anything but small hand, as it is a waste of ink to make large letters. The third stops the clock to save wear and tear of machinery. All of them refuse to take a newspaper, on the ground that it is such a terrible strain on their spectacles to read.

When ever there is to be a social gathering out at Judge Robert's all know there will be no end to the fun on that occasion, and everyone goes fully prepared for a grand time. The charaders filled an engagement there last Friday night, and no more fun could have been crowded into a few hours. Several of the guests attired themselves in the most grotesque costumes imaginable before they left home, and it was a comical looking crowd wheu congregated in the parlor at the Judge's where mirth relgned supreme until uear midnight.

The towu was full of strangers last Friday evening, and F. Riddell took great pleasure in directing some of them to the hotel, and was very much surprised when he met one fellow wearing a linen suit. Among these strangers was a colored woman, who went to Mrs. Coweu's and acted very strangely, not one of the family being able to induce her to utter a souud. She after ward entered Mr. Rouse's store, and created a sensation by manifesting a desire to give au exhibition of tripping the light fantastic toe. It is believed that one of the parties was Old Father Time, and the impression made by this distinguished personage will be lastiug.

Dr. Talmage Says They Should Be Our Guides for the Future.

[Copyright, 1899, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this holiday discourse Dr. Talmage takes the opportunity of offering some very practical and useful suggestions; text, Psalms, xc, 9: "We spend our years as a tale that is told."

The Israelites were 40 years in the wilderness, and during 38 years of the 40 nothing is recorded of them, and I suppose no other emigrants had a duller or more uninteresting time than they had. So they got to telling stories — stories concerning themselves or concerning others; stories about the brick kilns of Egypt, where they had toiled in slavery; stories about how the waters of the Red sea piled up into palisades at their crossing; story of how the lantern hung in the heavens to guide them by night; story of ibises destroying the reptiles of the wilderness; stories of personal encounter. It must have been an awful thing to have had nothing to do in 38 years except to get lost every time they tried to escape from the wilderness. So they whiled away the time in story telling. Indeed, there were persons whose one business was to narrate stories, and they were paid by such trifles as they could pick up from the surrounding listeners. To such instances our text refers when it says: "We spend our years as a tale that is told."

At this tremendous passage from the year 1899 to the year 1900 it will do us all good to consider that our whole life is a story told—a good story or a bad story; a tragic story or a mirthful story; a wise story or a foolish story; a clean story or a filthy story; a story of success or a story of failure. "We spend our years as a tale that is told."

In the first place I remark that every person's life is a very interesting story. My text does not depreciate "a tale that is told." We have all of us been entertained by the story teller when snow bound in the rail train; or in the group a winter's night in the farmhouse; or gathered around a blazing hearth with some hunters at the mountain inn. Indeed, it is a professional art to impersonate a good story well. If you doubt the practical and healthful and inspiring use of such a story, take down from the library Washington Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," or Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Twice Told Tales." But as interesting as any of these would be the story of many an obscure life, if the tale were as well told. Why do we all like biographies and autobiographies? Because they are stories of eminent human lives. But the story of the life of a backwoodsman, of a man who looks stupid, of one about whom you never heard a word, must be just as thrilling on a small scale as on a larger scale is the life of a Cyrus, or a Cæsar, or a Pizarro, or a Mark Antony, or a Charlemagne, or the late Gen. Gordon, who was upon a parapet leading his soldiers with nothing but a stick in his hand, and his troops cried: "Gordon, come down. You will be killed." But he did not come down, and one of the soldiers said: "It is all right. He don't mind being killed. He is one of those blessed Christians."

If you get the confidence of that very plain man just come out of the backwoods and can induce him to give the stirring experiences of his life, he will tell you that which will make your blood curdle and your hair stand on end. That night when a panther disputed his pathway on the way home; that landslide when the mountains seemed about to come down on his cabin; that accident to his household, and no surgeon within 10 miles; that long storm that shut them in and the food was exhausted; that earnest at his doorway with bandits who thought there might be within something worth taking; that deathbed, with no one but himself to count the fluttering pulses.

As Oliver Cromwell on the anniversary of his greatest victory followed his darling daughter to the grave, so in the humblest and most unpretending life there has been a commingling of gladness and gloom, of triumph and despair. Nothing that David Garrick ever enacted at Drury Lane theater in the way of tragedy or Charles Mathews ever played in Covent Garden in the way of comedy excelled things which on a small scale have been seen in the life of obscure men and women. Many a profound and learned sermon has put the audience to sleep, while some man whose phraseology could not be parsed and whose attire was out and fitted and made up by plainest housewife has told the story of his life in a way that melted the prayer circle into tears as easily as a warm April sun dissolves the snow of the previous night.

Oh, yes, while "we spend our years as a tale that is told" it is an interesting story. It is the story of an immortal, and that makes it interesting. He is launched on an ocean of eternal years, in a voyage that will never terminate. He is striking the key note of an anthem or a dirge that will never come to its last bar. That is what makes the devotional meetings of modern times so much more interesting than they used to be. They are filled not with discourses by laymen on the subject of justification and sanctification, which lay discourses administer more to the factious than to the edifying, but with stories of what God has done for the soul — how everything suddenly changed; how the promises became balsamic in times of laceration; how he was personally helped out and helped up and helped on. Nothing can stand before such a story of personal rescue, personal transformation, personal illumination. The mightiest and most skillful argument against Christianity collapses under the ungrammatical but sincere statement. The atheistic professor of natural philosophy goes down under the story of that backwoodsman's conversion.

The New Testament suggests the power of the "tale that is told." Christ was the most effective story teller of all the ages. The parables are only tales well told. Matchless stories. That of the traveler cut up by the thieves and the Samaritan paying his hoard bill at the tavern; that of the big dinner, to which the invited guests sent in fictitious regrets; that of the shepherd answering the bleat of the lost sheep and all the rural neighbors that night helping him celebrate the fact that it was safe in the barnyard; that of the bad boy, reduced to the swines' trough, greeted home with such banqueting and jewelry that it stuffed the older son with jealousy and disgruntlement; that of the Pharisee full of braggadocio and the publican smiting his breast with a stroke that brought down the heavens in commiseration; stories about leprosy, about paralysis, about catalepsy, about dropsy, about ophthalmia—stories that he so well told that they have rolled down to the present and will roll down through the entire future.

The most of the Old Testament is made up of inspired anecdotes about Adam and Eve, about Jacob, about Esau, about Ahab and Jezebel, about Jonah, about Daniel, about Deborah, about Vashti, about men and women of whom the story gave an accurate photograph long before human photography was born. Let all Christian workers, prayer meeting talkers, Sunday school teachers and preachers know the power of that which my text calls the "tale that is told."

If you have had experiences of pardon and comfort and disenthrallment, tell of it. Tell it in the most pointed and dramatic way you can manage. Tell it soon, or you may never tell it at all. Oh, the power of "the tale that is told!" An hour's discourse about the fact that blasphemous behavior is sometimes punished in this world would not impress us as much as the simple story that in a town of New York state, at the close of the last century, 36 profane men formed themselves into a club, calling themselves "Society of the Druids." They met regularly to decide and damage Christianity. One night in their usual meeting they burned a Bible and administered the sacrament to a dog. Two of them died that night. Within three days three were drowned. In five years all the 36 came to a bad end. Before justices of the peace it was sworn that two were starved to death, seven were drowned, eight were shot, five committed suicide, seven died on the gallows, one was frozen to death, and three died accidentally. Incidents like that, sworn to, would balk any proposal in current and blasphemous behavior.

To what way could the fact that infidelity Will not help anyone die well be so powerfully presented as by the incident concerning a man falling ill in Paris just after the death of Voltaire, when a professional nurse was called in and she asked: "Is the gentleman a Christian?" "Why do you ask that?" said the messenger. "I am the nurse who attended Voltaire in his last illness, and for all the wealth of Europe I would never see another infidel die." What discourse in its moral and spiritual effect could equal a tale like that?

You might argue upon the fact that those fallen are our brothers and sisters, but could we impress anyone with such a truth so well as by the scene near Victoria park, London, where men were digging a deep drain and the shoring gave way and a great pile of earth fell upon the workmen? A man stood there with his hands in his pockets looking at those who were trying to shovel away the earth from those who were buried, but when some one said to the spectator: "Will, your brother is down there," then the spectator threw off his coat and went to work with an agony of earnestness to fetch up his brother. What course of argument could so well as that incident set forth that when we toil for the salvation of a soul it is a brother whom we are trying to save?

A second reading of my text reminds me that life is not only a story told, but that it is a brief story. A long narrative stretched out indefinitely loses its interest. It is generally the story that takes only a minute or half a minute to rehearse that arrests the attention. And that gives additional interest to the story of our life. It is a short story. Subtract from our lives all the hours of necessary sleep, all the hours of incapacity through fatigue or illness, all the hours of childhood and youth before we get fairly to work, and you have abbreviated the story of life so much that you can appreciate the Apostle James' expression when he compares life to "a vapor that appeareth for a little season and then vanishes away."

It does not take long to tell all the vicissitudes of life—the gladness and the griefs, the arrivals and the departures, the successes and the failures, the victories and the defeats, the ups and the downs. The longer we live the shorter the years. We hardly get over the bewildering fatigue of selecting gifts for children and friends and see that the presents get off in time to arrive on the appropriate day than we see another advancing group of holidays. Autumnal fruit so sharply chases the summer harvest, and the snow of the white blossoms of springtime come so soon after the snows of winter. It is a remark so often made that it fails to make any impression and the platitude that calls forth no reply: "How rapidly time goes."

A third reading of my text reminds me that life is not only a story told, but a story listened to. There is nothing more vexatious to anyone than to tell a story when people are not attending. They may whisper on some other subject, or they are preoccupied. One cannot tell a story effectually unless there are good listeners. Well, that which in my text is called the "tale that is told" has plenty of listeners. There is no such thing as solitude, no such thing as being alone. God listens, and the air is full of spiritual intelligences all listening, and the world listens to the story of our life, some hoping it will be successful, others hoping it will be a failure.

We talk about public life and private life, but there is no private life. The story of our life, however insignificant it may seem to be, will win the applause or hiss of a great multitude that no man can number. As a "tale that is told" among admirers or antagonists, celestial or pandemoniacs, the universe is full of listening ears as well as of gleaming eyes. If we say or do the right thing, that is known. I suppose the population of the intelligences in the air is more numerous than the population of intelligences on the earth.

Aye, all the world will yet listen to and be redeemed by a "tale that is told." We are all telling it, each in his own way—some by voice, some by pen, some by artist's pencil, some by harp and some by song; mother telling it to child, teacher telling it to Sabbath class, reformer telling it to outcast, preacher telling it to assemblage. The story of the Loveliest of Heaven coming down to this scarred and blasted island of a world. He was ordered back from its shores and struck through with lances of human hate as soon as he landed. Shepherd's dog baying on the hills that Christmas night was better treated than this rescuer of a race, yet keeping right on, brambles on brow, feet on spikes, flagellated with whips that had lumps of lead fastened to them, through midnight without lanterns, through storms without a shelter, through years that got blacker until they ended in a noonday with the sun blotted out. Mightiest tale ever told, and keep on telling it until the last sorrow is assuaged and the last animosity is quenched and the last desert is white with the lily and golden with the cowslip and blue with the gentian and crimson with the rose.

My text, in referring to the years, reminds me that in 12 hours this year will forever have gone away. Ninety-nine out of the hundred years of this century will have disappeared. We have only one year of the century left. There ought to be something especially suggestive in the last year of a century. It ought to be a year of unparalleled industries, of unheard of consecration. Not a person in any of our audiences this day can remember the first year of this century. Not a person in any of our audiences to-day will ever again see the last year of a century.

Through medical science the world's longevity may be greatly improved in the future, as it has been in the past, but it would not be well for people to live too long. Some of them would, through their skill at acquisitiveness, gather too much, and some multimillionaires would become billionaires and trillionaires, and some one would after awhile pocket a hemisphere. No. Death is useful in its financial limitations, and then all have enough sorrows and annoyances and sufferings by the time they become nonagenarians or centenarians to make it desirable to quit. Besides that, it would not be fair so long to keep so many good old people out of Heaven. So it is well arranged that those who stand by the deathbed of the nineteenth century will not be called to stand by the deathbed of the twentieth century.

Oh, crowd this last year with prayers, with hosannas, with kind words, with helpfulness. Make the peroration of the century the climax of Christlike deeds. Close up the ranks of God and during this remaining 12 months charge mightily against the host of Abaddon. Have no reserve corps. Let swiftest gospel cavalry gallop, and heaviest moral artillery roll, and mightiest evangelistic batteries thunder on the scene. Let ministers of the Gospel quit all controversy with each other, and in solid phalanx march out for the world's disenthrallment. Let printing presses, secular and religious, make combined movement to instruct and emancipate the world. On all the hills let there be Elijah, praying for "a great rain," and on every contested field Joshuas to see that final victory is gained before the sun goes down, and every mountain become a transfiguration and every Galilee a walking place for the world's disenthrallment. Let us be jealous of every month, of every week, of every day that passes without something significant and glorious wrought for God and this sin cursed world. Let our churches be thronged with devout assemblages. Let the choruls be more like grand marches than requiems. Let this coming year see the last wound of Transvaal and Philippine conflict, and the earth quake with the groundling arms of the last regiment ever to be marshaled, and the furnaces of the foundries blaze with the fires that shall turn the last swords into plowshares.

And may all those whose lives shall go out in this last year of a century, as many will, meet in the Heavenly world those who in the morning and noonday of this 100 years toiled and suffered for the world's salvation, to tell them how much has been accomplished for the glory of Him whose march through the last 19 centuries and through all the coming centuries the Scriptures describe as going forth "conquering and to conquer." Oh, the contrast between that uplifted spectacle of eternal triumph in the presence of God and the Lamb and these earthly scenes, where "we spend our years as a tale that is told!"

PRACTICAL PHILANTHROPY.

A Most Worthy Cincinnati Enterprise That Should Be Generally Known.

Who has not heard of those hotels in New York and other Eastern cities in which people who have no homes and whose means are limited find a substitute for a home so far as comfort is concerned. Much has been written in praise of these hotels and the good they have accomplished.

Perhaps few are aware that a model hotel of this kind has opened its doors in Cincinnati to young men without homes, which compares most favorably with the Eastern hotels of this character.

The hotel is called the "Columbian," located at the corner of Longworth and Elm streets. It is the property of one of the most prominent citizens of Cincinnati, who makes the investment, not for profit, but to help those in need of such accommodations without having to fall back on the "saloon."

The basement of the six-story structure devoted to this enterprise, is fitted out with baths, nicely and conveniently arranged, which are free to its patrons. There is also a small hall in the basement, where games, such as cards, dominos, chess, etc., add to an evening's amusement and affords pasttime.

On the second floor we find the reading room where the most prominent newspapers and periodicals are distributed for the use of the guests.

The other floors are laid out in lodging rooms, containing bed, chairs and hooks fastened to the wall, to hang garments. Cleanliness reigns supreme, and is indeed exemplary, and be it said to the credit of the establishment that even the most fastidious housewife could not find cause for complaint on this score. The beds are iron, and the linen is changed daily, so that each guest at evening finds a freshly covered bed. Wardrobes are placed in those rooms which are particularly set apart for guests who live for any length of time at the hotel. On each floor there are also several marble washstands and other necessary apartments. As before stated, everything is thoroughly neat and clean.

There are accommodations for about two hundred guests. The price for lodgings is 25 cents per night, with the use of the bath, and this price holds good whether the lodger is a guest of the hotel for one night only or for any length of time.

The rooms are heated by steam, and the hotel is lighted by electricity throughout. A commodious elevator connecting several stories is another great convenience of the hotel.

The building is constructed of iron and stone and is therefore as perfectly fire-proof as can be made. Furthermore, fire escapes, easy of access from all parts of the building, make the exit, in case of fire, an easily accomplished matter.

The whole is a model institution, and offers to its guests, at a very reasonable price, many of the comforts of home. To a great many men, his hotel has indeed proven a great blessing and deserves the fullest recognition.

The undertaking is a philanthropic one, the cause good, and although not proclaimed from the housetops, the establishment fulfills all expectations, and if these lines bring to a wider circle of acquaintance this "Model Hotel" they serve a good purpose.

NURSERY CARS.

Here Is a Wail from a Bachelor Who Is Particular About Traveling Companions.

The innovation of a nursery car upon our railways—or, at any rate, upon the long-distance trains—would be an institution hailed with delight by all men and most women, says the Cincinnati Enquirer.

How many men who do not themselves smoke invariably travel in a smoking carriage because there they feel more secure from an invasion of children and babies than in any other part of the train.

Babies form a class entirely by themselves in the category of unpleasant traveling companions, and there are probably few who at some time in their lives have not had experience of the noisy, sticky-fingered, peppermint-sucking, dear little children, who trample on your toes and deposit luscious, half-sucked gobs of taffy on your trousers in their endeavors to reach the window to put their heads out, whence they are promptly hauled back by anxious mothers or nurses, and cry; or the babies in arms who placidly assimilate milk from a bottle until jolt of the train makes them choke, having at that moment more nourishment than they can possibly deal with; or the inquiring child who plays with the hinges of the door until the guard slams it; or the child who is perpetually feeding, and throughout the journey sits in a semitorpid state sucking oranges, the all-pervading odor of which fills the carriage.

Babies are all very well, but a baby in a railway carriage, like a bull in a china shop, is out of place.

'POSSUM TALKS.

Zeb White Tells About a Mountain Ghost.

By M. QUAD. (Copyrighted)

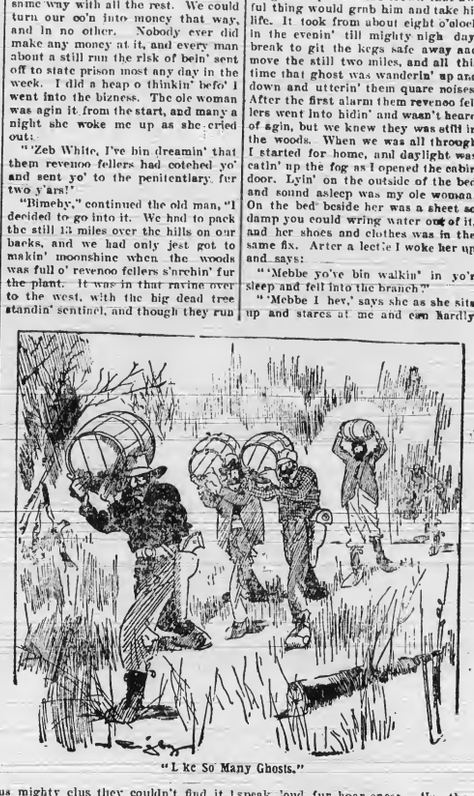
One evening, when night had fallen dark and grim over the peaks of the Cumberland, and had brought with it such a strange stillness that one could hear the opening of the chestnut burrs and the fall of the nuts on the shriveled leaves below, I asked the old 'possum hunter if he had never met with anything weird and mysterious up there on the rugged slopes.

"Yes, I've met up with some queare things in my time," he replied after a minute, "and I've always sorter reckoned that a ghost or specrit once helped me out o' a powerful tight place."

Being pressed for the story, he stirred up the logs on the fire, lighted his pipe and continued:

"I reckon I have told yo' why I went into moonshine whisky. It was the same way with all the rest. We could turn our co'n into money that way, and in no other. Nobody ever did make any money at it, and every man about a still run the risk of bein' sent off to state prison most any day in the week. I did a heap o thinkin' befo' I went into the bizness. The ole woman was agin it from the start, and many a night she woke me up as she cried out:

"'Zeb White, I've bin dreamin' that them revenoo fellers had cotched yo' and sent yo' to the penitentiary for two y'ars!'



"Bimeby," continued the old man, "I decided to go into it. We had to pack the still 15 miles over the hills on our backs, and we had only jest got to makin' moonshine when the woods was full o' revenoo fellers s'nechin' fur the plant. It was in that ravine over to the west, with the big dead tree standin' sentinel, and though they run ahead. About every two minits the ghost would utter that cry. Sometimes it would seem to be ahead of us, and sometimes behind, and though we stuck to our kegs, everybody was skeert half to death. I shouldn't be ashamed to say that we throwed away the whisky and run fur our lives, fur I was never so badly upsot, but we stuck it out till all the kegs was safe. Then we had a talk and determined to move the still."

"And you continued to hear the voice?"

"Right along, suh. It wasn't like no human bein', nor yit like an animal, and nobody could rightly say from which direction it came. I reckon the only reason that kept us together was fear. Each man had a feelin' that if he got away from the crowd that awful thing would grab him and take his life. It took from about eight o'clock in the evenin' till mighty nigh daybreak to git the kegs safe away and move the still two miles, and all this time that ghost was wanderin' up and down and utterin' them quare noises. After the first alarm them revenoo fellers went into hidin' and wasn't heard of agin, but we knew they was still in the woods. When we was all through I started for home, and daylight was catin' up the fog as I opened the cabin door. Lyin' on the outside of the bed and sound asleep was my ole woman. On the bed beside her was a sheet so dampn you could wring water out of it, and her shoes and clothes was in the same fix. Arter a leetle I woke her up and says:

"'Mebbe yo've bin walkin' in yo'r sleep and fell into the branch?'

"'Mebbe I her,' says she as she sits up and stares at me and can hardly speak loud fur hoarseness. 'Is the whisky all safe?'

"I ke So Many Ghosts."

"'All safe.'

"'And did yo' move the still?'

"'Moved it two miles.'

"'Then git yo'self a bite to eat and lemme sleep till noon, fur thar' was quare noises about last night and I didn't git a wink o' sleep.'

"And it was Mrs. White who p'layed the ghost?"

"And what did the revenue men have to say about it?"

"Nuthin' tall—not to me. As soon as daylight come they headed fur Knoxville, and we didn't see no mo' of 'em fur months. They give out that a ghost rolled six o' 'em over a cliff and hit the rest of the gang with stones and clubs, and none of 'em wouldn't come back fur love or money."

"Well, it was a smart trick on the part of Mrs. White."

"Yes, rayther peart, I reckon—rayther peart. That is, if it was her."

"But it must have been her."

"Can't say as it was, though it took most a quart of coon's ile to git the hoarseness out o' her throat arterwards."

Turkey Five Feet High.

John McCormick, a farmer who resides across the river from Clinton, Ia., in Illinois, is the owner of a turkey gobbler which is probably the largest that has ever been raised in the United States. This monster towers into the air five feet and weighs 65 pounds. It looks more like an ostrich than a turkey. Its legs at the feet are an inch and a half in diameter, while close to the body they are the size of an ordinary man's arm at the elbow. The bird's wings measure seven feet from tip to tip. The turkey is two years old and never wanders away from home, as is usually the habit of turkeys. The bird is of the bronze breed, and Mr. McCormick says he has been offered large sums for the monster fowl, but has no desire to sell it.

Bavarian Lightning Rods.

In Bavaria each family on Easter Sunday brings to the church ward-fire a walnut branch, which, after being partially burned, is carried home to be laid on the hearth during tempests as a protection against lightning.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

WINTER HEN HOUSE.

Especially Adapted for Localities Where the Snow Does Not Cover the Ground Too Deep.

In regions where the snow does not cover the ground too deeply, a cheap, low structure can be built after the plan shown in the cut, that will answer the purpose very well. Stakes are driven into the ground and rough boards nailed to these to a height of three feet in front and two feet in the rear, leaving spaces for low, wide sash in front. A long and a short roof is put on, with roof doors in the front, short roof. These are made with overlapping edges to secure tightness against the wind and rain. The attendant stands outside and through these roof doors cares for the fowls, securing the eggs from nests that are within reach, putting in water and scattering grain in the litter. The whole structure is covered with tarred or rosin-sized paper, the edges being securely tacked or battened with laths. The roof is covered in the same way.

Select a dry location, and put in three inches of gravel upon the ground and keep a thick layer of chaff upon that, and the inmates will scratch away merrily for grain all winter long. Make the building any length desired and part off with boards—or with netting if only females are to be kept in the pens—before the roof is put on. Roosts can be put up just out of the fowls' way when on the floor. With care to make the roof tight, such a building, while it costs but little, will prove very satisfactory.—Orange Judd Farmer.

OATS AS HEN FEED.

Although Nearly Perfect as a Balanced Ration But Few Poultrymen Know Their Value.

It is surprising how opinions among poultrymen differ as to the value of oats as feed. Some poultrymen never feed whole oats, and some make whole oats the principal part of their feed. Yet, as every scientific farmer knows, oats are nearly perfect as a balanced ration. Some complain that their fowls will not eat oats if they are fed to them, but this is nothing against oats. Wild mustangs of the western plains will not eat corn till they are taught to do so, but that is no argument against corn. It is a fact that at first fowls not accustomed to oats as a feed do not seem to like them, but later they even come to prefer oats above other grains. Hens that have been accustomed to eating oats have been deprived of oats for a few days and then both oats and corn have been thrown to them, and they have eaten the oats before touching the corn. Oats may be fed in any quantities to fowls without detriment, but should not be fed to the hens when they have been kept so long without food that they are ravenous. In such cases they will pack their crops so full that the water subsequently taken will cause a swelling of the oats and puncturing of the membrane that lines the crop. Birds have been killed in this way. Where hens have access to oats at all times they never eat enough at one time to bring on trouble as indicated. One man that has 40 hens feeds five bushels of oats per month, besides other things. But the fowls are given an unlimited supply of commercial grits and cut-bone to help work up the oats in the gizzard. Oats as a feed are of great help in the production of eggs.—M. G. Thurston, in Country Gentleman.

Inexpensive Turkey Remedy.

I have seen mention of turkeys being lost on account of bowel trouble. Several of us have lost turkeys from the same cause, but we think we have hit upon a sure cure for it, and the cost is comparatively nothing. We did not lose a turkey after using the remedy. Get five cents' worth of venetian red, such as painters use, and mix it in the food and water for the turkeys, keeping all other water away and compelling them to drink the "medicine." This seems simple enough, but it does the business, and may save some of your readers a good many dollars. I have a fine flock of turkeys that were all taken with this trouble, but after using this remedy they all recovered and are all right now.—William Britton, in Ohio Farmer.

Packing Eggs for Shipping.

In packing eggs to send to a distance the farmer or packer should be sure that the packing is sufficiently firm to hold the eggs in place. Poor packing means large percentage of breakage. The cases should be held firmly in place by shavings of the kind commonly used for packing, and there should be enough of them to keep the mass rigid. The broken eggs besmear the whole eggs and make them entirely unsalable except they be first cleaned. This costs money in the market where they are not likely to receive attention without full pay for all time expended and sometimes a little more.—Farmers' Review.

TALK ABOUT CLOVER.

Many Otherwise Well-Informed Farmers Entertain Erroneous Ideas Relative to This Plant.

Western farmers have learned that clover is a necessity for them, but it has been only a few years that this fact has become apparent and many of them cannot write on this subject without exposing their ignorance. In an article under the title "Best Pasture Grasses," S. H. Tolley, of Iowa, begins with clover, which is not a grass, and says of it: "Clover is all right for pasture, but if stock is allowed to feed on it at all seasons there must be a large surplus left on the ground, or the pasture will soon be exhausted. Stock of all kinds like the bloom and will eat it so closely that no seeds can form, and hence it will soon run out, because no seed is left on the ground to propagate." Part of this is true. Stock are fond of clover blooms, but it is only the second growth of the ordinary red clover that produces seed. It is nonsense to suppose that clover seed falling on the ground in fall can grow, unless the clover sod is plowed in the spring. Then the seeds will be mixed through the soil, and will germinate for many years after, as we have often seen to be the fact on land where crops of clover seed have been grown.

It is not so generally known as it should be that allowing clover to seed is the surest means to destroy all the clover on that field for another year. Alsike clover and the mammoth or pea vine clover, which bear seed in the first full crop, die as soon as the seed matures. What seed is dropped on the ground does no good for a clover growth the next year, as the clover stubble leaves the land too hard for such a tender plant to get a foothold. The clover seed is very small, and when it germinates it has only two very tiny leaves and a very small root in proportion. This is best for the young plant, for until the roots get firm hold of the soil the fewer leaves there are to evaporate moisture the less likely the young plant is to perish. Young clover is very tender. A drought or a slight freeze will blast the leaves, thus entirely killing the plant. After the clover plant develops more leaves its root has taken firm hold of the soil, and it is then not likely to be killed by drought. In grain fields during a very dry time the clover leaves drop off, and to look at the plant it would seem that no clover was there. But keep stock from trampling over it and let a good rainfall come, we shall find this clover reviving and making a good stand where at the grain harvest there seemed to be none.—American Cultivator.

NEW FODDER CROP.

The Soy Bean, a Native of Japan, is Now Attracting the Attention of American Farmers.

Glycine hispida is the scientific name. A government bulletin says of it: This is one of the staple crops of Japan, which attracted little attention in this country till about ten years ago, but it is now becoming quite common. The crop is cultivated like corn, the seed being planted in drills at the rate of half a bushel per acre. The stems alone are too coarse to make good hay, but are covered with such a dense growth of leaves and are so prolific in fruit that the hay is prized highly, especially for milch cows and for fattening animals. The yield of green forage is very heavy when grown on good soil, and the yield of beans is usually from 20 to 30 bushels per acre. Those who have had most experience with this crop find that the best way to handle it is to cut or pull the plants when the first pods begin to open, and thrash as soon as dry enough. In this way the coarse stalks are so broken in pieces and mixed with the leaves and immature fruit that nearly all will be eaten. It is doubtless the best of the legumes for the silo, as it can be more easily handled for the cutter than plants like clover or cow peas. There are a number of varieties, differing mainly in the time of ripening and the color of the seeds.

The Question of Pedigree.

The value of pedigree in an animal depends upon the management given. In the hands of a poor breeder and a poor feeder it is of little value, while with a skillful breeder and feeder it becomes invaluable. There is no economy in a farmer purchasing a well-bred animal, paying the price necessary to secure such an animal, and then neglecting him. Better save the money and invest only a part of it in a scrub, as under neglect a scrub will prove as profitable as a finely pedigreed animal. It is the combination of good breed, good feed and good care that gives the best profit, and a failure in any one essential will affect the results materially. The well-bred animal gives the best returns for good feed and care, but with neglect will prove less profitable than the scrub, because costing more, and because it will not stand neglect as well.—N. J. Shepherd, in Ohio Farmer.

COULD MANAGE A BABY.

How Senator Mason Showed His Ability to Quiet Uproarious Infants.

One bright afternoon a very tired-looking, shabbily-dressed woman, anywhere from 20 to 40 years old, boarded a Fourteenth street open car, bound downtown, up near the Boundary. The young, not particularly clean-looking baby which she tried to hamboozle into good humor was a squawker from away back, and the weary-appearing mother seemed to be simply wasting her time and breath in her efforts to appease the howling rage of the young one. The baby was in a state above and beyond anything like simple crying; it simply roared and shrieked. Its lung power was a strange thing to reflect upon. Its yowls rose above the creaking and grumbling of the two cars like the top note of a robusto soprano in a Wagner chous. The baby didn't want to be dandled. It didn't intend to be goo-goed. It resented all such flim-flammming methods. It wanted to yell, and it yelled. The mother finally tried spanking, and that was no good, either.

"Wound up for 24 hours," growled a nervous-looking man, probably a bachelor, sitting a few seats behind, and he touched the button and stepped off to wait for the next car.

"Dear me! it's a wonder mothers wouldn't keep that kind of children at home!" said an exceedingly thin-faced woman with poppies in her bonnet. She looked very indignant over the baby's conduct.

"Ought t' git dat kid a megaphone!" remarked the tinsmith on the rear platform, darting savage glances at the tired-looking woman and the tireless baby.

"Oh, I wouldn't do a thing to that one if I owned it and a slap-stick at the same time!" said the dapper-looking elderly man with the white side whiskers, on the front seat of the second car.

"Say, why didn't you tell us you was runnin' orphan asylum cars on this line?" said the tinsmith's apprentice, who was smoking a pipeful of punk on the rear seat, addressing the conductor. "D'ye t'ink we git our nickel's worf wit a bunch like dat a-shoutin' it into us for de hull trip?"

"It's a wonder somebody doesn't tell that woman that there's a pin sticking into her baby somewhere," remarked the beautiful young girl to her chum.

"The baby wants a drink of water—that's what ails it," said her chum, who was fully 18 years old, and ought therefore to have known all about such matters.

"An' do War Ain't Over Yit," hummed the darky with the guitar who had a whole seat to himself.

Up to this time the short, very stout, huge-headed, straggly mustached man sitting directly behind the woman with the baby had simply regarded the whole performance with an amused smile. The yelling of the baby didn't seem to worry him at all. He didn't look like a man possessed of such superfluities as nerves, anyhow. Finally he leaned over until his head was right close to the deep, cavernous mouth exhibited by the howling baby, and, chucking the infant under its rapidly waxing chin, he remarked in a deep, bass voice:

"Goo-goo-nms!"

"Wow-ow-wow!" replied the baby, without paying any attention whatsoever to the very stout man. The latter again chucked the infant under the chin, saying:

"Tumpsey-wumpsey!"

This time the baby ceased its howling long enough to get its eyes open so that it could see the very stout man.

"Woketsey-toketsey!" said the fat man, continuing his chucking-under the-chin tactics.

The baby looked him over and gradually let up. When it arrived at the convulsive stage where it looked doubtful whether it was going to quit for good or start in all over again, the big man reached over and gently lifted the kid from its mother's arms.

"Up-se-disey!" he pattered, tossing the now crowing infant in the air. "Whoop-se-disey!"

The infant was actually gurgling with joy by this time, and the eyes of all the rest of the passengers were on the very stout hypnotist of the young one.

Thus, for about seven blocks, United States Senator William E. Mason dandled the crowing baby, and the young one positively began to yell again as soon as he, after touching the button, handed it back to its mother preparatory to getting off.

"You did that pretty well, senator," said a man who got off the car at the same time Mr. Mason debarked.

"No better than I ought to," replied Senator Mason with an expansive smile. "I've been in politics a long while, and made a good many campaigns, and look at the size of the state I've had to practice in!"

Then the Illinois man passed on, smiling reflectively. — Washington Star.

Queer Chinese Belief.

Many so-called educated Chinese, says the North China Herald, firmly believe that a kingdom exists where all the inhabitants are pigmies; one where all are giants; another where all are women, and, still another, where every person has a hole through the center of his body, so that by means of a pole thrust through this hole they may be carried from one place to another.—N. Latest in Advertising.

A new scheme of advertising was resorted to by a progressive business firm in a prosperous city in the south. The junior partner of the firm swore out a warrant for the arrest of the senior partner on the ground that he was selling goods below cost and that the firm was constantly losing money thereby. The case came up in court and the counsel for the senior partner asked for a postponement in order to have more time to prepare his case. The judge granted the request, bail was fixed and the senior member released. As he left the courtroom the junior partner arose and exclaimed: "If he is released the sacrifice will go on!" The news soon spread and the firm did a better business. When the case was again called no plaintiff appeared and the charge was dismissed. The firm had succeeded in their object—advertisement.—Philadelphia Call.

Mormonism.

This is a question that should interest every one. It is a blot upon our fair land—a symptom of governmental ill-health. The right laws would act as speedily upon it as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does upon constipation or dyspepsia. They would quickly clear it out and restore healthy purity; and this is just what the bitters does for the human constitution. It makes the stomach strong by curing indigestion, biliousness and liver trouble.

Equality of the Sexes.

Woman certainly stands at last upon a footing more nearly equal with that of man. For instance, she may no longer gain entree into the column of the purely literary magazines by merely murdering somebody, but has, as has her brother, to go in search of the north pole, or to ride many consecutive centuries upon a bicycle, etc.—Boston Journal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is often ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. U. S. SENATOR ROACH

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator From North Dakota.

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota, personally endorses Peruna, the great catarrh cure and tonic. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, at Columbus, Ohio, written from Washington, D. C., Senator Roach says:

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Peruna as a tonic, and I am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficacious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."

Senator Roach's home address is Larimore, North Dakota.

Peruna is not a guess, nor an experiment; it is an absolute, scientific certainty. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Beware of substitutes—no genuine Peruna upon having Peruna. Let no one persuade you that some other remedy will do nearly as well. There is no other systemic remedy for catarrh but Peruna. Address the Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh, written by Dr. Hartman.

Non-partisan voters are circulating the following numerously signed petition: "The undersigned voters of Clark county, respectfully petition the General Assembly of Kentucky which is to convene January 2d, 1900, to pass an act to have the polls opened at every voting precinct in the State, in order to take the sense of the voters on the proposition to change our election laws from the secret ballot to the viva voce system, with the record of every vote written in the poll books, to be kept at the County Clerk's office."

I have received many invitations to participate in the controversy now raging as to the end of the old and the beginning of the new century, but am willing to stake my reputation on the opinion of the makers of the nautical almanac at the Naval Observatory, who hold that there are 100 years in a century; that the first year is 1, and that the last year is 100. If that is true the first year of the nineteenth century was 1801, and the last will be 1900. It makes all the difference in the world where you begin to count. If the first year of the century was the year 1800, the last year should be 1899, but in counting people usually begin with one, and not with the cipher.—Chicago Record.

Nothing is more extraordinary than the rebellion of important Treasury officials against the authority of Secretary Gage. They not only disagree with him radically in private, but they say so openly and for publication.—Chicago Tribune.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

The exercises on Christmas day at the Lutheran church, were well attended.

Miss Stella Renaker, of Cynthiana, has been visiting here for the past ten days.

To describe the events of the past would require an abler pen than your humble servant's.

On Christmas evening the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Hossman was thrown open to the young folks of this neighborhood. The house was filled to overflowing and each and every one enjoyed himself immensely. About one o'clock the guests took their departure, wishing the hostess, Miss Clara would have many more such occasions.

One of the pleasantest affairs that has taken place in the neighborhood for some time was the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Aylor, last Tuesday evening. Elwood Sothern, of Covington, was present and assisted in making the music for the dancers. Hour after hour those that love the mazy dance waltzed to the chimes of the merry music, pleasing to the participants and to the lookers-on as well. The next party of the week was the one at the home of Walter Crigler and wife, Friday night. Among the many persons present were the two grooms and their brides, viz: Lou Crutcher and Harvey Tanner. The last social that your correspondent had the pleasure of attending was the oyster supper given at R. L. Aylor's Saturday night. Numerous games were indulged in to the delight of all present until the midnight hour.

Florence

Mr. Robert Rice and wife, Miss Sallie Snyder, Miss Katie Grogan, Mr. John Bentham and Mr. Irvin Kyle attended the theater Saturday night in Cincinnati.

We would wish the Recorder a happy and a prosperous new year, but we know it will be over stocked with that kind of material, and we also know it takes something more substantial to make it a prosperous year.

This has not been good weather for moving, but several seem to have ignored the weather and movenany how. Mr. Glass moved from the Varner house on Shelby street to the Bedinger house on Main st; Mr. Cardy from Independence, moved in to the Varner house on Shelby st; Mr. Ben Kroger moved into his father's house on Main st.

The Baptist of this place are holding a protracted meeting which commenced Sunday morning, services being held by Bros., Swindler, of Covington, and Adams, of Walton. We hope the Lord will crown this meeting with great success and revive this church again for it has the best building and most convenient place for meeting in the town, with about 60 names enrolled on the books as members, and the house has been locked up for four or five years. This speaks badly for the members and community too. We understand they intend carrying on the meeting for two or three weeks, and we do sincerely hope all the members will get warmed up, not only Baptist but members of other denominations, and also outsiders. May the old church at this place be in a flourishing condition again. It does your humble servant good to hear the old familiar sound of the Baptist bell here again.

Old People Made Young.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Heart trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism, by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion, and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It is a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." The Coming of Baby brings joy or pain. It's for the mother to decide. With good health and a strong womanly organism, motherhood but adds to a woman's attractiveness.

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

takes away all terrors by strengthening the vital organs. It fits a mother for baby's coming. By revitalizing the nerve centres it has brought chubby, crowing youngsters to thousands of weak women who feared they were barren. It purifies, heals, regulates and strengthens, and is good for all women at all times. No druggist would be without it. $1 00

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 10, 1900. NO. 12

THERE are about 3,520'000 acres of swamp land in South Carolina.

NEITHER of Boone's represetnatives in the General Assembly was drawn as a member of any of the several committees on contests.

THE General Assembly will have a stormy session, and the sensational reporters will have a fertile field to cultivate in Frankfort, this winter.

THE Republicans gave ex-Gov. Bradley the empty honor of opposing Blackburn for U. S. Senator. Blackburn will be elected to-day in joint session and have votes to spare.

CARROLLTON, the little city at the mouth of the Kentucky, believes in preparing for war in time of peace, and has undertaken to raise a crop of cannons, the first planting to be in the court house yard.

F. C. GREENE, son of Circuit Judge John W. Greene, has purchased the Owen News, and will make it Democratic to the core. Here's to you, Bro. Greene, may your shadow in the journalistic field continue to elongate.

WHALLEN had Senator Harrell arrested Monday on a charge of obtaining money from him under false pretenses. Nearly all the Democratic members of the General Assembly signed his bond for $10,000 for his appearance for trial in Louisville on the 27th inst.

SEVERAL politicians, who went to Frankfort with their Senatorial lightning rods up, were sadly disappointed when they discovered that the Democratic members of the General Assembly are of the opinion that there is nothing at their disposal too good for old Joe.

ACCORDING to the argument of some of the wise men now assembled at Frankfort, if you lead a rascal into a trap, catch him dead to rights and then expose him, you are as bad a man as he. Honest people see no harm in deceiving a rascal that he may be captured and brought to justice.

MR. WHALLEN has gone back on the claim made for him at first that the money Senator Harrell charges was given to him as a bribe, was only a wager, and he swears in his affidavit that the money was paid to Harrell that he might vote according to the dictates of his own conscience in the contests before the General Assembly, and protect Whallen and his friends who have large sums bet on the result. Whallen's affidavit is a stronger confession of guilt than was that of Wallen and Jackson that lead up to their convicton.

[Warsaw Independent.]

Monday, W. E. Crouch had another warrant issued for the arrest of Miss Jennie Peak charging her with being the cause of James Harris, colored, burning his barn on Christmas night. Miss Peak happened to be in town when the warrant was served and she executed bond in the sum of $1,500 for her appearance at the trial which was set for to-day, but afterward changed to Friday, yesterday, as her brother, George B. Peak, who desired to be present at the trial, wanted to get home to Des Moines as soon as he could. Three suits for damages have also been filed against Miss Peak. One for $750 by Oscar Allen, Charles and Albert Smith for loss of the barn, they having just bought the fram from Mr. Crouch. another for $1,000 by W. E. Crouch for the loss of the contents of the barn consisting of tobacco and other crops, farming implements, etc.; another from Wm. P. Crouch for $250 for his mare burned to death in the barn. The examining trial on the criminal charge took place here yesterday, and the damage suits will be called in the Circuit Court in March. The whole matter is exciting considerable attention and many wild stories are being circulated. The examining trial occupied all of yesterday afternoon, and was not completed at the hour of going to press.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Of course, Mr. Bynum is a Democrat—or anything else necessary to secure a job.

The unexpected results of the South Africa war have nipped whole reams of British peotry in the bud.

The unanimity of the Republican Senators in voting down Senator Pettigrew's request for information, argues a guilty conscience.

While we are talking of the bribery in Montana when Clark was elected to the Senate, why forget that in Ohio, when Hanna was chosen?

The Republicans can't be quite as confident as they pretend to be, when the President made arrangment for swinging round the circle next summer.

The imperialists are advocating reconcentrations and executions in the Philippines. Clearly we were wrong to interfere with Spain's methods in Cuba.

While boasting of the boom in the steel trade, why omit all reference to that in coffins. A single Pennsylvania corporation has shipped 2,000 of these to the Philippines.

Will the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General kindly step forward and explain why Ohio has been given more rural free delivery routes than any other state in the country?

The Administration has quite rightly put a stop to recruiting for the Boers on American soil. But purchase of war material over here by the British government goes right along.

According to Representative Grosvenor, we have plenty of anti-trust legislation. Quite right! What we want now is enforcement. But imagine Griggs enforcing an anti-trust law.

It is about time these transport horrors should cease. What ever might have been necessary in the stress of war, there is no excuse for poisoning our men with decayed beef now-a-days.

We suppose it is all right for the European powers to grant the United States equal rights in China, but it might be a good idea to consult China about it. It would be only justice anyhow.

If the Boers would load their shell with embalmed beef cans like those exploded at the War Department last year, lyddite would be outdone and the result of the war would no longer be in doubt.

Quay went into politics a poor man. Now, he owns real estate in Pennsylvania, Washington, and Florida, and has a lot of stocks and bonds besides. The plum tree seems to have borne well for him.

The last man to realize prosperity and the first to lose it is the laboring man. Yet, to hear the manufacturers talk, one would suppose that every rise in wages was a free gift from them and not a right.

Brooklyn people have been making trouble for their school board because it has appointed a negro to teach white children. Yet, these same people have been denouncing the south for drawing the color line.

There is plenty of state law against polygamy, but a constitutional amendment giving Congress authority to regulate marriages might be a good thing. The diversity of law on this subject is a national scandal.

Charles Gates Dawes, controller of the currency, and one of the very best and brightest of McKinley's appointees, has discovered that the Republican party is the foe of trusts. Good boy! After a while he will discover that the moon is made of green cheese.

MISSOURI LETTER.

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 5th. 1900.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Another Christmas has come and gone again. To many it brought joy and gladness, yet possibly to as great a number, sorrow, want and distress. The bountiful and cheerfulness of the annual occasion, which gladdens the hearts of the little ones and so welcomed as a day of rest, feasting and enjoyment by many, seldom reaches the huts and hovels of the poor, sick and needy. The want of food, fuel and raiment constantly stare them in the face, from day to day, until death comes as a welcome relief. People living in the country or in small inland cities can have but the faintest idea of the prevalence, the number and amount of suffering poor in all the large cities.

While almost every city of importance throughout the length and breadth of the land has organized charitable institutions, they fail to reach, much less relieve, one-tenth of the distress. Some are too proud to ask or accept alms, and continue to suffer in silence until death ends all. Several have died from starvation in this city in the past few months. In larger cities the number is greatly augmented.

News has lately been received from South Africa of the safe arrival there of Missouri's quota of mules. Out of 1,900 sent from this State, although the voyage was rough and stormy, only 30 were lost on the trip. The remainder, after a 28 days' trip arrived in fine condition. After a day's rest they were rushed on to the scenes of battle. Evidently by now they, too, have concluded that war is—a worse place than old Missouri.

Springfield is just now in the midst of a telephone war. The Bell Company charges $3 per month for commercial service and $2 50 per month for residence 'phones. The people or citizens have set their hearts and heads on a $1 and $2 rate per month, and nothing less will be accepted. Several outside companies have signified their willingness to come here and install a plant, if granted a five year charter. The matter will, doubtless, be settled as soon as the council meets, possibly by the time this reaches you.

The new gas franchise granted some six months ago has now expired, and nothing done. They have not succeeded in buying out the old company nor made any start on the new, yet still claim they mean business, if the council will extend the time a little longer, and not declare their bond of $10,000 deposited with the city, forfeited. Thus the matter is in statu quo.

While Santa Claus was generous and bountiful to him in many respects, my boy didn't find a turkey in his stocking, and while sadly disappointed over this seeming oversight or neglect, he was soon oblivious to his surroundings, in examining a heterogenious mass and multiplicity of other good things, yet mentally pondering as to whether this same oversight would be repeated on New Year's day. Subsequently he received a second installment from another city, an addendum as it were, which greatly augmented his first supply of candy, nuts, etc. It came by express, and among other things, contained a nice, warm cap, nuts, handkerchiefs, rubber ball, oranges, nuts and candy galore. I thought his cup of joy was filled and that turkey controversy had reached its finis, but I was mistaken. Some days after, when returning home after a hard day's labor (?)—in gossip and idleness through necessity, of course I ran on to him down town. I noticed he seemed pleased and self-satisfied, and exultingly exclaimed, "I've got a new year's turkey, patta." (He always uses tees in the latter part of that patronym instead of pees). When asked how and where he replied, "found it on the front porch; he came to me and wanted in, so I took him in." The boy is very small for his age. Diminutive, pony build or of the Major Domo order.

It was dark at this time and evidently this turkey thought any old house will shelter me just for the night. It is possible he had heard that the people of Springfield were very hospitable. At any rate he made no resistance to the boy's friendly grasp and welcome, seeming to take it for granted that everything was alright; yet it was somewhat puzzling which was the larger, the boy or the bird. Later he found the owner, who had lost a half dozen, and said to the boy, "find the rest and I'll give you a dime." The little fellow insisted on a dime for each turkey; the gentleman, a very wealthy miller, said, "you are a high-priced boy." "Not at all, you are a cheap man," replied the boy.

Subsequently the other turkeys were found and the reward paid. Then the boy broke down and cried great, big hot tears coursed down his face like April showers. The bright anticipation of that turkey dinner had vanished for ever, and the only remembrance left was the memory of what might have been, a little, thin piece of silver and a big indelible card of the vanished bird on the front porch. But this failure neither dampened nor lessened his enthusiasm. It only served to whet his appetite for turkey. Then he went down to one of the wagon yards and bought himself a turkey of the feminine gender, something near the color of clay or old Kentucky native leaf, except the turkey was flicked with some white. When they came marching home, he remarked, "Pat, she isn't as big as an ostrich nor as small as a wren, but I think she will stop an aching void and fill a long felt want." I agreed with him, for some things do agree with me.

It was a female bird I am sure, with such a preponderance of evidence in her favor, this fact could not be denied. Such a melodious cackle, a neck like a crane and such a bill, and feet like a Chicago bell's. Her breast bone was like a razor-back hog, still I think she was young, barely turned her 15th year, and not fully developed into a thing of beauty and a joy forever. A veritable rubber neck, and this elastic quality was not confined to the neck alone. I am now sure they were not. Our nearest neighbor tried miss birdie by fire 24 hours with failing results. By dint of awkwardness, hard work and good luck, first on the table with saw and knife, later on the floor with an ax, we managed to sever one limb, when the boy exclaimed, "see there! what a hunk of meat." I agree with him again. I think we have had enough of turkey for 1900 years.

Thanks to the generosity of some kind friend, the RECORDER visited me again as bright and newsy as ever.

The Excelsior Literary Society.

The Excelsior Literary Society held its Christmas meeting with Miss Pearl Hughes, at the new and lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Sleet, on Friday evening Dec. 29th.

The Excelsior is composed of the elite of society from the Walton Union, Richwood, Beaver and Big Bone neighborhoods, and all these places were well represented.

The Society was organized in the summer of 1898, and the interest that was manifest at first has never abated. Its objects are literary culture, moral development and social pleasure, and we feel satisfied that these objects are being attained.

Miss Katie Green presided with all her usual grace and dignity. After the reading of scripture by Mr. C. C. Sleet, the roll was called and each member responded with a quotation. We were then entertained with speeches and recitations from Misses Jean Chambers, Alva Williams, Nellie Cleek, Jonas, and Boyd Hudson and Rev. W. H. Davis. The programme was interspersed with music by Messrs. Gilmore and Garrison (Mandolin and Guitar), which was highly appreciated by all.

After the program was completed, we spent an hour or two in social chat, and then departed for our homes, thanking those who had entertained the club so pleasantly.

The next meeting will be at Mr. Daniel Bedinger's, Jan. 12th 1900.

Old People Made Young.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Heart trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism, by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion, and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It is a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." Only 50cts, at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, J. G. Oelsner's, Florence, and M. J. Crouch's, Union.

Of course Mr. Gage must remember that the passing of the Christmas session does not relieve him from the duty of playing Santa Claus to Wall street at any time in the future.—Omaha World-Herald.

BULLITTSVILLE.

For several weeks we have refrained from taxing the patience of your readers in the perusal of our lengthy effusions, but, since it has been our custom in years past to report at the beginning of each year the manner in which the Christmas Holidays were spent in this corner of Mother Earth, we as duty bound will ask space in your valuable paper and beg the indulgence of your readers in relating what our social circles did in honor of the greatest event in the cycles of history.

The gloomy forebodings of a dull Christmas, which were indulged in, have been dispelled by the realization of the most joyous and most delightful Christmas week in the memory of our edenic joys—a concise account of which I can only give in the limited space allotted in your newsy paper.

On the evening of the 21st ult., Prof. Hann initiated the festivities with an entertainment in his school room, to which all of his pupils contributed, each of the scholars acquitting themselves with credit, both to their teacher and themselves. All except one of the young participants showed that they had been well trained in their several duties—Master Allie Winston sang tenor a little too loud and fast for the rest of the choir. At the close of the exercises Santa Claus gave the school a treat of candy, oranges, and bananas. Prof. Hann then called Bro. Hoover to the rostrum and in a very appropriate address presented him with a beautiful fur robe and horse blanket, which his many friends and admirers had jointly purchased for him. Prof. Hann made many friends on account of the zeal, earnestness and interest he manifested in his vocation.

Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Gaines gave a delightful party in honor of their son and daughter, who are in attendance at Georgetown College. Though it was a very unpropitious evening for an entertainment, quite a number of young friends assembled to extend a welcome to their intelligent and charming daughter and handsome son. The guests spent the evening in playing cards and carroms, and enjoying some delightful music rendered on the piano by Miss Zayda Gaines.

Tuesday evening the young ladies gave an entertainment and social at the residence of Dr. Hays. Notwithstanding our opposition to dove parties, we are forced to admit that the "Dovies" acquitted themselves with great credit and their entertainment was a grand success in every sense of the word. They had a large, select and respectful attendance—about one hundred and twenty-five receipts at the door. The doves played well, acted well and surpassed themselves in looking pretty.

They imported a very handsome young man from Petersburg, a Mr. Chas. B. Gardner, to assist them in their music, and to be the recipient of their sweetest smiles. I dare say he spent the happiest evening of his life with all those "Dovies" cooing about him. The entertainment was introduced with an instrumental duette rendered on the piano by Misses Zayda Gaines and Nellie Duncan. I have neither the gift of language sufficient nor the space allotted to compliment each one of the young ladies for their musical contributions. I will content myself with a general compliment by saying, that each of them acquitted themselves with much credit and to the general satisfaction of all present. Misses Beulah Gaines and Nellie Duncan contributed instrumental solos; Misses Zayda Gaines and Grace Grant, vocal solos, and vocal duetts.

As Mr. Gardner was an honored guest, I trust the young ladies will excuse me for making special mention of his musical contributions. Mr. Gardner teaches music in Petersburg, is thoroughly versed in the art, and performs grandly on the piano. His instrumental solo the "Rhapsodie Hongroise No. 2," by Listz, was one of the grandest efforts on the piano I ever heard. The rendering of this piece called forth the hearty plaudits of every one present. He favored the audience with a vocal solo—he has a rich, clear, highly cultured baritone voice.

Miss Bessie Cropper followed Mr. Gardner with a recitation of a humerous selection. Miss Bessie has a special gift in this line. She recites beautifully and personates one who has been highly cultured in the art. After a short intermission, the Lucas Family entered the parlor led by Miss Bernice Duncan. This family consisted of nine old maid sisters and a younger brother. They amused the guests for quite a while with their humorous selections. They were all dressed in fancy costumes, each young lady fashioning her costume after her own ideas, making it as ridiculous as possible. Miss Bernice seemed to be the manager and leading character in the troupe. She delivered the opening address in eloquent style and introduced each of her sisters, setting forth their virtues and sterling qualities in lofty language and dramatic manner. I regret that limited space in your paper denies me the pleasure of paying deserving compliments to other members of this talented family for the very creditable manner in which they performed their several parts. The design of this play was to amuse and they certainly succeeded admirably in this. The young ladies who assisted in the play were Misses Mary Corn, Annie Gaines, Bessie Cropper, Estie Snider, Fannie Willis, Nellie Duncan and Master Duncan Riley.

On Wednesday evening Miss Mary Corn entertained fifty-two of her young friends in her beautiful and commodious parlors. It was a most delightful affair. Miss Mary never gives any other kind. She is well prepared to do so—possessing the handsomest and most conveniently arranged house in the county, a mother and father who delight in dispensing hospitality, and sparing no means in gratifying the wishes of their only daughter and child. Then Miss Mary possesses that happy personality that makes her guests feel that they are not merely welcome, but that she is delighted to have them there.

Thursday evening Miss Fannie Willis entertained about forty of her young friends in honor of her uncle Ben Willis, a young bachelor, who resides in Lexington. We pause when we undertake to write of Miss Fannie. She possesses one of those sweet, lovely, angelic like characters that human language cannot do justice in describing. She is always cheerful and happy—was never known to lose her temper, nor to speak disparagingly of any one. Assisted by her big hearted, hospitable father and her sweet-tempered lady-like mother, her parties are always the most delightfully enjoyable of the season. Her bright, inteligent uncle, assisted her greatly in making the evening enjoyable, with his sparkling wit and wonderful performance on the guitar. He rendered during the evening some of the sweetest music I ever heard upon an instrument. He is a musical genius and has the sweetest touch I have ever known any one to possess.

There were other parties given which it was not my privilege to attend and I do not feel that it is my privilege to report.

CROP AND STOCK.

It is estimated that 2,000,000 sheep have died in New South Wales because of the drouth this year. The number of sheep in that colony is 12,000,000 less than ten years ago. Other Australian colonies have had almost equally disastrous experience.

A press dispatch from Chicago says. "The record for highest prices on beef cattle since June, 1882, was broken last week on the Chicago market. One car load, consisting of seventeen head of Aberdeen-Angus two-year-old cattle, was sold to one of the local packers for $8.25 per hundred, while another lot of the same style cattle was sold for $8.50 per hundred. These prices have not been equaled since 1882, when beef cattle reached the highest point for 20 years previous to that time.

At the Angus cattle sale held in Chicago, twenty-two bulls brought an average of $364.77, and sixty five females brought $48,02. The 87 head sold brought $28,105, a general average of $823,04. The highest price of the sale also the highest on record for an Angus cow, $1,225, was paid for the Estill cow; Blackbird of Woodland 3d, 14441, with calf at side. The highest priced bull was Wm. Miller's Gay Blackbird 14443, which sold to J. P. Hines, of Shinrock, Ohio, for $1,025. The Escher heifer Antelope, 4th of Woodland 294,448 was bought by B. R. Pierce of Creston, Ill., for $900.

Dr. Talmage Speaks on the Subject of Insomnia.

Sleep the Vacation of the Soul — A Divine Narcotic—Words of Consolation for Sufferers—The Last Sleep.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage treats of a style of disorder not much discoursed upon and unfolds what must be a consolation to many people. Text, Psalms 77:4: "Thou holdest mine eyes waking."

Sleep is the vacation of the soul. It is the mind gone into the playground of dreams; it is the relaxation of muscles and the solace of the nerves; it is the hush of activities; it is the soft curtaining of the eyes; it is a truce of eight hours; it is a calming of the pulses; it is a breathing much slower, though far deeper; it is a temporary oblivion of all earking cares; it is the doctor recognized by all schools of medicine; it is a divine narcotic; it is a complete anaesthetic; it is an angel of the night; it is a great mercy of God for the human race. Lack of it puts patients on the rack of torture or in the madhouse or in the grave. Oh, blessed sleep! No wonder the Bible makes much of it. Through sleep so sound that a surgical incision of the side of Adam did not waken him came the best temporal blessing ever offered to man—wifely companionship. While in sleep on a pillow of rock Jacob saw a ladder set up, with angels coming down and climbing. So "He giveth His beloved sleep," soliloquized the psalmist. Solomon listens at the door of a tired workman and eulogizes his pillow by saying: "The sleep of a laboring man is sweet." Peter was calmly sleeping between the two constables the night before his expected assassination. Christ was asleep in a boat on Galilee when tossed in the euroclydon. The announciation was made to Joseph in sleep, and death is described as only a sleep and the resurrection as a glorious waking out of sleep.

On the other hand, insomnia, or sleeplessness, is an old disorder spoken of again and again in the Bible. Ahasuerus suffered from it, and we read: "In that night could not the king sleep." Joseph Hall said of that ruler: "He that could command a hundred and seven and twenty provinces could not command sleep." Nebuchadnezzar had insomnia, and the record is: "His sleep brake from him." Solomon describes this trouble and says: "Neither day nor night seeth he sleep with his eyes." Asaph was its victim, for he complains in my text that his eyes are wide open at midnight, some mysterious power keeping the upper and lower lids from joining: "Thou holdest mine eyes waking."

Insomnia, which has troubled all nations and all ages, and its widest swing in our land, because of the push and speed of all styles of activities, as in no other land. Where there is one man or woman with equipoise of nerves there are a dozen with overwrought and tangled ganglion. At some time in life almost everyone has had a touch of it. It has been called "Americanitis." Last night there were, as there will be tonight, millions of people to whom the words of the text are appropriate utterance: "Thou holdest mine eyes waking."

Wonderful is that law which Ralph Waldo Emerson called the "law of compensation," and it has been so arranged that, while the hard-working populations of the earth are denied many of the luxuries, they have at least one luxury which many of the affluent of the earth are denied and for which some of them would give millions of dollars in cash down—namely, capacity to sleep. The most of those who toil with hand and foot do not have to send out invitations to sleep. They require no bromide or valerian or sulphonal or trional to put them to nightly unconsciousness. In five minutes after their heads touch their pillows they are as far off from the wall they were building, or the ditch they were digging, or the anvil they were pounding, or the wheels they were controlling, as heaven is from earth. About three o'clock in the morning, the body at lowest temperature and its furnaces nearly out, what a complete quietude for the entire physical and mental structure! All night long, for such sleep is busy with its enchanted anointing of every corpuscle of the arteries and every molecule of the entire physical organism, and the morning finds the subjects of such sleep rebuilt, reconstructed and touched of God into a new life.

Of course there is an unrighteous sleep, as when Jonah, trying to escape from duty, slept in the sides of the ship while the Mediterranean was in wrath because of that prophetic passenger; as when Columbus in his first voyage, exhausted from being up many nights, gave the ship in charge of the steersman and the crew, who, leaving the management of the vessel to boys, went asleep and allowed the ship to strike on the sand banks of St. Thomas; as when the sentinel goes to sleep at his post, endangering the whole army; as when the sluggard, who accomplishes nothing the day before he went to sleep and will accomplish nothing the day after he wakes, fills up Solomon's picture of him as he yawns out: "A little sleep and a little slumber and a little folding of the hands to sleep." But sleep at the right time and amid the right circumstances—can you imagine anything more blessed? If sleep, according to sacred and profane literature, is an emblem of death, the morning to all refreshed slumbers is a resurrection.

If you have escaped the insomnia spoken of in the text, thank God. Here and there one can command sleep, and it comes the minute he orders it and departs at the minute he wishes it to go, as Napoleon when he wrote: "Different affairs are arranged in my head as in drawers. When I wish to interrupt one train of thought, I close the drawer which contains that subject and open that which contains another. They do not mix together or inconvenience me. I have never been kept awake by an involuntary preoccupation of mind. When I wish for repose, I shut up all the drawers, and I am asleep. I have always slept when I wanted rest and almost at will." But I think in most cases we feel that sleep is not the result of a resolution, but a direct gift from God. You cannot purchase it. A great French financier cried out: "Alas! Why is there no sleep to be sold?"

Do not take this divine gift as a matter of course. Your seven or eight hours of healthful unconsciousness is a blessing worthy of continuous and emphatic recognition. Praise the Lord for 365 resurrections in a year! Artificial slumber can be made up by the apothecaries, but natural sleep is a balm, a panacea, a catholicon that no one but God can mix. With it he bathes your eyes and brain and nerve and bone. It is a soft robe woven in Heaven, with which He wraps your body, mind and soul. The more scientists explore this mystery of sleep the more profound it seems. God tells us many things, but that is a secret He keeps to Himself. We philosophize and guess about this phenomenon, but will never know just what sleep is until we are told about it when we get through the last sleep. Thank God morning, noon and night for this strange quietude, this refreshing dismissal, this recuperating absence, this reenforcement of energies, this mighty benediction.

Consider among the worst crimes the robbery of ourselves or others of the mercy of slumber. Much ruinous doctrine has been inculcated on this subject. Thomas Moore gave poor advice when he said: "The best way to lengthen our days is to steal a few hours from the night." We are told that, though they did their work all night, Copernicus lived to be 73 years of age and Galileo 78 years and Herschel 84 years. Yes, but the reason was they were all star hunters, and the only time for hunting stars is at night. Probably they slept by day. The night was made for slumber. The worst lamp a student can have is "the midnight lamp." Lord Brougham never passed more than four hours of the night abed, and Justinian, after one hour of sleep, would rise from his couch. But you are neither a Justinian nor a Lord Brougham. Let not the absurd apothegm of early rising induce you to the abbreviation of sleep. Get up when you are slept out, unless circumstances compel otherwise. Have no alarm clock making its nerve-tearing racket at four o'clock in the morning, unless special reasons demand the forsaking of your pillow at that hour. Most of the theories about early rising we inherited from times when people retired at eight or nine o'clock in the evening. Such early retirement is impossible in our own times for those who are taking part in the great activities of life. There is no virtue in the mere act of early rising. It all depends upon what you do after you get up. It would be better for the world if some people never wakened at all.

But most Americans do not get sleep enough. The sin of late retiring is one most widespread and ruinous. What is much needed is that in all our cities those who are leaders in social life turn back the hour of drawing-room assemblage from ten and eleven to eight or half-past seven, so that the guests at ten or half-past ten may meet sleep at the right hour in their own dormitories. Two or three social heroines could do that in all the towns and cities. Thousands of men and women are slain each year by late hours. Five years is more than the average of endurance. The vitality of men and women is depleted, and they go into chronic ailments, if they do not die of dyspepsia or consumption or nervous prostration, and the beauty goes out of the cheek beyond all restoration of cosmetics. Late retiring is the mother of premature wrinkles. Lack of sleep assassinates social life. A reformation is needed, and if the customs of the world could be changed in this matter and the curtains of social life could be rung down at a reasonable hour of the night 20 per cent. would be added to the world's longevity.

All those ought to be comforted who by overwork in right directions have come to insomnia. In all occupations and professions there are times when a special draft is made upon the nervous energy. There are thousands of men and women who cannot sleep because they were injured by overwork in some time of domestic or political or religious exigency. Mothers who, after taking a whole family of children through the disorders that are sure to strike the nursery, have been left physical wrecks, and one entire night of slumber is to them a rarity, if not an impossibility. The attorney at law who through a long trial in poorly ventilated courtroom has stood for weeks battling for the rights of widows and orphans or for the life of a client in whose innocence he is confident, though all the circumstances are unfavorable. In his room he tries the case all night long, and every night, when he would like to be slumbering. The physician, in time of epidemics, worn out in saving the lives of whole families and failing in his attempts to sleep at night between the jangflags of his door bell. The merchant who has experienced panics, when the banks went down and Wall street became a pandemonium, and there was a possibility that next day he would be penniless—that night with no more possibility of gaining sleep than if such a blessing had never touched our planet. Ministers of the Gospel, in time of great revival, all their powers of endurance drawn upon day by day and week by week and month by month — sermonic preparation neighborhood visitation, heartbreaking obsequies, sympathetic help for the anxious, the despairing and the dying. It is a wonder that ministers of the Gospel have any nerves left and that the angel of sleep does not quit their presence forever.

But I here and now pronounce high est consolation for all those who in any department have sacrificed their health to duty. Your sleeplessness is as much a wound as you can find on any battle field and is an honorable wound. We all look with reverence and admiration upon one who has lost an eye or an arm in the service of his country, and we ought to look with admiration upon those who, through extreme fidelity to their life work, have lost their capacity for slumber. Remember glorious Albert Barnes going along the streets of Philadelphia at four o'clock in the morning for many years to his church study, writing all his commentaries before breakfast, and keeping on until he was stone blind. Will not the Lord reward such sacrifices? And if through your fidelity you have lost capacity to sleep, God, who never slumbers or sleeps, will look after you. When you hear the clock strike twelve and one and two and three and four without your going to your slumber, let it remind you that you have not been a sluggard or a do-nothing. You are suffering in a good cause. Paul got sore eyes in the Lord's service, and had many a scar, but, so far from complaining about it, he exults in those scars, saying—In the only inspired letter we know that he wrote with his own hand, for the other letters were dictated to amanuenses—in that letter to the Galatians: "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus."

All the victims of insomnia ought to be consoled with the fact that they will have a good long sleep after awhile. Sacred and profane literature again and again speak of that last sleep. God knew that the human race would be disposed to make a great ado about exit from this world, and so he inspires Job and David and Daniel and John and Paul to call that condition "sleep." When at Bethany the brother who was the support of his sisters after their father and mother were gone had himself expired, Christ cried out in regard to him: "He is not dead, but sleepeth." Cheering thought to all poor sleepers, for that will be a pleasant sleep, indeed by no narcotic disturbed by no frightful dream, interrupted by no harsh sound. Better than any sleep you ever took, O child of God, will be the last sleep. In your other slumbers your home may be invaded by burglars and your treasures carried off, but while here and there, in one case out of millions, the resurrectionist may disturb the pillow of dust, the last sleep is almost sure to be kept from invasion. There will be no burglary of the tomb. And it will be a refreshing sleep. You have sometimes risen in the morning more weary than when you laid down at night, but waking from the sleep of which I speak, the last fatigue, the last ache, the last worriment, will be forever gone. Oh, what a refreshing sleep!

Most people are tired. The nights do not repair the day. Scientists, by minute calculation, say that every night comes a little short of restoring the body to where it was the day before, and so every seventh day was put in for entire rest, to make up in reparation for what the nights could not do. But so restful will be the last sleep that you will rise from it without one sore nerve, without one tired limb—rested, forever rested, as only God can rest you. O ye tired folks all up and down the world, tired with work, or tired with persecutions, or tired with ailments, or tired with bereavements, or tired in the struggle against temptation, clap your hands with eternal glee in expectation of that sleep from which you will wake up so rested that you will never need another sleep or even another night. "There shall be no night there," because there will be no need of its quieting influences. No lengthening of the shadows of tower and wall and gate. No evening mist rising from the river. No sundown. "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended."

So, my hearer, my reader, "Good night." May God give you such sleep to-night as is best for you, and if you wake too soon may He fill your soul with reminiscences and expectations that will be better than slumber. Good night! Having in prayer, kneeling at the bedside, committed yourself and all yours to the keeping of the slumberless God, fear nothing. The pestilence that walketh in darkness will not cross your doorsill, and you need not be afraid of evil tidings. Good night! May you have no such experience as Job had when he said: "Thou scarest me with dreams and terrifiest me through visions." If you dream at all, may it be a vision of reunions and congratulations, and, waking, may you find some of them true. Good night! And when you come to the best sleep, the blissful sleep, the last sleep, may you be able to turn and say to all the cares and fatigues and bereavements and pangs of a lifetime: "Good night!" and your kindred, standing around your illumined pillow, give you hopeful though sorrowful farewell as you move out from their loving embrace into the house of a welcoming God. Good night! Good night!

Hard to Believe.

"I wouldn't have minded being whipped so much," said the young culprit, "if the teacher hadn't said that my punishment hurt him more than it did me."

"That oughtn't to make you feel any worse."

"Well, it did. What he punished me for was telling stories."—Washington Star.

TANNER TURNED DOWN.

The Illinois Leader Gets the Gaff from His Former Henchmen.

In repudiating John Riley Tanner—for that is what has happened—the republican party has repudiated its principles and traditions as well as perpetrated a grave injustice upon the governor. No one will believe—no one is asked to believe—that his excellency is "turned down" because of his sins of omission or commission. The things with which he is charged are the very things which form the equipment of an ideal republican statesman. Gov. Tanner is an ideal republican statesman. He is repudiated not because he has transformed the civil service of the state of Illinois into a political machine reeking of corruption—not because his administration has been one series of scandals—but because it was feared that he couldn't be reelected. The statesmen who guide the destinies of the republican party in Illinois are practical politicians. Much as they may admire Gov. Tanner, they will take no chances of losing the state by renominating him.

Gov. Tanner is no worse than his party. If anything he is a little better. For he possesses one quality, at least, which raises him above the Hertzes and Pearses and Jamisons and Maddens who have taken his political scalp. He is courageous. He fights where they sulk. He is an organizer by instinct, while they are the camp followers who come up after the battle to share in the loot. Some of them—Hertz, for instance—hate him, but they all fear him and respect him, if respectability can be predicated of such a character. They would all follow at his heels in hope of further swag, but they fear that his prestige is gone. Hence they turn and rend him.

As for the governor himself, he does not add to his reputation for fortitude by the manner in which he takes his dethronement. He complains that he has been abused and vilified from the moment he assumed office. If he will take the trouble to reflect he will remember that his immediate predecessor was likewise vilified and abused and that John R. Tanner was foremost in the attacks. What was sauce for Altgeld ought to be sauce for Tanner. His excellency is the last man in Illinois to reprehend and complain of abuse. It is his main stock in trade.

Indeed, he may charge his downfall to his very predilection for antagonizing and abusing people—his carrying hatred into his official acts and using his position as a club wherewith to beat those whom he deemed his enemies. It may safely be asserted that his consistently malignant hostility to the interests of Chicago rendered his overthrow certain, because the camp followers realized that he could not carry Cook county, and without Cook county he stood to lose the state. Hence he was set down as unavailable. And to add to the bitterness of his defeat he can now realize that the republican nominee for governor will probably come from the very section which caused his downfall. It is retributive justice.

Still, the passing of Tanner reflects no credit upon the republican party. He was worthy of the party and the party was worthy of him. He was the typical republican officeholder and he is ungratefully abandoned merely because he practiced in every official act the fundamental republican maxim: A public office is a private snap.—Chicago Chronicle.

AGENT FOR THE TRUSTS.

Mark Hanna's Position and Principle as Controller of the Republican Party.

It is no more likely that Senator Mark Hanna, of Ohio, save in the event of failing health, will retire from the leadership of the imperialist party in the United States than that Cecil Rhodes, of South Africa, will abandon his control, through Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, of the jingo party in Great Britain.

The two men, Hanna and Rhodes, stand for one and the same principle in their respective countries. The principle is that of commercialized politics, the prostitution of party principle to the ends of private and corporate gain. Mark Hanna entered American public life as the accredited agent of trusts and syndicates, and is dictating the new American policy of foreign colonialism in the interests of trusts and syndicates. Cecil Rhodes became a national figure in England as the representative of the South African company, and the war on the Boers is due to the powerful influence of this great corporate body. Hanna works through his control of President McKinley's political fortunes. Rhodes works through his mastery of the mind of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, ambitious to become prime minister of Great Britain, the highest office under the crown.

It is not pleasant to contemplate the personalities of these two men as dominating the destinies of such governments as those of the United States and Great Britain, but the fact of their malign dominance may not truthfully be denied. Hanna's supremacy in this country is even more shameful than the power of Cecil Rhodes in England, for the reason that it is more directly the people's fault under our system of government when a surrender of national principle is made. In the case of Hanna the surrender of American principle involves a startling repudiation of the soundest American doctrines upon which rests the structure of free government. We are soon to be asked by President McKinley to make this surrender final and irrevocable. What shall be the answer of the American people to the president's astounding appeal for American stultification?—St. Louis Republic.

——Our secretary of the treasury should have quit the banking business when he accepted the position he now occupies.—N. Y. World.

TRANSACTED IN SECRET.

Secretary Gage's Handling of the People's Money Helps the McKinley Syndicate.

It is painful that Mr. McKinley's first lord of the treasury, Mr. Gage, is being harassed by scrutiny and criticism. It is more painful to have to do the scrutinizing and criticising of so amiable and respectable a person. It is most painful of all that Mr. Gage should be doing anything that calls for scrutiny and criticism.

What are the facts?

First. There is in New York a group of the most powerful financiers in the country who were of the largest contributors to the famous monster Hanna campaign fund of 1896, who are organized as the National city bank, and who have been the recipients of sundry extraordinary favors from the McKinley administration, such as, for example, the privilege of purchasing "by private arrangement" a piece of government property in New York city for about $1,700,000 less than its appraised value.

Second. Mr. Gage, as secretary of the treasury, as an accountable public servant, has entered into a secret agreement with this syndicate whereby it is to handle the entire internal revenue receipts of the government—about $300,000,000 a year. No one but Mr. Gage and Mr. McKinley and the syndicate know the terms of this secret agreement or how much profit the syndicators will be able to make out of the "handling." It is known, however, that the syndicate will have each day a very large sum of the people's money for which it will pay nothing and upon which it will collect heavy interest through loaning it out to the public.

Mr. Gage says in his explanation to the World:

"It is necessary to concentrate the internal revenue receipts of $300,000, nearly $1,000,000, a day at one place in order to make any fair distribution of them from day to day."

But is it necessary secretly to concentrate them? And why is it necessary to bring into the coffers of the National city bank collections made in Richmond, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, St. Louis, Peoria, San Francisco? Why could not the government do the distributing? Why could it not do the distributing publicly, in order that no one might be able to suspect or allege favoritism?

Mr. Gage says:

"The National city bank has a larger deposit of bonds with the treasury department than any other bank in the country. This ample security would not exist in the case of a bank whose deposit of bonds was nominal or comparatively small."

But does this change the fact that the internal revenue receipts, if they must be distributed as free deposits, could be and should be distributed by the government itself in smaller amounts among the strong banks throughout the country, in order that all the people might have an opportunity to benefit instead of a little group of favored money lenders in Wall street?

Mr. Vanderlip, Mr. Gage's factotum and the junior lord of the treasury, says:

"The department will not announce the new depositories or institutions which will receive the money. I do not regard it as good policy, for would any good result from its publicity?"

Where would be the harm? Is it not the people's money? Are not Gage and Vanderlip the people's servants? If they are compelling the National city bank to make a fair distribution of these vast sums, what possible reason can they have for hiding the facts? What would Mr. Gage have thought if when he was president of a national bank in Chicago his cashier had come to him and said: "Mr. Gage, I really cannot permit you to know what I am doing with the bank's money. You will have to be satisfied with a statement of totals and results at the end of the year?"

Is it not against public policy for the secretary of the treasury in any circumstances to turn over his functions and the public funds to private money lenders, however good the security they may give? Is it not a gross abuse of public trust for him to make this assignment to a little group of the financial backers of the administration's political fortunes, and that by secret agreement?

If Mr. Gage is wronging his public reputation by this secrecy his redress is easy to obtain. All he has to do is to adopt the only safe and just course for an honest and faithful public official—publicity! publicity! publicity!—N. Y. World.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——Mr. Hanna concedes that New York should pick the vice presidential candidate, and has, indeed, gone so far in his obliging way as to pick out several good names for New York to pick from.—Albany Argus.

——If this congress appreciates money up to the demands of the various departments of government, it will be not merely a billion-dollar, but nearly a billion-and-a-half-dollar congress. This is the work of imperialism. It has made the most extravagant of recent congresses models of moderation and economy in the comparison.—Springfield Republican.

——With war taxes, thousands of mourning homes and the gravest apprehensions existing among thoughtful citizens in regard to the outcome of the policy of ingrafting imperialism into Americanism, the ship of state cannot truthfully be said to be sailing serenely under the McKinley-Hanna pilotage.—Troy Press.

——We notice that some of the republican papers are strong in advising that Senator Clark, of Montana, be unseated for securing his election to the senate by the use of money. But we do not recall that these same papers were very insistent when Mark Hanna was elected by the same means from the state of Ohio.—Peoria Herald-Transcript.

STARS AS TIMEKEEPERS.

According to This Authority They Are Much More Reliable Than the Sun.

Probably the majority of people suppose that the observatories obtain the correct time from the sun. When the average man wishes to give his watch the highest praise he says: "It regulates the sun," not being aware that a watch which would keep with the sun around the year would have to be nearly as bad as Cap'n Cuttle's. The farmer may safely decide when to go in to dinner by the sun, but if the mariner was as confident that the sun marked always the correct time as the farmer is he would be sure to be at times 200 or 300 miles from where he thought he was. In other words, the sun—that is, a sundial—is only correct on a few days in each year, and during the intervening times gets us far as a whole quarter hour fast or slow.

These variations of the sun from uniform time caused no end of trouble between the astronomers and the fine clockmakers before it was discovered that sun time is subject to such irregularities. The better the clock the worse it often seemed to go.

But as the variations in sun time are now accurately known, correct time might be obtained from the sun by making proper allowance, were it not for the difficulty of observing its position with sufficient exactness. The large disc of the sun cannot be located so perfectly as can the single point which a star makes. For this reason astronomers depend almost wholly upon the stars for obtaining accurate time. It is the method of doing this which we propose to describe.

There are several hundred stars whose positions have been established with the greatest accuracy by the most careful observations at a number of the principal observatories of the world. If a star's exact position is known, it can readily be calculated when it will pass the meridian of any given place—that is, the instant it will cross a north and south line through the place. The data regarding these stars are all published in the nautical almanacs, which are got out by several different observatories for the use of navigators and all others who have uses for them. These stars are known as "clock stars."—Popular Science Monthly.

Making Him Whole.

"It takes the glorious old west to do business," said the man with the alligator grip, as he boarded the train at St. Paul. "We of the east are not in it a little bit."

"Anything to relate?" queried one of the passengers, as he woke up.

"Just a few words. I traveled from New York to Chicago with a staving-looking girl. At Buffalo I was gone on her. At Detroit we were engaged. As we reached Chicago she had set the date. I returned home, wrote her 320 love letters and came out here to get married.

"She decided that she would marry another. She estimated the value of my time at $500, the worth of my letters at $300 and my broken heart at $200, and drew me a check for $1,000, and here it is. Gave her a receipt in full to date, kissed her good-by, and there you are and here I am. There's but one way to do business, and the west knows all about it. Yes, check for a thousand, and how many of you gentlemen will smoke a good cigar at my expense?"—Chicago Evening News.

How Natal Got Its Name.

South America was discovered by the Portuguese, who were searching for an ocean road to India. Bartholomew Dias was the commander of the two little ships that formed the expedition, in 1486. Eleven years later De Gama took another Portuguese fleet south. He discovered Natal on Christmas day, and thus named it in consequence.—N. Y. Herald.

PULLING FENCE POSTS.

Not a Very Hard Thing to Do When One Combines Patience with a Little Ingenuity.

Take the hind wheels and coupling pole of a farm wagon and a chain with a ring, or better, a large hook at one end. Fasten the chain to the pole in front of the axle in such a manner that when it is passed back over the axle and bolster the ring or hook will about touch the ground—a little longer or shorter, according to the size of the posts to be pulled up.

Now back the axle against the post, raise the coupling pole toward the post, against which it may lean, place the chain like a noose around the post, slipping it down until tight. Next bring the pole forward and to the ground. This will raise the post nearly a foot and generally fully loosen it. If the post is very deeply set or hard to pull out it may be necessary to repeat the process, slipping the noose farther down. Back to the next post and repeat.—Orange Judd Farmer.

DRY-ROT IN BRIDGES.

Why Wooden Structures Should Not Be Painted Until They Have Stood a Year.

The effect of paint on wet timber is to retain moisture and cause the so-called "dry-rot." If the timber is dry and well-seasoned, the better practice is to apply a coating of paint at once. It is, however, a mistake to paint unseasoned timber in a bridge until it has stood a year, and the work should be done at the end of the summer, when the wood is thoroughly dry.

Because of the tendency of paint to retain moisture, there has been some dispute as to the advisability of painting very large timbers in a bridge, the tendency of the paint being to increase the dry-rot. Nevertheless, the timber reaches a certain stage, after sufficient seasoning, when to exclude the atmosphere by painting tends to its preservation.

It is not considered good practice, however, in wooden bridge construction, to use any timber more than six inches in thickness. Where greater strength is required, in caps, beams, cords, braces, etc., a sufficient number of pieces, of this or less thickness, should be built together by keys, packing pieces and bolts, thus allowing a free circulation of air. Over members thus composed should be placed a covering of galvanized iron, extending a half or three-quarters of an inch down on the timber, and secured by galvanized tacks, preventing the rain from entering the spaces or resting on or around the packed joints.

The bridge thus built should be given one thorough coat of paint the summer following its construction, and a second coat should be applied the third year. The ends of all timbers, all seats, joints and bearings, should be well and thoroughly coated with white lead at the time of construction. — Municipal World.

Farmers to Build Railroads.

The farmers of the rich Covello wheat district in Washington are planning to build a railroad outlet for their grain, to be known as the Columbia & Covello railway, a tie-up between the Northern Pacific and the Oregon railway & Navigation company having left them without transportation facilities. These wheat growers pay large sums to haul their crops to Dayton and other points, some paying as high as $1,000 each year for this purpose, and they conclude that they might just as well put their money into a railroad of their own. They propose to take stock in the new company, some paying cash, others working out their shares grading the roadbed. Should the weather be at all favorable, the grading will be completed by spring. The new company incorporates with 300,000 shares of stock at a par value of one dollar each.

The Storage of Onions.

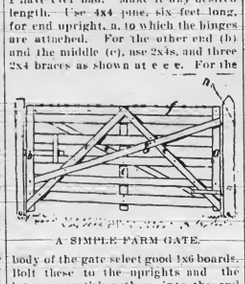
Onions, unless they have been properly prepared, are difficult to keep, but properly ripened off, dug at the right season and dried as they should be, they will keep well. The temperature must be dow and the air dry, as in a warm, moist atmosphere they soon grow and are spoiled. If I had onions to store, not knowing how they had been dried, I should subject them to 100 degrees heat for several days, which has almost the effect of kiln drying. Then place in shallow, slatted boxes, piled one above another, in a cellar well ventilated and keep just above freezing. If this way is not practicable they can be kept in a building away from fire, stored in a bin which has a thick lining and covering of chaff and fine hay.—Vick's Magazine.

ARE QUITE USEFUL.

Earth-Worms Perform Lots of Work That Is of Great Use to Farmers and Gardeners.

"Ugly looking creatures!" we exclaim as we see the earth-worms crawling about the garden beds in the early morning or after a rain. But let us look upon them with a more kindly eye and consider the great work they do in the earth. Darwin and Henson have proved their intelligence and their wonderful powers of preparing the earth for seedlings. Although not so low in the scale as the prevalent superstition would indicate, they cannot see or hear. They show some intelligence in lining their burrows, usually seizing leaves, etc., by their pointed ends. Leaves not only serve to line and to plug their burrow, but also for food.

They feed, likewise, upon the organic matter in the soil, which they swallow in great quantities and eject in the form of familiar "castings." It has been estimated that about ten tons of earth in each acre of ground pass annually through their bodies in places where they are numerous. By this means fresh surfaces are continually exposed to the action of carbon dioxide and the humus acids, and are thus decomposed and disintegrated.



These worms prepare the ground excellently for seedlings. They sift the soil so that no stones larger than they can swallow are left in it. They mix it, as does a gardener who wishes to prepare fine soil for his choicest plants. They cover up bones, etc., thus bringing them in a more or less decayed state within reach of the roots. They cover seeds which lie upon the surface, thus giving the radicle a leverage, and, last of all, their burrows facilitate the penetration of the roots.

Says Darwin: "The plow is one of the most ancient and most valuable of man's inventions; but, long before he existed, the land was in fact regularly plowed by earth-worms. It may be doubted whether there are many other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world as have these lowly organized creatures."—Nature Studies.

SIMPLE FARM GATE.

Wherever Introduced It Has Been Found Satisfactory and Very Durable as Well.

The gate shown in the illustration I have used and find it the most durable I have ever had. Make it any desired length. Use 4x4 pine, six feet long, for end upright, a, to which the hinges are attached. For the other end (b) and the middle (c), use 2x4s, and three 2x4 braces as shown at d e e. For the body of the gate select good 1x6 boards. Bolt these to the uprights and the braces, mortising them into the end uprights. Put a wire, f, on top, to prevent stock jumping onto it. For the top hinge use an old wagon tire, and let it extend the entire length of the gate, as shown at g, bolting it to the gate at both ends and the center. The portion in the post is made of three-fourths-inch iron, extends clear through and is secured by means of a tap (h). This can be tightened if the gate should sag. The lower hinge may be short. Use large oak post, securely set. I have used ten of these gates on my farm, and find them most satisfactory and very durable.—Frank Hummel, in Orange Judd Farmer.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Peach trees suffer the least from standing in the thick grass, and apples and pear the least of any of the fruit trees.

The objection to trying to grow grapes in the orchard among the fruit trees is that the grapes need all the sunshine possible.

Mulching of fruit trees at this time is a help in delaying blossoming in the spring, and in this way injury from late frosts may be prevented.

Most fruit trees thrive best on rolling land. Fruits are less liable to injury by frosts on rolling land than on level land, even though the latter be high and dry.

It will lessen the danger of injury by thawing and freezing if a small mound of earth is drawn up arc und the stem of the tree before the ground freezes. It can be removed in the spring.

In nearly all cases large seed are better than small ones. They furnish more nutriment to the young plants than the small ones, which give them a good start early in the season, and they make a better growth.

Dwarf pears and grapes are the two fruits that seem especially adapted to small places, where not much room can be spared, and where it is designed to combine the useful with the ornamental.—St. Louis Republic.

Dahlia Bulbs as Food.

In many flower gardens may be found the dahlia blooming beautifully, yet the average gardener may not be aware that its bulb is of the same class of food as the potato; when roasted, the dahlia bulb is wholesome and toothsome. A London paper says that when this plant was first introduced into Europe, it was not as a flower that it was valued, but at a vegetable. The Mexican tree dahlia grows to a height of 11 or 14 feet.

TO OVERCOME FEAR.

How a Daring Steeple Climber Schooled Himself for His Dangerous Calling.

P. F. O'Neil, of Charlestown, W. Va. has been climbing steeples and chimneys and other high places for more than 25 years. He began life as a sailor, going out from Newfoundland on a ship as a boy, drifting to this country in time to enlist for the civil war and at last taking up with his present occupation, in which he combines the trade of mason—for he has built the tops of many chimneys—of painter, of carpenter, of mechanic and worker in metal.

The most natural question to ask O'Neil was about fear; did he ever feel fear in high places? "Of course I feel fear at times," he answered. "Fear is common to all mankind. Not to feel fear is not courage; to overcome fear is the true quality of courage. Not long ago Prof. Taussig, of Harvard, who is interested in the matter from a psychological standpoint, wrote to me a similar question. What I told him I will tell you.

"I divide the nerve force of a man into two parts—the impelling force and the restraining force—the same impelling force that causes a body of recruits at first to run under fire, and the restraining force that causes them to overcome for various reasons the first natural fear. So in climbing one unused to it is by the natural impelling force of his nervous system afraid—afraid that his legs, his arms, his support will give way and plunge him down. Shakespeare, who touched on all human emotions, touched on this feeling of fear in high places, when in 'King Lear' he pictured Edward at the cliffs of Dover.

"The only way to get over the natural fear is by some restraining force from either within or without. I remember once when a new boy at sea was ordered aloft by the mate he trembled with fear and begged to be let out of it. 'Upon my soul, sir, I can't go up there.' This was his first impelling impulse. But when the mate touched him up with a rope's end he was at the top of the mast so quick that the mate could not follow him. The pain on his outer nerves brought him to his senses and made him exert his restraining force. So if you happen to be with anyone who shows signs of fear in a high place a few smart slaps on the face will bring him to himself. The right medicine for unconquerable fear in a high place is immediate pain on the outside nerves.

"Fear can be overcome like any natural passion. I remember that when I began to climb I felt sensations of numbness in the back of my head, and at such times I tried to stop and devote myself to restoring courage. The way to do it is to remember that support is at hand and that it depends only upon yourself to make use of it. Climbing is, in fact, really a less dangerous occupation than driving a restive horse or an electric car, for the safety of the climber depends almost entirely on himself, while in the other case many chances of accident are beyond his control."—Boston Transcript.

FEARS OF WOMEN.

Why They Are Afraid of Mice and Always Look Under the Bed Is a Mystery.

The cause that implants the spirit of fear in the bosom of the gentle sex is a subject that may well puzzle the most devout student of human nature. The mouse is considered one of the most harmless of creatures, and yet it has been responsible for more cases of hysteria than any animal many times its size.

One woman, who all her life has carefully searched beneath the bed before retiring, at one time found herself in possession of a folding monstrosity, the intricacies of which she had first to solve before taking her well-earned rest. But such is the force of habit, after pulling down the bed, she would carefully look beneath it, for no other reason than that she had done so ever since she was a child.

A favorite illusion is that of having one's legs seized, either from behind it going upstairs, or on getting into bed. Women have been seen scuttling up stairs in the dark, setting at defiance all the laws of locomotion in a ludicrous attempt to keep their legs some distance ahead of them and beyond the reach of a mysterious clutch. Girls will also make flying leaps into bed to eliminate the same improbability.

Many women search diligently in closets, bureau drawers and all sorts of impossible places before resigning themselves to sleep. An old housekeeper, whose table silver, in two baskets, was always placed in her bedroom after the evening meal, was one night awakened by what she considered suspicious sounds from the lower regions. Cautiously leaving her room with the silver, she pitched both baskets into the hall below, calling out as she did so: "Take it all and please go;" then fled precipitately and barricaded herself in her room. Needless to add, she found both baskets and scattered contents the following morning, a little the worse for the rough handling she had given them.—St. Louis Republic.

Indignant Robber.

"Sir," said the highwayman, after he had gone through his victim's pockets and found only 11 cents, "I shall sue you for damages if this happens again."

"On what grounds?" asked the astonished victim.

"It is an imposition upon the public, sir, for you to go about looking so prosperous, and only 11 cents in your pocket."—Chicago Evening Post.

STUDY IN EX-PRESIDENTS.

Four Were Living at Three Different Times in the History of the Country.

Two ex-presidents of the United States are living, Cleveland and Harrison.

Before the expiration of John Adams' term, 1801, there was no ex-president living, Washington having died December, 1799.

During Jefferson's administration Adams was ex-president. Both died on the same day, July 4, 1826. Both were ex-presidents during the administrations of Madison and Monroe and a part of the administration of J. Q. Adams.

J. Q. Adams became president in 1825. At that time Adams, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe were living. But before the expiration of J. Q. Adams' term, 1829, only Madison and Monroe were living.

During Jackson's first administration Madison, Monroe and J. Q. Adams were the living ex-presidents. Before the expiration of Jackson's second administration only J. Q. Adams remained as former president.

When Van Buren was president J. Q. Adams and Jackson were the living ex-presidents.

During William Henry Harrison's term of one month J. Q. Adams, Jackson and Van Buren were the living ex-presidents.

John Tyler as vice president succeeded Harrison and was in office from 1841 to 1845. The ex-presidents living during his term were J. Q. Adams, Jackson and Van Buren.

While Polk was president the living ex-presidents were J. Q. Adams, Jackson, Van Buren and Tyler. But before the expiration of Polk's term Van Buren and Tyler only remained.

Taylor's term lasted less than five months. In that time Van Buren, Tyler and Polk were living, although Polk died 25 days before Taylor, thereby leaving Van Buren and Tyler living ex-presidents.

With Pierce as president there were three living ex-presidents, Van Buren, Tyler and Fillmore.

During Lincoln's term of office Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan were living.

In the administration of Johnson Buchanan died, leaving Fillmore and Pierce.

During Grant's first term Fillmore and Johnson were living. Before the expiration of his second term there was no living ex-president.

During Garfield's short term Grant and Hayes were living.

In the administration of Arthur Grant and Hayes were still living. At the time of Arthur's death Hayes was living.

During Cleveland's first term Grant, Hayes and Arthur were living. Before the expiration of that term only Hayes remained.

With Benjamin Harrison as president Hayes and Cleveland were living, but before the expiration of Harrison's term only Cleveland remained as a living ex-president.

In Cleveland's second term there was but one ex-president living, Harrison.

During McKinley's term the two living ex-presidents are Cleveland and Harrison.

Three times in the history of the country have four ex-presidents been living at the same time. Frequently three; once there was one ex-president living during the incumbency of his predecessor; twice none.—N. Y. Sun.

POWER OF IMAGINATION.

An Instance Which Illustrates Its Influence Upon the Average Person.

The influence of imagination is a factor with which physicians have to reckon very largely, and in the minor ailments of life, at any rate, the most successful practitioner is he who possesses the faculty of inspiring confidence in himself to begin with, and then in the treatment he advises. A recent number of the Psychological Review relates an interesting experiment made by Mr. Slosson with the view of demonstrating how easily this faculty can be called into play. In the course of a popular lecture he presented to his audience a bottle containing distilled water, which he uncorked with elaborate precautions, and then, watch in hand, he asked those present to indicate the exact moment at which the peculiar odor was perceived by them. Within 15 seconds those immediately in front of him held up their hands, and within 40 seconds those at the other end of the room declared that they distinctly perceived the odor. There was an obstinate minority, largely composed of men, who stoutly declared their inability to detect any odor, but Mr. Slosson believes that many more would have given in had he not been compelled to bring the experiment to a close within a minute of opening the bottle, several persons in the front rank finding the odor so powerful that they hastily quitted the lecture room. It would have been interesting to know the attitude of the audience on learning the liberty that had been taken with their imaginations, but on this point, unfortunately, the report is silent.—Medical Press.

AN APPEAL TO HUMANITY GENERALLY

We need your assistance in announcing to the world the GREATEST REMEDY that Science has ever produced, and you need our assistance to secure relief for yourself and friends through SWANSON'S "5 DROPS."

A REMEDY SUPREME As surely as the American Navy has conquered and will conquer all that opposes it, so will "5 DROPS" unfailingly conquer all diseases like Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Catarrh of all kinds, Dyspepsia, Backache, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Heart Weakness, Toothache, Earache, Creeping Numbness, Bronchitis, Liver and Kidney Troubles, etc., etc., or any disease for which we recommend it. "5 DROPS" is the name and the dose. "5 DROPS" is perfectly harmless. It does not contain Salicylic Acid or Soda nor Opiates in any form. The Child can use it as well as the Adult.

Read carefully what Mr. L. R. Smith, of El Dorado Springs, Mo., writes us under date of Nov. 27, 1899, also Martan Bowers, of Carnaghar, Ohio, under date of Dec. 16th, 1899.

I do not know how to express how wonderful I think your "5 DROPS" medicine is. I was suffering intensely with NEURALGIA and for a month that I would have to die. One day a lady called to see me and brought me an advertisement of your "5 DROPS." I resolved to try it and sent for a sample bottle. Have been using it for three weeks and have not had an attack of suffering since I took the first dose. I believe it has saved my life. This statement is positively true. I shall also take pleasure in recommending your "5 DROPS" for the cure of NEURALGIA. L. R. SMITH.

El Dorado Springs, Mo., Nov. 27, 1899.

NEURALCIA

RHEUMATISM Your "5 DROPS" came to hand on the 11th of last month and was glad to receive it for I was suffering at the time with untold agonies. The first dose helped me out of my pain on short notice. Bless the name of God for it. It will do all you say it will, and more too. I had severe pains all over my body when night came I could not sleep. The worst pain was in my left leg. I could not put my foot to the floor without suffering great pain. Have used four different kinds of medicine for RHEUMATISM and received benefit, but never gave me immediate relief as above stated. MARTAN BOWERS. Box 81, Carnaghar, Ohio, Dec. 16, 1899.

30 DAYS to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a sample bottle, postpaid, to any address on receipt of 25c. A sample bottle will cure one case. Sold by mail for 25c. The death angel has visited this community again and taken from our midst Mrs. Rachael Tanner, at the age of 82 years. She was a member of the Lutheran church, and a devoted christiau lady, having spent her entire life in the Master's service. While she was deprived of her eye-sight for several years, she was always cheerful and contented with her lot, and patiently awaited the time when she would be called from this to a better world, and her last moments seemed to be her happiest. She had suffered with heart trouble for about two weeks, and the summons came last Wednesday, the 3d inst. The funeral services were conducted by Pastor Lentz at Hopeful church, last Saturday, after which the remains were interred in Hopeful Cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends.

The horticultural editor of the Union Blade has been looking up the fruit prospects for 1900, and says the crop is set all right, and promises to be heavy if the cold don't kill it as in '99. Mr. John Crisler holds this very responsible job and there is no closer observer. He reads many beautiful and instructive lessons from the book of nature and will have something to say about them through the Blade during 1900.

A New York drummer was distributing cups as an advertisement for Ayer & Hammer soda at Richwood. A citizen of this vicinity accepted one of the caps, and when asked what he would do with it? answered, "take to hades with me." The drummer, quick as a flash, tendered him several more and said, "Our firm has never advertised in that territory and will be pleased to have your influence in their behalf."

Esq. H. Bannister has been solicited by friends from various parts of the county to become a candidate for County Judge and will, doubtless, be a candidate at the proper time. No man in the county is better qualified or more deserving of preferment at the hands of the Democratic party in Boone than H. Bannister, and should they elect him to the office the chances are 10 to 1 that he will be elected.—[Just conservative and impartial Judge.

The Blade Club met with Supt. Voshell, one evening last week, and was entertained by Mr. Alfred Voshell with a lecture on geology, pastboardology, zoo-ology, shales, sandstone, limestone, fireclay, gypsum, celestite, barite, granite, quartz, feldspar, nica, greiess, schist, syenite, coal, traprock and all other kinds of rocks seemed to be as familiar to Mr. Voshell as the products of a farm are to a farmer. In pasteboard-ology, Mr. Voshell was not so up-to-date, for this kind of ology studies altogether to Kings and Queens and their jewels—such as diamonds, &c.

For years the north end has furnished Assessors for the county. The Union precinct will be in line next time with a candidate for that important office, whose record is unbroken as a faithful, loyal Democrat; a man well qualified by education and experience to perform the duties and obligations of the office, because he served as deputy assessor and made a good one; also, served on the board of equalization with credit and knows the value of Boone county property. We repeat, that he has never scratched or bolted the Democratic ticket and never failed to work for the nomiuee from first to last, and his name is L. J. Riley.

Your Cor in company with Solomon Long, Esq., went to Big Bone Springs, Wednesday. Mr. Humpkin did not meet us at the depot with a brass-band, but it is likely he would have done so if the electric railroad was in operation and they had a depot, however, he received us very kindly and wanted to sell us a cow right away. Mr. John Green was on his way to partake of a big dinner with a neighbor, but stopped long enough to say that the Springs would be boomed if the electric road was built. The zero weather seemed to be striking in on W. R. Miller, for we saw him going up stairs with the bulk of a heating stove on his back. Douglas Moore was anxious to know if a telephone line would be built from Beaver to Union as a connecting link. We did not imbibe any Big Bone water but was taken for a U. S. Marshal and that's evidence somebody had imbibed some kind of water.

Your correspondent dropped into Florence, one morning last week, to find Robt. Rice, the popular machine man, just striking out south.—Drs. Sayre and Moffit, discussing the Philippine war and army surgery. Dr. Sayre is advocate of conservative rather than operative surgery and claims that thousands of limbs were amputated every year that could be saved by a conservative surgery. Dr. Moffit said Dr. S. might be right or wrong as the case was, and left immediately for the south.—Judge Ben Stephens, David Brown and M. S. MEMORIAL.

Ten years in Heaven! In loving memory of our dear mother, Ann L. Alden, who left us for her heavenly home, January 8th, 1890. Having possessed a "meek and quiet spirit," hers was

"A noble life, but written not
In any book of fame;
Among the list of noted ones
None ever saw her name.

For only her own household knew
The victories she had won;
And none but they could testify,
How well her work was done

May her loved ones ever emulate her good example.

NOTICE OF ELECTION.

Boone County Court, Regular Term December 4th, 1899, Hon. C. C. Roberts, Judge presiding.

On written application by petition to the Judge of the County Court of this county on November 6th, 1899, filed and made part of the County Court Records, which petition was signed by a number of legal voters in the Burlington Voting Precinct, Boone county, Ky., equal to and greater than Twenty-five per cent. of the votes cast in said precinct at the last preceding general election, which petition asks the County Court to open a poll in said Burlington Voting Precinct on Saturday, Jan. 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington Voting Precinct upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in said precinct, commonly called and known as the Local Option Law, which prohibits the Sale, Barter or Loan of Spirituous, Vinous or Malt Liquors in said Burlington Voting Precinct, shall become inoperative. The petitioners having deposited with the County Judge money sufficient to pay for printing, etc., as the law requires, and the Court being advised, It is therefore ordered by the Court that the Sheriff of this county open a poll in the Burlington Voting Precinct in Boone county, Ky., on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters of said district upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in the Burlington Voting Precinct shall become inoperative.

County of Boone. }

I, B. W. Adams, clerk of the County Court in and for the county aforesaid, do verify that the foregoing one and one-fourth pages is a true copy of the Order for holding an Election for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in the Burlington Voting Precinct as to whether or not the Local Option Law shall shall remain in force, as appears of record in my office.

Given under my hand, this 6th day of Dec. 1899.

B. W. ADAMS, County Clerk.

Pursuant to the above order, I hereby give notice that an election will be held in Burlington Voting Precinct, Boone county, Ky., on the 20th day of January, 1900, "for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington Voting Precinct upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in said precinct, commonly called and known as the Local Option Law, which prohibits the sale, barter or loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in said Burlington Voting Precinct, shall become inoperative." Said election will be held at the usual voting place in the town of Burlington in said voting precinct, and the polls will be opened at 7 a. m., and closed at 4 p. m., on January 20th, 1900.

Witness my hand, this 7th day of December, 1899.

ELMER BEALL,
Sheriff Boone County, Ky.

When that stranger approached F. Riddell, yesterday and asked him if he was a minister of the gospel, the boys who set up the joke had their heartiest laugh of the new year. The stanger did not tarry in town long after that experience.

This is gloomy weather again.

Mrs. John Baker, of Union, died Monday night. Mr. Baker is in very poor health.

Dr. Cowen, of Rabbit Hash, who went east in bad health, some time since, has returned home, and we are glad to hear that his health is very much improved.

There is a great deal of news in this issue in which the people of Boone county are directly interested; more than they will find in ten years in anyother paper published.

About twenty persons participated in a rabbit roast at Geo. Blyth's Monday night. Ten carcasses were roasted, and a general good time was had by all. C. L. Crisler was chief cook.

Present-your-card-at-the-door invitations are out for a hop at the Boone House on the night of the 19th inst. It is expected to be the nicest affair of that kind given in Burlington in a long time.

The RECORDER was visited by an "Angell," yesterday. It was a pleasant and we have reasons to believe, will prove, a profitable visit. It may not be necessary to add it was not an angel with wings.

Wm. Passons, of the Bellevue neighborhood, was in town, Monday, and collected quite a little sum of money for the relief of Benjamin Mirrick and family, of McVille, who have been so terribly afflicted with typhoid fever this winter.

Our Limaburg correspondent failed to inform our readers of the marriage of James M. Craven and Miss Jennie Rouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Rouse. They were married by Rev. Leutz at the Lutheran parsonage near Florence. May their married life be long and happy.

In renewing his subscription, R. C. Rice writes from Centropils, Kansas: "Accept my sympathy on account of last election, for I fear I will need yours after the 10th. We are having winter at present, but I am ready for it, as I have a good crop and am fat and hearty. A happy new year to all."

On the 5th inst Joseph Scott, the Florence breeder of fine Jersey cattle weighed his New York bull calf, Beauties Clartaires, 50,592, at Erlanger in the presence of Capt. W. H. Baker, S. L. Webb and others, and he weighed 1,130. He was 2 years old that day, and was bred by that veteran breeder, Dr. S. S. Tazlee.

The County Clerk is now putting to record the $5,000,000 mortgage of the Kentucky Distilleries Warehouse Co. to the Central Trust Co., of New York. This instrument composes 75 printed pages, ordinary size, and is the largest mortgage ever lodged for record in this county. On the original mortgage are $2,500 worth of internal revenue stamps.

After the funeral service conducted by Rev. Hoover in the Baptist church here at 1 p. m., Monday in the presence of a large concourse of friends the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Dills, widow of the late L. H. Dills, were placed in the vault in the Odd-Fellow's cemetery here to await final interment. Mrs. Dills was 73 years old, a good neighbor, and thoroughly a christian lady.

A large crowd congregated on the street Saturday afternoon to witness some expected antics on the part of a horse that was being hitched to a cart, and which, a few days before, distinguished himself by breaking the shafts off of a buggy and doing some fine spliuting and a few acrobat feats. He disappointed the spectators by going off as though nothing had ever happened with him.

A quiet wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Hauce, of Big Bone, on the 2d inst., when their beautiful and accomplished daughter, Miss Iudia Myrtle Hance, was united in holy wedlock to Mr. M. Carl Price, of Erlanger. Mr. Price is a wealthy young farmer, and a most popular and excellent young gentleman. Miss Hauce is a graduate of Hamilton College, Ky., and an accomplished musician, having been a student of the Conservatoiy of Music in Cincinnati. Miss Hance is a granddaughter of the late Stewart Baker. Rev. P. H. Duncan, of Ludlow, officiated at the marriage. The many friends of the young married couple wish them much happiness.

The Burlington Kooking Klub spent a most pleasant evening with Mrs. Belle Brady on the 5th inst. After supper charades were the source of a greatdeal of enjoyment until about 11 o'clock, when the meeting addjourned. The menu for the occasion was contributed as follows:

Miss Elia Duucan	Turkey
Mrs. B. B. Allphin	Scalloped Oysters
Mrs. Dudley Rouse	Rolls
Mrs. J. C. Revill	Beaten Biscuit
Mrs. W. L. Riddell	Potato Salad

NANNIE D. BRISTOW, Teacher.

FISCAL COURT.

The following business was transacted by the Fiscal Court at its January term, 1900, excepting the claims allowed, they appearing in the list published elsewhere in this issue:

J. F. Blyth, keeper of the county infirmary, presented an itemized account for conducting the infirmary for the last quarter of the year 1899, amounting to $592 85, which account was examined and approved by the court and accepted as a settlement in full with Mr. Blyth for the year 1899. The court found that the total expenses for running the infirmary last year were $1,547 15, with 31 as the average number of inmates.

J. F. Blyth offered to superintend the county infirmary for the year 1900, upon the same conditions and requirements as set out and stipulated in his contract for the year 1899, at the price of $225. Thereupon J. F. Blyth was appointed to superintend the county infirmary for the year 1900, at the price of $225.

J. F. Smith offered to do the pauper practice in the Burlington precinct, including the jail and county infirmary, for the sum of $200 for the year 1900; Dr. W. O. Rouse offered to do the same pauper practice for 1900, for $175, and it was ordred that the pauper practice, including that of the jail and county infirmary be awarded Dr. W. O. Rouse at $175 for the year 1900.

It was ordered that J. H. Rogers, supervisor of roads in district No. 1, Walton precinct, proceed to put in proper traveling condition that certain piece of road in his district, leading from Salem branch to near the Keutou llue, and said overseer will keep an accurate accouut of all his costs and expenditures in so doing, and present same to this court for payment. Said work to be done under the immediate supervision of Esq. J. C. Byland.

It is ordered that Esq. M. B. Green and J. M. Lassing be and they are appointed a committee to get up specifications for the bridge to be built over Woolper creek, and towards the construction of which this court has already appropriated $2,500, and said committee will also receive bids upon the proposed plans and specifications for said bridge, and they will present said plans and bids to this court at its next meeting, and they will see whether or not the parties in iuterest have raised by subscription at least $500, or a sum sufficient, if more is necessary to build said bridge when supplemented by this court's appropriation, and report on this matter at the next term of this court. Said committee will call to their aid a competent engineer and see to it that the plans and specifications for said bridge are prepared in an accurate and intelligent mauner.

It appearing to the court that the settlement with the sheriff on account of the road fund for this year, 1900, shows that he has in his hands $6,289 94 belonging to said fund, and that this court has appropriated $2,500 (if necessary) of this sum towards building the Woolper bridge, leaving a balauce of $3,789 94 for distributing among the various road overseers. Said fund is now apportioned, viz:

Burlington	$ 503 06
Bullittsville	378 02
Petersburg	326 54
Bellevue	212 84
Carlton	256 02
Hamilton	244 68
Union	332 68
Beaver	202 29
Verona	279 95
Walton	354 19
Florence	454 08
Coustauce	244 19
Total	$3,789 94

The Sheriff is ordered to pay over to the overseers in the various voting precincts the money to which they are eutitled, as shown by the above apportionment; but he will pay out no part of said money before May 1, 1900, when he will pay each overseer one-half of the amount to which he is entitled, and he will pay over the balance of said fuud uot earlier thau July 1, 1900, if called upon so to do.

It appearing that by an order heretofore made by this court, that the public roads of this county are to be worked by both hands and taxation, and that the tax to be expended on the roads in the year 1900, has been collected and apportioned among the various overseers of the county, it is now ordered by the court that all the abiebodied male citizens of this county, subject to road work, between the ages of 18 and 50 years, be required to work two full days on the public roads in their respective road districts, under the directions of the overseers thereof.

Esq. Clinton Gaines and Sheriff Elmer Beail were appointed a commit' tee to purchase a fire-proof safe for the Sheriff's office.

The Problem Solved.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

There seems to be quite a difference of opinion as to whether this is the 19th or 20th century Some coutend that when 365 days and a fraction has elapsed, that was the end of year 1 and one moment thereafter was lu the year 2, and one momeut after the year 2 was in year 3 and so on; and hence January 1st, 1900, would be in the 20th century—thus they compute 0-1-2-3, from 0 to 1 was lu year one, from 1 to 2 was in the 2d year and so on. Others say that we began to compute time from the year 1 and not from 365 and a fraction of days previous to the year 1—thus they compute 1-2-3, from 1 to 2 was in the year one, from 2 to 3 was in year two, and that year two was not finished; until the figure 3 was reached and according to this, 1900 years would not elapse until the end of that year and 1901 is reached, and accordiug to that manner of computing, we are living in the 19th century.

The maidens of Denmark never experience the pleasure of receiving a diamond engagement ring. They are presented with a plain gold band, which is worn on the third finger of the left hand. On the wedding day the bridegroom changes the ring to the right third finger, which is the marriage finger in that country.

In the battle of Gapote river, which Gen. Lawton said was the hottest fire he had ever been under, his little son was by his side, and preserved the same coolness as his father. A bullet struck the sand squarely between the boy's feet and threw up the dust. He looked down and exclaimed, with a twinkle in his eye: "Papa, that was a hoptoad."

A never-failing object of interest to visitors at the capitol in Washington is the group of instruments in the little apartment adjoining the marble or reception room of the senate, which record the various changes in the weather. A large weather map hangs upon the wall nearby, and a stranger can, by looking at it, tell the state of weather at his home.

During a recent holiday in New York the price of American Beauty roses went up to the usual figure of $30 a dozen and remained there. Pinks sold in some places for $4 a dozen. But it was the azaleas that brought the highest prices. A basket of them was made up by a certain florist for a millionaire. The millionaire was a regular customer, but his basket cost $175.

Albany, N. Y., has the largest filtration plant in the United States. Fifteen million gallons of Hudson river water is daily filtered through this great structure and comes out as pure as from a spring. While bacteriological analysis of the Hudson river water shows between 12,000,000 and 18,000,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, analysis after filtration shows a little more than 100.

Senator Cullom the other day introduced a bill, by request, which he had received from a man in whom he had entire confidence. The next morning to his surprise and horror, he found he had introduced a bill to give pensions to deserters, and he has been receiving letters of protest from every direction ever since. He is not the only man who has made a similar mistake.

J. Overton Paine is at present astonishing Wall street with the boldness and success of his speculations. He came to New Yor from Atlanta three years ago with a capital of $3,500, and is said to be $5,000,000 "to the good" since his arrival. Most of this has been made in the past few months. On one day recently his winnings were $59,998.81. Paine is less than 30 years old.

Cape Hatteras, which has earned a bad name as a place for storms, is a dangerous place for shipping, more because of its dangerous coast than because of the storms. The wind velocity at Block island, Narragansett and other places along the New England coast is just as high as at Hatteras. Their coast is not so dangerous, however, because there are convenient and safe harbors.

Mr. Ramin, a wealthy Prussian, owning property near a military manœuver ground near Stettin, lately wrote the minister of war to complain of certain damages done by the soldiers, and asking for compensation. He applied a word to those who had caused the damage which the military authorities considered disrespectful. They brought an action for defamation against him, and he was fined $100.

Chief of Police Broder, of St. Joseph, Mo., evidently believes that the way to curb highway robbery is to kill the footpads. With this end in view he has posted a notice at headquarters offering a reward of $100 to every officer who kills a footpad. "Mind you," he says, "the footpads must be dead; I must have the coroner's certificate before the reward will be paid. It's the footpad's hide that I will pay for, not a live robber's. We have too many of that kind now."

The golden hammer which the pope uses in the ceremony of opening the holy door of St. Peter's on December 24, is the shape of an ordinary mason's mallet. The head of the mallet is decorated with texts in relief, and on the ivory handle is carved references to the forthcoming holy year. A medallion bearing a dedication to Leo. XIII. from the Episcopate is attached to the handle. Rose branches of gold also decorate the handle, in order to symbolize the mystic rose, which is regarded as a sign of divine piety.

BATTLE RAGING.

Gen. White Reports His Army Surrounded by Boers in Numbers.

French Reports a "Serious Accident" to the First Suffolk Regiment—A Portion Attacked a Boer Position But Retreated.

London, Jan. 8.—Gen. Buller has wired the war office the following dated January 6 from Frere Camp:

"The following message received from Gen. White at 1 p. m. Sunday: 'Attack continues and enemy has been reinforced from the south.'

"The following was received at 4 o'clock from Gen. White: 'I have beaten enemy off at present, but they are still around me in great numbers, especially to the south, and I think renewed attack very probable.'

"The sun has failed and I can not get further information from Ladysmith until to-morrow."

London, Jan. 8.—Gen. Forestier-Walker, telegraphing from Cape Town says:

"There is no change in the situation as regards Lord Methuen and Gen. Gatacre.

"Referring to my earlier dispatch I have to report that Gen. French reports, under date of January 6, that a medical officer has been sent out to collect all the wounded to the northeast of Colesburg. The exact list of persons missing French has not yet ascertained. Probably about 70. The first battalion of the Essex regiment has been sent to replace the first battalion of the Suffolk.

"The position of affairs, tactical and strategic, is without alteration. A Boer medical officer admits it was intended to leave Colesburg. The enemy's loss day by day from our fire has been heavy."

London, Jan. 8.—A special dispatch from Frere Camp, dated Saturday, January 6, 7 p. m., says:

"At 2 o'clock this afternoon the whole of Gen. Clery's division marched out of camp to attack Colenso. Gen. Hildyard's brigade was on the left and Gen. Barton's on the right, with cavalry on the extreme right.

"The attack was slowly developed and at 4:30 the British field guns advanced on the center and commenced shelling the Boer position from the flat land between Hlanwane hill and Fort Wylie.

"About this time a heavy thunderstorm raged over the enemy's positions.

"At 5:30 our troops were still advancing and had reached a point very near Colenso. The naval and field guns were busy dropping shells into the enemy's trenches along the river and the forts of the enemy had made no reply."

Pretoria, Jan. 4.—Field Cornet Visser, under date of Tuesday, January 2, reports as follows from Kuruman, British Bechuanland:

"I commenced a bombardment of Kuruman yesterday, aiming at the police barracks. The fight lasted until 6 in the evening, when the garrison surrendered, issuing from the forts and yielding up arms.

"We took 120 prisoners, including Capt Bates and Capt. Dennison, Mr. Hillyard the magistrate, and eight other officers. We also captured 70 natives, together with a number of rifles and revolvers and a quantity of ammunition."

"Fifteen British were wounded. They are being attended by us with the help of Dr. Bearne, an English physician. The horses, oxen, mealies and flour taken from the prisoners have been sent to Pretoria by way of Vryburg."

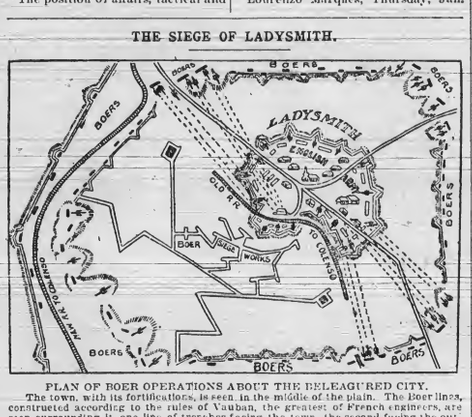
"This from White, dated Saturday, 3:15 p. m.: 'Attack renewed. Very hard pressed.'

"I have absolutely no more news, and there is no sun. There is a camp rumor that White defeated the enemy at 5 this afternoon and took 400 prisoners.

"I sent all suitable troops yesterday to make a demonstration at Colenso. Trenches there were all occupied by the enemy."



Lourenzo Marques, Thursday, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from the Boer headquarters near Dordrecht says:

"The British have been compelled to retreat from Dordrecht. Fighting continues around Colesberg, where the British occupy some of the outside kopjes. Bullets are dropping inside the town."

London, Jan. 8.—Gen. French reports a 'serious accident" to the 1st Suffolk regiment. Four companies of the regiment attacked a Boer position. Lieut. Col. Watson, in command, was wounded and a retreat was ordered.

Three quarters of the British reached their camp but the others were overpowered and compelled to surrender. Seventy were taken prisoners including seven officers.

THE SIEGE OF LADYSMITH.

PLAN OF BOER OPERATIONS ABOUT THE BELEAGURED CITY.

The town, with its fortifications, is seen in the middle of the plain. The Boer lines, constructed according to the rules of Vauban, the greatest of French engineers, are seen surrounding it, one line of trenches facing the town, the second facing the outside world, ready to repel the relieving enemy. The siege works, zigzagging in toward the city in an effort to mine and form a breach in its defenses, are also shown.

ROBERTS' ARGUMENT.

He Says He Could Call Attention to Numerous Evils in the Country Without Going to Utah.

Washington, Jan. 7.—When the Roberts committee resumed its sessions Saturday, Mr. Roberts went on with his argument, begun Friday. He reviewed the action of the constitutional convention of Utah, urging that this carried out the requirement of congress for the admission of Utah as a state, namely, that polygamous marriages should no longer be contracted. In particular, Mr. Roberts contended there was no requirement by congress or in the constitutional convention that previously contracted matrimonial associations should be interrupted.

"If necessary," he exclaimed, "I could call the attention to ten thousand evils which threaten the country, without going to the state of Utah."

Hand to Hand Fight.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—In a hand to hand fight between members of the Salvation army and two men, Albert, Fred and Peter Koopman, of the army, were seriously cut. Emmet D. Craig and another man got into a fight during the army's meeting and both turned on members of the army who tried to separate them, using knives. Craig was arrested but the other man escaped.

With Typhoid Fever on Board.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 7.—Ten cases of typhoid fever were discovered Friday on board the steamer Montezuma, which arrived Tuesday from New Orleans for the purpose of embarking part of the second Canadian military contingent for service in South Africa. The vessel will be quarantined.

Raised Money for the Boers.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Under the auspices of the Irish citizens of Chicago a mass meeting was held Friday night which raised over $7,500 for the Boers.

DR. McGLYNN DEAD.

The Once Famous Priest Dies at His Home in Newburgh, N. Y., of Heart Failure.

Newburgh, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn, rector of St. Mary's church, died at the rectory at 5:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon after an illness of about seven weeks of heart failure, superinduced by Bright's disease.

A minor surgical operation was performed on Dr. McGlynn Saturday night, but this did not effect the patient or contribute materially to his death.

During the day Dr. McGlynn had several sinking spells and the physicians were called early to his bedside where they remained until he died.

Pastors Will Prosecute.

Toledo, O., Jan. 8.—No arrests were made of actors at Sunday performances at two theaters, but the Pastors' Union had two constables and several detectives in the audiences and arrests will be made. The actors will be taken before a country magistrate and separate trials by jury of each will be insisted upon with a view to harrassing and delaying matters so that even in the event of ultimate acquittal the managers will capitulate rather than continue the inconvenience.

Awarded Damages.

New York, Jan. 6.—The case of Mrs. Malvina Prunier, of Burlington, Vt., against Mrs. Lillian Ash, of New York, whom she sued for $75,000 damages for alienating the affections of her husband, Fred J. Prunier, was decided Friday when the jury awarded Mrs. Prunier $15,000.

Mrs. Langtry in New York.

LIEUT. GILLMORE

He Tells Something About His Eight Months' Captivity in Philippines.

He Speaks Warmly of Gen. Aguinaldo and Very Bitterly Against Gen. Tino, Who Treated Him Badly.

Manila, Jan. 8.—Lieut. J. C. Gillmore, of the United States gunboat Yorktown, who was captured by the insurgents last April near Baler, on the coast of Luzon, and rescued a few days ago by Col. Luther R. Hare, of the 33d volunteer infantry, sat in the apartment of his sister, Mrs. Maj. Price, at the Hotel Oriente in Manila and told a remarkable story of his eight months of captivity, ending with his dramatic deliverance from a death that seemed inevitable.

The steamer Venus came into the harbor Saturday evening from Vigan, province of South Ilocos, with Lieut. Gillmore and 19 other American prisoners, including seven of his sailors from the Yorktown. Lieut. Gillmore, after reporting, came ashore and hobbled along, with the aid of a cane, to the Hotel Oriente, where American officers and ladies were waltzing through the halls to the strains of "Aguinaldo's March."

Although tanned and ruddy from exposure he is weak and nervous, showing the results of long hardships. He speaks warmly of Aguinaldo and very bitterly against Gen. Tino, declaring that while in the former's jurisdiction he was treated splendidly, but that after he fell into Tino's hands he suffered everything. Col. Hare and Lieut. Col. Howse, the latter of the 34th volunteer infantry, rescued Gillmore's party on December 18 near the headquarters of the Abalut River, after they had been abandoned by the Filipinos and were expecting death from the savage tribes around them. When the rescuing force reached them they were nearly starved, but were building rafts in the hope of getting down the river to the coast.

Manila, Jan. 8.—Reconnaissances out of Imus, Cavite province, Sunday morning, resulted in the loss of three Americans killed and 20 wounded. The enemy's loss is estimated at 60 killed and 80 wounded.

Col. Birkheimer, with a battalion of the 28th volunteer infantry, advanced toward Novaleta. Maj. Taggart, with two battalions of the same regiment, moved toward Perez das Marinas. A part of the 4th infantry was engaged south of Imus.

Gen. Schwan's column, advancing to the south, occupied Binan. One American was killed and three were wounded. Nine of the enemy's dead were found on the field after the fight. A number of rifles were captured and several prisoners were taken.

Johnson, a deserter from the 6th United States artillery, clothed in a major's uniform, was found among the insurgent dead at Noveleta.

Gen. Wheaton is moving toward Perez das Marinas.

PLANS ARE ENDORSED.

Movement Looking Forward to Establishing a National Military Park Near Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 8. The movement looking to the establishment of a national military park on ground made historic by the battle of Atlanta and other engagements in this vicinity during the civil war, has been given an impetus by the receipt of letters from many prominent northerners endorsing the plan. Ex-President Harrison writes:

"The military incidents connected with the investment and ultimate capture of Atlanta are certainly worthy of commemoration and I should be glad to see your project succeed."

During the Atlanta campaign Gen. Harrison was colonel commanding the 1st brigade, 3d division of the 20th army corps. Gen. Harrison took part in all three battles around Atlanta.

Letters of endosement have also been received from Maj. Gen. Daniel Butterfield, of New York, Gen. Coburn, Col. Orland Smith, and Maj. Goodspeed.

An Early Morning Fire.

New York, Jan. 8.—An early morning fire that destroyed the brick factory building at Nos. 338 to 342 East Fifty-ninth street did $100,000 damage. The building was owned by Bloomingdale Bros. and used in part by them as a storage warehouse and they are the chief losers. It was occupied also by Franklin M. Wise, manufacturer of aluminum goods; S. Levy & Co., cigars, and Brown & Smithson, plasterers.

Appointed Surgeon General.

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 7.—Gen. Willis J. Hulings, commander-in-chief of the National Association of Spanish-American War Veterans, announced the appointment of Lieut. Col. Victor C. Vaughan, of the University of Michigan, as surgeon general of the association. Col. Vaughan served with the 33d Michigan volunteers.

Prominent Porto Ricans Arrive.

New York, Jan. 6.—Gen. J. W. Davis, governor of Porto Rico, arrived here Friday on board the steamer Ponce. Other passengers were Gen. J. P. Sanger, Col. C. H. Heyl, chief of the census bureau in Porto Rico; Lieut. J. Battle and Auditor John W. Connor.

Chinese Murderer Hanged.

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—Go See, a Chinese murderer, convicted of killing a countrymen, was hanged Friday at San Quentin prison.

MATTHEW S. QUAY.

Senate Committee Decide to Report Adversely on Resolution to Seat Senator From Pennsylvania.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The senate committee on privileges and elections Friday decided by a vote of 4 to 3 to make an adverse report upon the resolution to seat Senator Quay. The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That Matthew S. Quay be admitted as a senator from the state of Pennsylvania in accordance with his appointment, made on April 29, 1899, by the governor of said state."

The members of the committee voting for the resolutions were Senators Chandler, Hoar and McComas, and those opposing Senators Burrows, Caffery, Pettus and Harris. Senators Turley and Pritchard were paired, the latter for and the former against the resolution.

The senate committee on privileges and elections Friday began its investigation of the charges of bribery made in connection with the election of Senator Clark, of Montana. The proceedings were begun by arguments from counsel on both sides.

BRAZNELL MINE HORROR.

Coroner's Jury Censures Both the Mine and Fire Bosses—Criminal Proceedings Probable.

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 6.—The coroner's jury in the Braznell mine horror, after three hours' deliberation Friday evening, rendered the following verdict:

"We find from the evidence that the mine foreman of said mine was negligent in failing to see that the mine was in a safe condition before permitting workmen to enter. We also believe that the fire boss of said mine was negligent in failing to make a daily verbal report to the mine foreman, and we believe both the mine and fire boss to be incompetent to perform their respective duties."

There has been no action taken as yet toward prosecuting the incriminated officials. This will be decided upon by a conference of the inspectors with Chief Inspector Roderick at an early date. Friday's session of the coroner's inquiry into the Braznell mine disaster was largely devoted to expert testimony as to the cause of the explosion and remedies and preventions of a similar disaster.

DR. WILLIAM A. HAMMOND.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Dr. William A. Hammond, formerly surgeon general of the army, died at his residence in this city Friday night from an attack of heart failure brought on by hurriedly ascending a flight of stairs. He expired before a physician could be summoned.

Dr. Hammond conducted a sanitarium here for some years. He had a notable and somewhat checkered career. He was on the retired list at the time of his death, but at one time lost his position in the army, but was restored after a hard fight. At the time of his death he was on the rolls of the United States army as a brigadier general, retired.

The L. A. W. Interested.

Washington, Jan. 6.—T. J. Keenan, of Pittsburgh, president of the League of American Wheelmen, and Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, had an interview with President McKinley Friday at which they urged him to press the claim against the Turkish government made by a relative of Frank Lenz, the American bicyclist who was murdered near Erzeroum, in Armenia, in 1894. The L. A. W. are much interested in the case, which attracted a great deal of attention at the time.

Failures in 1899.

New York, Jan. 6.—Failures in 1899 were 9,393 in number, with liabilities of $123,132,679. The last days of the year added a few to the number and some millions to the known liabilities of firms and banks which failed to close to the end, so that commercial defaults reached $90,879,889, of which $30,792,164 were in manufacturing, $48,924,771 in trading and $11,162,954 in brokerage, promoting and other commercial liabilities.

Fatal Fire in New York.

New York, Jan. 6.—At least two persons — unknown women — were burned to death in a fire that occurred early Saturday morning in a big tenement house at 305 East 92d street. There may be other bodies in the building. Several persons were injured. The police and firemen rescued a number of the tenents from the flames and smoke.

Had a Bad Year.

London, Jan. 6.—The British fire insurance companies doing business in the United States according to the financial expert of the Daily Chronicle, had a bad year in 1899, the competition being so hot that it is getting doubtful whether it is worth while to attempt to get business n the United States.

The Women's Temple.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Miss Helen Gould has lent the strength of her name, backed by a substantial donation of $1,000 to the movement to retain the Women's temple. Marshall Field had extended the time limit of his offer of $100,000 for another year.

Carnegie's Promise.

Emporia, Kan., Jan. 6.—Andrew Carnegie has promised the college of Emporia $50,000 for a library building as soon as the present debt is paid. Funds have been raised to pay all obligations of the college.

TWO MEAN TOWNS.

Stories Told by Traveling Men About a Couple of Decidedly Poor Places to Live In.

They were talking about bad towns.

"The meanest place I ever was in," said the man who travels for a Chicago house, "is down in Massachusetts. Say, do you know what happened while I was stopping there once? A man had fallen through a hole in the sidewalk and sustained injuries that resulted in the loss of his right arm. He sued the city for damages, and the case was tried before a jury, which, the papers said, was composed of representative citizens. Well, what do you suppose they did to him? Brought in a verdict in favor of the city, holding that inasmuch as he was left-handed his injury didn't amount to anything."

"Yes," the cigar man said, "that's a pretty mean town, I admit, but I know of a worse one. This place is in Pennsylvania. An acquaintance of mine down there was injured some time ago in pretty much the same way the man you mentioned got hurt. He fell on a bad sidewalk and lost one of his legs. He sued the city, and didn't get anything. I never heard just why, but probably because the jurors didn't believe he needed more than one leg in his business, seeing that he was a barber and couldn't hone a razor or shave a man with his foot anyway. But wait, I haven't come to the point at which the real meanness developed. Being a poor man, he couldn't afford to buy a cork leg, so he had to get along with a wooden peg, and one day while he was crossing the principal street this peg in some way got wedged between a couple of paving stones right in the middle of the street car track. It took them nearly an hour to get him loose, and what do you suppose happened then? Blamed if they didn't go and fine him ten dollars and costs for obstructing traffic!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

PRONE TO EXAGGERATE.

Americans are not notable for their strict adherence to the truth, but their exaggerations are so manifest that they cannot be fairly accused of lying. William Archer, an English author, has recently written a book in which he gives some characteristic examples of this trait. He very properly classes it as "American humor."

"On board one of the Florida steamboats, which have to be built with exceedingly light draught to get over the frequent shallows of the rivers," he relates, "an Englishman accosted the captain with the remark: 'I understand, captain, that you think nothing of steaming across a meadow when there's been a heavy fall of dew.' 'Well, I don't know about that,' replied the captain, 'but it's true we sometimes have to send a man ahead with a watering pot.' Again, a southern colonel was conducted to the theater to see Salvini's 'Othello.' He witnessed the performer gravely, and remarked at the close: 'That was a mighty good show, and I don't see but the coon did as well as any of 'em.' A third anecdote that charmed me was that of the man who, being invited to take a drink, replied: 'No, no, I solemnly promised my dear, dead mother never to touch a drop; besides, boys, it's too early in the morning; besides, I've just had one.'"—Chicago Chronicle.

England's Armored Trains.

How Woman Was Made.

A small boy in the Mission Sunday school of Bishop Fallows' church propounded an entirely new theory of creation last Sunday.

"Who made man?" asked the teacher, beginning, as in the good old days when orthodoxy used catechisms.

"God," was the prompt reply.

"And how did he make him?"

"Out of dust, ma'am; nothing but dust."

"And who made woman?"

"God made her, too, ma'am."

"How?"

The small boy hesitated, and then replied cheerfully: "He caused a deep sleep to fall upon man and then took out his backbone and made the woman."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FIRST MESSAGE.

Gov. Taylor Sends It to the Kentucky Legislature.

Wants Election Law Repealed and a New State House Provided—State's Finances in Good Shape.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

At no more auspicious time than this could you have been chosen to serve the people of the state of Kentucky as their legislators. This general condition ever arising in the history of the state are to come in force upon the determination. Not only this, but you are called to met as the morning of another century begins to dawn upon the earth, which will mark nearly always marks the beginning of a new epoch in the history of nations. It lies with you to make that distinction, so far as Kentucky is concerned, glorious and prolific of a century of progress, or to render it darkened and a forecast of years of civil and commercial oppression in our people.

It may not be inappropriate to briefly review some of our country's remarkable achievements during the century now drawing to a close. Three great wars with foreign foes have been successfully waged; our national independence wrought and the supremacy of American arms established. The most remarkable conflict in history has been fought by our people, its cause settled, and the issue for which country indissolubly bound together in bonds of internal love. Ours has contracted the national debt of any two populated states on the eastern coast our nation has extended its territory by conquest and purchase from ocean to ocean and from the gulf to the lakes, and our population has grown from three millions to 70,000 of free people. States more vast than old world empires have been carved out of the wilderness and added to the national cluster. Religion has reared her temples and education her seats of learning in every community within our borders, and to-day our general prosperity and the degree of happiness and material prosperity unprecedented in all history.

With the lessons of yesterday so plainly to be read in the light of to-day; with the just achievements of our people so vitally in our hearts, so replete in fond memories; with the horizon of the future presenting so promising a prospect, with all these things to inspire, it is but natural that in the present grave condition of affairs in the state the people should expect of you such legislative action as shall restore and conserve for them their liberties and in every quarter, yourselves in all regards as patriots.

A republican form of government depends upon the sanctity of suffrage. So long as the rights of ballot are held inviolate, so long will there be peace and peace in the state; but where, by forms of law or otherwise, this most sacred prerogative of the citizen is insulted or destroyed, then strife and confusion follow, and free government is at an end.

The supreme object of a republican form of government is "the greatest good to the greatest number." Anything subversive of this inevitably results otherwise in despotism or anarchy. The people of our own state have always zealously guarded this sacred right of suffrage by constitutional guarantee.

Gov. Taylor here mentions that section of the state constitution which says that all elections shall be free and could, and those proceeds to describe the passage of the Australian ballot law.

The citizens of the state or community vote upon one and never question but that of who shall serve as their public officers. Matters that affect the well being of the people, constitutional amendments and other questions of vital and far-reaching importance must be determined under the same law that provides for the election of public officers, and are of paramount importance to the people.

The infallible test of the wisdom or folly of any law is that by its operation. The present election law, tried by this test, is unwise, unprofitable and unjust. Its provisions make it possible for every election tribunal in the state, from the highest to the lowest, to be dominated by one party in contention makes it that possibility a reality. Not only has it perpetuated in office the party that has introduced into our elections the most corrupt practices known to the lowest order of politicians. It has contaminated public morals, caused the people to lose faith in free institutions, placed a premium on political infamy and a discount on common honesty in political affairs. It has pampered bribery, divided households and plunged the people into a state of excitement hitherto unknown, and finally has developed a most odious brood of evils.

These intolerable ills must appeal to you for prompt and decisive action in the repeal of this measure and the substitution therefor of a election law that will guarantee to the people a free ballot and an honest count. If you do this much and no more, you will have accomplished a glorious work. You will be hailed as public benefactors, patriots, win the love of the people of your state and receive the plaudits of the nation.

STATE FINANCES.

The people of Kentucky may be congratulated upon the excellent financial condition of the state at the close of the year 1899 its cash resources are as follows: Balance in the sinking fund, $968,514.62; school fund, $1,000,000; expenditure fund, $68,072.17; total cash in treasury, $1,060,125.08. In addition to these cash resources on hand, there is to the credit of the sinking fund, turnpike stock estimated at $100,000, making an aggregate of total resources of $2,100,125.08.

The governor calls attention to the fact that eight coupon bonds are issued July 1, 1897, and the certificates of indebtedness, issued 1895, will have to be ultimately discharged by payment of the state.

However, the resources of the treasury were on December 31, 1899, sufficient to discharge that indebtedness and leave a surplus of $150,425.08. The A. & M. college bonds, as well as the educational bonds, are intended to be perpetual obligations upon which the state is required to pay only the accruing interest.

It should be remembered, however, that the funds for which these bonds were executed were used in defraying the general expenditures of the state government. In order that the present condition of our finances may be justly appreciated, it is well to contrast it with that prevailing in March, 1895.

It will be seen that not only have the current expenses in the last four years been paid, but that a very large floating debt has been discharged. In view of the present splendid condition of our state finances, but little legislation in regard to the subject of taxation appears to be necessary.

The recent decision in the supreme court of the United States holding that the provision in our revenue act of 1892 authorizing the assessment of the capital stock of national banks is in conflict with the United States statutes, demands you attention. The act referred to should be so amended as to harmonize with the United States statues and provide for the proper assessment of the shares of stock of these institutions for purpose of state and local taxation.

A well regulated law providing a license tax of wholesale liquor dealers and increasing the tax of retail dealers would produce considerable revenue. The license on circuses might well be increased and regulated according to the population of the various counties in which they exhibit. A small fee might be charged for each commission issued to an officer. This fee would generally be cheerfully paid. The tax on deeds and mortgages should be regulated according to the value of the property mortgaged or conveyed. Under the present law, the tax on a deed conveying $50,000 worth of property is no more than on a deed conveying property valued at $100. This is inequitable and should be remedied.

EDUCATION.

No genuine thinker or true patriot ever questions the truth and wisdom of the declaration uttered 2,300 years before ago by Aristotle, that the fate of empires depends upon the educational life of the children. It is in common accord with the common experience of mankind, and is abundantly illustrated in every essential advancement in civilization. It applies with peculiar force to states with a republican form of government as the real strength and stability rest alone with the people. It is, therefore, the utmost importance that Kentucky should zealously guard her common school interests. It is a matter of congratulation that the schools continue to grow in efficiency and popular favor from year to year, as is evidenced by the increased attendance, increased number of districts that furnish local aid and more thorough preparation on the part of teachers.

The per capita for the school years ending June 30, 1896, 1898, reached the high water mark, being $2.75, $2.85 and $2.80 respectively for these years.

After the per capita for the school year ending June 30, 1899, had been fixed, large sums of back taxes were collected from railroads and other sources, which materially augmented the school fund. This amounted to the splendid per capita of $2.75 for the present year.

A suitable building, properly furnished, is a prerequisite to every school district. The public mind is fast crystallizing into form good. The present method of requiring each school district to build and furnish its own school house is unsatisfactory, in a large measure, full of satisfactory results.

A late decision of the court of appeals holding that the constitution limits the indebtedness of any district to 2 per cent amount of one year's levy, makes it practically impossible for poorer districts to build comfortable houses. Districts taxed them under any rate of district taxation short of practically confiscation, and emphasizes the necessity for action by this general assembly for their relief. Its wisdom and justice suggest the county rather than the school district is made the unit for taxation. The desired result would follow in such legislation as these lines. These suggestions are submitted for your consideration.

The governor dwells at length on the importance of a perfect system of enumeration for school purposes to larger districts.

One of the most deplorable defects in our common school system is the weakness of the term. In the rural districts multiplied sections have opportunities to attend school longer than five months each year. This fact seriously cripples the efficiency of the schools. Teachers can ill afford to prepare for their work in that time, can not make teaching a profession under the system that requires employment for only five months out of 12. It is but probable that the school fund will ever be materially increased by state taxation.

STATE COLLEGES.

Standing at the head of Kentucky's public school system and forming an essential part of it are the state colleges and higher education, the one for the white and the other for the colored race. Each in its sphere has done, and is destined to do, a great work for the young men and young women of the commonwealth in the way of professional training. These schools, called the State college and the State Normal School for colored youths, should, from time to time, have such aid from the general assembly additional to the regular appropriations as their growth demands.

The governor cites the injustice to young women in the matter of higher education, and asks the question: What could be a more pleasing duty for the state than to provide the greatest possible facilities for these young women, who will become the teachers of the state public schools, to procure the best possible equipment for teaching? Concerning the department of domestic science. This department should be under the management of Christian women.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The usual reports from these institutions will be laid before you. It seems that the sanitary condition of each of the institutions is excellent. The inmates are well clothed, well fed and properly cared for in every particular.

The expenses of the Eastern asylum for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1899, exceeded its income by $2,662.26. This deficit was caused by expending considerable money on repairs of buildings. The report of the treasurer of the Eastern asylum, covering the period from October 1, 1898, to September 30, 1899, showed that that institution lived within its income and had to its credit at the latter date $3,360.13.

The reports of the commissioners of the Kentucky Institute for the Education of Deaf Mutes and that of the commissioners of the Kentucky Institute for the Education of the Blind are laid before your body for consideration.

HOUSES OF REFORM.

In 1896 an act was passed appropriating $100,000 for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting houses of reform, where juvenile offenders might be confined. For 1[illegible] years this class of prisoners had been incarcerated with old and hardened criminals. This is no longer the case. The commissioners appointed by the governor, under the provisions of the act, purchased a site near Lexington, and have partly completed the buildings, and 50 prisoners have already been conveyed to that institution.

The appropriation has been nearly exhausted and the necessary buildings not completed. An additional appropriation will be asked for in the report of the trustees. This is a matter that demands your serious attention.

THE PENITENTIARIES.

The board of prison commissioners will doubtless lay before you their report as to the operation of the two penitentiaries for the last year. These reports are not likely to balance with the auditor's books with reference to the expenditures, because the actual expenditures by the state for these institutions are always larger than those reported by the warden's reports, the salaries and the expenses of the commissioners not appearing in the wardens' books. The penitentiaries have been under the control of the new management for about 18 months, going into account, as we must, the interval at the beginning and at the close of the period, the expenditures for the Frankfort penitentiary exceeded its income by [illegible] $5,000 per month—there being an excess of expenditures amounting to $87,172.60 for the 16 months ending November 30, 1899. The statements the invoices furnished by the prison records have been used. They do not, however, include an appropriation of $5,000, appropriated to enlarge the prison dining room.

MOBS.

Mob violence has long been prevalent in the state, but no genuine remedy for its prevention has yet been devised. The reputation of the state has been injured abroad and immigration received because of this fact. This evil demands the most serious attention of your body. The recent occurrence in Marion county is so shocking and revolting that it emphasizes the necessity for effective legislation to prevent its repetition in the future. The present law provides sufficient punishment for such offenders as these, but the sentiment in communities where these things occur, seems to either overawe the officers who are charged with the execution of the law or else enlist their sympathies in favor of the lawless. However, it is apparent that if these evil-doers are to be brought to justice, it must be by civil courts removed from the scene of the crime jurisdiction, and authorizing the selection of special prosecutors who are independent of local influence.

Although all efforts to punish this character of crime have proved ineffectual, yet our efforts should not relax, until some sufficient remedy is devised to prevent its commission.

WOMEN'S PRISON.

The penitentiary at Frankfort is greatly overcrowded. The space occupied by women is needed for the accommodation of men, and the convicts are totally inadequate for opportunity to give the women the instruction they need. Every woman capable of being taught should leave the prison well drilled in some one or more lines of domestic service. I, therefore, recommend the establishment of a prison for female offenders, which shall be entirely under the management of Christian women, who will for humanity's sake conduct the institution in such way as to teach every woman who is confined in the prison for a period as long as a year, how to do some one thing well, and thus send her back to society as equipped as to be able to earn an honest livelihood.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION.

Much complaint comes from the larger cities of our state because of the fact that under the constitution they are practically denied local self-government concerning municipal taxation. It is earnestly insisted that this fact greatly retards the growth of these cities.

The local tax rate on all manufacturing industries in Louisville for 1899 was $1.34 on the $100. It is at once apparent that capital when seeking investment will go where its burden will be lightest and where the greatest advantages are afforded. Hence, millions of wealth are being diverted from our own state and cities to that of our rivals. It does seem that the cities should be allowed to regulate their municipal taxation and make such laws as will suit their own local interest. It can not possibly harm the rest of the state.

For these reasons it is recommended that your honorable body again bring to it is matter before the people by submitting to them an amendment to the constitution allowing cities of such classes as you may deem proper the right to regulate the question of municipal taxation.

CAPITOL BUILDING.

The public buildings of a state as certainly indicate its financial standing and public spirit as private buildings reveals the thrift and refinement of communities. For many years the reputation of our capitol has been a reproach to the character of its state buildings. Its interiors which suffered a quarter of a century ago do not suffice for the present. The whole country is moving forward, and while we are about as our sister states are keeping step in the march of progress and prosperity. There is scarcely a state in the union whose capitol does not possess handsomer and more commodious capitol buildings than our own. This is truly humiliating. The fact that many of these states rank far below us in the elements of wealth and intelligence. Heretofore the impoverished condition of our public treasury has blocked all efforts looking to the erection of a new capitol. It was but natural that the people should refuse to increase their indebtedness to gratify their state pride. But now our financial conditions, having so immensely improved, the old argument can no longer be effectively urged. It is believed that by the continued practice of economy the various departments of state, the revenues collected from the present rate of taxation will be sufficient to defray the current expenditures of the state and leave a small surplus each year. Therefore, a small per cent portion of our future revenues could be set apart to the accumulation of a fund for the building of a state house that would honor our state and become the pride of every citizen. Eight hundred thousand dollars would, probably, be ample therefor, and this sum could be provided for in the future by the setting apart of cents of the annual tax rate of 37½ cents for that purpose. I would therefore suggest that you take action along these lines as shall shortly bring about the consummation of this most worthy enterprise.

LOCAL OPTION.

Much confusion has resulted from a recent decision of the court of appeals, concerning the law authorizing counties to vote upon the question of local option. It has been held that under the present statute after the vote has voted to prohibit the sale of spirituous liquors, any subdivision thereof can by a subsequent vote, authorize the sale of liquors within the county, so far as the local municipality is concerned. Under this construction the power of the county as a whole are practically denied the right of determining this important question. Immediate legislation is therefore necessary.

Trusting that your work may be of the highest benefit to the state, I am, with great respect,

Yours truly,
W. S. TAYLOR,
Governor of Kentucky.

RUN DOWN BY A TRAIN.

Dr. Wickliffe Smith, Surgeon of the Late 161st Indiana, and a Cuban Boy Killed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 31.—Dr. Wickliffe Smith, surgeon of the 161st Indiana regiment, Col. Durbin, was killed Friday afternoon, together with his Cuban boy, Francisco Sousa, three miles from Delphi by a Wabash train. On account of the cold weather they were bundled up so they could not hear the train and drove on the tracks. Both were instantly killed. The horse was unhurt.

Dr. Smith was one of the best known and most popular men in the state and a personal friend of James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, and Gov. Mount. Mr. Riley said of him Friday night:

"In many ways Wickliffe Smith was unique. He was brave almost to rashness and generous almost to a fault. His death will bring sadness to many hearts, but no one will lament him more sincerely than I."

A CLUB IN TURMOIL.

Members Indignant Because Secretary Notified Them of Dues By Postal Card.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 2.—The officers of the Kokomo Equal Suffrage and Literary association stirred up a storm of indignation Saturday among the members. The secretary, instead of sending statements of delinquent annual dues by letter in the usual manner, had the delinquencies printed on postal cards and mailed to the members. The club has a membership of about 200 leading citizens, male and female. The persons receiving the cards are hopping mad over it, regarding the "public duns" as not only an unpardonable insult, but a flagrant infraction of the postal laws, clearly actionable at law. Several of the members have indignantly resigned, and others threaten to do so unless apologies are made and the offensive action of the secretary and treasurer is repudiated by the club.

Woman Killed.

Decatur, Ind., Jan. 2.—A boiler in the sausage factory of John Huviland, at Geneva, exploded, wrecking two buildings, killing one woman and seriously wounding another. Mrs. Millette, aged 67, was sitting in her residence across the street, and was struck with a piece of iron from the engine and almost instantly killed. Miss Nancy Macklin, a domestic at the Millette home, was seriously injured.

Large Extension to the Road.

Hagerstown, Ind., Dec. 31.—Manager Barrett, of the Indianapolis & Greenfield electric railroad, says that as soon as the line is completed to Indianapolis spurs will be run to Knightstown and to Newcastle and Hagerstown, and the road will eventually reach Cincinnati.

In the Hands of a Receiver.

South Bend, Dec. 31.—The big grocery firm of Whitney & Fletcher, in this city, went in the hands of a receiver Friday.

A LARGE ARMY.

Troops in the Philippines Will Aggregate 65,000 Men, 31,000 Regulars.

Washington, Jan. 5.—With the arrival at Manila of the transport Grant, which left San Francisco on the 21st ult., with the 48th volunteer infantry (colored), Otis will have command of an effective force of about 65,000 men The army now in the Philippines aggregates 62,500 men, of which 31,000 are regular troops and 31,500 are volunteers. With the arrival of the Grant the entire volunteer strength of 34,000 men will be in the Philippines. This includes the 48th volunteer infantry as already stated, and the 41st volunteer infantry, which left New York on the transport Logan November 20, and is expected to arrive at Manila early next week. The authorized strength of the volunteer army is 35,000 men, divided into 25 regiments, but most of these regiments are short of their complement of 1,303 men, and the actual strength of the volunteer army is about 34,000 men. The organization of these regiments began about the end of June, and their movement to the Philippines closed with the departure of the Grant from San Francisco on the 21st ultimo.

That regiment was delayed several weeks at San Francisco by the appearance of smallpox in the ranks. The only volunteer cavalry regiment is the service, the 11th cavalry, is in the Philippines. The regular organizations in the Philippines are: Company A and B, U. S. engineer battalion; headquarters A, C, D, E, F, K L and M, 3d cavalry; the 4th cavalry; E. 1st artillery; G, H, K and L, 3d artillery; F, 4th artillery; F, 5th artillery; headquarters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, L, M, N and O, 6th artillery; 3d infantry, 4th infantry, 6th infantry, 9th infantry, 12th infantry, 13th infantry, 14th infantry, 16th infantry, 17th infantry, 18th infantry, 19th infantry, 20th infantry, 21st infantry, 22d infantry, 23d infantry; headquarters A, C, E, F, G, H, I and K, 24th infantry; headquarters B, F, F, H, I, K, L and M, 25th infantry.

It is expected that Gen. Otis will utilize his forces, as far as possible in garrisoning the principal cities of the archipelago, in the preservation of peace and good order and in the maintenance of free trade and full commercial intercourse with the islands, pending the establishment of a permanent form of government.

MACARTHUR PROMOTED.

His Nomination Was Confirmed in the Senate Without an Opposing Vote.

Washington, Jan. 5.—In the executive session of the senate Thursday there was a brief discussion of the promotion of Gen. McArthur. The discussion grew out of an inquiry by Senator Pettigrew as to what the general had done to entitle him to such distinction as had been conferred upon him. The inquiry was responded to by Senators Hawley, Carter and others, who explained that Gen. MacArthur's record had been uniformly good from the time of the civil war until and including the present campaign in the Philippines. After these explanations the nomination was confirmed without an opposing vote.

GERMANY AROUSED.

The Emperor Indignant Over the Second Seizure of a German Vessel by England.

Berlin, Jan. 5.—The seizure of the steamer Aden and occupied by British troops has aroused the German people almost to a fighting point. Emperor William is said to be particularly incensed, because information has reached him showing that the seizures were not due to the blundering of British naval officers, but to strict orders from headquarters, which the officers are merely carrying out. He has instructed Count Von Buelow, the foreign secretary, to demand exact and full reparation for the outrage done to the German flag.

Opposed to the Drainage Canal.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 5.—Attorney General Crow is preparing to institute proceedings in the supreme court of the United States to stop the alleged pollution of the waters of the Mississippi river by means of the sewage of the Chicago canal. It is claimed that the health of the inhabitants of towns and cities along the Mississippi will be endangered.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Italy has returned a favorable response to the recent note of the state department respecting the open door in China. Italy was the last of the great powers remaining to be heard from.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Senate—Bills introduced Wednesday: Regulating appointments to civil offices in the outlaying dependencies; to amend the Chinese exclusion laws so as to commit their administration to the bureau of immigration; providing an investigation of the economic relations of the United States with China and the Orient generally by a commission; establishment of a department of commerce and industries; regulating the manufacture of filled cheese and oleomargarine and the adulteration of foods; also for a pension of $50 per month to the widow of Col. Stotsenburg, of the Nebraska regiment, who was killed in the Philippines, providing a fund for the pensioning of members of the life saving and revenue cutter service; constitutional amendment authorizing an income tax.

House—Bills and resolutions introduced: For a constitutional amendment providing that "no new state, the territory of which is now contiguous to the United States, shall be admitted by the congress into the union;" constitutional amendment authorizing an income tax; joint resolution proposing the following amendment to the constitution; "Congress shall have power to regulate and to prohibit the state, control or prohibit the same within their boundaries;" relating to the duties of ministers and consuls; relating to navigation, including bills extending the provisions of the coasting laws to Hawaii and to Porto Rico; giving to Cuban ports the favorable treatment in American ports; allowing foreigners to sue in the United States circuit courts for infringement of patents; to enjoin the state department and punishing in the federal courts; reducing the duty on peanuts from 3 cents per pound to 1 cent per pound the stamp tax; to provide for interest on government deposits; appropriating $500,000 for the representation of Alaska; Bads for the maintenance for 20 years of a ship channel in the south pass, Mississippi river.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Senate—The gold currency financial bill is now before the senate, and will hold the floor until disposed of. The bill as reported by the finance committee, while differing in text from the bill which passed the house, contains all its cardinal features. Senator Aldrich, who has charge of the measure, delivered a quite exhaustive speech Thursday in explanation of the various provisions.

House—The session of the house Thursday was brief. Twenty minutes' time was sufficient to pass Sulzer resolution, as modified by the ways and means committee, requesting of Secretary Gage the details and all the facts concerning the transactions of the treasury department with the National City and Hanover banks of New York city. The action of the house was practically unanimous. The resolution as adopted was made more general in its scope, and an amendment was added to cover information respecting the transactions relating to the sale of the New York custom house site.

EPIDEMIC THREATENED.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 5.—Manila papers say that an epidemic like plague is threatening Manila. The Manila Times says that it has been learned from various authentic sources that in many of our closely settled neighboring towns a serious epidemic bordering on plague is raging. The towns principally affected are Gandaloupe Mandalogana, Pineda and Malabon, besides a number of others. The ease is said to be due to eating the flesh from animals which have died from disease.

Whatever the cause there is little doubt that a specie of plague exists in which most cases prove fatal. It is said that the disease carries off its victim within 38 hours from its attack and in the country towns medical aid or supplies are not to be had readily.

THE STAMP TAX.

Attorney General Griggs Gives an Opinion in Regard to Bills of Lading, Receipts, Etc.

Washington, Jan. 5.—In answer to a request from the secretary of the treasury for an opinion on the subject, Attorney General Griggs has held that upon bills of lading, receipts, manifests and other similar documents issued by railroad companies for the receipt of goods to be transported by rail from any place in the United States to Canada, a stamp tax of 1 cent is payable under the clause of the war revenue act headed "Express and Freight" and that no tax is payable thereon under the clause relating to goods exported from a port or place in the United States to any foreign port or place. It is also held that the same rule should be applied to shipments by rail to Mexico.

Senate Committee on Cuba.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The senate committee on Cuba held its first meeting Thursday. No action was taken, but there was a general discussion of the attitude of the United States toward the islands. The prevailing opinion seemed to be favorable to the Teller amendment, promising independence to the Cubans as soon as pacific conditions should be restored. There was some talk of having the committee make a trip to Cuba for the purpose of investigating conditions there, but no conclusion was reached.

Internal Revenue Decision.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Commissioner Wilson, of the internal revenue bureau, has decided that a physician who prescribes and sells to his patients whisky, brandy, wine or any other alcoholic liquor that is not compounded into a medicine by the admixture of any drug or medical ingredient therewith, is required to pay special tax as a retail liquor dealer, even though the alcoholic liquor thus furnished be prescribed as a medicine only and so used.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1900. NO. 13

Editorial Paragraphs.

Why should the government aid ships when it does not aid railways; when, in fact, it hampers them?

As between partial free trade and trust domination, there is little doubt that the country will insist on the former.

And still the administration slowly develops its plan to turn over the finances of the government to a banking syndicate.

The Queen of Holland has invited Dr. Leyds to court and treat ed him to hot bird and a cold bottle. England is accordingly angry.

In the opinion of Attorney Gen. Griggs, the anti-trust law never applies to any particular case that may be submitted to him for action.

The passage of the currency bill will cost the Republicans seats in the Senate from Montana Nebraska, Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado.

In spite of all the talk about southern lynchings, the statistics show that there were fewer in the entire country in 1899 than in any year since 1885.

There is something very suspicious in the visits of Kentucky Republicans to Washington and those of government official to Kentucky at this time.

The newspapers always greatly exagerate affairs in Kentucky. A fist fight here receives more attention than a wholesale murder does anywhere else.

Now it is said that Mr. Quay has been caught in the petty larceny of sending personal telegrams as official business chargeable to the Government.

The Chicago river is said to have become much purer since the canal was opened. After awhile the people there can eat Chicago water without cooking it first.

It is a curious fact that Republican journals nowadays boast that the Dingley tariff keeps out foreign goods and then claim that the customs receipts have been increased.

Mr. Quay claims southern support in return for alleged aid in defeating the "force" bill in 1892, but the record shows that he voted against the abandonment of that iniquitous measure.

The Treasury will allay the anger against the favorities shown to the "Standard Oil" National bank by depositing $30,000 000 with other banks. The people will furnish the money.

Philologists are now tracing resemblances between the dialects of the Filipinos and those of the American Indians. After a while historians will trace resemblance between the treatment of the two.

The world is beginning to question whether England has not seized ships belonging to friendly powers as a warning to unfriendly ones to keep away from South Africa. If so, it is rather hard on her friends.

When the trusts helped to elect McKinley in 1896 they did so with the assurance that the Republican party would not destroy them. Otherwise they must have been fools, and no one accuses them of that.

The Wanamaker machine in Philadelphia has been beaten at the polls by the Quay machine. This really makes little difference to the country at large. Both machines are much of a muchness.

THE United States Court, held in Cincinnati, decided last week that the Covington councilmen whom Judge Tarvin imprisoned for refusing to properly furnish the court house in their city, could recover no damage from the Judge on account of their imprisonment.

AT Frankfort, yesterday afternoon, ex Congressman David Colson shot and killed Ethelbert Scott. The killing was the result of an old feud between Colson and Scott, which began while they were members of the Fourth Kentucky at Chickamauga, during the war with Spain. They met in the lobby of the Capitol Hotel, yesterday, and when the smoke cleared up, Scott, and L. W. Demaree. deputy postmaster at Shelbyville, were dead and Chas. Julian, of Frankfort, so badly wounded that he died about an hour after the shooting. Demaree and Julian were not involved in the trouble, being victims of bullets intended for one of the other two men. Colson was wounded in right arm. Scott was a nephew of Gov. Bradley. Colson, Scott and Demaree, were Republicans, and Julian, a Democrat.

IF Mr. Bryan is correctly reported in what is given out as a recent interview in Minneapolis, he is not such a very strong anti-expansionist at last. He is reported as saying he is a firm believer in territorial expansion unlimited even to antiguous territory though limited by the intelligence of the people of the territory to be annexed.

OOM PAUL was unexpectedly well prepared for his brush with England. It appears that the old fellow had seen further into the future than his enemies anticipated, and had quietly prepared for approaching events and Uncle Paul's scrap with John Bull is a more serious affair than Mr. Bull expected.

GEN. WOOD appears to be getting things in pretty good shape in Cuba, and has accomplished more in a few weeks towards preparing the island for independence than Gen. Brook did in months. Wood is working for the best interest of the Cubans. As much could not be said for his predecessor.

A couple of Mormon Elders were in town, one day last week. They came in from a neighborhood across Gunpowder, where they had been spending several days. It appears that they were moving their base of operation, and went out the Bellevue pike.

A BILL making lobbying a felony in this State has been introduced in the legislature. Should it become a law it will destroy the vocation of several who pose as eminent Kentuckians.

FRANKFORT did the handsome thing by Bryan and Blackburn, last night, and the people up there have been feasting on oratory for the last twenty-four hours.

THE South Africa Republic has placed an order with a Terre Haute Gun Stock Factory for 125,000 stocks. These stocks will befitted with barrels in New York.

WE will give more news from the legislature as soon at that body gets down to work. The contest committees are at work.

What is home without a newspaper? A home without a newspaper is no home at all. It is a kind of a dreary den—a rendezvous of bedbugs and fleas, where the inhabitants live in blissful ignorance of what the world is doing. It is inhabited by a class who never find out a thing that has happened until long after everyone else has forgotton it. The children grow up in rags and dirt, while the wife generally finds consolation in darning socks and lugging a pipe loaded with long green tobacco and the man generally lives because he cant die, and he is too lazy to kill himself. He goes out on election days, and does not know who he is voting for but just takes the ticket like a threshing machine takes a sheaf of wheat.

Mr. Foraker is magnanimous enough to concede that Mr. Kohlsaat is as much of an authority on century closing as he is on political platforms.—Washington Post.

MOODY'S CHARACTER.

Here are some anecdotes in the career of Moody which reveal interesting phases of his character:

"Well," said Mr. Moody, "I was born in the flesh in 1837; in the spirit in 1857."

Being interrupted by a man in his audience in Carnegie Hall during a meeting, Mr. Moody said:

"My friend, if you will let me get through I will listen to you all night. But don't stop me to ask skeptical questions, because they only strengthen my faith."

"What is your favorite passage in the Bible?" he was once asked.

"Every word in the Bible," he replied.

Mr. Moody once consented to permit an expert in palmistry to read his hand, and was immensely pleased when told that his distinguishing characteristics were love of fellowmen and ability as a leader.

"That's good," said he. "I'll try to lead every man in the world to Christ."

When he became 60 years old his admirers throughout the world presented him with $40,000 and urged him to retire from active work.

"You are very kind," he said "but I must keep on. It would makemy head hang with shame to give up the fight as long as I can preach."

"Eloquence and oratory are all very well in their way, but they are not much use unless the third quality of common sense is to accompany them," is the way Mr. Moody referred to an address congratulating him on a speech he had made.

During the early days of his career as an evangelist in Chicago, a street ruffian attempted to break up one of his meetings. Mr. Moody endured his taunts for some time and then thrashed him soundly. The man afterward became one of Mr. Moody's staunchest followers.

Mr. Moody seldom prepared a sermon. He carried about with him a trunk of huge envelopes containing clippings and statistics relating to subjects that were most popular at the moment. When he wanted to preach a new sermon he simply consulted the envelope containing the material he desired to use and adapted its contents to his religious requirements.

Mr. Moody was always sure of a warm welcome when he went to preach in the prisons. The convicts used to cheer him, and he knew most of them by name. All the "long-termers" were recipients of presents from him, usually of Bibles. His influence was often responsible for the pardoning of criminals.

Mr. Moody was a firm believer in the freedom of the press and sensationalism.

"A free press is a terror to evildoers," he said, "and sensationalism protects the world. It is good to know things."

Mr. Moody always believed that prayer saved the steamship Spree from destruction. He was a passenger on the ship when she was disabled in 1883. The Spree drifted about at the mercy of a storm for two days. Mr. Moody assembled the passengers and crew on the deck and then prayed for the storm to cease. The waves quieted while the prayer was going on. Mr. Moody ever afterward said that the prayers did it.—N. Y. World.

Old People Made Young.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Heart trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism, by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion, and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It is a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." Only 50cts, at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, J. G. Oelsner's, Florence, and M. J. Crouch's, Union.

Rome went into the colonial business quite extensively centuries before England or William McKinley were ever heard of. Rome is too dead to skin, and she's been in that fix a pow'ful long time.—Kansas City Times.

"HAIL COLUMBIA."

"Hail Columbia!" was written to help out a young singer and actor named Fox, who was to have a benefit at a Philadelphia theater. He had been a school friend of Joseph Hopkinson, LL. D., then a young lawyer of twenty-seven. The time was the summer of 1798. War with France seemed inevitable. Congress was in session at Philadelphia, and the people of the United States were divided into two parties, one favoring France and the other leaning toward England. It was not an auspicious occasion for a young actor to make a hit by singing a political song, especially if, as in this case, he wished to please everybody. The staff at the theater composed verses until they dreamed in metre, but could hit upon nothing which would not offend one or the other party. It was Saturday afternoon, and the benefit was to take place on the following Monday night. The theatrical corps ground out a final grist of verses, but all were unsatisfactory. Then Mr. Fox went to his school friend Hopkinson, told him his troubles, and asked for help. He wanted a patriotic song which could be sung to the tune of the "President's March," and would so to speak, rub everybody the right way. Hopkinson promised to see what he could do, and the next afternoon "the song, such as it is," was ready. So says Mr. Hopkinson himself in a letter about the affair. The song contained no reference to England or France, and was received with the greatest enthusiasm. Its enduring success surprised no one so much as its author, who said that its only merit was "that of being truly and exclusively patriotic. Mr. Hopkinson became a prominent jurist. He died in Philadelphia in 1842 at the age of seventy-one years.

The Court of Appeals has decided a very important case to the tobacco growers of the State. The Farmers Tobacco House sued G. C. Minor, of this county, for the sum of $303 balance of amount of money advanced him on his tobacco crop after the sale of the crop at the warehouse in Louisville and deducting of commissions and cost of sale.

Minor plead the statue law which makes it unlawful to charge commissions, which is as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to charge the seller anything by the way of commission or otherwise, for paying him the money for which his tobacco sold." Penalty—"For a violation of this law the offender shall be liable in the sum of $25 to $100 to the party aggrieved for each offense.

The warehouse company had charged Minor commission on each sale. The lower court rendered judgment in favor of the defendant in the sum of $25 on each sale, total on 12 sales being $300. It was appealed by the Warehouse Company and the Court of Appeals affirmed the decision of the lower court.

The law has always been a dead letter for the reason that so few growers have ever plead it, but now as it has been called to the attention of the public it may be that an effort will be made on the part of the growers to see that it is enforced.—Owen News.

A Prominent Chicago Woman Speaks.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I found it was pleasant to take and it relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered, saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I will never be without this splendid medicine again." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Believue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

Legislative.

Representative Stephens presented to the House, one day last week, a petition signed by a large number of farmers asking that a law be passed permitting the sheriff to arrest without a warrant, persons found hunting on lands of another.

The Chinn school book bill has been introduced in the legislature again.

A bill to reducc the salaries of State officers has made its bieunial appearance in the legislature.

Secretary Gage would feel lonely if he did not have something on hand to explain.—Chicago Record.

CROP AND STOCK.

In Georgetown, last week several head of mules were sold at from $50 to $100 per head.

A Wischita (Kansas) woman has applied for a divorce from her inconsiderate spouse because he refused to take her to the John R. Gentry-Joe Patchen race.

A shorthorn steer weighing 3,000 pounds was sold last week on the Lousiville market to a local butcher at 7½c per pound, making the total price of the steer $225.

I. S. Collins, of Madison county, sold to G. C. Titus, of Springfield, Ohio, fifty feeders, of 1,000 pounds weight, at 5c, the biggest fall price paid for feeders in 20 years.

Bijon White, a Madison county farmer, will resort to a novel treatment to prevent his cattle from dying of blackleg. He has 160 on his farm and will vaccinate every hoof of his herd.

B. S. Mattingly and Lee Sanders, of Lebanon, Ky., shipped to Atlanta, Ga., five carloads of cotton mules. These mules were purchased of different parties in Marion and Washington counties, at an average price of $80.

The Texas mules on the Britsh transport, bound for South Africa, died at the rate of 20 a day soon after the sailing from New Orleans. Seventy dead mules were thrown overboard before reaching the Barbados.

The Board of Directors of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association met at Lexington Wednesday afternoon and accepted the transfer of the $10,000 Louisville Prize for foals of 1898, to be trotted in 1901, to Lexington Association. This indicates that there will be no racing by the Louisville Association in the near future. Secretary Frank Kenney, formerly Paris, will remain in Louisville some time yet closing up various matters. He has already several proposals from other tracks and will probably locate himself advantageously, as men with his undoubted qualifications as a Secretary are in demand.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Col. J. D. Lillard sold his Pink Ridge farm of 170 acres to George Roland for $17 per acre.

The Baptist Sunday school seems to be in a flourishing condition. The largest membership present for a long time was there last Sunday, and the interest was good.

Kentucky's outlook for wheat is unusually favorable; in some localities, however, Hessian fly has damaged the early sown, but the amount thus injured is small. About the usual acreage has been put in and the almost universal opinion is that the wheat crop never was in better condition at this time of the year.

Candidates for the various county officers are beginning to spring up as mushrooms do after a fresh April shower. There are already 5 duly announced candidates for Jailer, and others are seriously contemplating shying their castors in the fight. Candidates are also being mentioned by their friends and themselves in connection with some county offices. Every race promises to be filled, and just here let us remark that our columns are open for announcements and we guarantee the largest circulation in Owen county.

The readers of the Journal who are troubled with rats and mice wasting corn, can get rid of them in a short time if they will use the following methods in cribbing: When you have covered the crib floor all over about one foot deep in corn, take about one-half gallon of air-slaked lime to every one hundred feet of floor and sprinkle it evenly over the corn out well at the sides of the crib. Then for about every foot in height you fill the crib, sprinkle lime heavily just around the edges of the corn. When the rats enter the crib the lime getting into their eyes makes them so unhappy that they soon leave the premises. A bushel of lime used right will keep rats out of 1,000 bushels of corn. I have used it and it works to perfection and the lime is entirely harmless to stock.—W. I. Short, in Journal of Agriculture.

HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

A monarch am I—a king!
And my kingdom is more than great
With a wealth untold
Of jewels and gold
That would rival a potentate.

A monarch am I—a king!
And I rule by a right divine,
An autocrat bold,
My treasure I hold
As a gift from the gods of Time.

A monarch am I—a king!
Though ermine or purple rare
Ever covers my breast,
For in rags I'm dressed,
And my throne is an old arm-chair.

Yes, I'm a monarch—a king!
But my kingdom—a woman's heart—
Who cares if by stealth
Love's turned into wealth
With the jewels that smiles impart.

We hold councils of state
When enthroned in our old arm-chair;
We wonder and dream
Why realities seem
So different from castles in air.

Away with thoughts of a crown,
Who'd wish to be monarch or king,
When poverty's choice
Is a heavenly voice
That can charm and worship and sing?

The starlight sleeps in her eyes,
The darkness of night on her hair,
Fair blushes of morn
Out her cheeks are born,
No rose with her lips can compare.

Who wouldn't be monarch or king
For a kingdom—a woman's heart—
The jewels and gold
That monarchs may hold
Could never such pleasures impart.

LANGLEY'S BURGLAR.

By Kenneth F. Harris.

HE WAS a clean, venerable-looking old fellow, with a snowy white tuft of hair on his chin and a pair of steel-rimmed spectacles astride of a nose that was colored just a trifle deeper than the rest of his face. His expression was mild and benevolent. A folded rule was sticking out of his waistcoat pocket and a thick, stubby pencil protruded from his ear, and he carried a piece of hammer and a weather strip. "Good-morning, marm," he said, as Mrs. Langley opened the kitchen door. "I'm the carpenter."

"Oh!" said Mrs. Langley, vaguely.

"The agent sent me to look at the windows and see what was needed for them," pursued the old man.

"Not our windows, surely," said Mrs. Langley. "There's nothing in the world the matter with them. There must be some mistake."

"It's the casings I want to look at," explained the carpenter. "I want to see whether the weather stripping is set tight or if it wants new anywhere. We're going to have a cold winter, once it starts, and we don't want to have you freezing to death." He looked so particularly benevolent as he said this that Mrs. Langley felt quite grateful. She invited him in and he inspected the kitchen windows, the bedroom and parlor windows, and even the transoms. He did everything in a very conscientious, painstaking fashion, and it was nearly half an hour before he folded up his rule and took up his hat to go.

"There ain't really much to do," he said, with a modest air of deprecating his efforts in Mrs. Langley's behalf in order to stem an anticipated flood of thanks. "I guess there's about an hour's work altogether. That there door is sprung quite bad, and I might as well fix that with the rest. Let the tail go with the hide—that's what I say. There's no use spoiling the ship to save a pot o' pitch. He didn't tell me to fix the door, but I ain't a man that likes to do things by halves."

Mrs. Langley commended these sentiments.

"Now, marm, if you'll let me know what day to come I'll fix it so'st I won't have to bother you when it's not convenient," concluded the old man. "I don't like to come in with my tools cluttering up a house when a lady ain't expectin' me. How'm I goin' to know but she's got company, or something of that sort?"

Mrs. Langley said he was the most considerate man she ever saw.

Langley was suspicious from the start. "Told you the agent sent him round, did he?" he asked. "That does settle it! The agent! Sent a carpenter around! Unsolicited—actuated by a kind concern for our comfort! I didn't go down on my knees half a dozen times to implore him to have those windows fixed. I didn't finally take a big club and go round to his office and make threatening demonstrations. No, he thought some of us might sit in a draught and catch cold, so he sent a man to fix it so we couldn't. That's the worst I ever heard."

"Sounds kind of fishy," said Plummer, who was over for the evening.

"What would the man want to come around for if he wasn't sent?" asked Mrs. Langley. "He said the agent sent him most distinctly and positively. He wouldn't say a thing like that and go to all that trouble unless it was so."

"What have you missed since he went away?" asked Plummer.

"What have I— Why, you don't mean — No! that would be absurd. He couldn't have taken anything without my seeing him. I was with him the whole time. Besides, he wasn't at all that kind of a man."

"Do you mean that he wasn't ticketed as a burglar? That don't signify anything; he might have swallowed his tag."

"I guess I can tell a burglar when I see one, anyway," said Mrs. Langley, indignantly. "This man was as nice and pleasant and chatty as he could be."

"Some of the most confirmed and inveterate burglars I have known have been pleasant, chatty men," remarked Langley.

"When the enterprising burglar's not a-burgling he loves to lie a-basking in the sun," quoted Plummer.

"I think you are both of you absurd," said his wife. "If he had been a burglar why wouldn't he have stolen something while he was in the house? An other thing: He wouldn't have spoken about the broken fastening on the pantry window and said he would bring a new one."

"That's easily explained," remarked Langley. "He probably thought there was a chance that we would put on a new fastening ourselves if he didn't say that he would. He wanted to make sure of an opening."

"An opening for a person of experience," added Plummer.

"That's the idea exactly. I think we can make up our minds that we are going to have what they call a nocturnal visitor. I distrust these philanthropic persons with silvery whiskers."

"Were there any valuables in sight, Mrs. Langley?" asked Plummer.

"There was my watch on the dressing table and my bracelet and things, and there was baby's little silver mug and the cream pitcher and the rest of the things on the sideboard. I couldn't go round and gather up everything before I brought him in. I wouldn't have let him in at all if I hadn't known he was all right."

"How did you come to know he was all right?" asked Langley.

"Because," answered his wife, conclusively.

Langley, however, refused to be convinced. He felt rather nervous about leaving his wife alone the next morning, and borrowed Plummer's little 22-caliber revolver, which he wanted her to carry in her pocket. His own pistol was a wide-muzzled, stubby affair, that held flat, squat cartridges calculated to stop an elephant in his rush. Mrs. Langley said she guessed she would manage to get along without any of those horrible things.

Later in the day Langley was inspired by the recollection that he paid taxes and was entitled to police protection. He thereupon called up his precinct police station and informed the captain of his fears. The line was working unusually well, and he could hear the captain quite plainly. That functionary seemed to take the same view of the matter as Langley did. He said he thought he recognized the description of the self-styled carpenter, whom he believed to be the leader of a dangerous gang. He assured Langley that he would have the house watched.

When Langley returned home that evening he saw a man strolling along on the other side of the street and looking so supernaturally unconcerned and casual that anybody would have known he was a plain-clothes man on guard. This gave Langley a certain sense of security, but at the same time rendered him decidedly nervous. Plummer was not around or Langley would have asked him to stay all night.

Langley told his wife what the police captain had said. He was unwilling to alarm her, but he felt that what he called her "cock-sureness" needed some rebuke. For some reason, however, she did not seem to be impressed, and she laughed at him in a particularly aggravating way when he balanced a tea tray and a couple of flatirons against the pantry window.

It was about midnight when the trap was sprung. It went off with a crash, clatter and bang that brought Langley sitting bolt upright in bed with his heart beating like a trip hammer, before he perfectly realized what had happened. There was an instant of awful and profound stillness. Then Langley heard his wife's voice. She said:

"I thought that would happen. The cat has knocked down that arrangement of yours, William."

Langley deigned no reply, but lifted himself cautiously out of bed, and groping for his revolver, found it and stole softly and fearfully down the noisily creaking stairs.

He reached the pantry at last and found his tray and the flatirons on the floor. A cold current of air that instantly communicated its chill to his spinal column told him that the window was open. Slowly and cautiously he peered out.

A subdued cough came from the back yard, and Langley drew his head back with a suddenness that brought it into violent contact with one of the pantry shelves. He felt the bump later, but hardly noticed the shock at the time.

Reproaching himself for cowardice he nerved himself for the effort, and, again looking out of the window, he called: "Who's there?" the pulsations in his throat imparting a tremor to his voice.

"We're police officers," came the reply, and two shadowy forms loomed up from the darkness. "Sorry we disturbed you, but we were trying the windows and knocked something over."

"I believe you did," said Langley, bitterly.

"It wasn't anybody," said Langley, returning to his room.

"What is it?" asked his wife, sleepily. "I wish you'd go to bed and quit spooking around, William. Of course there wasn't anybody; I knew that perfectly well."

"I'd like to know how you knew it," said Langley, cowering beneath the bed clothes and shivering.

"I'd have told you before if you hadn't acted so smart about it," replied Mrs. Langley. "I went around to the agent's this afternoon and he said he had sent the man around. He was just as nice— Why, William Langley, I'd be ashamed." — Chicago Daily Record.

SECRETARY GAGE'S BLUNDER.

Even the Republican Press Is Up in Arms Over His Financial Policy.

There can no longer be any doubt of the fact that Mr. Gage has irreparably damaged the administration of which he is part by his action in designating the National City bank of New York as the general depository for revenue collections.

The severity of the blow which he has struck is best shown by the manner in which leading republican newspapers have received it. The Chicago Tribune characterizes it as "foolish," and says:

"A policy of governmental interference in financial affairs for the benefit of stock market speculators is not viewed with favor by the public. It prefers that the government should remain neutral. This preference is shared by the Tribune. It believes it neither right nor expedient for the government to attempt to bolster up a sagging stock market by exhibiting gross favoritism to a particular bank. It is too big a contract. The government may be harmed more than the stock market is helped."

The Journal, of the same city, says Mr. Gage has done the administration more harm than any of its enemies, and the Inter Ocean follows:

"Should Mr. Gage resolve to quit the cabinet and the service of a people which good-humoredly but firmly declines to regard him as a financial genius, no one outside the diminishing mugwump coterie would lament his departure; the republican party would feel a sense of relief, and the nation would proceed upon its way rejoicing."

The Philadelphia Press, of which the postmaster general is the inspiration, gets at the heart of the deposit deal when it says that "if the privilege of receiving these deposits is wanted, it is because it is valuable; if it is valuable, the privilege should be paid for, whether it is held by one bank in one city or by several banks in several cities." The Providence News approves of "the storm of criticism," in which it is indorsed by the Baltimore American, and the Milwaukee Sentinel declares "that the prejudice against loaning the public funds to banks at present is too strong to be disregarded." Even the Boston Traveler feels called upon to protest, and the Bangor Commercial feels that "it is a gigantic job." Thus we might go on indefinitely in showing how Mr. Gage has stepped off the line, and with protests from republican newspapers against his action.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Toga and the Man.

Senator Hanna has caused to be published a complaint against the newspapers for paying too much attention to him. He says: "They forget that I am a member of the United States senate, a position which should carry dignity with it." Mr. Hanna is both right and wrong in respect to this matter. The position of United States senator should indisputably carry dignity with it, and, just as indisputably, it does carry dignity with it if the person who occupies the position is himself a man of dignity. But if he lack those characteristics which become the occupant of the great office of senator, or if he himself be not dignified, it cannot clothe him with dignity. The dignity depends upon the man inside the toga, not upon the toga or the seat in the senate. If he is a wise, pure statesman, not a mere politician; if he has patriotism, is zealous in safeguarding the public weal; if he puts country before party and the people's interest before his own, no senator of the United States will have cause to complain that the newspapers do not honor him as a senator or recognize his senatorial dignity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TIME TO COOL OFF.

President McKinley Has Been Getting Up Too Much Steam for the People.

Mr. McKinley has been at Manila a year and four months. He has had undisturbed possession. Under the protection of scores of thousands of oayonets he has had the fullest opportunity to put into practice his "benevolent assimilation."

What is the result of this intimate intercourse? A general uprising of the people plotted and only prevented by a lucky chance; the garrison of Manilla doubled to overawe the people.

He has been practising what may be called a more "strenuous" sort of "benevolent assimilatioa" in the outlying districts for 11 months. He has swept the towns and the rural districts of Luzon with fire and sword.

Result: He can show himself only where he is protected by a circle of bayonets; guerrilla warfare in the north; insurgent armies in the south.

Mr. McKinley has spent upon his war:

In appropriated money	$200,000,000
In debts which congress is expected to pay	50,000,000
In American lives	1,223

Mr. McKinley has got "the open door" in China, without killing anybody, by the expenditure of a few dollars in telegrmph tolls and postage. What more do we want in the Philippines than the opportunity for Americans to develop the commercial possibilities of the islands and use them as depots for the oriental trade? These objects and all the naval stations and a protectorate, if we wish it, could all have been gained, can all still be gained, without bloodshed, without taxing the American people, without giving the world the melancholy spectacle of a democratic republic's president denying that human beings have human rights.

Because Mr. McKinley started wrong, because he has gone on from folly to folly, is that any reason why the American people should continue to tolerate his blunderiag in the costly effort to imitate England at her worst?

Does not the superheated Mr. McKinley need a vigorous cold douche of American common sense? — N. Y. World.

POINTS IN BREAD MAKING.

Regulation of the Oven Is an Important Item—The Flour and Mixing.

In baking bread the temperature of the oven is of primeval importance. There are countless intelligent housekeepers who have never mastered the moods and tenses of an oven. They religiously go through the setting, rising and kneading processes, then commit their loaves to the oven, uncertain whether they will have "good luck" with their bread or will turn it out hopelessly slack baked or with a crust charred beyond redemption. The professional baker has no such doubt. He must know what is to be the result of his baking. He knows that for baking square loaves the temperature of his oven should register 390 degrees Fahrenheit, for the long French loaves 400 degrees Fahrenheit. The square loaves should be in the oven ten minutes before browning, while the long loaves, like biscuit, should brown almost immediately. The average novice has but one idea of baking—a blazing oven. Nothing could be more erroneous or disastrous to her efforts. If the oven is too hot a thick crust is produced, forming a nonconducting cover to the loaf. This prevents the heat from penetrating the interior, and an unbaked center, that foe to good digestion, is the result. A bread oven is a medium hot, oven. There are several ways of testing the oven without a thermometer. If flour thrown on the floor of the oven browns quickly without taking fire the heat is sufficient.

The old notion that you should not watch anything in the oven is erroneous, and the amateur cook is advised to look at her bread often until experience teaches her just how to regulate the fire and oven. Better bake too long, putting a paper over the top to prevent a burned crust, than not long enough. When well baked an empty, hollow sound will follow a tap with the fingers, and the crust feels firm. At the end of the allotted time remove the bread from the oven, take from the pans and tip up against the bread bowl so that the air may circulate freely about it. Never leave the loaves in the pans or on a pine table to sweat or absorb the odor of the wood. If you like the crisp crust do not cover the loaves when cooling, but if you prefer the soft, tender consistency, wrap in several thicknesses of cloth. When perfectly dry put into a well-aired tin bread box and keep well covered.

To make four ordinary sized loaves of white bread or six small French loaves, pour one pint of boiling water into one pint of milk and add a small tablespoonful of lard and one of sugar. When lukewarm add a teaspoonful of salt and a compressed yeast cake dissolved in a quarter cupful of warm water. Mix and stir in sufficient flour to make a soft dough. This will usually be about 2½ quarts of flour. Turn on a board and knead until soft and elastic. Put back in bowl, cover and stand in warm place (75 degrees Fahrenheit) for three hours or until it has doubled its bulk. Form into loaves, put in greased pans and again set in warm place (75 degrees) for an hour or until again doubled. Bake in moderate oven for one hour if square loaves; one-half hour if French.

In the achievement of the perfect loaf the flour is the first item to be considered. Good flour should be of a yellowish white tinge, rather granulated, and free from bran. When made into a dough it should be strong, elastic and easy to be kneaded. All flour should be kept in a cool, dry place, as dampness causes it to absorb moisture, and the gluten loses its tenacity, causing the grain of the bread made from it to become much conrser. After selecting the flour, the next important thing is to have a good, strong, sweet and pure yeast. Compressed yeast cakes are good and convenient and will do the work much more quickly than ten times the amount of homemade or baker's yeast.

Bread made with unskimmed milk needs no other shortening, but water bread when shortened is made more tender. The shortening, butter, lard or dripping, may be rubbed into the flour or melted (preferably) in the warm liquid. Too much shortening checks the rising by clogging the glutinous cell walls. One tablespoonful of shortening will be quite sufficient for the pint of wetting. If sugar is used, a tablespoonful of that will suffice. One tablespoonful of salt is also required for the pint of wetting. In mixing the dough all the flour may be added at first and the dough raised in a mass, or a soft batter may be made with half the flour, and when this has well risen the remainder of the flour may be added, and the whole allowed to rise again. The latter method is preferable when the sponge is set at night or when there is any doubt about the quality of the yeast. A point in favor of kneading at once, however, is that each time bread rises it loses some of its nutritive qualities.—Washington Star.

Oyster Pie.

Boil a small sweetbread and cut it in slices. Open two dozen oysters, reserving their liquor. Make a crust of half a pound of flour, a pinch of salt and three ounces of beef drippings boiled in half a cup of water. When the crust is nearly cold block it in the form of a standing pie. Lay the sweetbread and oysters in it in alternate layers. Add a dash of pepper, the juice of half a lemon and sufficient oyster liquor to moisten the contents of the pie. Put a cover on the pie and set it in a cool place for a few hours before baking. Dissolve two teaspoonfuls of gelatine in a little cold water. Bring half a pint of cream to a boil, add the strained oyster liquor, a little pepper and a pinch of ground mace. Make a hole in the top of the pie as soon as it is baked, and pour the prepared cream into the pie. It should be given plenty of time to set before being cut.—Ladies' World.

PICKING WINNERS.

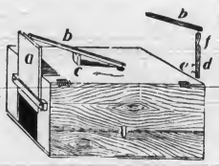
According to This Account Is Always Easy to a Man Who Is Flat "Broke."

"The case with which a fellow can pick the winners when he is broke is one of the most extraordinary and mysterious things in the world," said a veteran turfman. "Science can't explain it any more than it can explain why you are certain to lose if you meet a cross-eyed man on your way to the betting ring, but at the same time everybody knows it to be a fact. I remember on one occasion I attended a winter meet in New Orleans, purely as a matter of pleasure and not intending to frivol much with the poolbox. The old St. Charles was then standing, and the first man I met when I walked into the big poolroom in the basement was a chap from New York, who, for some reason I never learned, was known as 'Johnny the Oyster.' As soon as he saw me he got excited, and taking me over into a corner began to explain how he had been picking four or five winners out of every card since the racing began. Of course, I had heard plenty of such tales before, but his earnestness was impressive, and when I looked over his greasy memorandum book I saw he had really been doing exactly what he claimed. It was marvelous, amazing. I never saw such a string of marvelous forecasts in my life. He almost wept as he read them over, and finally he pulled out a stubby pencil and a programme for the following day. 'Just to show you this is no fake,' he said, 'I'm going to check off to-morrow's winners, and after you see for yourself that I know what I'm talking about I'd like to have a small stake.' I put the card in my pocket, and next day, without letting Johnny know anything about it, I put up a ten-dollar note on each proposition he checked off. Every last one of them lost, and I dropped altogether $130. Later on I met my man wandering disconsolately about the pavement. 'Well, old sport,' I said, 'how did they come out?' 'I can't understand it,' he replied, moodily. 'It's the first time such a thing has happened since I've been in town, but to tell you the truth, I missed on the whole layout.' By way of comment I handed him the bunch of pool tickets. He looked them over, turned on his heel and walked off without a word. Next day he was picking winners again, the same as ever, but he said nothing more about a stake."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Fruit Trees in France.

The cultivation of fruit trees along the highways of France is not only very extensive, but is becoming more extended each year. This new cultivation has now become an important branch of national industry. In France the production of these trees is estimated at $60,000,000 annually. Some 20 years ago the picturesque roads of the northeast of France were lined with poplars. These were ornamental enough, but their roots spread so far and wide that they rendered the adjacent meadows sterile. This made the farmers so angry that they got their saws and axes and cleared the roadways of these obnoxious trees. In their place they planted a small plum, which was not as beautiful but much more useful. Now thousands of baskets of this fruit are shipped to Paris daily.—N. Y. Journal.

Guilt and Women.



Statistics show that man bears false witness 160 times to a woman's 17; man for forgery and counterfeit coining was convicted 100 times to a woman's 11; in France women are summoned before the tribunals four times less then men. Taking the whole of Europe, women are five times less guilty than men.—N. Y. Herald.

EFFECTIVE SKUNK TRAP.

It Is Not Difficult to Construct and Will Do All That Can Be Expected of It.

Skunks are a nuisance about a farmhouse or barnyard, and where they get into the habit of raiding the chicken yards, must be gotten rid of at any cost. Often they are allowed to make and occupy nests in the vicinity of the barn or house and remain undisturbed on account of the disagreeable consequences an interference would bring about. The average man would rather board the lion in his den than risk an encounter with a skunk. A pair of these animals made their abode beneath the floor of a neighbor's summer kitchen, and as the floor was not tight got into the habit of coming into the room above. The farmer captured them by use of the trap shown in the illustration.

A small-sized dry goods box, not so large but it can be easily carried, is fixed with a trap door, which is attached to a lever connected with a trigger in such a manner that when sprung the door will drop. The box can be carried with its captive to a safe distance, where the odor will not be disturbing, and the prisoner shot or dispatched by a trusty dog.

The illustration shows the trap ready set. The trap door, n, is attached to a lever, b, which rests on a fulcrum at c. The other end of the lever is fastened to the trigger, d. The trigger passes through the top of the box, the notch, f, catching on the edge of the hole in the box, which should be large enough to give plenty of play. The trigger stick should be long enough to reach within an inch of the bottom of the box, where the bait, e, is fastened. A hinged door in the side of the box makes the last act easy—that of dispatching the entrapped animal. If the box is carried carefully, there is no danger of the skunk opening hostilities until immediate danger threatens him.—Orange Judd Farmer.

BEES AND GRAPES.

The Honey-Makers Suck the Juice of the Ripe Fruit Only After It Has Burst Open.

The question whether bees puncture grapes has been discussed from various standpoints for a good many years, and the conclusions reached by most thinkers and investigators on the subject are that bees do not puncture grapes, but suck the juice of grapes only after they have been burst open or been bitten by birds. Prof. R. L. Taylor, of the Michigan experiment station, has conducted some experiments that would seem to put the question at rest. His observations were that the bees worked only on the Delaware and Lady grapes, varieties that burst open badly in wet seasons. Prof. Taylor placed 1,000 sacks on clusters of 13 different varieties of grapes so that the bees could not get at them. Toward the close of the experiment it was found that the grapes inclosed in sacks were suffering more than those that were left uncovered, and many of the grapes had burst open. The experimenter concluded that the sucking away of the juice of the grapes by the bees is a direct benefit rather than an injury, in that these juices are prevented from flowing upon sound grapes, and thus increasing the amount of the injury by the cracking of the skin.—Farmers' Voice.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Good stalk, good corn.

A farmer's children ought to be the finest in the world. Some of them are.

The keep-out-of-debt doctrine is preached by most but practiced by very few.

Heavy money bags often pull a young man down; an education usually lifts him up.

One of the very best things a farmer can keep is a thrifty, healthy flock of sheep.

"I can't boom the market," said Farmer Hardhead, "but I can lower the cost of the crop."

Cautious John treats new ideas like a new kind of cake. He watches his neighbors when they try it and then nibbles a bit around the edge.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Wheat Straw for Feed.

Wheat straw alone is not considered valuable as food, but if cut and fed with grain it may be given with advantage to steers. It is not advisable to change the food of cows for one that is deficient in quality to that which they may be receiving. Wheat straw contains about 37 per cent. of sugar, starch, etc., 3 per cent. of mineral matter, nearly 4 per cent. of albuminoids and between 2 and 3 per cent. of fat. Cows will sometimes eat it at the stack from choice, even when well supplied with other foods.—Prairie Farmer.

THE HORSE'S STOMACH.

It Is Small and That Is Why Hay and Other Bulky Foods Should Be Fed Sparingly.

Where hay is plentiful, as it is on most farms, the fact that the horse has a small stomach seems to be forgotten. Where on the contrary hay is scarce and high as in the large cities the feeding of hay is much better understood. To allow any working horse to eat hay ad libitum is positive cruelty in that it is injurious to the horse, as this animal is not provided with a large storage apparatus as is the cow for the stowing away of fodder by the hundred pounds. This being the case a great quantity of hay consumed by a working horse, say at the noon hour, merely becomes a burden and eventually leads to indigestion. It is not digested in the stomach (which in the horse holds but three and a half gallons) but in the large intestines to which also most of the water goes when imbibed, passing through the stomach and of course washing out part of the solid contents present in that receptacle. On farms where people use very early hay may be fed with advantage in small quantity if given, say at five a. m. and the oats ration at six a. m., as time has been given for the hay to pass into the intestines. There can, however, be no advantage in feeding hay at noon as the working horse cannot digest it but carries it around at work until evening comes, when it can be taken care of by the digestive apparatus. The proper time to allow a full feed of hay is at eight o'clock at night, two hours after the horse has eaten his oats, and so far as hard worked horses are concerned, and more especially in the heated term of midsummer, this is the only time hay should be allowed. It is absurd and detrimental to allow any horse to stand and "hog" hay all day long, and worse still if dozens of ears of corn are added to the ration. Even an idle horse needs but little hay—not over 14 pounds per day where other good foods are given. The horse's stomach is small, as has been said, and he needs and should have concentrated food in small quantities at short intervals. We seldom find a case of "heaves" appear in a city barn where horses are properly managed. It is peculiarly a disease of the farm fed horse and it is due to continued overburdening of the stomach and intestines with bulky, dry, coarse fodder and hay which are also too often moldy or full of dust. Many of the other ailments of the horse are also due to the same cause, together with lack of exercise and too much corn. Feed sound food to the horse in small quantities often, prefer oats to corn for hard work, always water before feeding, exercise amply every day of the year and give the main feed of hay at night and the farm horse will be healthy and hardy.—Farmers' Review.

STABLE CONVENIENCE.

How the Space Under the Stairway May Be Utilized to Excellent Advantage.

The accompanying illustration shows a very excellent way to utilize the space under the stable stairway. The space under the lowest portion is used for a grain bin, the bottom being sloped toward the front of the bin as indicated by the dotted line, so that one will not have to reach far, even when the bin is nearly empty. The remainder of the space is used for hanging up harnesses, the walls being available for this purpose. The doorway, which is high enough to admit one without stooping, can be closed by a door or by a rough cloth curtain.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Removing Burs from Wool.

To remove burs from the wool in sheep, the better way is to remove the burs from the pasture lot before they mature sufficiently to adhere to the wool. Once they are in, a hard task is on to displace them. There are three ways whereby they can be removed. One is to pick them out with the fingers, holding the wool in such a manner not to pull it direct from the roots, and pull the wool direct from the bur and allow it to drop from the fleece. Another way is to take a pair of sheep shears and clip the wool directly underneath them; this, however, is wasteful. Another method would be to take a pair of long pointed tongs and introduce them between the sheep's body and the bur, grasp firmly, then with a cord or long toothed curry comb rake them out.—E. Logan, in Farm and Home.

Goat Raising in the West.

The climatic condition and food supply of a large part of our mountainous country are admirably adapted to Angora ranges, and there is not a state in the union, east or west, in which they cannot be grown to good advantage. Notwithstanding the inbreeding, cross-breeding and inability to get fresh blood, American ranchmen have improved the stock they had to work with just as they improved the original Merino sheep, and believe they will in time produce a better animal, larger and finer, than the original stock with nearly 3,000 years of history behind it.

Japan has 53,872 Roman Catholics.

The Moravian church in Greenland has transferred its work to the Lutheran Danish church.

Harvard's library has been enriched with Count Paul Riant's collection of books relating to the crusades and the history of the Latin east.

New York has a school in connection with the fire department, where firemen are taught to scale buildings, catch dummies and handle furniture.

In 1853 51 out of every 1,000 marriages in England and Wales were performed by Roman Catholic priests. In 1897 the number had decreased to 41 in every 1,000.

Six new brotherhood banks under the auspices of the Salvation Army have recently been opened in India for the purpose of lending money to poor vil lagers at a low rate of interest.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Temple, London, said the other day that if every curate were a saint, if every dean were beyond reproach and if archbishops were in point of excellence almost archangels, he should still be a strong Protestant evangelical dissenter.

Macaulay declared in the house of commons that if anyone would search the Oxford calendar or the Cambridge calendar for the past 500 years, he would find that the men who had been first in the competition of the schools had been first in the competition of life.

TRUE GREATNESS.

How It Is Distinguished from Learning in Men Who Achieve Eminence.

It is a common error to confound learning with greatness. The fact that a medical student of this day knows more of the science of medicine than Dr. Abernethy did does not prove he is a greater man. The fact that the average sophomore in one of our colleges knows more of the laws of nature, of chemistry, the sciences and of languages than Socrates knew does not prove that the former is the greater man. The fact that the ordinary naval cadet could take a torpedo boat and sink Lord Nelson and the Victory in a few minutes does not prove that the latter is a greater naval commander. John Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" has been read by more people, and will in years to come be read by more people, than any book written by the most learned man of his own or subsequent times, and yet Bunyan was a tinker by trade and was as ignorant of the rules of grammar as he was of the binomial theorem. No one can dispute the genius of Bunyan. Greater inventions and discoveries have been made in our time than were ever made by Jenner or Watts, or Sir Isaac Newton. But it is likely the credit of not one of the great modern inventions can be ascribed to any one man. Morse alone did not invent the magnetic telegraph; Bell did not alone conceive the idea of the telephone, nor was the typesetting machine the exclusive work of one man.

There was among the great men of the past an individuality which distinguishes few living men. The average ability of physicians was as great, perhaps, in Abernethy's time as it is now. And yet he stood high above them, and almost without a rival. The average ability of the United States senator was, perhaps, as great or greater in the last generation than it is to-day. And yet the three great senators, Calhoun, Webster and Clay, stood high above the rest, and if they were in the senate to-day their preeminence would probably be as undisputed. It may be that there are many men now living in the United States who may justly be termed great men, but there are few in any of the walks of life so great that their position is entirely undisputed.—Baltimore Sun.

Tyrolese Courting.

When a young Tyrolese goes courting in earnest he carries with him a bottle of wine, of which he pours out a glass and presents it to the object of his affection. If she accepts it, the whole affair is settled. Very often the girl has not yet made up her mind, and then she will take refuge in excuses, so as not to drink the wine, and yet not refuse it point blank, for that is considered a gross insult, proving that she has been merely trifling with the affections of her lover. She will, for instance, maintain that the wine "looks sour," or that wine disagrees with her. In fact, she makes use of any subterfuge that presents itself at the moment. Shy lovers, loth to make sure of their case beforehand, find it a very happy inspiration. Not a word need be spoken, and the girl is spared the painful "No" of civilization.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Battles and Rain.

It is a curious fact—well known, however, to weather experts—that heavy firing will generally cause rain, even though the sky was clear beforehand. At Waterloo rain came down in torrents. So it did in several of the big battles of the civil war—Gettysburg, for example. The tremendous concussion shakes the little globules of water which are always present invisibly in the atmosphere together, and so brings them down.—N. Y. Sun.

A Hot Retort.

"I dropped in to tell you," said the smart little man, "that I don't propose to pay for the paper you've been sending me for the last five years. You can keep on sending bills long after I'm dead and gone if you think it worth while."

"No," said the editor, quietly, "we can't afford to print your bills on asbestos."—Philadelphia Press.

New Cable Lines.

France is absolutely dependent upon England for news of the Transvaal war, because the cables are under her control, and she is ready to spend a vast sum of money to free herself. This is like many people, who, after allowing dyspepsia to settle upon them, spend a fortune seeking deliverance. Save your money and try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the medicine which never fails to cure dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, malaria, fever and ague.

A Suspicious American Tourist.

The American tourist is so firmly convinced that he is being cheated on all hands during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence. "What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship. "Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk. "That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister. I'll give you five francs for it." "Zen it would be I zat gave ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman, with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know ze young mademoiselle."—Chicago Chronicle.

Cow in a Golf Match.

Ed Tufts, of Los Angeles, was playing golf with a friend recently. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts approached the cow, and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball, and, next by holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven, and claimed the hole. "But I made it in two," protested Tufts, gleefully. "No, you didn't," declared the other; "you made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

☞ All that has been said of Cuticura Soap may be said with even greater emphasis of CUTICURA OINTMENT, the most delicate and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with Cuticura Soap (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in "A SHAMPOO FOR FALLING HAIR, AND ITCHING, SCALY SCALPS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor. Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA Ointment (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, and burning skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Uncle Bill Tanner, having tried farming, blacksmithing and dairying, will take up music now, he having purchased a piano last week.

Colonel John Whitson, of Florence, was in our burg last Saturday The Colonel is in good shape and full of life. He don't claim to be a politician but says he will take an active part in the next campaign.

The Union correspondent came over last Saturday, and entertained the boys at Busby's shop awhile, and after discussing the different and safest ways of traveling, he concluded walking was the safest, and he left his horse and made up a crowd composed of himself and Spencer Smith and walked to Florence and back.

At Spencer Smith's a few nights ago, was a scene of great excitement. Some time during the night there was a terrible flapping and fluttering in the chimney, and when the fire and ashes began to fly over the house, Mr. S. concluded it was time for something to be done, and after investigating he found a turkey that had been roosting on top of the house had fallen down the chimney. This was one of the gobblers that John Surface sold Geo. Smith to tell Henry Rouse that Joe Weaver said belonged to Spencer Smith.

Union has never departed far enough from the paths of order and prosperity to start a brass baud, that we have heard of, and hope it never will.

Mr. Ira Pope, of East Bend, has a long, road to travel from his home to Uniou, but, never fails to be present at the regular meetings at Sardis.

Spencer Smith was enjoying a smoke and reading his paper, one evening recently, at the same time toasting his feet by a good, bright fire, when the sound of flopping wings, flying of ashes, soot and fire disturbed his peace and comfort, forcing a hasty retreat. It was soon settled that something had tumbled down the chimney, and for certain a turkey had done that very thiug. The grate prevented his getting out below. The fire would soon kill him so he was put out, turkey remained in chimney until morning when it was drawn out by the top route with a string.

The funeral services of Mrs. John Baker were conducted by Rev. L. Johnson at the residence, Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The services consisted of songs, reading of Mrs Baker's favorite chapter, 14th of Job, and remarks by Mr. Johnson. We quote his language: "For almost 30 years I have known sister Baker as a consistant christian woman; a quiet, siieut, faithful wife; a devoted mother, and a loyal, earnest friend. Her life has been a laborious one and now she rests from her labors with heaven's richest rewards." For 15 minutes the remarks were continued and went to show how beautifuily the 14th chapter of Job illustrated the christian's life, labors and rewards. Mr. Baker's health was such as to prevent his leaving the house. The remains were interred in the cemetery near Union at 12 o'clock.

We are indebted to Uncle William Tanner for the following items:

Mr. Ira Daughters, of Cincinnati, and Mr. William Dobbins, of this county, started from Covington as the shadows of evening were gathering over the city with a firm determination to be on the shores of Fowler's Fork of Gunpowder sometime before midnight. When they arrived at Highland cemetery they did not make it for a city of the living and want to stay all night in one of the vacant lots, believing it to be a wagon yard with hotel attached, but they did admire its beautiful location as a "city of the dead," and thought that it was better to live in the country on "hog and hominy" than be a citizen of that city with all its magnificence and beauty. The shadows grew thicker and night came on as they passed on to Boone, but the sight of Highland cemetery made lasting impressions upon Mr. Daughter's mind, for they do tell us he saw in every stalk field a cemetery filled with tombstones and in every woods pasture a herd of "spirits" pasading in divers forms and fashions, with arms akimbo and legs bent beneho. In Florence, they did not see spirits that move men to deeds of daring and darkness, so they dared to go on in the darkness, notwithstanding, and when opposite Mr. Pearson's they saw with much difficulty, for no greater distance than a fathom, because the darkness had become very great in the land. On the right was Mr. Pearson's home with its cozy fires, and from the windows were pouring out gleams of light that split the darkness, but they saw it not—for they were looking for cemeteries, and on the right was no other stalk field. In that stalk field Mr. Daughters saw headstones, monuments and all kinds of stones to which he called Mr. Dobbins' attention, and perhaps, asked if they were opposite Highland again? Any way, on to the front they traveled, and came to Mr. Uiy's gate to be "tolled" the right way. In the town of Gunpowder they likely saw equal parts of sulphur, saltpetre, sawdust and sights, for our historian reckoneth not, because he liveth there, but he does reckon that when they got home the old family pum pand platform were imaginated into a new made grave with the monument at its head, and the old homestead that had known and been known by them for so long, was not known at all, until they struck a light and examined every part of it; then Mr. D. said to Mr. D. in the parlance of Mr. T., "we are at home Billy! Billy, we are at home!" and its likely, Billy's reply came back from the depths of a deep hole he had fallen into and sounded like this: "Yes, brother, we are at home again, with a tombstone Arizona reception awaiting us, wearing a grave and serrious aspect for trouble, so the best thing you can do is rest from your labors on the outside of the railence until I kill the prodigal calf and restore the fatted watch dog to his rightful inheritance, a chain and block.

NOTICE OF ELECTION.

Boone County Court, Regular Term December 4th, 1899, Hon. C. C. Roberts, Judge presidiug.

On written application by petition to the Judge of the County Court of this county on November 6th, 1899, filed and made part of the County Court Records, which petition was signed by a number of legal voters in the Burlington Voting Precinct, Boone county, Ky., equal to and greater than Twenty-five per cent. of the votes cast in said precinct at the last preceding general election, which petition asks the County Court to open a poll in said Burlington Voting Precinct on Saturday, Jan. 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington Voting Precinct upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in said precinct, commonly called and known as the Local Option Law, which prohibits the Sale, Barter or Loan of Spirituous, Vinous or Malt Liquors in said Burlington Voting Precinct, shall become inoperative. The petitioners having deposited with the County Judge money sufficient to pay for printing, etc., as the law requires, and the Court being advised, it is therefore ordered by the Court that the Sheriff of this county open a poll in the Burlington Voting Precinct in Boone county, Ky., on Saturday, January 20th, 1900, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters of said district upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in the Burlington Voting Precinct shall become inoperative.

State of Kentucky, }
County of Boone. } Sct.

I, B. W. Adams, clerk of the County Court in and for the county aforesaid, do certify that the foregoing one and one-fourth pages is a true copy of the Order for holding an Election for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in the Burlington Voting Precinct as to whether or not the Local Option Law shall shall remain in force, as appears of record in my office.

Given under my hand, this 6th day of Dec. 1899.

B. W. ADAMS, County Clerk.

Pursuant to the above order, I hereby give notice that an election will be held in Burlington Voting Precinct, Boone county, Ky., on the 20th day of January, 1900, "for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal voters in said Burlington Voting Precinct upon the proposition as to whether or not the Prohibition Law now in force in said precinct, commonly called and known as the Local Option Law, which prohibits the sale, barter or loan of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in said Burlington Voting Precinct, shall become inoperative." Said election will be held at the usual voting place in the town of Burlington in said voting precinct, and the polls will be opened at 7 a. m., and closed at 4 p. m., on January 20th, 1900.

Witness my hand, this 7th day of December, 1899. ELMER BEALL,
Sheriff Boone County, Ky.

We have only one criticism to make on the President's message, and this relates merely to two verbal errors. Whenever Mr. McKinley uses the term "United States" he makes it a singular noun; he also allows himself to speak of the United States as "this nation." Now, as a matter of fact, wherever the term "United States" occurs in the constitution it is a plural noun. Nor was this choice of number a mere accident, as any one will be able to convince himself who shall take the trouble to read the debates in the Federal Convention of 1787. In the course of those debates it was proposed that the Federal Government, then in course of construction, and the several peoples to be embraced under it, should be designated as "a nation." After a prolonged and heated discussion the proposal was voted down by a decisive majority; the word "nation" was thus repudiated. We do not expect newspaper writers or even Congressmen to be letter perfect in the text of the Constitution, much less familiar with the proceedings of the convention that framed it. But our Chief Magistrate, in a state paper, ought not to be capable of using unconstitutional terms. Mr. McKinley ought to know that it would take a constitutional amendment to make the United States a singular noun, or to make the word "nation" applicable to our Union.—Collier's Weekly.

O. P. Conner raised 12,248 pounds of tobacco on 8 acres of land last year.

Considerable tobacco has been received by Hogan & Conner this week.

Thanks to Congressman Berry for seven volumes of the Census Report of 1890.

Much of the weather last week was very fine for ducks, geese and mud roads.

Dogs killed seven and crippled seven sheep for assessor T. G. Willis Sunday morning.

The young people anticipate a very nice time next Friday evening at the Boone House.

Snow came down nicely for a while Saturday morning, but it did not remain on the ground very long.

It will not be long now until T. J. Hughes will have his telephone line in operation from Hamilton to Walton.

The work of sowing tobacco plant beds will engage the attention of the tobacco raisers now as soon as the ground is dry enough.

We have two contributions, one on bridge building and one on the century question which we have to carry over until next week.

A license was issued Monday morning for the marriage of Arnold Bowers and Miss Jennie Lynch, at the Florence M. E. Church to-day.

Reports from the Southern part of the county are to the effect that an effort for a large crop of tobacco this year will be made down there.

Hogan & Conner have bought over 100,000 pounds of tobacco, and have not paid to exceed $8 round, that price for only one crop—that of Walter Lonaker, of Bellevue.

Several of the ladies went from here to the supper given last Friday night, by the ladies of the Erlanger Baptist church. There were several ticket holders in Burlington.

W. Lee Cropper, of Utzinger, has a new rubber storm apron someone left in his buggy by mistake during the recent protracted meeting at Bullittsville. Owner can have same by calling on him for it.

In a few days a petition will be forwarded to the proper authorities at Washington, D. C., asking that Burlington be given a Sunday mail, to leave here at 7 a. m. and arrive at 12 m.

O. J. Ryle gave away, the other day, his secret of telling a horse's age. It is by counting the wrinkles on the animal's eyelids. He tried it only once for the edification of several persons, and missed the horse's age only 17 or 18 years.

Henry Clore, the good natured general merchant, of Bellevue, was in town, Thursday, and looked like he had been well fed this winter. He said it would not be long before the Odd-Fellows' lodge of that place would move to its new and commodious home.

There will be services at the Methodist Church morning and eveuing on the fourth Sunday instead of the third Sunday in this month. Having to be present at the Second Quarterly meeting at Taylorsport on Saturday and Sunday, the 20th and 21st makes the change of Sundays necessary.

The Mother's Favorite.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite. It is pleasant and safe for children to take and always cures. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is the best medicine made for these diseases. There is not the least danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

The supervisors of tax were in session all day, last Friday, hearing from those whose taxable property they had given an increase.

T. B. Mathews appeared for the owners of the distillery property at Petersburg, and after hearing his statement, the supervisors reconsidered their action of the week before and left the value of the property as Mr. Mathews had listed it.

The board was mistaken in the location of the land it had increased, belonging to B. R. Gaines, and did not add the $1,000.

W. H. Metcalf succeeded in getting the supervisors to reconsider $2,000 of $3,000 increase proposed for the T. A. Snyder Preserves Co. at Walton.

The following increases were reconsidered: Elijah Holton, $400; H. C. Heusley, $100; A. G. Wiuston, $1,000; Barnett Utz's estate, $5,000; J. C. Revill, $600. It turned out that P. Grubbs had no house and lot, and Mrs. Aronita Conrad's land was reduced $1,000 instead of increased that amount.

AN APPEAL

To the voters of the Burlington precinct:

We, the ladies of Burlington and immediate vicinity, wish to make an earnest appeal to you in behalf of our homes and ourselves. Many of us remember the time whn the liquor traffic was carried on in our town. Then drunkenness, fighting and disorder were common on our streets. The greatest curse of the world was then upon us. When the Local Option became operative there was a wonderful change for the better. The curse was removed, and drunkenness and disorder are not common in our town now, and ladies can go unattended in safety about our streets since saloons were removed, but an effort is being made to bring this great evil upon us again, and for the good of our town and precinct and the children now growing up, and our families and ourselves, we beg you to come to our rescue next Saturday, as good and loyal citizens, and, with your ballots, overthrow the effort now being made to reestablish in our midst this most prolific source of sorrow, this most blighting curse, the liquor traffic:

Beat Out of an Increase of His Pension

A Mexican war veteran and prominent editor writes: "Seeing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Choiera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I am reminded that as a soldier in Mexico in '47 and '48, I contracted Mexican diarrhoea and this remedy has kept me from getting an increase in my pension for on every renewal a dose of it restores me." It is unequalled as a quick cure for diarrhoea and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Burlington School.

The Primary History class surpassed the teacher's expectations. There are five boys in this class, four of them were present, Henly Smith, Shelby Cowen, William Ryle, Edward Bentler. Each boy answered every question put to him.

During the past four months Jo Revill Furnish has advanced from the First to the Third Reader; Laura Porter and Warren Lassing, from Primer to Second Reader. All the other pupils in the Primary Department have done exceedingly well in all their studies. Special attention has been given to writing in this department, with good results.

The children in the intermediate and more anvanced grades did better work than they have done any month during the school. In civil Government, of which Jesse Kirkpatrick, Mabel Vest, Jas. Allphin and Newton Sullivan are members, but one question was missed in the entire review. Miss Mabel is the only female member of the class, and she has prepared her lessons so that she led the boys a lively chase, but they are manly fellows and worked with a will.

In the arithmetic class in which Thos. Rice, Wilbert Westbay, Cecil Gaines, Mabel Kirtley, Effie Clore, Alice Eddins, Lucy Kirkpatrick are members, the girls excelled the boys, during the month, 26 marks. But the boys are awake now and will look to their laurels. They are trying to reverse the matter and put the girls in arrears next month.

Honorable mention could be made of the pupils in many of the other classes should time and space permit.

His Wife Saved Him.

My wife's good advice saved my life writes F. M. Ross, of Winfield, Tenn., for I had such a bad cough I could hardly breathe, I steadily grew worse under doctor's treatment, but my wife urged me to use Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me." Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, La Grippe, Pneumonia, Asthma, Hay Fever and all maladies of Chest, Throat and Lungs are positively cured by this marvelous medicine. 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsner, Florence.

M. B. Black, of Big Bone, spent several days in Burlington, last week. "Bunk's" frequent visits to the hub has increased his acquaintance very material up here, and it has been suggested that he would be in the line-up for a minor county office when the time comes.

From personal motives, our Bullittsville correspondent omitted Mrs. E. L. Riley's name in the report of the entertainment at Dr. H. H. Hay's. It was unfortunate, as she was the "main feather in the bunch."

KENNEY-SCOTT.

Wednesday, Jan. 10, 1900.

The trim little Catholic Church, of Florence, which has lately been remodeled, inside and out, was the scene of a fashionable wedding last Wednesday, which united Mr. Lawrence Kenney, of Union, and Miss Una M. Scott, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Scott, of Florence, in happy wedlock. When the nuptial hour had arrived, and the last ray of daylight had been excluded from the little church, the lights in the church were turned on until the whole interior presented a dazzling sea of brightness, which made one feel as though heaven were on earth. Now, while the wedding bells were ringing, and the organ was playing the nuptial march, the happy bridal party arrived at the church door, and were at once led by the ushers to the altar, where Rev. B. J. Kolb, Pastor, awaited them in his priestly attire. In line of the bridal procession came first the ushers, William Scott, jr., and Joseph Scott, jr., who led the bridal cortege to the gates of the sanctuary; next followed the bridesmaid and bridesman, Miss Mary Emma Scott and Mr. John Robert Manion; and finally came the bride and groom, richly dressed for the solemn event, the bride and bridesmaid in handsome white costume. The bride crowned with wreath and veil, looked lovely under the softening influence of the artificial lights. The church was literally thronged with interested friends and relatives. While the organ was still playing the nuptial march, the marriage ceremony was solemnly performed, which was followed by the nuptial High Mass; after which the bridal party was again escorted by the ushers to their carriage, which quickly bore them away to the city. In the evening a grand reception and delicious repast awaited the happy couple in the parental home of the bride. There were over one hundred guests in attendance. Numerous were the presents and tokens of regard to the newly wedded pair, as follows:

Misses Jennie and Fanuie Kenney, toilet set; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Scott, rocking chair; Mrs. B. M. Odenwald, faucy mirror; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Scott, silver sugar bowl; Miss Emma Scott, silver butter knife; Joseph Scott, jr., silver sugar spoon; Louis Scott, pair of vases; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Droege, china cake plate; Johu and Wm. Kenuey, clock; Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, handsome lamp; Miss Lizzie Aylor, beautiful lamp; Johu Manion and sisters, handsome lamp; James Mera, clock; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kruse, table cloth and pair of vases; Miss Emma Bentham, center piece; Mrs. Anna Kenney, staud cover; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Dixon, pair towels; Mr. and Mrs. James Utz, pair towels; Miss Katie Grogan, towels; Mr. and Mrs. A. Bentler, 1 doz. napkins; Mr. and Mrs. Freidman, 1 dozeu napkins and table cloth; Miss Mary Furlong and sister, silver bread tray; Mr. E. H. Blankenbeker and son, silver tea-pot; Miss Emma Welch, silver cream pitcher; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Utz, glass pickle dish; Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Webb, salad bowl; Misses Mary and Nellie Kenney, silver knives and forks; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Russia is planning to build a canal from the Baltic to the Black sea. The length of the canal as surveyed will be 994 miles, but only 125 miles of artificial excavation will be necessary.

Vast quantities of flowers are gathered for perfumery purposes. It is estimated that each year 1,860 tons of orange flowers are used, besides 930 tons of roses, 150 tons each of violets and jasmine, 75 tons of tuberose, 30 tons of cassie and 15 tons of jonquils.

Fruit is now being shipped from New South Wales packed in bark of the ti tree, and the outer bark of the melaucua leucadendron, which is shredded into a sort of coarse chaff. These barks seem to have some peculiar power of preserving oranges during carriage.

What is know to geographers as the Cordilleras de los Andes is the longest and the highest range of mountains in the world. It extends from Tierra del Fuego to the Isthmus of Panama, and although some of the peaks of the Himalayas are higher, they are not as numerous.

One of the most important epochs in the history of German jurisprudence began on the first day of January, 1900, when the new German law went into effect. Under the new system Germany has a uniform legal procedure applicable to the various states comprising the German empire.

One fourth of the world's output of coal is mined in the United States. Last year 4,000,000 tons were exported, and the trade is growing fast. If it comes to pass that the world will have to look to this country for coal and flour, the position of the nation will be all but impregnable from a commercial standpoint.

"Electricity as we know it" is just 100 years old. In 1799 the Italian scientist Volta gave definite form to the method of producing the current, and it is from his name that we have the term "voltmeter" to describe the instrument which measures the force of the current, and "volt" as the unit of that measurement.

A runaway horse in New York, with vehicle attached, was stopped by a wooden Indian, which, with uplifted arm holding a bunch of wooden cigars, was doing duty in front of a cigar store. The horse took to the sidewalk and the lines became entangled with the Indian's arm. The image being chained to the premises, the horse was brought to a sudden stop.

Among the practical suggestions made at the International Council of Women in London was that of Miss Alice Ayrton, who drew the attention of the sex of which she is a distinguished ornament to a new field of work, that of the manufacture of electrical instruments, the demand for them being very largely in excess of what manufacturers are able to supply.

The latest idea in the way of a portebonheur is to carry a tiny puss of wondrous goldsmith's work swinging as a pendant from the end of your longnette chain. The cat is made of black enamel upon metal. Its eyes have a metallic green gleam. Are they not tiny cat'seyes? The sapient puss wears a collar of brilliants set close about her furry neck. This, it seems, is the very "latest."

A pair of elephant tusks, the largest on record, was found recently in the Kilimandjaro district in Africa and bought for an American museum for $3,500. The larger tusk measures ten feet four inches along the outer curve and weighs 230 pounds; the other is a trifle shorter, and weighs ten pounds less. The record tusk before these was nine feet five inches long, and is now in England.

As a money making business Germany's colonial system is not a prodigious success. The total trade between Germany and her colonies in 1898 was $3,591,500. The government subsidies to assist the colonies and protectorates cost $3,697,000, a loss of more than $100,000, and these figures do not include the expenses at Samoa, nor $300,000 paid to steamship companies, nor yet the expenses of distant naval stations, post routes and telegraph service.

Various fruits are colored on the surface or in their substance to suit the fancy of purchasers in France. For example, strawberries that are unripe are given a red color by means of a fuchsine preparation; ordinary oranges of poor quality are made to pass for blood oranges by injecting roceline in to their pulp; and melons are rendered of a fine orange color by injecting a solution of tropoeline, and at the same time aromatized with an artificial melon essence.

In the 55th congress Maine clearly enjoyed the distinction of having the strongest delegation in the house, but in this congress the Iowa delegation, by common consent, stands at the head. Six out of Iowa's 11 men bring fame to the state, for the remaining five are now in congress for their first term and so can not be considered. These six men are David B. Henderson, William P. Hepburn, J. F. Lacey, Jonathan P. Dolliver, John A. T. Hull and Robert G. Cousins. They are all lawyers and some of them bore arms during the civil war.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Forecast of the Week's Proceedings in Both the Senate and House.

The Philippine Question and the Samoan Treaty Likely to Be Disposed of in the Senate—Routine Work in the House.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The senate probably will resume consideration of the Pettigrew resolution making request for certain information concerning the beginning of the war in the Philippines. This will be succeeded by a speech on the financial bill by Senator Rawlins, of Utah, if the present programme is followed. Senator Pettigrew will continue his speech on the Philippine resolution. After he concludes Senator Berry, of Arkansas, will take the floor for a general speech on the Philippine problem if sufficient time remains.

When the Pettigrew resolution is disposed of the Hoar resolution will supply food for talk each day in the morning hour, and after the Hale resolution concerning the seizure of American goods by Great Britain will be taken up.

It is Senator Aldrich's announced purpose to press consideration of the financial bill each day after the conclusion of the morning hour, but it is not probable that he will succeed in securing a daily speech on the subject. Senator Teller probably will speak some time during this week, after Senator Rawlins concludes. It is also understood Senator Daniel will be heard soon on the question of the finances. Other addresses on this subject will come later.

The consideration of the Samoan treaty in executive session will be resumed if the legislative work permits, and Senators Bacon and Money will make speeches in opposition to it. It is also possible that the report in the Quay case may be presented late in the week.

The house will plunge into the routine work of the session this week. Most of the time, excepting Friday, which has been set apart for paying tribute to the memory of the late Vice President Hobart, will be devoted to the consideration of appropriation bills. It is expected that both the urgent deficiency and the pension appropriation bills will be passed this week. The former, containing as it does many millions for the army and navy, will raise the whole question as to the insurrection in the Philippines, with its allied issues, and lead to a very protracted debate. How far the republican leaders will allow the debate to run has not yet been determined, but if the democrats insist and are persistent, they can hardly refuse them several days, in view of the large amount of appropriations involved.

The pension appropriation bill is also likely to cause some spirited debate owing to the disposition in certain quarters to criticise the conduct of the pension office. Attempts doubtless will be made to legislate upon the bill and secure reversals of some of the pension commissioner's rulings, but as all such legislation is subject to a point of order, it will fail.

There is no present prospect that the Roberts case will get into the house before next week.

MINERS' CONVENTION.

Nearly Five Hundred Delegates Attend the Opening Session of the Indianapolis Meeting.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 15.—Nearly 500 delegates to the national convention of the United Mine Workers of America were present at the opening session and another 100 are expected. The larger delegations here are: Ohio, 90; Pennsylvania, 15; Illinois, 130; Kentucky, 15; Iowa, 10; West Virginia, 20; Indiana, 60.

All of the delegates came instructed to demand an advance in the scale, but there is some difference as to how much will be demanded. Most of the delegations are very reticent on this score. The Indiana delegation decided upon an increase of 15 cents per ton.

In the matter of machine mining it was concluded to stand for a flat differential rate of 7 cents between pick and machine mined coal. This is the Illinois rate and; while the delegates are of the opinion that the operators have a slight advantage even at this rate they will be satisfied if the convention fixes it at this figure. The pick mines will suffer under this rate in slow runs, it is said, and a great many men will be idle, however, the figure named is looked on as being as near an equitable basis as can be reached.

Screens came in for a great amount of discussion, and it was finally determined to demand one and a quarter inch Akron bar screens, 6x15, and while this did not meet the approval of all the delegates an agreement was reached to accept these.

GEN. OTIS' REPORT.

He Tells of the Military Operations in Luson, South of Manila—Several Towns Taken.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Gen. Otis has made a report to the war department in regard to the military operations in Luzon, south of Manila, showing the capture of several towns and a large number of prisoners with arms and ammunition. The message is as follows:

"Manila, Jan. 13.—Continued operations Bates' command south Manila, 37th and 39th regiments, Columbia, commanded by Bullard. On January 1 Bullard, with two battalions 39th, attacked force of insurgents in vicinity driving enemy, capturing town of Cabayuno, following day Binan; enemy's loss 30 killed, large number wounded, 20 prisoners and rifles captured; casualties, 3 men slightly wounded.

January 3 Boyd, three companies 37th, captured Gen. Rizal, official papers and property, three miles east of Los Banos; January 4, Long, detachment 39th, attacked insurgents at Carmona, 25 killed; no casualties. January 9, Bullard, with portions 37th and 39th regiments attacked enemy south of Calumbu, whom he drove beyond Santo Thomas, killing 24, capturing artillery; casualties, 1 private killed, Capt. Baker and Lieut. Pelita, 39th, slightly wounded. January 11, Cheatham, 37th, 106 men, supported by artillery, attacked insurgents two miles west Santo Tomas, driving them from that section; no casualties. Schwan's column, consisting squadron 4th, one of 11th cavalry, 30th, 46th infantry and six Nordenfelds guns, under Capt. Vandusen, seized Binan, Silang and Indang Naic, scattering enemy, who were severely punished. Wheaton's column, three troops 11th cavalry, 4th, 28th, 38th and 45th regiments, Astor and Kenley's batteries, have driven enemy from all important points north of Sland line; had heavy fighting, captured considerable public property, inflicting heavy loss upon and scattering enemy; Schwan's column now moving in northern Batangas in southerly direction. All Cavite province occupied by Wheaton's command; heavy loss to enemy during week in men, ordnance and other property; all operations very successful.

"OTIS."

Manila, Jan. 14.—Advices from Cebu report a sharp fight on January 8, between a battalion of the 19th infantry and a body of insurgents occupying a strong position in the Sudlon mountains. The enemy were routed, the Americans capturing a smooth bore cannon, some rifles and destroying the fortifications. Four Americans were wounded.

The insurgent general, Flores, having established a rendezvous with 100 men at Ilomingan, province of Nueva Viscaya, Capt. Benson with two troops of the 4th cavalry was sent to dislodge him. The insurgents were scattered, their horses captured and the position was burned, the Americans sustaining no losses.

The insurgent forces Friday occupied Magallanes, province of Cavite, capturing 20 insurgents, including a colonel.

MERCHANT KILLED.

Burglar Alarm Awoke Him and on Going to His Store He Was Shot in the Head.

Ravenna, O., Jan. 14.—Edenburg, seven miles east of here, is wild with excitement, burglars having killed N. K. Goss, the leading merchant and most prominent citizen, Saturday morning. Having been the frequent victim of robbers, Mr. Goss connected his store and his residence with a burglar alarm, by which he was awakened about 1 o'clock. Arming himself and securing the assistance of a neighbor he went to the store. They were met at the door by several shots, one of which entered the head of Mr. Goss. He died in about three hours. The burglars, three in number, were last seen going toward Palmyra. A posse is scouring the vicinity.

No Massacre Threatened.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Relative to the reports in circulation some time ago of a contemplated massacre of Armenian Christians at the Vilayet of Harpoot, the state department has received from the United States minister at Constantinople information that no such massacre was threatened. Conditions at Harpoot are reasonably pacific, and no cause exists for alarm on the part of the Christians. The United States legation has been assured by the sultan that the Christians of Harpoot have given no cause for any action on the part of the authorities.

Death of a Medical Inspector.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 15.—Charles A. Siegfried, medical inspector U. S. N., in charge of the naval hospital at Coaster's Harbor Island, died here of pneumonia, aged 50 years. He leaves a widow who was a Miss Farrell, of Peoria, Ill., and a cousin of the late Robert Ingersoll. During the war with Spain Dr. Siegfried was in charge of the naval hospital at Key West. He was appointed from Pennsylvania in 1872.

Panama Canal Scheme Favored.

London, July 12.—The Times, commenting editorially upon the possibility of the United States building the Panama canal, says: "Since the Venezuela boundary dispute has been settled and Anglo-American friendship has been sealed, the Panama scheme is more likely to be carried out than the plan for a Nicaragua canal. England would certainly not be jealous of America if the latter complete the Panama canal, being satisfied that the United States would treat British shipping in a liberal spirit."

ADVANCE OF TROOPS.

Part of the British Forces Cross the Border Into the Free State.

Great Activity at Ladysmith, and Another Battle Is Likely to Soon Take Place—Latest News From South Africa.

Ladysmith, Jan. 12 (By Heliograph)—The besiegers have been quiet for two days, but can be seen in active movement on the distant hills.

We have perceived two small bodies galloping with two machine guns.

The Boer heavy piece on Bulwana hill has not been fired for two days.

Boer Headquarters at Colenso, Thursday, Jan. 11 (via Pretoria, via Lourenzo Marques, Friday, Jan. 12).—Everything points to a great battle within the next few days. Ladysmith for the last two nights has been firing rockets. The object is not known here.

Durban, Jan. 12.—The entire absence of news from Chievely or Frere Camp continues, but there is a persistent rumor that Ladysmith has been relieved.

London, Jan. 15.—A special dispatch from Cape Town, dated Friday evening, January 12, announces that Gen. Warren has crossed the Tugela river.

London, Jan. 15.—The war office issued at midnight a dispatch from Field Marshal Roberts, dated Cape Town, Sunday, January 14, 8:30 p. m., saying: "There is no change in the situation to-day."

The war office simultaneously issued the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, January 13, 3:30 p. m.: "Methuen's cavalry reconnaisance returned on January 11. Went 23 miles into Free State. Country clear of enemy, except patrols.

"All quiet at Modder river.

"French reconnoitered around the enemy's left flank on January 10. Advanced from Sliumger's farm, on January 11, with cavalry and horse artillery to bombard Boer laager cast of Colesberg Junction, but was unable to outflank the enemy.

"Reconnaisance of cavalry and mounted infantry pushed north of Bastard's Nek and examined country north of Ridge.

"Gutacre reports no change.

"All well on December 28 at Mafeking."

If the announcement of Gen. Warren's movement be correct, it is evident that Gen. Buller's forces are spread over a very wide front—perhaps 25 miles—and in the event of a sudden fall of the river, his operations might be full of danger. It is believed that Gen. Buller has no good survey maps of the district. This will add to his difficulties.

Sir Charles Warren's advance probably means an attempt to seize Ilangwane Hill, the main post of the Boers south of the Tugela. Upon the success or failure of these operations depends the whole future of the campaign. Until the result is known Lord Roberts will be unable to decide how to dispose the two divisions and the re-enforcements now arriving.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Modder river, dated January 10, gives a rumor that Kimberley was being bombarded.

Doubts are beginning to be raised whether it will be possible to get together anything like 10,000 yeomanry. Only a very small percentage of the applicants satisfy the standard of riding and shooting.

Modder River, Jan. 11.—Gen. Babington, with two regiments of Lancers, the Victoria Mounted Rifles and a battery of horse artillery, left here on the evening of January 7 (Sunday) and crossed the Free State border on Tuesday. Simultaneous other movements were made. A column under Col. Pilcher went from Belmont to the south of Gen. Babington's route, while a portion of the garrisons of Klokfontein and Honey Nest Kloof, under Maj. Berne, advanced toward Jacobsdal.

Gen. Babington penetrated 12 miles and his scouts 20. They saw no signs of armed Boers. The farm houses were found empty, the occupants having had news of the advance and gone further into the interior. The British bivouacked at random. They burned three farm houses, the property of Libbe, one of the Boer leaders. They then swept around southward, returning here. Nothing was accomplished except a reconnoisance.

Col. Pilcher came into touch with Gen. Babington and then returned to Belmont.

Maj. Byrne reconnoitered the hills about four miles from Jacobsdal and saw 700 Boers.

Wife Murderer Hanged.

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—Robt. Brown, a Negro, was hanged Thursday in Moyanensing prison for murder of his wife. Brown's crime was particularly brutal and savage. It was in the latter part of 1898 when Brown, who had just been discharged from the house of correction, went to the house where his wife, Lucinda, was employed as a domestic, and accused her of having caused his arrest. She was scrubbing the steps at the time and Brown drew a knife and stabbed her repeatedly, inflicting wounds which soon resulted in her death.

MASKED AND ARMED.

A Lone Highwayman Cleaned Out Two Restaurants in Kansas City in True Western Style.

Kansas City, Jan. 15.—In true western fashion, a lone robber, masked and armed, cleaned out two restaurants in the center of the city at 6 o'clock Sunday morning, under the glare of an electric light. In Lewis' restaurant, at 1210 Walnut street, he pointed a pistol at Stanley Brushwood, the cashier, and tapped the register, while he kept his revolver in plain view of two customers, eating meekly. The contents of the register had been transferred to the safe but a few minutes previous, and the robber secured only a handful of change.

He then gave the waiter and the two customers a parting word of warning and skipped across the street to the restaurant of Robert McClintock. Here the robber covered Cashier Joseph Drysdale, and commanded two waiters and three customers to hold up their hands. They complied promptly and the robber emptied the register in a twinkling. He pocketed the entire contents, $146, and backing out of the door, encountered a grocery solicitor. He poked his revolver into the solicitor's face with the command not to make an alarm and forced him into the restaurant, where all the others still stood with arms upstretched.

At this instant the robber darted down a nearby alley and disappeared. Hardly more than five minutes were consumed at both jobs and the robber had plenty of time to get away before the several victims had recovered composure.

SURVEYING A ROUTE.

A Cable Across the Pacific Connecting San Francisco, Honolulu, Guam and Luson.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Official reports received by Rr. Adm. Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment, from Lieut.-Commander H. M. Hodges, commander of the Nero, announce the feasibility of a cable route across the Pacific, connecting San Francisco, Honolulu, Midway islands, Guam, Luzon and Yokohama.

The Nero surveyed between Guam and Luzon, and then ran back to Guam, pursuing a zig zag course, in order to sound along the route selected, with a view to obtaining the best possible location of the cable. Then she ran a straight course to Yokohama. She returned, zig zagging to Guam, and will zig zag across the line to the Midway islands and to Honolulu, when her work will be completed.

The Nero has found a depth of less than 3,000 fathoms between Yokohama and Guam and Luzon and Guam. Three thousand fathoms is the extreme depth the authorities were willing to lay the cable.

The cable between Honolulu and Dongula bay, which is the Luzon terminus of the cable line, will be 4,812 knots long. Only two offsets from the projected great circle route between the Midway islands and Guam were found necessary to avoid obstacles to successful laying and operation of the cable. The first was a sub-marine mountain a short distance west of the Midway islands, and the second an abyss more than forty-nine hundred fathoms deep, found about five hundred miles east of Guam.

ASPHYXIATED BY COAL GAS.

Two Men Dead and Another May Die as the Result of Two Accidents in New York City.

New York, Jan. 15.—Two young men, John Woessner and George Lehman, German farmers from Ackley, Ia., on their way back to their former homes in Germany for a visit, put up at the True Blue, a Second avenue hotel. One of them blew out the gas, and Woessner's dead body was found in the bed, with Lehman in an unconscious condition lying beside it. Lehman was taken to a hospital, where it was said he has a very small chance of recovering. In Woessner's pockets were found several hundred dollars.

Daniel Pearsal, the Brooklyn manager of a well-known hat concern, was asphyxiated by gas in a hotel on Dey street, where he was in the habit of stopping. The gas escaped from a gas stove. Pearsal died soon after he was taken unconscious from the room.

Coal Shortage Causes a Shutdown.

Philadelphia, Jan. 15.—Inability to secure bituminous coal in sufficient quantities is necessitating the shutting down of some of the manufacturing concerns in the Schuylkill valley. At Birdsboro the plant of the I. E. & G. B. Brooke Iron Co. has been shut down for several days, but it is expected that in a few days sufficient coal will be on hand to enable some of the departments, if not the entire plant, to resume. The Reading Iron Co. is practically without coal, and unless it can be secured a temporary shut down must follow. From other points throughout the valley come reports of coal shortage for manufacturing plants.

Sensational Developments Expected

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 15.—The remains of Dr. Gustave Mahe, whose body two wives claimed, were buried by wife No. 2. Although wife No. 1, who is in San Francisco, demanded the remains, the local official decided to issue a burial permit to wife No. 2, and she had charge of the ceremonies.

The Over Zealous Bellboy Gets a Suitable Reward for His Check.

A well-known drug drummer, who is paying his regular holiday visit to New Orleans, took the train last Monday evening for a little side trip to Baton Rouge and in the hurry of his departure left a handsome bone handled umbrella hanging on a hook in the lobby of the hotel. It was a tempting prize, but probably every kleptomaniac who saw it supposed the owner was seated near at hand. At any rate, it remained undisturbed and was still there yesterday when the drummer returned. "By the way," he remarked, after he exchanged greetings with the clerk, "I've managed somehow to lose my new bone-handled umbrella. Have any of you seen such a thing lying around the office?"

A quick-witted bellboy heard the question and, glancing around, saw the missing article hanging within a foot of his head. Supposing it had been there for only a few moments, he promptly grasped the ferrule. "Is this the one?" he inquired. "Yes!" exclaimed the traveler, delighted, "and I must say I'm surprised nobody has nipped it!" "Aw, they couldn't do that," replied the bellboy. "I've been holdin' on to it fer y' ever since y' hung it up." The drug drummer stopped with his hand half way down his pocket and a whimsical smile overspread his countenance. "Well," he said, slowly, "I was intending to give you half a dollar, but if you've been holding that umbrella for three consecutive days you're more in need of a tonic. Here is a capsule of quinine and iron." The gloom which settled down upon the bell beach might have been hewn with an ax.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Near Unto Greatness.

A Louisville woman who spent the summer at a famous mountain resort in Virginia declares that, like all other places of the kind, it has its star boarder. This one was a young southern girl. She was not pretty, yet far from being homely; there was no special style about her, and she was as heavy on hand as a log, and, last of all, she was not particularly rich. But she lorded it over the place, and all the other boarders walked behind like the sister of giddy "Dodo." The Louisville woman lost sleep—trying to find the key to this social mystery. One day she chatted with the female potentate. They talked on and on until finally the subject turned on the Davis family. "Did you know any of them?" she asked.

And then the other women from the south gazed reverently at the "just missed," and the Louisville lady exclaimed, softly: "Eureka!"—Louisville Times.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Dr. Talmage Discourses on the Wonders of the Eye.

The Two Great Lights of the Human Face—How They Are Honored Throughout the Bible—Windows of the Soul.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage, in his own way, calls attention to that part of the human body never perhaps discoursed upon in the pulpit and challenges us all to the study of omniscience. Text, Psalm 94:9: "He that formed the eye, shall He not see?"

The imperial organ of the human system is the eye. All up and down the Bible God honors it, extols it, illustrates it or arraigns it. Five hundred and thirty-four times it is mentioned in the Bible. Omnipresence—"the eyes of the Lord are in every place." Divine care—"as the apple of the eye." The clouds—"the eyelids of the morning." Irreverence—"the eye that mocketh at its father." Pride—"oh, how lofty are their eyes." Inattention—"the fool's eye in the ends of the earth." Divine inspection—"wheels full of eyes." Suddenness—"in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump." Olivetic sermon—"the light of the body is the eye." This morning's text, "He that formed the eye, shall He not see?"

The surgeons, the doctors, the anatomists and the physiologists understand much of the glories of the two great lights of the human race, but the vast multitudes go on from cradle to grave without any appreciation of the two great masterpieces of the Lord God Almighty. If God had lacked anything of Infinite wisdom, He would have failed in creating the human eye. We wander through the earth trying to see wonderful sights, but the most wonderful sight we ever see is not so wonderful as the instruments through which we see it.

It has been a strange thing to me for 30 years that some scientist with enough eloquence and magnetism did not go through the country with illustrated lectures on canvas 30 feet square to startle and thrill and overwhelm Christendom with the marvels of the human eye. We want the eye taken from all its technicalities, and some one who shall lay aside all talk about the peryscopic, ciliary muscles, the sclerotic and the chiasma of the optic nerve and in plain, common parlance which you and I and every body can understand present the subject. We have learned men who have been telling us what our origin is and what we were. Oh, if some one should come forth from the dissecting table and from the classroom of the university and take the platform, and, asking the help of the Creator, demonstrate the wonders of what we are! If I refer to the physiological facts suggested by the former part of my text, it is only to bring out in plainer way the theological lessons of the latter part of my text: "He that formed the eye, shall He not see?"

I suppose my text referred to the human eye, since it excels all others in structure and adaptation. The eyes of fish and reptiles and moles and bats are very simple things because they have not much to do. There are insects with a hundred eyes, but the hundred eyes have less faculty than the two human eyes. The black beetle swimming the summer pond has two eyes under the water and two eyes above the water, but the four insectile eye not equal to the two human. Man placed at the head of all living creatures must have supreme equipment, while the blind fish in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky have only an undeveloped organ of sight, an apology for the eye, which if through some emergency of the mountain they should go into the sunlight might be developed into positive eyesight.

In the first chapter of Genesis we find that God without any consultation created the light, created the trees, created the fish, created the fowl, but when He was about to make man He called a convention of divinity, as though to imply that all the powers of Godhead were to be enlisted in the achievement. "Let us make man." Put a whole ton of emphasis on that word "us." "Let us make man." And, if God called a convention of divinity to create man, I think the two great questions in that conference were how to create a soul and how to make an appropriate window for that emperor to look out of.

See how God honored the eye before He created it. He cried until chaos was irradiated with the utterance: "Let there be light!" In other words before He introduced man into this temple of the world He illumined it, prepared it for the eyesight. And so after the last human eye has been destroyed in the final demolition of the world, stars are to fall and the sun is to cease its shining and the moon is to turn into blood. In other words, after the human eyes are no more to be profited by their shining the chandeliers of Heaven are to be turned out. God, to educate and to bless and to help the human eye, set on the mantel of Heaven two lamps—a gold lamp and a silver lamp—the one for the day and the other for the night.

To show how God honors the eye, look at the two halls built for the residence of the eyes. Seven bones making the wall for each eye, the seven bones curiously wrought together. Kingly palace of ivory is considered rich, but the halls for the residence of the human eyes are richer by so much as human bone is more sacred than elephantine tusk. See how God honored the eyes when He made a roof for them, so that the sweat of self should not smart them and the rain dashing against the forehead might not drip into them; the eyebrows not bending over the eye, but reaching to the right and to the left so that the rain and the sweat should be compelled to drop upon the cheek instead of falling into this divinely protected human eyesight.

See how God honored the eye by the fact presented by anatomists and physiologists, that there are 800 contractions in every eye. For window shutters, the eyelids opening and closing 30,000 times a day. The eyelashes so constructed that they have their selection as to what shall be admitted, saying to the dust: "Stay out," and saying to the light: "Come in." For inside curtain, the iris or pupil of the eye, according as the light is greater or less, contracting or dilating. The eye of the owl is blind in the daytime, the eyes of some creatures are blind at night, but the human eye so marvelously constructed it can see both by day and by night.

Many of the other creatures of God can move the eye only from side to side, but the human eye, so marvelously constructed, has one muscle to lift the eye and another muscle to lower the eye and another muscle to roll it to the right and another muscle to roll it to the left and another muscle passing through a pulley to turn it round and round, an elaborate gearing of six muscles as perfect as God could make them.

There is also the retina gathering the rays of light and passing the visual impression along the optic nerve into the thickness of the lamp which, passing the visual impression on to the sensorium and on into the soul. What a delicate lens, what an exquisite screen, what soft cushions, what wonderful chemistry of the human eye! The eye washed by a slow stream of moisture whether we sleep or wake, rolling imperceptibly over the pebble of the eye and emptying into a bone of the nostril, a contrivance so wonderful that it can see the sun 95,000,000 of miles away and the point of a pin. Telescope and microscope in the same contrivance. The astronomer swings and moves this way and that and adjusts and readjusts the telescope until he gets it to the right focus. The microscopist moves this way and that and adjusts and readjusts the magnifying gluss until it is prepared to do its work, but the human eye without a touch beholds the star and the smallest insect. The traveler along the Alps with one glance takes in Mont Blanc and the face of his watch to see whether he has time to climb it. Oh, this wonderful camera obscura which you and I carry about with us so from the top of Mount Washington we can take in New England, so at night we can sweep into our vision the constellations from horizon to horizon. So delicate, so semi-infinite, and yet the light coming 95,000,000 of miles at the rate of 200,000 miles a second is obliged to halt at the gate of the eye, waiting until the portcullis be lifted. Something hurled 95,000,000 of miles and striking an instrument which has not the agitation of even winking under the power of the stroke.

There also is the merciful arrangement of the tear gland by which the eye is washed and through which rolls the tide which brings relief that comes in tears when some bereavement or great loss strikes us. The tear not an augmentation of sorrow, but the breaking up of the arctic of frozen grief in the warm gulf stream of consolation. Incapacity to weep is madness or death. Thank God for the tear glands and that the crystal gates are so easily opened. Oh, the wonderful hydraulic apparatus of the human eye! Divinely constructed vision. Two lighthouses at the harbor of the immortal soul under the shining of which the world sails in and drops anchor.

What an anthem of praise to God is the human eye! The tongue is speechless and a clumsy instrument of expression as compared with it. Have you not seen the eye flash with indignation, or kindle with enthusiasm, or expand with devotion, or melt with sympathy, or stare with fright, or leer with villainy, or droop with sadness, or pale with envy, or fire with revenge, or twinkle with mirth, or beam with love? It is tragedy and comedy and pastoral and lyric in turn. Have you not seen its uplifted brow of surprise, or its frown of wrath, or its contraction of pain? If the eye say one thing and the lips say another thing, you believe the eye rather than the lips. The eyes of Archibald Alexander and Charles G. Finney were the mightiest part of their sermons. George Whitefield enthralled great assemblages with his eyes, though they were crippled with strabismus. Many a military chieftain has with a look hurled a regiment to victory or to death. Martin Luther turned his great eye on an assassin who came to take his life, and the villain fled. Under the glance of the human eye the tiger, with five times a man's strength, snarls back into the African jungle.

How it adds to John Milton's sublimity of character when we find him at the call of duty sacrificing his eyesight. Through studying at late hours and trying all kinds of medicament to preserve his sight he had for 12 years been coming toward blindness, and after awhile one eye was entirely gone. His physician warned him that if he continued reading and writing he would lose the other eye. But he kept on with his work and said after sitting in total darkness: "The choice lay before me between dereliction of a supreme duty and loss of eyesight. In such a case I could not listen to the physician, not if Aesculapius himself had spoken from his sanctuary. I could not but obey that inward monitor. I know not what spoke to me from Heaven." Who of us would have grace enough to sacrifice our eyes at the call of duty?

But, thank God, some have been enabled to see without very good eyes. Gen. Havelock, the son of the more famous Gen. Havelock, told me this concerning his father: In India, while his father and himself, with the army, were encamped one evening time after a long march, Gen. Havelock called up his soldiers and addressed them, saying in words as near as I can recollect: "Soldiers, there are two or three hundred women, children and men at Cawnpur at the mercy of Nana Sahib and his butchers. Those poor people may any hour be sacrificed. How many of you will go with me for the rescue of those women and children?" I know you are all worn out, and so am I, but all those who will march with me to save those women and children hold up your hand." Then Havelock said: "It is almost dark, and my eyesight is very poor, and I cannot see your raised hands, but I know they are all up. Forward to Cawnpur!" That hero's eyes, though almost extinguished in the service of God and his country, could see across India and across the centuries. But let anybody who has one good eye be thankful, and all who have two good eyes be twice as thankful. Take care of your eyes and thank God every morning when you open them for capacity to see the light. I do not wonder at the behavior of a poor man in France. He had been born blind, but was a skillful groom in the stables.

A surgeon, riding up one evening, gave his horses into the care of the blind groom. Late at night the traveling surgeon went to the stables and found the groom still at work upon the horses, and the grateful and sympathetic surgeon resolved in the morning to reward the blind groom with money. But in the night the surgeon bethought himself that perhaps he could give the groom something better than money. In the morning he said to the blind groom: "Step out into the sunshine! You are 40 years of age. I could surely have cured your blindness if I had seen you sooner, but come to Paris, and I will give you sight if you do not die under the operation." Paying the poor man's way to Paris, the operation was successful. For the first time the man saw his wife and children, and having taken a good look at them he turned and said: "Let me look on my friend, the surgeon, who has opened all this beautiful world to me and shown me my loved ones." Was not that glorious? Only those who have been cured from utter blindness can appreciate the omaipotent blessing of eyesight.

You often find in a book of manuscript a star calling your attention to a footnote or explanation. That star the printer calls an asterisk. But all the stars of the night heavens are asterisks calling your attention to God, an all-observing God. Our every nerve a Divine handwriting. Our every muscle a pulley Divinely swung. Our every bone sculptured with Divine suggestiveness. Our every eye a reflection of the Divine eye. God above us and God beneath us and God before us and God behind us and God within us. What a stupendous thing to live! What a stupendous thing to die! For such thing as hidden transgression.

A dramatic advocate in olden times at night in a courtroom, persuaded of the innocence of his client charged with murder and of the guilt of the witness who was trying to swear the poor man's life away—that advocate took up two bright lamps and thrust them close up to the face of the witness and cried: "May it please the court and gentlemen of the jury, behold the murderer!" and the man practically under that awful glare confessed that he was the criminal instead of the man arraigned at the bar. Oh, my friends, our most hidden sin is a brighter light than that! It is under the burning eye of God.

He is also a blind giant stumbling through the Heaven. He is not a blind monarch feeling for the step of his chariot. Are you wronged? He sees it. Are you poor? He sees it. Have you domestic perturbation of which the world knows nothing? He sees it. "Oh," you say, "my affairs are so insignificant I can't realize that God sees me and sees my affairs!" Can you see the point of a pin? Can you see the point of a needle? Can you see a mote in the sunbeam? And has God given you that power of minute observation and does He not possess it Himself? "He that formed the eye, shall He not see?"

But you say: "God is in one world and I am in another world. He seems so far off from me I don't really think He sees what is going on in my life." Can you see the sun 95,000,000 miles away, and do you not think God has as prolonged vision? But you say: "There are phases of my life and there are colors, shades of color in my annoyances and my vexations that I don't think God can understand." Does not God gather up all the colors and all the shades of color in the rainbow? And do you suppose there is any phase or any shade in your life that He has not gathered up in His own heart?

Besides that, I want to tell you it will soon all be over, this struggle. That eye of yours, so exquisitely fashioned and strung and hinged and roofed will before long close in the last slumber. Loving hands will smooth down the silken fringes. So He giveth His beloved sleep.

A legend of St. Frotobert is that his mother was blind and he was so sorely pitiful for the misfortune that one day in sympathy he kissed her eyes and by miracle she saw everything. But it is not a legend when I tell you that all the blind eyes of the Christian dead under the kiss of the resurrection morn shall gloriously open. Oh, what a day that will be for those who went groping through this world under perpetual observation or were dependent on the hand of a friend or with an uncertain staff felt the way and for the aged of dim sight, about whom it might be said that "they which look out of the windows be darkened," when eternal daybreak comes in!

What a beautiful epitaph that was for a tombstone in a European cemetery: "Here reposes in God Katrina, a saint 83 years of age and blind. The light was restored to her May 10, 1840."

BRYAN IS SANGUINE.

Says Democrats Are United for the Coming Fight.

The Prospective Candidate for President Warmly Received at Jackson Day Banquet in Chicago.

The Jackson day banquet at Chicago, Saturday, January 6, was, according to William J. Bryan, "a credit to the city's democracy." The Nebraska leader was principal speaker, and in his address said:

"The years which have elapsed since 1896 show how the people of the country, when their conscience, their judgment and their determination are once aroused, can resist the foes within and the foes without and keep the party true to its high mission as the representative of the struggling masses in their never-ending contest with the privileged classes. The plutocratic influence which won those last national campaign and which have rioted in power ever since have not been able to force the surrender of a single plank or line or syllable of the Chicago platform.

"After a three years' burial of the money question by our opponents they recently have accentuated its importance by presenting a currency bill which would have condemned the republican party to overwhelming defeat if it had been proposed before the president in his letter of acceptance. The bill is so bad that it could not be forced through the congress chosen in 1898, but in 1898, when the people were engaged in a war for humanity, the financiers captured congress while the republican leaders with perspiring patriotism were pleading to the people to uphold the president while the treaty with Spain was being concluded. The people were intent upon the conclusion of the war, waged for the political independence of the Cubans, and the Wall street magnates were building for the financial subjugation of the producers of wealth in the United States.

Decries the Currency Bill.

"The currency bill fastens us to the financial system of the world and subjects us to all the disturbances which affect them, while it places the control of the volume of paper money in the hands of a bank trust which will be as ruthless to the people of this country as Weyler was to the reconcentrados. The fight for bimetallism at the ratio of sixteen to one has not been lost. The increased production of gold has shown the advantage of more money and has answered the argument so often made that the parity could not be maintained because of the overproduction of silver.

"The fight against bank note circulation will grow stronger as the big banks work up to the little one and the people learn that a permanent national bank note circulation secured as at present necessitates a permanent and increasing national debt.

"I have discussed the trust question in this city so recently that it is only necessary for me to say that the democratic party will meet the issue with a plain and positive remedy. The republican party is unable to enact and enforce efficient anti-trust laws. When the democratic commanded republican leaders say that the present law is sufficient; when a new trust is pounded out republican officials say that the law does not cover the case. This absurd view of the law reminds me of the little boy at the table. His father was helping a plate and the boy exclaimed: 'What, all that for grandma?' 'No,' replied the father, 'this plate is for you, my son.' 'Oh, what a little bit!' complained the boy.

Imperialism a Strong Issue.

"The question of imperialism will occupy a prominent place in the next campaign. It matters not whether the war in the Philippines ends in the near future or continues until election. The people must determine the policy to be pursued toward the Filipinos. That policy must contemplate the ultimate independence of the Filipinos or their permanent retention under American sovereignty. If the islands are to be retained permanently the inhabitants must be given the hope of full citizenship or they must be condemned to the lot of subjects. Who desires to admit them to share and share alike with us in the destiny of this republic?

"The McEnery resolution, which passed the senate last March by republican votes, announces that the Philippine islands were never to become an integral part of the United States. If we are to retain them permanently, then, we must be prepared to support by force a war which will never cease to be obnoxious to the native population.

Colonial Policy Is Opposed.

"England has been in control of India for a century and a half, and yet, according to Mr. Morrison, an Englishman, in a book recently published, there is not in India a native paper of influence which defends the English government. He also complains of the ferocity of the educated classes. No one who understands history or human nature can expect an alien government to be satisfactory. We cannot adopt a colonial policy without ignoring the principles of self-government, so long cherished in this country, and we cannot ignore that doctrine in dealing with the Filipinos without endangering its existence at home. This is a question which must be settled by the American people, and when it is settled it will be settled right.

"Upon what ground can forcible annexation be defended? Is it on the theory that the Filipinos are incapable of self-government? Clay, in discussing the revolutions which led to the establishment of the South American republics, declared that self-government is the natural government and asserted that those who questioned the capacity of any people for self-government impeach the wisdom of the Creator. Clay was right. The doctrine that it is unsafe for a powerful nation to cross an ocean and force an alien government upon another race which happens to inhabit valuable lands is a doctrine conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity and defended always by hypocrisy.

"When we enter upon a policy of empire we cease to be a mural factor in the world's progress. Heretofore we have stood always with all people struggling for the right to govern themselves, but now when the Boers are willing to die in defense of their republic the advocates of an imperial policy are unable to express sympathy because we are ourselves engaged in a war of conquest. The opponents of imperialism sympathize with the Boers not because England is the aggressor, but because of the American belief in the Declaration of Independence.

The Gold Standard.

"Do you know what the gold standard means?" he asked. "When in New England armies lost three battles in South Africa and there was disturbance in London it manifested itself in New York and it was necessary for the great financiers to come in with $10,000,000 of gold to bring interest down from 186 per cent, and necessary for the treasury to step in and help Wall street out. If a few reverses in a war with a handful of Boers shakes New York with the gold standard, where will your gold standard be if England ever reaches a nation of her size?

"They talk about prosperity. Yes, there has been some prosperity, but the larger portion of prosperity has gone not to the masses of the people, but to the few who have been favored simply by republican legislation. Nearly half of the people of this country work upon the farm, and there is not a republican policy that can bring anything of good to the farmer. The good the farmer enjoys must come from one of two sources—either from an increased crop or from increased prices. Can the republican party bring an increased crop? You would suppose from the way republicans brag about large crops that the republican party held in its hand the showers and gave abundant rains when the people were good and republican, and drought and hot winds when they voted against the republican party. Why, my friends, if a man will stop to think for a moment he will know that the republican party does not control the rains, because if it did there would be a monopoly of water and you would have to buy every shower. It does not give you larger crops, it cannot give you a better price for a farmer's crop.

Trusts Fostered by the Party.

"While the republicans have not raised the price of what the farmer has to sell, they have permitted the organization of monopolies that raise the price of what the farmer has to buy. And if the republican party cannot bring down rain from the clouds it can change the farmer more for pipe when he goes down into the ground after water.

"No man," he said, in elaborating the imperialism issue, "who has studied history or knows human nature believes that the Filipinos would ever be glad to have us govern them. What excuse can be given for it? I have heard three. The first is the money argument—that it will pay; that there is money in it. The second is the religious argument—that God is in it. And the third is the political argument—that we are in it and cannot get out. I need not dwell upon the money argument. Dr. Taylor has already commented upon that. It is the lowest argument ever made. The man who will justify a war of conquest on the ground that it pays applies to that subject the same principle that the burglar or the highwayman applies. You cannot very well go to a mourning mother and tell her that it pays to have her boy die. The mothers of this country will send their sons to fight for liberty, and if the sons fall the mothers rejoice that God gave them the strength to offer sons for such noble service. But where is the mother who will rear sons for dollars and cents to be exchanged for orders for blood?

Decries War for Gain.

"And yet the man who says it will pay has got to put a pecuniary estimate upon the lives of American soldiers. He has got to tell you how much we are going to spend in treasure and how much in men, and then how much each man is worth. I believe in the extension of trade. I want this nation to extend its trade. I want this nation to have commercial treaties with all the peoples of the world. I want this nation to send forth the products of its soil and supply the needy everywhere. But I would not put one American soldier on the auction block and trade him off for the coffers of the orientals.

"There is a more potent argument than that of money. It is the religious argument. Very few men will attempt to defend imperialism on the basis of dollars and cents, but many have attempted to defend it on the basis of religious grounds. Convince a man that it is his religious duty to do a thing and he will do it. Convince him that it is his religious duty to take his money and give it to someone else, and he will do it. Convince him that it is his religious duty to give his life and he will give it. But more unfortunate still—man is so constituted that if you will convince him that it is his religious duty to take somebody else's money he will do it. Convince him that it is his religious duty to take someone else's life and he will do it. And how much money has been taken, and how many lives have been taken by men who have deluded themselves with the idea that God told them to kill somebody else or somebody!

"One republican senator said the other day that it was God's work, that God had opened the door of the Philippine islands that we might enter in and what the door there we were. The question I ask is: Who told him so? Did God tell him? If so, when and where? And if God did not tell him, then how from did God reveal it? I have seen republicans going up and down this land telling about God's plan, when I have known that if God knew them as well as I did that He never would have revealed anything to them. You will find that this religious argument is a potent one. Ah, my friends, there is no one who has a right to tell us that God commands us either to take another man's property or another man's life. There is no one who can present credentials that would justify him in commanding us in the name of God to do wrong.

Parallel to Boer War.

"When the Cubans were struggling for the right to govern themselves both the great national conventions put in their platforms declarations of sympathy with the struggling Cubans. But over in South Africa the Boers are fighting for a republic, and this nation, the greatest republic in the world, a nation that heretofore has announced with boldness its sympathy with all who seek to govern themselves, this nation stands with its hands tied and its mouth gagged, fearing to say a word as a nation for fear the answer will come back: 'What's the matter with the Filipinos?' Our sympathy for the Boers, the sympathy of the opponents of imperialism here, does not rest upon the fact that England is the aggressor; it rests upon the fact that it is an American principle that is at stake, and, no matter who is the aggressor, we believe in the doctrine of self-government. When mockery to appeal to a Divine Providence to aid in the overthrow of the principles of our government.

"It may be that the time has come when this nation, conceived in liberty, shall be turned over to the doctrines of the past. It may be—no man can tell what the future has in store. But if it is true that the time has come when these fundamental principles will be changed; if it is true that upon the ruins of a homogeneous republic is to be built a heterogeneous empire, I pray to God that the party of Jefferson and Jackson may die with the republic rather than live with the monarchy."

The Mother of Trusts.

One of the stock arguments in favor of protection is knocked into smithereens by Commissioner Chamberlain, of the government navigation bureau, in his pamphlet favoring subsidies. He shows conclusively that there is no good reason why a protective tariff should now be maintained in this country. In treating of the marked increase of interest in the establishment of an American merchant marine, Mr. Chamberlain attests to the necessity for such marine service by stating that it is demanded for the carrying of American goods abroad. "Our manufactures have developed so rapidly," he says, "that the place the home market filled in the political discussions of 15 or 20 years ago is now filled by the foreign markets." This reduces protection down to what we all know it has descended. It has become a factor in strengthening and fostering the trust system. "Protection is the mother of trusts."—Pittsburgh Post.

——That Maj. McKinley does not regard his reelection as an assured thing may be judged from the fact that he has already partially made arrangements for an across the continent stumping tour, similar to the one he made last fall. He will make rear platform speeches wherever the party managers may consider them necessary. Similar trips are to be made in the New England states, all of which shows that the noble and imperial major isn't expecting the walkover that less shrewd members of his party are predicting.—Johnstown (Pa.) FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senate—The senate discussed, without action, the United States toward the Philippines. The race problem was then discussed on the Pettigrew resolution, introduced to prevent a repetition of the Hayes-Tilden controversy. Among bills introduced were granting travel pay and commutation rations to volunteer soldiers who served in the Philippines, and were transported to the United States before being mustered out by the government, just as if they had been mustered out in the archipelago; for the retirement of officers of the army who served in the civil war at one grade higher in rank than that actually held, provided they be retired for disability; to establish postal savings departments; increasing the duty on imports brought into the United States from contiguous countries in other than American ships.

House—The house ordered two investigations. One was that an inquiry should be made into the appointment by the president of Postmaster John C. Graham, of Provo City, Utah, and Postmaster Orson Smith, of Logan, Utah, who are under indictment as polygamists. The other is a general investigation into the conduct of Gen. Merriam and the United States army officers during the Wardner (Idaho) riots and subsequent thereto. Bills were introduced to give honorable discharges to the Spanish war credit for the time of their service; to reorganize the revenue cutter service; to pay and provides for the rank pay and retirement of officers in the service, and is similar to bills presented several times previously in the senate. The house adjourned until Wednesday.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Senate—Nearly all the time of the senate was taken up by Senator Hoar in his address in which he favored the retention of the Philippine islands by the United States government. He was followed by Senator Hoar.

House—Not in session.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Senate—Mr. Hale introduced a joint resolution of inquiry addressed to the department of state as to the seizure of American dogs by Turkish authorities. Beautiful and impressive tributes were then paid by the senate to the memory of the late Vice President Hobart.

House—Miscellaneous business of minor importance occupied the attention of the house until 1 o'clock, after which an hour was devoted to eulogies upon the life and public services of the late Representative Greene, of Nebraska. Then the house adjourned until Friday.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Senate—The Philippine policy was discussed by several senators, Mr. Pettigrew bitterly attacking the administration. The currency bill was further considered. Two bills were passed, one conferring additional powers upon the director of the census and the other increasing the limit of the cost of the Indianapolis public building to $1,500,000. Adjourned to Monday.

House—Not in session.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Senate—Not in session.

House—Mr. Catchings (Miss.) was sworn in as a member. The house then adjourned to meet since congress convened. The speaker laid before the house the resignation of Gov. Walter Smith as governor of Maryland. Mr. Sulzer (N. Y.) then presented for immediate consideration a resolution for the appointment of a special committee of nine members to investigate the relations of the secretary of the treasury with certain New York national banks, and the transactions relative to the sale of the New York post office house. Objections were made, and it went over. The house adjourned until Monday.

Bubonic Plague at Honolulu.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The state department has been informed by Mr. Heywood, United States agent at Honolulu, under date of January 1, that eight deaths have occurred from the bubonic plague at Honolulu since the last telegraphic report, December 28 last, which announced three deaths from that cause. Mr. Heywood also states that the entire city of Honolulu is in quarantine.

Execution Did Not Take Place.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13.—Owing to the fact that Walter Cotton, the condemned murder of Charles Wyatt, a prominent citizen of Portsmouth, is absent in the Dismal swamp, his execution did not take place. No trace of the murderer has been seen since his sleepy death watch permitted him to escape.

Bound Robber to a Bedstead.

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 13.—Marion Josselyn discovered an intruder in her home last night and locked the front door, while her sister fastened the rear door. The girls then caught the robber, bound him to a bedstead, and telephoned to the police. The girls searched the thief, and took $7 from him he had found in one of the rooms. The robber was Pete Bezonia, who has a sentence of five years hanging over him.

Sentenced to Prison.

New York, Jan. 13.—Lewis E. Goldsmith, for years the assistant cashier of the Port Jervis (N. Y.) national bank, who pleaded guilty to an indictment accusing him of having stolen about $100,000 from that institution during the period beginning with April, 1898, and ending on November 14, 1899, was Friday sentenced to serve eight years in the penitentiary at Sing Sing.

Maj. John B. Guthrie Dead.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Maj. John B. Guthrie, aged 55 years, died suddenly in this city. At the battle of San Juan hill Capt. Guthrie, of the 13th infantry, was wounded while leading his regiment up the hill after the commanding officer, Col. Worth, had been wounded. He was invalided home. He will be buried at Paterson, N. J.

Made Love and Robbed Her.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 13.—Andrew W. Lebreck was in police court Friday charged with the theft of $500 from Mrs. Mary Winters, widow, 47. He was brought here from Peru, Ind. Mrs. Winters swore he made love to her and they became engaged, and that he borrowed money and fled. He says he has robbed of the $500 in Chicago.

Parliament Meeting Proclaimed.

London, Jan. 12.—The queen has proclaimed the meeting of parliament for January 30.

Republican Party Principles.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 11.—Elwood S. Corser, who represents the national silver republican party in its negotiations with the democrats and populists, has just returned from a conference of anti-imperialists at Chicago, at which it was agreed to hold a national meeting at Philadelphia on February 22, and another probably in Chicago just before the national republican convention meets. At this latter meeting it is the intention to make a declaration that no party or candidate opposed to the recognition of the Filipinos shall receive its support.

The old hotel at Washington, Mason county, is being dismantled to make room for a new building. At this house Henry Clay and other noted Kentuckians stopped while passing over the road to Lexington. The house has stood for 125 years, and was built of hewn-logs and weatherboarded. The inside is finished in cherry. This old tavern has many famous landmarks It was here that Harriet Beecher Stowe conceived the idea of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," where she first saw a negro sold on the block.

Look In Your Mirror

Do you see sparkling eyes, a healthy, tinted skin, a sweet expression and a graceful form? These attractions are the result of good health. If they are absent, there is nearly always some disorder of the distinctly feminine organs present. Healthy menstrual organs mean health and beauty everywhere.

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

makes women beautiful and healthy. It strikes at the root of all their trouble. There is no menstrual disorder, ache or pain which it will not cure. It is for the budding girl, the busy wife and the matron approaching the change of life. At every trying crisis in a woman's life it brings health, strength and happiness. It costs $1.00 of medicine dealers.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1900. NO. 14

GEN. SIMON BOLIVER BUCKNER went to Chicago, last week, and got himself interviewed, and here is what he says in regard to the Democratic party:

"The Democratic party has no future until the element now in control has been wiped out, and this promises to be done at the election this year. Expediency, not principle, is the motto of this element. The energies of its leader, Mr. Bryan, are being expended in hunting for an issue which he hopes will attract votes, and not in the promulgation of those great principles on which the Democratic party rests. With his defeat, which promises to be more overwhelming than in 1896, there is every reason to believe the conservative element of the party once more will come into power. The controlling element of the party to-day would commit it to opposition to expansion, when expansion is the essence of Jeffersonion Democracy. As a practical proposition there can be no doubt in my mind as to the wisdom of this country retaining the Philippines."

Coming from one who has been so completely wiped out, the interview will create no uneasiness among Democrats.

IN the funeral discourse of Chas. Julian, one of the victims of the recent Frankfort tragedy, Rev. Geo. Darsie said, "public opinion seems to be in favor of men carrying deadly weapons instead of oppose to the practice, and there must come a change in public opinion before the evil can be remedied," and before the funeral cortege was dismissed at the Frankfort cemetery, Gov. Taylor issued pardons to two fellows serving terms in the work-house for carrying pistols.

SENATOR HALE, of Maine, declared in his speech in the Senate, one day last week, that he does not doubt that the American people agree with him that the war which Great Britian is waging against the Boers is the most fell blow at human liberty that has been struck in the last century. Mr. Hale does not wait to hear from the administration on this subject.

IT is strange how absolutely destitute of political opinions are some papers in this part of the State in the last few months, and their abuse generator has collapsed, seemingly, although another application of the same lubricating material which it is supposed was used on them last fall might cause them to roar like lions again.

IN the Allen County Circuit Court the Chesapeake and Nashville railroad was indicted for a violation of the separate coach law, and when the prosecution was called for trial, last Thursday, the attorney for the railroad sprung a full pardon signed by Gov. Taylor. The Governor is standing by his political friends.

THE Kentucky Post of Tuesday was making some predictions in regard to the next race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district, and among them was one that County Attorney John M. Lassing would be a very dangerous quantity in that contest.

THE moss-back Senators do not fancy the Indiana Beveridge. They consider its taking a place in the ranks of the orators so early in its Senatorial career is a presumption on the part of the young man.

THE Blue-Grass Clipper appeared in an eight column folio form, last week, presenting quite a handsome appearance. The Clipper is a good county paper.

NEARLY fifty millions of the inhabitants of India are threatened with a famine. The famine there has expanded beyond the worst fears.

A LARGE number of bills has been introduced in the General Assembly, and only a few of them will ever become laws.

IT looks like the Boers have got the advantage of the British in the fighting of the last few days.

THE testimoney in the contest for Governor and Lieut.-Governor will close this week.

Editorial Paragraphs.

And there will be no "Bliss" on the Republican ticket this fall.

Why doesn't Senator Mason introdnce a resolution of sympathy with Mr, Gage? He needs it?

What's in a name? The advocates of the ship subsidy robbery now call it the "shipping bill," but it is the same old steal.

It is curious that the Philadelphia paper, owned by Chas. Emory Smith, the Postmaster General, is exceedingly severe in its comments on the Gage custom house deal.

Be it remembered, that the terrible murderous affray in Kentucky recently, was not connected in any way with the election contest here, but was entirely a private quarrel.

The only limit to cotton mill construction this year is said to be that of the foundries to turn out the necessary machinery. South Carolina will be the leading cotton manufacturing state, by the close of next year.

Mr. Bryan is certainly entitled to one virtue even in the eyes of his opponents. He has never been afraid to let the country know where he stood on any question; in this, furnishing a great contrast to our jelly-like President.

There are now nearly 200 soldiers at St. Elizabeth's insane Asylum, in Washington, most of them being brought there from the Philippines. This is only another part of the fearful price we have to pay for world wide dominion.

The Senate is showing a most peculiar apathy in regard to the gold bill, preferring to discuss the Philippines day after day. It might almost be supposed that a majority of that body does not care whether the bill becomes a law or not.

Speaker Henderson has curtailed the privileges of the correspondents at the House end of the Capatol. Speaker Kiefer tried that same thing a score of years ago and was driven from public life on account of it. Mr. Henderson should take warning.

The speech of the venerable Senator Vest in defense of his right to discuss Philippine matters without being called a traitor, and his protests against the efforts of the imperialists to muzzle all who disagree with them, fills a long felt want. Free speech was never needed more than now.

The rest of the Cabinet is said to be appalled at the frankness of Secretary Gage in sending to Congress such incriminating letters. They declare that he lacks political sagacity and that he should have done like the rest of them and forwarded only correspondence that could not injure himself and them.

Mr. Lentz of Ohio, makes the positive charge that General Grosvenor, of the same state, told him that the Administration had seen to it that the protests against the appointment of Utah polygamists as postmasters, had been destroyed. Gen. Grosvenor is supposed to be the personal mouthpiece of the President.

The gold Democrats and Republicans are very anxious that Mr. Bryan should withdraw his candidacy for the nomination. They say another man would stand a better chance of winning. Of course, they urge this because they are anxious for Democatic success and want that party to put up its strongest man—nit!

The attempt of the Republicans to muzzle free speech, will not succeed. The American republic is founded on the right of every man to say, in a decent manner, what he thinks, without being called a traitor. Senator Vest's recent eloquent protest against the slanders cast upon him because he dared to oppose the President's policy, has brought this matter home to the country.

GHOSTS

Creating Excitement in the Union Neighborhood.

Two Young Men Hear Unearthly Sounds In a Vacant House.

And Investigated Without Result

We offer the RECORDER's readers a real up-to-date "Ghost Story," this week, as a New Year's number. It is to be understood that this is no Enquirer romance, in which the imagination has full sweep and real facts are made to take on the form and shape of things unreal. Here are the real facts, as we have them from a reliable witness:

The moon was traveling along its regular road, the same one it has traveled since it began to travel, so far as we know. Its soft light was kissing the dew drop, hugging the tree top, making it easier to travel and see than on dark nights. The Norman Bros., Pat and Fee, were walking along the highway, leading from their home to Union, and when they came within 100 yards of the farm house on the Rice place, one-half mile east of town, they were surprised to hear the voice of a woman ring out in the most blood-curdling and terrifying screams, as if the woman was being murdered. They stopped—listened and heard 3 or 4 more screams, that had all the ear marks of the human voice, coming from the same point. They ran to the house and halting for a moment, heard groans coming from the inside, as if the woman was drawing her last breath. Wild with rage at the idea of murder being committed and that, too, upon some innocent and lovely woman, they rushed against the door, intending to smash it in, but, their combined strength failed to move it. Failing to enter the door they climbed to a second story window, entered and rushed to the ground floor via stairway. Striking a light they found themselves surrounded on all sides by a stillness so intense that it could be seen, as Mr. Cooper would say in the "Pathfinder," but no red handed murderer stood before them with his victim lying prostrate, while he brandished a knife or axe in defiance. They examined every barrel, box and closet in the house but found no living thing, not even a rat or mouse. The house has been vacant for a year or more, and Mike Knaley stores his farm implements in it, and, while some tenants of the place have told of clocks ticking and other unusual sounds being heard, no one suspicioned that a first-class ghost land murder would be pulled off in the place on a moonlight night, and so early in the evening as 7 o'clock. At any rate, Pat and Fee are ready to hold up their right hands and make affidavit to the above facts.

The tiresome and much abused habit of using slang has at last found a Nemesis in Lapeer, Mich. A club has been organized under the title of the Anti Slang Club. Fines are imposed ranging from 1 cent to 20 cents for violations. The proceeds go into a general fund, to be used for various purposes. Below is a list of a few slang words, with the fines attached, each fine being so many cents.

Nit, 5; rats, 2; Reuben, 7; shoot, 1 chestnuts, 1; tell it, 2; a fool; 4; hot tamales, 3; red-headed, 4; he's a dandy, 4; give us a tip, 8; made a mash 7; crackerjack, 9; rubber neck, 13; hayseed, 4; got the dough, 6; ain't he a bird, 2; noodlehead, 8; a pippy roony, 5; not by a jugful, 9; there are others, 8, nothing but a dinky, 20; not on your tintype, 2; he has a cold jee, 7; he's a cheap guy, 10; not the only pebble, 4; thinks he's the whole works, 5.

The fines are having the desired effect. One youth became so deeply involved that he tried working off $2 Confederate bills, but when threatened with prosecution for debasing the gold standard, "ponied up."

The writer has to pay 5 cents for using the last phrase.

THE result of the local option election in the Burlington voting precinct last Saturday, was a sweeping victory for the drys, they winning by a vote of 157 to 31. The anti-local optionists did not poll half as many votes as there were names attached to the petition asking the county court to order the vote. Many persons give the ladies of Burlington and vicinity credit for the vote being so one-sided.

Old People Made Young.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Heart trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism, by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion, and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It is a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." THAT WOOLPER BRIDGE.

Mary Ann Wants Several More At Different Points in the County.

Thinks A Good Bridge at Grant's Ford Will Cost $10.000.

The Hoosier Aid Society, or, Boone County Fiscal Court, has made all preparations possible to build a bridge across Woolper creek at Dr. Grant's crossing. Of course this bridge is needed as are bridges at fifty other places in this county. In times past the county contributed to building two bidges at Grant's ford on Woolper, and all that remains of these investments are the abutments which stand almost in the center of the creek at low water mark, and when there is 60 feet of water in the channel of the Ohio river, the creek at Grant's forde is half a mile wide. To properly bridge the creek at that point will cost the county $10,000 and the bridge when completed will not benefit to exceed 20 farmers in this county; but it will benefit 100 merchants in the city of Aurora, Indiana, who have subscribed to the building, while the merchants of Boone county, who pay taxes, rents and insurance have to contribute to the aid of Aurora.

A spirit of public enterprise having struck the county at last, let us have bridges across Gunpowder, Big Bone, Mud Lick and at every other point where a bridge is needed, and especially across Middle creek near its mouth so the farmers of the Bellevue precinct can get to Rising Sun to trade when the back water is over the ford at that point, as the merchants at Bellevue don't need any patronage— they can live on wind, but it takes money to get good roads and bridger for Rising Sun.

Hoping that the Fiscal Court will be generous in these days of prosperity, when farmers have money to squander and laboring men all have good jobs, I am truly.

A Prominent Chicago Woman Speaks.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I found it was pleasant to take and it relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered, saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I will never be without this splendid medicine again." For sale by W. F. In 1899 there were 131 executions by hanging in the United States, an increase of 21 over 1898. Of these the Southern States had 100 and the north 31. Fifty-eight of those executed were white men, 72 Negroes and one Indian. The total number of suicides was 5,340, as against 5,920 in the preceeding year. There were 107 lynchings. Of these 103 were in the South and four in the North. Of the sufferers 84 were blacks and 23 whites. Forty-four persons were lynched for murder, 11 for complicity in murder, one for arson and murder, 11 for assault, 6 for alleged assault and 1 for assault and murder.

A LARGE number of claims for pensions are being received by the Pension Office as a result of the Spanish War. Statistics prepared by the bureau show that the percentage of applications from volunteers is much larger than from regulars. The battle of San Juan was selected by the bureau as a basis for calculation, as the greatest number of casualties occurred there. There were 192 regulars killed, 1,097 wounded and 55 missing. Claims for pensions from the regular army number 2,962. At that battle 34 volunteers were killed, 177 wounded and 45 missing. The claims for pensions from volunteers number 3,558. There were 23 regiments of regulars and 3 regular batteries engaged in this fight, as against 9 regiments of volunteers. One regiment lost none killed, wounded or missing, but has 418 claims for pensions pending.

The 20th Century Problem.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Our little village had quite a lively time last week, in discussing two or three unsolved problems. The one that monopolized the minds of everyone one, was the century question. "Affirmed that the 19th century will not end until January 1st, 1901." Hon. W. C. Watts championed the affirmative of this question, and your correspondent denied, assuming that the 19th century closed at midnight on the 31st of December, 1899, and that this, 17th of January is the 17th day of the 20th century.

We are aware of the fact that a great many eminent scholars differ with us in the stand we have taken, but we recognize the fact that the most unlearned mind is as capable of settling this question as the Pope of Rome. The only question involved is, shall we start at the beginning to recover the christian era? or shall we start twelve month afterwards?

It seems to me that a child ten years old could decide this matter without a moments reflection. He would tell you you should begin at the beginning to measure anything. Then in order to reckon the christian era we should start from the beginning—the beginning of this era was the birth of Christ. Time is divided into centuries, years, months, days, hours and minutes. One minute after the birth of Christ what is known as the christian world was one minute old—sixty minutes after his birth it was one hour old; at the end of twenty-four hours it was one day old; at the end of thirty days it was one month old; at the end of twelve months it was one year old. Now, if you will add ninety nine years to this completed year, you will have a complete century. If you will add eighteen hundred and ninety-nine completed years containing twelve months each, you will have nineteen hundred completed years. Hence, at the close of the eighteen hundred and ninety-ninth year the nineteenth century ended and the twentieth century began. Today the christian world is nineteen hundred years and seventeen days old.

You will note the fact that in reconing time in the christian era each year represents a complete year. For instance the year 1 represents the fact that one year or twelve months had passed; hence the year 1900 indicates that nineteen hundred years or 22,800 months had passed.

G. C. GRADDY.

Twelve complete months make a complete year; one hundred complete years make a century and nineteen hundred complete years make nineteen centuries. Now as nineteen hundred years will not be completed until midnight, Dec. 31, 1900 the nineteenth century can not be completed before that time, therefore, this is the nineteenth century yet.

As I understand time is counted by all Christians from the birth of christ, and is called the Christian Era. One year from his birth he was one year old, and that was the year one—at his next birth day two years old, which was the close of the year two, and when he was one hundred years old—that is when his one hundreth birth day he was one hundred years old, and the first century was completed; and so if still living on the 1st day of January, 1900 he would be 19 centuries old, no more—no less. The 20th century then begins.

M. C. NORMAN.

Mr. Norman loses sight of the fact that from January one to and including December 31st makes a completed year. A person living 1899 years can not be 1900 years old, and 1900 years will not have passed until the close of the 31st day of next December.

The way Bro. Riddell of the Boone County Recorder gets up a county paper is a credit and an inspiration to the whole clan.—Williamstown Courier.—Thanks brother.

It appears form the statements of the Boone County Deposit Bank at Burlington, and Erlanger Deposit Bank at Erlanger, that there is about $100,000 of idle money in that section of country. Is everybody already rich, and some of them like the money, idle?—Williamstown Courier.

Not exactly all rich, nor are all idle by any means.

MRS. J. C. MASON, of Madison county, sold during 1899, 693½ dozen eggs from her poultry yard, netting her the handsome sum of $74.35. During the previous year she sold 592 dozen, netting $54.36.

Girls working in the match factories of England become permeated with the chemicals and minerals used. The sulphur sometimes eats their jaws in the most painful and disgusting way. Their wages average $1.50 per week.

According to the letter of a Bostonian who had been traveling in Cuba and spending some time in Havana the streets of that city are now cleaner than those of either New York or Boston. The credit for this condition is given to Gen. Lndlow and his subordinates.

The new team of sorrel horses recently purchased by President McKinley have good action, white faces and long, flowing, flaxen tails. President McKinley has given strict orders that none of the horses in the white house stables shall have their tails "docked." He now has three teams—blacks, bays and sorrels.

Miss Estelle Reel, superintendent of all Indian schools in the United States, is at work on a bill to be introduced in congress having for its object the compulsory education of all Indian children. She is firmly of the opinion that these wards of the nation should be taught usefnl trades, to the end that they may be able to earn their own living.

On the gate of the cemetery in Rio Janciro is a notice in Spanish, French and English that no dogs are admitted unless led by the owner. This is how the announcement is made in "English:" "Noble mesdames and gentlemen who may desire a dog to follow in this tombs yard will not be permission unless him drawn by a cable around him throttle."

The jump in the price of rubber is explained to be the enormous quantity of the material used for tires for automobiles and other vehicles, besides that employed for the millions of bicycles in use. The universal use of electricity has caused a corresponding demand for rubber to be used in various electrical devices, and every scrap of it is sought for.

Charles Addison Boutelle, the Maine congressman, recently stricken by illness and removed to a sanitarium, is 60 years of age. He has been shipmaster, sailor, merchant, newspaper man, and always prominent in the politics of his native state. He was nominated for congress in 1880. He has been re-elected to every congress since the Forty-eighth, and is a member of the present, the Fifty-sixth.

The ordinary shell which was manufactured 30 years ago only broke into from 20 to 25 pieces when it burst. At the present time it bursts into 240, while a shrapnel shell, which only used to scatter 37 missiles, now scatters 340. A present-day bomb, when charged with peroxylene, breaks up into 1,200 pieces, and it is estimated that it would effectively kill any one standing within 220 yards of the explosion.

The shipment of agricultural produce from America to Africa, although constituting less than 1 per cent. of the total, also showed a noticeable increase. In 1898 the value amounted to $9,795,598 as compared with only $1,716,820 in 1894. This was a gain of $8,078,778. To Oeennia there were agricultural exports averaging $3,394,868 a year. The value for 1898 was $3,540,461, while that for 1894 was only $1,963,148.

A Philadelphia physician has unearthed the interesting fact that more than half of the efficient drugs in the local pharmacies are offered for sale by curbstone traders that sell herbs. More than 70 per cent. of the efficient drugs are obtained from herbs found in the country near Philadelphia and some that do not grow wild are cultivated. Out of 69 individual plants indigenous to the vicinity 47 were found for sale in the streets.

One of the most remakable coiacidences on record has come to light in Lynchburg, Va., and Augusta, Ga. In each city there is a Walter Clark whose father was named Samuel and whose mother's maiden name was Walker. Both Walter Clarks have brothers named Samuel and William, uncles named Charles and John and an aunt named Elizabeth. Yet the men can not trace any relation between the two families.

In the French army the mortality from typhoid fever is about 12 in 10,000, in the German army it is as low as 1 or 2 per 10,000. The lower mortality of the German army is doubtless due to the fact that an order of a government authority addressed to any municipal authority is immediately carried out, so that an impure water supply must soon be replaced by a better one. On the other hand, many of the French municipalities are indifferent to their responsibilities.

In this, the last year of the nineteenth century, there will be three eclipses, two of the sun and one of the moon. The solnr eclipse, taking place on the 28th of May, will be visible throughout the United States, and be total from the southern part of Virginia down through Mexico, while north of Norfolk, Va., it will be partial. Of all phenomena of nature there is none so profoundly impressive and awe-inspiring as a total eclipse of the sun, and a trip to those regions of the country through which the shadow of the moon will sweep is well worth undertaking.

GEN. OTIS' REPORT.

He Informs the War Department of Military Affairs in the Philippines—Several Skirmishes.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The war department Friday received the following cablegram from Gen. Otis:

Manila, Jan. 19.—Hughes reports from San Jose de Buena Vesta, western coast Panay, that he crossed the mountains northwesterly direction San Joaquin, southern Panay, 17th; struck enemy crossing Antique river, capturing rifles, cannon and Nordenfeldt, pursued insurgents through Antique Egana and Sibalom, their capital, and marched to San Jose; casualties, one wounded, enemy lost considerable; entire population fled to the mountains; heat oppressive.

MacArthur reports 17th instant that 35 rifles surrendered at Floda Blanca; that at Manibang, McRae, 3d infantry, captured three insurgent officers, wife of Gen. Mescarlo, considerable insurgent property, and liberated three Spanish prisoners; that at Galang captured ten insurgents, burned seven tons of rice and insurgent barracks; that Sullivan, of 34th infantry, near San Jose, surprised insurgent force, captured six rifles and considerable live stock; that Lieut. Houle, 3d infantry, captured near Malolos one officer, 23 men and six rifles; that VanHorn, 17th infantry, struck Ladrones at Santa Cruze, killed 17, wounded five captured 13 and nine rifles; MacArthur reports 18th instant strong mounted position west Mabalacat occupied by Gen. Hizon and 50 men captured yesterday by McRae, 3d infantry; enemy left lieutenant and four dead men in trenches; McRae captured captain, one man, 130 rifles, several thousand rounds of ammunition, deserted arsenal, quantity of rice, casualties, one man wounded; Bates reports that Schwan's column cavalry refitting at Batangas to move eastward on 19th; infantry now moving that direction, enemy retiring, suffering loss in men and property, our casualties few, mostly slight wounds; that portion Wheaton's troops will enter Lemery and Taal tomorrow, now meeting opposition in mountains, which impedes march. Six officers, 54 enlisted men, four civil employes, 11 friars, all Spanish prisoners, released by Schwan, arrived from Batangas last evening, nearly two hundred arrived Manila day before via Calamba; Young at Vigan reports number of successful skirmishes in mountains with remnant insurgent organization and robber bands, with slight casualties among his troops; Kobbe expedition, Randolph light battery, 43d and 47th infantry, convoyed by naval vessels Helena and Nashville, sailed for Albany province and Satar and Loyte islands yesterday.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

A Sanguinary Struggle About to Begin Which Will Settle the Supremacy in Coren.

Washington, Jan. 20.—An interview with Lieut. Romanoff, of the Imperial Russian navy, in Chicago, in which he predicted war between Russia and Japan, is confirmed by private letters from Japan, written within a month. These letters describe the situation prevailing in Japan, which is one of intense anxiety and national preparation.

Great precautions have been observed in Japan to prevent her plans of preparation from becoming public The government of the United States has been officially advised by her own agents in Japan of the preparations, but such matters are not given out when received.

The situation in Japan described in letters received through official channels is one of hasty preparation. The Japanese fleet was being mobilized, all leaves to Japanese soldiers denied and they are kept at their posts, while a call for volunteers was said to be imminent. The diffidenlty grows out of the contest between Russia and Japan for supremacy in Corea.

HE USED AN AX.

Martin Bergen, Catcher for the Bostons Last Season, Killed His Family and Himself.

North Broonfield, Mass., Jan. 20.—Martin Bergen, the catcher of the Boston baseball team of the national league, killed his wife and two children, and committed suicide at his home here Friday. An ax was the implement used in taking the life of Mrs. Bergen and one of the children, while a razor was employed to cut the throat of the other child, a little girl, and of the man himself.

It is thought the action was due to insanity. It has long been suspected that Bergen was a victim of mental derangement. In fact, some of his actions in connection with his baseball managers last season led to the supposition at that time.

The affair was discovered by the neighbors, who found the body of Bergen and the girl lying on the kitchen floor. Further investigation showed that Mrs. Bergen and the little boy also had been killed. Their bodies lay upon a bed in the chamber. Bergen was 29 years old.

Only a Case of Smallpox.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 20.—The steamer Monmonthshire has arrived here. This is the vessel that signaled to Cascmanah Point on Vancouver island that she had sickness aboard. This was thought to be a case of bubonic plague, but it proves to have been only a case of smallpox.

New Ministry for Austria.

Vienna, Jan. 20.—Emperor Francis Joseph has accepted the resignation of the ministry of Dr. H. Von Witte, and has intrusted to Dr. Von Koerber the task of forming a new ministry.

MINERS WILL STRIKE.

Forty Thousand Men in the Anthracite Region Want Better Wages.

They Have No Hope for a Conference With the Operators Because the Latter Refuse to Recognize Them or Their Demands.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 19.—News has reached here that about 40,000 miners in the anthracite district of Pennsylvania, near Scranton and Shamokin, who have been in a restless state for some time, have decided to strike. Delegate T. D. Hays, of the Ninth district, with headquarters at Scranton, Pa., says a strike is unavoidable as the men have been restive for some time and entertain a bitter feeling toward the operators who have declined to recognize them. They have nothing to expect from this convention they say, as none of the operators from that field will be present at the joint conference to be held here next week.

Miles Daugherty, president of the First district, which adjoins the Ninth, says that the miners in the First will follow those in the Ninth, which means the calling out of all of the men in the anthracite district in Pennsylvania. It is said here as none of the mine operators of the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania have ever attended a conference with the United Mine Workers of America there is no just reason to be given the men to hold off any longer.

"This trouble has been brewing for a long time," said Mr. Hays, "and I have been doing my best to avoid a strike. For weeks and months the men have been clamoring for vigorous action toward enforcing a demand for higher wages. I have been holding them off and when I left for the convention there had been repeated conferences and full determination to strike had been arrived at. I asked the men to hold off till after the convention but my advices of a private nature lead me to believe the men will wait no longer but will go out this week unless their demands are met. About 40,000 men will be affected."

FOR INDEPENDENCE.

The Ruler of the Yaqui Indians Issues a Proclamation to the American People.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 19.—The Indians of Sonora, the only race in all Mexico that was able to survive the Spanish invasion and preserve its individuality, are making their last stand against the Mexican government. Thus far it seems the Mexican soldiers have been found inadequate to cope with the Yaquis.

A proclamation has been issued by the ruler of the Yaqui nation, addressed "to the American people," and is in part as follows:

"The Yaqui nation has begun its struggle for independence. It will no longer tolerate the Mexican army in Sonora. The nation has established a provisional government, the officers of which are at Babispe. In the event of the success of the Yaqui people over the Mexicans, no foreigners except native born Americans will be allowed in Sonora for several years The property and persons of Americans in Sonora will be protected by the Yaquis in every way."

Russian Ironclad Ashore.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 19.—The Russian ironclad Poltava, of 10,960 tons, is dangerously ashore near Libau, on the Baltic. The Poltava was built at St. Petersburg in 1894. She is 367 feet 6 inches long and 59 feet wide, and has a depth of 26 feet. Her indicated horsepower is 11,255. Her armament consists of four 12-inch guns, 12-5.9-inch, quick-fire guns, and 34 smaller guns. She also has six torpedo tubes. The cost of her construction was $5,490,000.

Murders in the Klondike.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 19.—Passengers arriving from Dawson via Skagway, on the City of Topeka, confirm the report of the murder of Fred H. Clayton, the Skagway merchant, a Northwest police telegraph lineman named Olsen and two Klondykers whose names are unknown, near Minto, on Christmas day. A man named O'Brien is now under arrest at Taggart, charged with the crime. Another has been arrested at White Horse and a third escaped to Seattle. The men were murdered for their money.

Could Reform Cuban Abuses.

Havana, Jan. 19.—Senor Lanuza, who was secretnry of justice in the advisory cabinet of Gen. Brooke, said: "Three American and three Cuban lawyers, acting as a commission, could reform certain abuses in Cuban laws without injuring the general consistency of the system, and the whole country would gain by such a reformation. This work of reform is only a question of time, as the abuses must be swept away."

Bartender Shot by Robbers.

Leadville, Col., Jan. 19.—At an early hour to-day two masked men held up Golob's saloon on Harrison avenue. Jerry Ryan, the bartender, refused to throw up his hands and was shot twice by one of the robbers, dying instantly. The robbers fled.

Mrs. Patterson May Recover.

Greenville, Tenn., Jan. 19.—Mrs. M. J. Patterson, aged 80 years, the only daughter of President Andrew Jackson, who has been seriously ill here, is slightly improved. Chances for recovery are favorable.

THE WEBSTER STATUE.

It Was Unveiled in Washington—The President and Many Other Prominent Men Present.

Washington, Jan. 19.—A distinguished gathering of public officials, including President McKinley and his entire cabinet, representatives of the senate and house of representatives, the judiciary of the United States supreme court and other branches of public life, participated Thursday in the exercises attending the unveiling of the colossal bronze statue of Daniel Webster, executed by the Italian sculptor, Trentanovo, and presented to the United States by Mr. Stilson Hutchins, of this city. The statue occupies a position on Scott Circle, but prior to the actual unveiling the ceremonies of presentation and acceptance were held at the Lafayette opera house. The president occupied a seat at the front of the stage, and back of him sat Secretaries Hay, Gage, Root, Long, Hitchcock, Postmaster General Emory Smith, Attorney General Griggs, Secretary Wilson and Private Secretary Porter. Others on the stage were Gov. Crane of Massachusetts, accompanied by his adjutant general and aides, Chief Justice Fuller, Justices Hyrlan, White and Gray; Senators Hour, Lodge, Chandler, Allison, Bacon, Fairbanks, Proctor, Tillman; Representatives Lovering, Cousins, Clarke and others identified with the exercises and with the states which share the honors clustering about the illustrious Webster. Maj. Gen. Miles and other representatives of the army, of the navy and of the diplomatic corps, added to an assemblage of unusual distinction. The Marine band occupied the orchestra.

As the president and cabinet came upon the stage, the entire audience rose, while the band played "Hail to the Chief."

After an eloquent prayer by the blind chaplain of the senate, Rev. Dr. Milburn, Senator Chandler, in behalf of the two branches of congress, read Mr. Hutchins' presentation letter and added a brief but glowing tribute to the statesmanship, the oratory and the patriotism of Webster.

Secretary Long then accepted the statue in behalf of the United States.

Secretary Long's remarks were warmly applauded and then, amid another outburst of applause, Senator Lodge read the oration of the day.

The formal ceremonies concluded with a benediction by Rev. Mr. Condon, chaplain of the house.

The president and most of the other distinguished guests then proceeded to Scott Circle, where at 12 o'clock the statue was unveiled.

The drawing of the veils was performed by Jerome Bonaparte, a great grandson of Webster, assisted by Mrs. Hutchins and Miss Katherine Deering.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

It Will Be Tried Along Star Routes, the Beginning to Be Made in South Carolina.

Washington, Jan. 19.—It has been decided by the post office department to permit star route system in a measure to supplement the system of rural free delivery. Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger has found that it is feasible to permit carriers on star routes to deposit mail in proper receptacles placed along their line of travel.

This plan will be started in South Carolina beginning July 1, and will be extended to other parts of the country as rapidly as possible. This innovation makes necessary a change in the postal regulation which forbid mail contractors and their drivers access to mail matter or to any mail locks or keys.

Crisis in Venezuela Passed.

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 19.—The political and financial crisis, involving tension between the Bank of Venezuela and the government has apparently passed. It is now understood that the bank directors who were arrested had become politically involved. President Castro assured United States Minister Loomis that money would not be demanded from foreigners. The report that a French squadron has been ordered here is denied.

Children Played "Butcher."

Lexington, Va., Jan. 19.—The infant son of Charles Alexander came near being chopped to pieces by his other brothers. The children were playing "butcher" and the baby was "the hog" that was being slaughtered. When rescued by its frantic mother, the baby was being sawed by one of the other children. The little one's arm was broken and the shoulder dislocated.

Capt. Charles L. Steel Dead.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The adjutant general received a telegram saying that Capt. Charles L. Steele, 18th infantry, died at Ft. Bayard, N. M. He was born in Mississippi in 1856; was appointd to the military academy from Tennessee, graduating in the class of 1875. In November, 1898, he accompanied his regiment to the Philippines, where he was taken sick and was compelled to return to the United States.

Favors the Nicaraguan Canal.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senator Morgan, as chairman of the senate committee on interoceanic canals, presented a written report upon the Nicaraguan canal bill, which shows the necessity of building that waterway. He concludes as follows: "We owe it to ourselves and the whole world that whatever canal we shall build and control on the Isthmus of Darien shall be as open, free and neutral to all nations as its corresponding gate way, the Suez canal."

NEEDED THE SOAP.

The Amiability of Women Shoppers in a Bargain Store Rush Is Truly Fetching.

It was at a department store bargain counter for odds and ends. Women squeezed and elbowed and shoved to get alongside the counter. Frequently two of them happened to pick up the same bargain at one and the same time, and then they both retained their clutch on it and looked daggers at each other until the stronger of the two won the victory or the bargain was rent into ribbons.

A haughty matron with an electric seal coat picked up a box containing three cakes of imported soap for eight cents at the same moment that an humble-looking little woman in a faded tan coat had fastened her grasp on the box.

"I believe I was the first to take hold of this," said the matron in the electric seal coat, freezingly.

The humble-looking little woman held on for a minute, studying her antagonist, then she slowly relaxed her hold on the box.

"Well, you can have it," she said, amiably. "You look as if you need the soap."

The bargain counter is the place to observe how they love one another.—Washington Post.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. The Shortest Route to Texas

One reason why travelers to Texas go via Memphis and the Cotton Belt is, that the Cotton Belt is from 25 to 100 miles shorter than other routes. This saving in distance makes a corresponding saving in time.

These trains carry Pullman Sleepers at night, Parlor Cafe Cars during the day and Through Coaches and Free Reclining Chair Cars both day and night. This service compares favorably with that of any road in the country.

Write and tell us where you are going and when you will leave, and we will tell you what your ticket will cost and what route to take to make the best time and connections. We will also send you an interesting little book, "A Trip to Texas."

THREE WERE KILLED.

Bloody Shooting Affray in the Capitol Hotel at Frankfort, Ky.

The Tragedy Is One of the Most Sensational in the History of the State—Details of the Bloody Event.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 17.—A bloody battle in the lobby of the Capitol hotel at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon resulted in the killing of Ethel Scott, of Somerset, a nephew of Gov. Bradley, G. H. Demaree, of Shelbyville, assistant postmaster, Capt. C. H. Julian, and the wounding of Harry McEwan and a traveling salesman named Golden.

The principals in the bloody affair were ex-Congressman Dave Colson, of the Eleventh congressional district, and Scott. The trouble was an old one, growing out of a fight at Chickamagna last year, when Colson commanded the 4th Kentucky volunteers, against Scott, who was a captain.

Witnesses to the affair were taken so much by surprise when the shooting began that most of them were almost panic-stricken, and there are many and conflicting stories as to how the fight began. Col. Colson and a party of friends, among whom was Demaree, were sitting in the lobby engaged in conversation as Scott and Capt. Golden came up the stairs from the bar room. When they had advanced about half way across the room, walking in the direction of Colson, the latter, it is said, half rising from his chair, fired at Scott, who instantly returned the fire.

The shooting then became general and bystanders are at variance as to the number engaged in it. Demaree was standing slightly in front of Colson, and young Scott is said to have crouched behind to ward off bullets from Colson's revolver. In an instant Demaree fell dead, pierced by three bullets. Capt. Golden, who accompanied Scott, reeled to one side, falling in the arms of ex-Gov. James B. McCreary, exclaiming, "I am shot."

The smoke in the locality of the antagonists became dense, but Colson continued to press Scott, who retreated backward, shooting as he moved. Colson emptied the chambers of a 45 revolver, and quickly brought a 44 into action. Scott by this time had been shot several times, and as he staggered back and fell down the stairway, Colson, who was within a few feet of him, continued his fire till the lifeless form of Scott rolled over and showed life extinct.

Charles H. Julian, who was shot in the leg, died shortly after reaching a room, death being due to loss of blood and the shock to his nervous system.

Col. Colson, who killed Scott and who is charged with the killing of both Demaree and Julian, and with shooting Golden, has long been a prominent figure in Kentucky politics. He served two terms in congress and declined a renomination at the hands of the republican party of the 11th district in 1898 in order to accept the colonelcy of the 4th Kentucky regiment in the Spanish war. Scott was a lieutenant and Golden was captain of a company in Colson's regiment, and the trouble which led to the tragedy here began then.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 18.—While the excitement of the bloody tragedy here has subsided, the affair is still the chief topic discussed. The postmortems of the three victims were held and the bodies prepared for burial. The remains of Ethelbert Scott were shipped to Lexington; those of Luther Demaree to his home at Shelbyville, and Charles Julian will be buried here.

The coroner's jury selected to investigate the bloody tragedy found that Col. David G. Colson was responsible for the deaths of all three of the victims. It was established that he fired the first shot.

Col. Colson lies in jail here, suffering much with his wounded arm, but in no danger of losing it.

Colson cannot be released on bond, at least not until the grand jury has passed upon the case. Colson has retained James Andrew Scott, a democratic criminal lawyer of this city.

Capt. Ben Golden, the bystander who was thought to have been fatally hurt, is resting easy. Several Louisville surgeons are here watching his case, and he will be taken to Louisville to be operated upon to remove the bullet.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 19.—The story will not down that a third man used a gun in the Capitol hotel lobby pistol duel, which resulted in the death of Ethelbert Scott, Luther Demaree and Charles Julian. No one will say who the third party was, but it is predicted that sensational testimony will be introduced before the grand jury.

It is said that the third man alleged to have used a pistol in the Colson-Scott duel is Capt. Golden. Golden and his friends say he had no weapon.

The funeral of Charles Julian took place Thursday at 10 o'clock from the residence of Dr. George Chinn, his brother-in-law. The interment was at Frankfort cemetery. There was a large attendance.

The Franklin county jail, where ex-Congressman Colson, one of the principals in Tuesday's bloody tragedy, is confined, is being guarded by an armed force of 25.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 19.—G. F. French, a merchant of Winchester, Ky., who was 11 years ago a leader in the French-Ebersole feud, arrived Thursday morning. He said he came to settle Golden's bills, as the latter is a poor man. French says Golden's chances of recovery are slight. Manager Weltzel, of the Capitol hotel, says $100 worth of hotel furniture was destroyed in the duel.

EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO.

It Was First Felt Along the Pacific Coast, and Traveled Across the Country Eastward.

Colima, Mex., Jan. 22.—An earthquake shock began here at a quarter before midnight Friday and assumed serious proportions at Tenimata, many houses being badly injured and some of light construction wrecked. There was great consternation and people rushed into the streets, some barely escaping with their lives. Seven people were killed outright and 60 were wounded and are being cared for by the local surgeons.

It was reported that the volcano had burst into eruption but it now appears that the phenomenon was confined to subterranean manifestations. Local scientific men believe that the earthquake traveled from under the Pacific ocean and that when news reaches here from the coast there will be interesting details.

The governor of this state has appointed a commission to inspect the churches and public edifices, while owners of houses injured in the earthquake will be compelled to put them in condition of security. Quiet has returned.

Guadalajara, Mex., Jan. 22.—At midnight Friday an earthquake shock cracked the arches and staircase of the state palace and portions of the university and the Degaltado theater, the latter one of the most massive structures here. The church of San Francisco and San Jose were damaged. The government has closed Sargario church, fearing the dome will fall in. Carmen barracks was badly damaged and news from Zapotlan and Sarula state that several houses were demolished. The shock was felt severely at San Blas, on the Pacific, and noises underground were heard resembling the hoarse rumbling of a heavy sea dashing on shore. Meteorologist Contenas predicts a repetition of the shocks.

DANISH WEST INDIES.

The State Department Will Not Resume Negotiations for Their Acquisition at Present.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The department of state will not take up, at present, the suggestion that negotiations be resumed with Denmark for the acquisition of the Danish West Indies. Talk about negotiations is said to be premature, warranted only by the fact that certain business men in New York regard as desirable that Denmark be again approached on the subject.

No opportunity will be afforded to anybody who aspires to carry on negotiations for the purpose of enjoying a commission from the sale.

It is felt quite safe to leave the islands in Denmark's hands, as no foreign power would undertake to secure them without the approval of the United States. It is known that the islands are a burden to Denmark, but it is also felt that congress would not just yet sanction the purchase of them.

RECEIPTS IN CUBA.

The Total for the Year 1899 Was $15,217,497—For the Month of December, $1,733,221.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The war department gave out the statement Saturday that the total receipts for the entire island of Cuba for the month of December were $1,733,221.

The total receipts for the entire island for the calendar year ending December 31, 1899, by items, were:

Customs, $14,072,114; internal revenue, $757,283; postal receipts from July 1, 1899, to December 31, 1899, $94,514; miscellaneous receipts from July 1, 1899, to December 31, 1899, $293,584; total receipts, $15,217,497.42.

The Transvaal government has informed Mr. Davis that President Kruger's saloon carriage will convey him to Pretoria.

Columbus Woman Killed by Train.

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.—Mrs. James Henry, aged 56, was struck by an east-bound Big Four passenger train and instantly killed. Mrs. Henry was crossing the tracks at Fifth avenue, and, as it was raining briskly, apparently never saw the approaching train. She was hurled some forty feet and badly crushed, death being instantaneous. She had no children.

John Ruskin Dead.

London, Jan. 21.—John Ruskin died Saturday afternoon of influenza, aged 81 years.

In Opposition to Garfield.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 21.—J. A. Beidler, of Willoughby, has entered the race for congress in the 20th district against James A. Garfield and Congressman Phillips, the incumbent. His candidacy will split the Lake county delegation, which Garfield hoped to get solid.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—General Manager Brown, of the Pullman Co., denies the report that the palace car organization has decided to reduce the salaries of its conductors and porters.

BEFORE THE HOUSE.

Special Committee to Investigate the Roberts Case Makes a Report.

Majority Says That He Should Be Expelled at Once—Minority Favors His Being Sworn In and Then Ousted.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The reports of the special committee of investigation in the case of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, were presented to the house Saturday. It said:

"The committee is unanimous in its belief that Mr. Roberts ought not to remain a member of the house of representatives. A majority are of the opinion that he ought not to be permitted to become a member; that the house has the right to exclude him. A minority are of the opinion that the proper course of procedure is to permit him to be sworn in and then expel him by a two-thirds vote under the constitutional provision provided for expulsion.

"Your committee desires to assert with the utmost positiveness at this point that not only is the proposition of expulsion as applied to this case without a precedent, but that exclusion is entirely in accord with principle, authority and legislative exactment which the house of representatives has ever taken.

"For convenience we present herewith, before proceeding to extended argument in support of the committee's resolution the following summary:

"Upon the facts stated, the majority of the committee assert that the claimant ought not to be permitted to take a seat in the house of representatives, and that the seat to which he was elected ought to be declared vacant.

"The minority, on the other hand, assert that he ought to be sworn in in order that if happily two-thirds vote therefore he may be expelled.

"Three distinct grounds of disqualification are asserted against Roberts:

"First—By reason of his violation of the Edmunds law.

"Second—By reason of his notorious and defiant violation of the laws of the land, of the decisions of the supreme court and of the proclamations of the president, holding himself above the law and not amenable to it.

"No government could possibly exist in the face of such practices. He is in open war against the laws and institutions of the country, whose congress he seeks to enter. Such an idea is intolerable. It is upon the principle asserted on this ground that all cases of exclusion have been based.

"Three—His election as representative is an explicit and offensive violation of the understanding by which Utah was admitted as a state.

"The objection is made to the refusal to admit Roberts that the constitution excludes the idea that any objection can be made to his coming in if he is 25 years of age, has been seven years a citizen of the United States, and was an inhabitant of Utah when elected, no matter how odious or irreasonable or criminal may have been his life and practices. To this we reply:

"First—That the language of the constitutional provision, the history of its framing in the constitutional convention, and its context clearly show that it can not be construed to prevent disqualification for crime.

"Second—That the overwhelming authority of text book writers on the constitution is to the effect that such disqualification may be imposed by the house, and no commentator on the constitution specifically denies it.

"The courts of several of the states, in construing analagous provisions have, with practical unanimity, declared against such narrow construction of such constitutional provisions.

"Fourth—The house of representatives has never denied that it had the right to exclude a member-elect even when he had the three constitutional provisions.

"Fifth—In many instances it has distinctly asserted its right so to do in cases of disloyalty and crime.

"Sixth—It passed, in 1862, the test oath act, which imposed a real and substantial disqualification for membership in congress, disqualifying hundreds of thousands of American citizens. This law remained in force for 20 years, and thousands of members of congress were compelled to take the oath if required.

"Seventh—The house, in 1869, adopted a general rule of order, providing that no person should be sworn in as a member against whom the objection was made that he was not entitled to take the test oath, and if upon investigation such fact appeared, he was to be permanently debarred from entrance.

"Eighth—The interesting proposition is made that the claimant be sworn in and then turned out. Upon the theory that the purpose is to permanently part company with Mr. Roberts this is a dubious proceeding. Such action requires the vote of two-thirds of the members."

Duke of Teck Dead.

London, Jan. 22.—His Highness Francis Paul Charles Louis Alexander, duke of Teck, who in 1866 married Princess Mary Adelaide, daughter of Prince Adolphus Frederick, duke of Cambridge, seventh son of King George III., died at White Lodge, Richmond Park, in his 63d year.

John Ruskin's Remains.

London, Jan. 22.—The remains of John Ruskin, in accordance with a wish he expressed years ago, will be interred in Coniston church yard. The funeral will take place on Thursday.

PRO-BOER MEETING.

A Large Mass Meeting at the Auditorium in Washington Adopts a Series of Resolutions.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The Grand opera house, the largest auditorium in Washington, was packed to the doors with an enthusiastic audience which vigorously expressed its sympathy with the Boers in their fight with Great Britain. The demonstration was planned as a means of evidencing public sentiment and in numbers and enthusiasm was fully up to expectations. The speakers included members of both branches of congress and on the stage were other public men who came merely to add their moral support. The keynote of the speeches was that the Boers were fighting for their independence as our forefathers had done in 1776. The gathering assembled under the auspices of the United Irish societies, and a number of leading Germans of the city joined in the movement.

Congressman Sulzer presided and after his speech introduced Senator Mason, of Illinois, who delivered the principal speech. Other speakers were Congressman Bailey, of Texas; Senator Allen, of Nebraska; Congressmen Clark, of Missouri; De Armond, of Missouri; Cochran, of Missouri; Rhea of Kentucky; Lentz, of Ohio, and Mr. Van Sickler, of New York.

A number of letters and telegrams were received, including one from Senator Hale, of Maine, expressing regret at inability to be present and entire sympathy with the movement.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, The American people still cherish the lessons and memories of 1776 and therefore fully understand and realize the rapacious war which Great Britain is waging against a small but patriotic people, whose misfortune is the possession of natural wealth coveted by British greed.

"Whereas, In the prosecution of this robber warfare Great Britain has been balked as yet of her tyrannous designs, and has therefore resorted to unlawful and barbarous war tactics, as is her wont, to wit:

"1. The arming and mobilizing of savages.

"2. The distribution of dum dum bullets to her soldiery, coupled with the boast that the British government possesses 100,000,000 such missiles.

"3. The illegal seizure of merchandise en route from the neutral ports of the United States to friendly Portuguese markets.

"Whereas, The president of the United States has not taken proper notice of these outrages, making it necessary for the people at large to express their will through public assemblages and serious warnings;

"Therefore, The citizens of the American capital, in mass meeting assembled, have

"Resolved, That the people of the Orange Free State and the South African Republic, are and of right ought to be free and independent, and their civilization is recognized to be equal in morality to that of any other people, the false witness of the British press to the contrary notwithstanding. Therefore the precipitation upon them of savage foes in alliance with trained soldiery threatens the repetition of the horrors of Wyoming, Fort Dearborn and other places, bitterly remembered by the American people as ruthless instances of British perfidy and dishonor. The attention of the president of the United States is respectfully directed to this feature which is notorious matter of common repute throughout the world.

"Resolved, That this meeting in concert with the American people throughout the land sends its sympathy and good will and heartfelt encouragement to the Boers and reminds them that as we triumphed against the same foe, so may they.

"Resolved, That we beseech and strenuously urge the president of the United States to exercise the prerogative vested in him by the peace convention lately arranged by the powers of the civilized world. We beg him to offer his good offices as a medium between the Boers and the British for the deliverance of these unfortunate Englishmen and their families, now being punished for the crime of a brigand cabal of gold grabbers and land hungry conspirators, not one of whom is at the forefront of battle.

"Resolved, That we solemnly protest against the shipment of munitions of war from this country for the use of Great Britain."

Nicaragua Appoints an Arbitrator.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Senor Corea, the Nicaraguan minister to the United States, has advised Secretary Hay that as an indication of the friendship of his government for the United States it had appointed an arbitrator to determine whether the Maritime Canal Co. is entitled to an extension of its concession.

Colson Indicted.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 21.—The grand jury reported indictments charging Col. David G. Colson with the wilful murder of Ethelbert Scott and L. W. Demaree.

Abandoned Well Becomes Active.

Upper Sandusky, O., Jan. 21.—At the Sand Run Oil Co. was retubing an oil well near Carey a rumbling noise in an abandoned well was heard. In a few moments it was belching oil over the derrick and filled a 50-barrel tank in a few moments. It is a phenomenal producer.

Hollenbeck for Oil Inspector.

Washington, Jan. 21.—S. D. Hollenbeck, of Chardon, is to be oil inspector for the Northern district of Ohio. Such is the straight tip given out here.

FOUGHT ENTIRE DAY.

Gen. Warren's Forces Engage the Enemy at Spearman's Camp.

Boers Driven From Their Position By the Heavy Fire of the English Batteries—Lord Roberts Advancing.

London, Jan. 22.—The war office received three different dispatches from Gen. Buller, all dated at Spearman's camp. The first one was sent at 6:55 a. m., and said:

"In order to relieve the pressure on Gen. Warren and to ascertain the strength of the enemy in the position in front of Potgieters drift, Gen. Lyttleton made a reconnaisance in force yesterday. This kept the enemy in their trenches in full force all day. Our casualties—3d battalion Kings Royal Rifles, two killed, 12 wounded, two missing."

The second dispatch was dated at 10 a. m., and was as follows:

"The following were wounded in the action near Venter Spruit yesterday:

"Officers—Staff, Lieut. R. Hamilton and Maj. C. McGregor; Second Lancashire Fusileers, Capt. R. B. Blunt and Special Lieuts. M. G. Crofton and E. J. M. Barrett; First Border Rifles, Capt. C. D. Vaughan and Second Lieut. Murier; First York and Lansachires, Second Lieut. Keirrey; Second Dublin Fusileers, Capt. C. A. Heasley (since dead), and Maj. F. English; Second Gordons, Second Lieut. P. D. Stewart, and 279 non-commissioned officers and men."

The third and last one was sent at 9 p. m., and said:

"Gen. Warren has been engaged all day, chiefly on his left, which he has swung forward about a couple of miles. The ground is very difficult, and as the fighting is all the time uphill, it is difficult to say exactly how much we have gained, but I think we are making substantial progress."

Durban, Jan. 22.—The Natal Advertiser has the following from Spearman's Camp, dated Saturday:

"Gen. Warren's column attacked a lengthy Boer position on the northern ridge of Spion. A heavy bombardment by a field battery, preceded the advance. The Boers eventually replied with two guns, several machine guns and rifles. The British responded similarly, and long range firing became general, lasting until dark.

"Gen. Hildyard drew the Boers from a splendid position simultaneously by a demonstration on their frontal position, drawing a feeble fire from their Nordenfeldt's and rifles. The British naval guns and howitzers shelled the trenches with excellent effect, and many Boers were observed bolting. The British artillery completely silenced the Boer fire, and at night fall the British infantry occupied an excellent advanced position."

London, Jan. 22.—A third supplementary list of the British casualties in the attack upon Ladysmith on January 6, was published by the war office. It shows 28 non-commissioned officers and men killed and five seriously wounded. This brings the total of casualties in that engagement to 488.

Lourenzo Marques, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from Gaberones, undated, says: "Col. Plumer has worked down this far toward Mafeking with three armored trains and a relieving force. The bridge is being rebuilt, so that he may proceed.

London, Jan. 22.—The war office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, January 21: "Gen. French reports a demonstration with cavalry and two guns toward Hebron on Friday, but that otherwise his situation is unchanged."

Spearman' Camp, Jan. 22.—Gen. Warren's engagement continues. He has forced the enemy from three positions. The Lancashire and Irish brigades are advancing steadily. The fire is very severe occasionally.

Cape Town, Jan. 20.—The American hospital ship Maine, from the West India docks, London, December 23, has arrived here.

Mafeking, Jan. 6, by runner to Molendi, Jan. 14, via Lourenzo Marques, Jan. 21.—"We concentrated our artillery, consisting of a seven-pounder, a Nordenfeldt and one little old ships gun, on January 3, emphacing during the darkness, so as to bear on the enemy's big siege gun. We carefully concealed the guns until the next afternoon, when after the enemy had fired a couple of shells, we let loose all our pieces, firing and loading as fast as possible.

"One of our shots must have thrown the enemy's siege gun out of position, for it ceased firing. With glasses we could see the Boers rapidly reinforcing that point.

"The next day they moved back their guns 700 yards. They emplaced a five-pounder and proceeded to drop shells regularly into Market square.

"We have made up our minds to stick it out and have food for another three months. The whole garrison is enraged at the enemy for firing upon the women's langer."

Ex-Chief of Chicago Police Dead.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Capt. Frederick Ebersold, former chief of the Chicago police department, is dead. He was at the head of the police department during the turbulant days of 1886, when the bomb was hurled in Haymarket square that killed and wounded scores of policemen.

Attacks a Pack Train.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Gen. Otis Saturday reports the ambushing of a pack train in Laguna province by the insurgents and the killing of two men, wounding of five and nine missing.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Senator McComas introduced a joint resolution extending the thanks of congress to Rear Adms. Sampson and Schley. It was referred to naval affairs committee. The Pettigrew resolution relating to the beginning of the Philippine insurrection was taken up and discussed. Resolutions were adopted calling on the secretary of the navy to send to the senate the number of vessels in course of construction, the number of men required to man them and the number of men in the navy and the number of officers and men on each vessel.

House—June W. Gayle, of Kentucky, who was elected to succeed the late Evan Settle, was sworn in. Mr. Cannon reported the urgency deficiency bill which went over. A resolution was adopted calling upon the secretary of state for information relative to the agreement between the United States and Great Britain which prevented the United States from building, arming or maintaining more than one war vessel upon the Great Lakes. The rest of the day was devoted to District of Columbia business.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Senate—The senate is still in the throes of discussion of the Philippine question, and apparently there is no near approach to a definite plan upon the subject. A resolution calling on the president for his instructions to the Paris peace commissioners was defeated by a vote of 47 to 26. The senate ratified the Samoan treaty without division. The ratification occurred in executive session after two hours of debate, which was participated in by a number of senators.

House—The urgency deficiency bill occupied the entire time of the house, most of it in discussion of an item of $25,000 for rural free delivery, in which all are personally interested.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senate—An agreement was reached to take the final vote on the pending bill on fixing gold as the standard of value in the United States on February 15. A resolution of inquiry relative to the conditions in the Philippine war was adopted. The resolution offered by Mr. Hale (Me.) as to the seizure of flour by the British authorities was adopted. Mr. Teller (sil. rep., Col.) then addressed the senate upon the financial bill until adjournment.

House—The house members got into a heated discussion over the sale of the New York custom house by Secretary Gage, which lasted over two hours. The army appropriation bill was then discussed for some time, and then the urgent deficiency bill was passed with only one unimportant amendment.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Senate—After the opening of the senate, Mr. Wellington occupied the entire time in addressing the senate on the Philippine question. His contention was that the United States should not take permanent possession of the archipelago, but after subduing the insurrection confer upon the Filipinos the right to govern themselves, affording them such protection as they might need. Mr. Teller resumed the speech on the financial bill. He had not concluded his remarsk when he suspended them for the day.

House—The house passed the senate bill to extend the powers of the director of the censuse after striking out the committee amendment to authorize the director to contract for extra printing with private contractors. The whole fight was upon that amendment. The influence of the public printer and the labor organizations of the country was centered against it, and after a lively debate of several hours it nearly duplicated the defeat. The publication of the reports of the 12th census therefore will be made by the public printer as in the past.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Senate—A resolution was adopted calling upon the president for information as to whether any representative of the Transvaal had applied to the United States government for recognition, and if such application had been made, if it had been accepted, and if not why not. In this connection Mr. Hale, of Maine, said that "The war which Great Britain is waging is the most cruel blow at human liberty that has been struck in the century. He declared that nine-tenths of the American people sympathized with the Boers in the present struggle. Mr. Morgan addressed the senate briefly on the financial bill before the senate adjourned.

House—The pension appropriation bill, carrying $145,258,290, was passed by the house. It was made the vehicle of an attack upon the commissioner of pensions by several members and as a result a rider was put upon the bill by unanimous consent empowering the commissioner in his discretion to withhold the fees of attorneys of record in pension cases where he was satisfied that the attorneys had not prepared the cases under their personal supervision.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The reports of the special committee of investigation in the case of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, were presented. The minority report favors seating Mr. Roberts and then expelling him for polygamous practices, while the majority report favors excluding him entirely. A bill was introduced for the establishment of a United States military fort not more than 10 miles distant from the falls in the Yellowstone National Park. A large number of private pension bills were introduced, and the rest of the day was devoted to eulogies on the life and character of the late Lorenzo Danforth.

INVESTIGATION COURTED.

Chicago Drainage Canal Officials Do Not Fear Congressional Inquiry Into the Canal Scheme.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The house committee on commerce ordered a favorable report on the bill for the appointment of, by the president, of a commission of three members to investigate the pollution of water supplies when it affects more than one state.

The bill heretofore has been opposed by Mr. Mann, of Illinois, on the ground that it was aimed against the Chicago drainage canal. Mr. Mann withdrew his objections and read a letter from Chairman Wenter, of the sanitary district of Chicago, stating that it was the conviction of the board that an impartial investigation will place them in a good and advantageous position.

Owensville Bank Robbers.

Princeton, Ind., Jan. 21.—Joseph Linden, John Norton and Patrick Ionis, the three Owensville bank robbers, brought here Friday night from Evansville, were arraigned Saturday morning before the circuit court and all three entered pleas of not guilty. Their trials were sent for February 1. They are charged with two counts, burglary and grand larceny. The men were brought into the court room guarded by five officers. A curious mob of people filled the court room and corridors of the court house. The prisoners will be kept here under special guard until date of trial.

Arbitration or Lockout.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—The Building contractors' council has given notice to the Building Trades council that a definite answer must be made to the proposition for a joint arbitration committee January 27. If not made, the assumption is that the Building contractors' council will take steps toward declaring a lockout.

Alaskan Steamer Overdue.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 22.—Great anxiety is manifested over the non-arrival of the steamer City of Seattle, now five days overdue from Skagway.

Bullittsville.

On the evening of the 15th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grant gave a candy-pulling in honor of their niece, Miss Birdie Graves, and about twenty of Miss Birdie's young friends were present and a most enjoyable evening was passed. Charades and various parlor games were engaged in, to the delight and enjoyment of those so fortunate as to be present. Miss Birdie is a pretty little brunette, with a bright, cheerful disposition which enables her to carry sunshine into every circle she enters. I congratulate the man that will be so fortunate as to win her heart and hand, for her sunny nature will never permit gloom and despair to invade his family circle.

On the evening of the 16th inst., Squire Clinton Gaines entertained the "Dove-er" club in royal style. This club has been organized in self-defense, and only male doves are permitted to become members. For several months the ladies in our social circle have been laboring under an hallucination; they imagine that the 20th century woman is to live and enjoy life independent of the society of the sterner sex. The maiden ladies have their dove dinners, no gentlemen are expected. The matron ladies have their cooking clubs, no gentlemen are invited. The members of their club are generous enough to tell their husbands that they may follow them to the club meetings if they choose, but they must remain in a room to themselves and not mix with them. Messrs. Clinton Gaines, Will Riley and O. W. Gaines sympathizing with the isolation of those widowers and young bachelors, surrounding them, have organized this "Dove-er" club, and thrown open their hospitable homes to its entertainment. The present membership consists of Clinton Gaines, Wm. Riley, O. W. Gaines, E. H. Howard, Dr. Hays, G. C. Gradey and Wm. Gaines. Our sweet hours are from 6 to 12 p. m.

On the 18th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Riley entertained about thirty of their friends at dinner and in the evening Mr. Riley entertained the "Dove-er" club. It was our privilege and pleasure to be present at the entertainment and a most delightful time was spent.

In glancing over my last communication to your paper I was very sorry to see Miss Lacie Kirtley was not mentioned as one of the performers in the Lucas Family, which was presented at the entertainment given by the young ladies in the parlors of Dr. Hays during the holidays. It was unfortunate, as she was the "main feather in the bunch." The play was a burlesque, and its intent was to amuse. In personating Trilby, Miss Lacie's costume, acting and general make-up was the richest part of the play, and I heard her performance more highly complimented than any other young lady who contributed to the evening's entertainment. The No. 10 gentleman's shoes she wore was a complete burlesque on the model foot of Trilby. The discord and snappiness displayed in her singing in burlesquing the rich, melodious modulations of Trilby's exquisite voice was highly amusing.

Miss Lacy knows me too well to attribute any personal motive in omitting her name. She is fully couversant with the fact that I am incapable of offending any lady through any such motive. Had she have done me a personal wrong and never asked my forgiveness, I should certainly have felt justified in omitting her name. Fortunately I have no such excuse to offer in Miss Lacie's case and can only beg forgiveness for the oversight.

P. S.—I wish to announce through your paper, the fact, that I receive no remuneration whatever, from any source, for the contributions I have published in it. I hold myself responsible for any commission I may be guilty of in my communications. But I grant no one, not even the soverainteee of my mind and heart, the right to go to bind the returns and accuse me of personal motives in omitting anything I choose to omit.

We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. Harrison Clore and wife, who are now enjoying the balmy breezes of Florida. They are located at Jacksonville, and are delighted with the country, and will probably remain there until spring.

A large crowd attended the sale at Uucie John Hoffman's on the 17th and everything sold for fair prices. There were six plates sold, which are said to be over 100 years old, and they were the prettiest and finest that we ever saw. They were bought by Martin Blaukenbeker for $5 40. They were first purchased by his great grandmother and have been in the family ever since.

We have heard of men losing their hats or pocketbook, &c., when they go to the city, but Uncle Bill Tanner went, last Saturday as usual, and after attending to his business affairs he concluded he would start home, when he discovered he had lost his bridle. He was confident his horse would come home alright, although it had not been accustomed to working without a bridle, but he feared it would come faster than he cared to ride, so he accepted a porffered bridle of a friend and came home as usual. Of course we don't want anything said about this.

Found—On the Richwood and Beaver pike, between Mr. Geo. Ransom's and Mr. Joe Hughes', a ring. Any one describing it may have it. Inquire at the Richwood Manse.

On Friday evening, January 12, the Excelsior Literary Club met at the hospitable home of Mr. Daniel Bedinger. The attendance was large, considering the night. The program was splendid. Misses Lottie Williams, Lottie Holderand Bessie Bedinger recited well, Mrs. Daniel Bedinger played on the piano, and Mr. Barnett Sleet favored the club with several selections on his banjo. He also surprised his friends by his excellent rendering of "How Baby Played." This was fine, and we hope Mr. Sleet will recite for us again soon. It was put before the Society whether it was best to meet every two or four weeks, but the motion was carried to meet every two weeks, by a large majority. After a while of sociable enjoyment the club adjourned to meet with Miss Hattie Sleet and brothers, of Beaver Lick.

At 9:30 a. m., last Wednesday, at the Catholic church in Florence, Mr. Arnold Powers and Miss Jenuie Lynch were united in marriage. The bride was beautifully attired in a dress of blue cloth with white silk and blue velvet trimmings and braid. The groom looked handsome in a black suit. The bridesmaid was the groom's pretty sister, Miss Powers, and the best man was Mr. Johnny Broughten, of Erlanger. After the ceremony the happy couple went to the groom's home, where a delightful dinner was served. In the afternoon they came back to the residence of Mr. Batty Long, the bride's home, where a reception was given in the bride's honor. The house was tastefully decorated with evergreens, and the table was beautiful. A delightful repast was served. There were about 70 guests. The evening was spent in playing parlor games, etc. Misses Taylor, Grogan, Long and others favored the company with music. The reception closed with the bride and groom cutting their cake, and the guests cutting for a ring in another cake. Miss Stella Taylor, one of Richwood's charming young ladies, was the fortunate one. We wonder who will be the next bride! The new home will be in Florence. The many friends of the young couple wish them a long, bright and happy future. The following is a partial list of the presents, some of them not having been sent in:—Geo. Scott and sister, fancy picture; John Broughton, set of tea-spoons; C. L. Broughton, sugar spoon; Charley Scott, butter knife and berry spoon; Mr. and Mrs. Hutsell, water set; Stella Taylor, two berry bowls; Fannie Long, berry bowl and fruit dish; George Odenwald, pair vases; Mr. and Mrs. Grotham, parlor lamp; Margette Lilly, fancy cup and saucer; Mrs. Carey, fancy pitcher; Miss Anna Judge, berry set; Miss Anna and Hattie Mann, china dish; Miss Angela Odenwald, pair of towels; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Taylor, parlor lamp; John and Jesse Delahunty, parlor lamp; Miss Mary Judge, pair vases; Miss Grace Odenwald, vinegar set; Mrs. Broughton, parlor lamp; Miss Anna Benedy, water set; Mrs. B. Judge, fancy vase; Miss Hattie Aydelotte, pair towels; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wolfe, dresser scarf Miss Margaret Lynch, fancy picture; Mrs. E. L. Glackin, pair towels; Miss Lillie and Walter Wolfe, water set; Mr. and Mrs. T. The following conversation was overheard at the wedding reception mentioned above. Someone had just finished playing, "Just One Girl."

He—"Yes, there is just one girl in the world for me."

She—"Wont you tell me who it is?"

He—"If you don't know by now I wont tell you."

Judging from this there will be more wedding bells ringing soon.

Little Marion Tanner, who has had scarletina, is steadily improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Woodward moved Weduesday, to Mr. Luck's house, near Kensington.

Prof. Collins is a daily passenger on the Commuter. He finds it very true, "When you can't find any where else to go—stay at home."

The Mission Society of the Mt. Zion Church will meet at Mrs. John Carpenter's on Saturday the 27th inst. All who will come will be made welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Carpenter and little daughter, Lena Powers, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Powers. It was the little lady's first visit to her grandparents

Mr. Geo. Odenwald was promiuent at the Bowers-Lynch wedding as one of the guests who distinguished himself with his gallantry; it was liberal—but limited to a "man."

Mrs. Fannie Harris, of Walton, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Theo. Carpenter; she expects to leave for Danville, Ill., to visit her son, who has located there, in a few weeks.

Marce Riddell has a nice cuff-button which he found, a few days since, on the crossing between the bank and the court-house. Owner can have same by calling for it.

James E. Smith sold to a Cincinnati firm, last week, the Oak timber on the 28 acres of land he recently bought of the Hawkins heirs, for $900. This reduces the cost of the 28 acres to $175.

The location of the route for electric cars from Covington to Erlanger, is now agitating the minds of the Coviugton merchants. They want the cars to follow the pike all the way out, and they are correct on that.

The dog poisoner was abroad in Burlington, last Wednesday night, and before sun rise Thursday morning five favorite canines had taken their departure for the land where strichnine and bologna-sausage trouble not. An old drake belonging to Mrs. Susan Kirkpatrick got a dose of the poison, but a liberal supply of lard, administered in time, saved his drakeship from an untimely death.

The general store of Rouse Bros., at Limaburg, was entered by burglars, last Thursday night, and about $2 50 in money and postage stamps taken. The thieves entered by way of a rear door, and left by the front door. It is supposed they were frightened away, as they took so little. About midnight Kirb Tanner and Owen Aylor were passing along the pike and discovered the front door to the store was open, and they notified the proprietors J. W. & S. J. Rouse, who live about half a mile this side of Limaburg, and when they got to their place of business the robbers had departed. No clew.

Beat Out of an Increase of His Pension

A Mexican war veteran and prominent editor writes: "Seeing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I am reminded thatas a soldier in Mexico in '47 and '48, I contracted Mexican diarrhoea and this remedy has kept me from getting an increase in my pension for on every renewal a dose of it restores me." It is unequalled as a quick cure for diarrhoea and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baily, Bullittsville.

Those desiring to take part in Drive No. 1, will assemble at Bullittsville, Hebron and Robert McGlasson's. The lines are to be formed and ready to move by 9 a. m., and are to center at a corner of the farms of Robert McGlasson, Jameson Aylor, Lystra Aylor, Allie Corn and Harrison Clore. No guns nor dogs allowed along—if dogs are along they must be led. Ezekiel Aylor was chosen captain of the club, and he will appoint captains at the several places of meeting, each captain to have a squad of 20 men.

FRANK SAYER, P. H. H. C.

THE HOP.

Despite the inclement weather of the day and evening of the 19th inst., the ball at the Boone House was a success in every way, and the eighty persons present regretted to see the gray streaks of dawn announcing the approach of day. The decorations of the ball-room in ropes and wreathes of evergreens were artistic and refined, making it a fit place for the assemblage of the beauty and gallantry this delightful occasion had brought together. The reception room was handsomely ornamented, while the dining room, hung with vines and various kinds of evergreens, with tables linened as white as "the driven snow," decorated with their gay colored lamps banked and entwined with myrtle, were in keeping with all other arrangements for the occasion. At midnight refreshments consisting of cream, cake, coffee, wafers, pickles and olives were served. The chaperones, Mrs. J. M. Lassing, Mrs. J. S. Clutterbuck and Mrs. C. C. Hughes seemed to out vie eachother in attempting to make each guest have a pleasant and enjoyable evening. The sweet, soul-stirring music was furnished by Doudero's Orchestra, of Cincinnati, on a harp, violin and clarionet. Those present from a distance were Miss Pearl Crisler and Wallace Grant, of Petersburg; Misses Belle Piatt, Sallie Stephens, and Messrs. Morgan Mitchell, Lane Riggs Cal McAlpin and Hal Blanton, of Erlanger; Misses Gertrudy Stewart and Edna Bryan, of Cincinnati; Misses Katie Allingham and Nellie Burgie, and Mr. Thos. Gourney, of Covington; Messrs. Pink Rice, Phelix Gaines, W. D. Cropper, Hubert Walton, and Miss Anna Gaines, of Utzinger; Will Gaines, Elmo Gaines and Dr. Hays, of Bullittsville; Wede Williamson and John Moody, of Bellevue. From Burlington and vicinity were Misses Artie Hughes, Hettie Riddell, Susan Roberts, Olga Kirkpatrick, Fannie Bruce, Sheba Roberts, Kittie Gaines, Catherine Farlong, Lutie Gaines, Birdie Martin, Nellie Martin, Lottie Hall and Anna Cowen, and Messrs. Elbert Roberts, Arthur Rouse, Otto Crisler, Hubert Gaines, Jack Sandford, James Duncan, Edwin Gaines, Clem Kendall, Lawrence Phipps, Judge Roberts, Tim Westbay, C. C. Hughes, Homer Clutterbuck, J. S. Clutterbuck and Marce Riddell. The following married ladies were in attendance: Mrs. C. C. Roberts, Mrs. M. L. Riddell, Mrs. Dudley Rouse, Mrs. H. W. Blyth and Mrs. Tim Westbay. The young ladies were stylishly attired and looked befitting the event, and seldom is a handsomer collection of young people seen on a like occasion.

PERSONAL MENTION.

H. J. Casey, of Bullittsville, was in town Mouday.

Miss Edna Bryan, of Cincinnati, is a guest at Mrs. Cowen's.

The Mormon Elders passed through to wu, Monday morning.

Mr. Geo. W. Aydelott, of Richwood, was transacting business in towu Monday.

Edgar Cropper went to Richmond, last week, to visit his sister, Mrs. Gaines.

Rev. W. H. Davis, of Richwood, has arrived home from a nice trip to North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. John Daley, of Richwood, were guests at Mr. W. T. Smith's Monday night.

Miss Ethel Marquess was the guest of Mrs. William Goodridge, of Florence, last Sunday.

Al Rogers, of Bellevue, was in town this morning. He will begin plowing for corn tomorrow.

Mr. James E. Duncan, of the Bullittsville neighborhood, spent the day in Burlington, Monday.

Senator Furnish came home from Frankfort, last Friday evening, and remained until Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Judge Riddell and daughter in-law entertained a large number of their lady friends at dinner, last Friday.

P E. Cason has been annoyed very much with his eyes this week, his vision being impaired suddenly one morning.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Tolin spent a day or two in Frankfort, last week, Mr. Tolin having business in the Court of Appeals.

R. Lee Huey, of Big Bone, came up with his team, last week, and moved William Slayback to his farm near Big Bone church.

W. T. Stott, the Democratic "war horse," of the Petersburg precinct, accompanied by Jas. B. Tolin, was in town Monday.

W. H Schree, of Petersburg, returned home a few days since, much improved in health after a five weeks' sojourn at Hot Springs, Arkaussas.

Jerry Carpenter, of Richwood, was in town yesterday, transacting business with some of the county officials. Jerry reported peace and plenty in his neighborhood.

Bert Smith, who has been the Recorder's reporter at Flickertown for some time, has gone to Pontiac, Illinois, to make his future home. Here is hoping he may prosper in his new location.

William Green and Mr. Wells, the Rising Sun telephone men, were in town a day or two last week, making arrangements to begin constructing the Burlington, Hebron, Bullittsville and Utzinger telephone line.

Frank Mullins, good tobacco raiser down on Gunpowder, was in town Monday, and reports considerable unsold tobacco yet in his neighborhood and it is all good. Several buyers have been down there, but did not offer the prices the producers want.

Jo. C. Revill returned home from Frankfort, last Friday. He was upon the scene of the shooting at the Capital Hotel a few minutes after it occurred, and viewed the victims. While in Frankfort, Mr. Revill saw Judge John S. Phelps, and says he is one of the most enthusiastic Goebel men he ever met.

B. H. Snyder, of the Florence neighborhood, was a visitor to this office Friday. He is engaged, extensively, in the poultry business, and had six turkey entries at the Cincinnati poultry show, last week, and took seven ties. He had on exhibition a gobbler that weighed 40 pounds, and for which he refused an offer of $25. If you want good poultry, call on Mr. Snyder.

Our faithful and valuable friend and correspondent, P. T. Fall, of Union, was calling on friends, here, last Friday. He came across the country on the hurricane deck of a horse, making a voyage destitute of anything sensational. Philip is taking orders for considerable work to be done in the spring, and if you desire to employ him to do any papering or painting speak to him in time.

For sale—The fine Stallion, Ugosired by Simmons 2744; dam by Almont Boy 4308. He is a dark chestnut, 16¼ hands high, a kind driver and a good saddler.

His Wife Saved Him.

My wife's good advice saved my life writes F. M. Ross, of Winfield, Tenn., for I had such a bad cough I could hardly breathe, I steadily grew worse under doctor's treatment, but my wife urged me to use Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me." Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, La Grippe, Pneumonia, Asthma, Hay Fever and all maladies of Chest, Throat and Lungs are positively cured by this marvelous medicine. 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsuer, Florence.

Local Option vs. John Barleycorn.

Against sale of whisky	157
For sale of whisky	31
Majority against the sale	126

This is the way the vote stood on the local option question in the Burlington precinct at the close of the polls last Saturday. The canvass in favor of the sale of whisky had been rather languid and a day or two before the election the bottom appeared to drop out of it entirely. It was not an acrimonious contest in any sense of the word—everybody kept in a good humor.

The Mother's Favorite.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite. It is pleasant and safe for children to take and always cures. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is the best medicine made for these diseases. There is not the least danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

Beaver.

Mr. J. C. Hughes is buying a big lot of tobacco, for which he is paying pretty satisfactory prices.

Born—To Mr. Jas. Carroll and wife, Jany. 22d, a bouncing baby boy. The startling event so elated "Jim" that he forgot to collect any toll for three days.

John Eldred has moved into the old Griffith home, owned by L. D. Jackson, near this place, where he intends to grow several acres of the weed, commonly known as golden leaf.

There seems to be a greater demand for good "lays" among the renting fraternity in this community this year, than has been seen here for years. The scarcity of good tobacco land and the number of applicants for the same, make desirable places hard to find.

The dance at Henry Afterkirk's, last Monday night, was one of the most enjoyable events of the season. There were quite a number of ladies and gentlemen present and with excellent music, rendered by the Beaver String Band, they tripped the light fantastic toe till the "we sma' hours."

The turnpike fever is raging among the citizens along the impassable creek bed, respectfully dubbed a road, leading from here to Big Bone Springs. Now is the opportune time to enlist the tangible sympathy of those directly interested in the building of the pike, and no stone should be left unturned until it is an assured go. With a good pike connecting the Ohio river with the Q. & C. railroad, the people along the route would just simply be right in the city.

Taylorsport.

Tom Clore is building a new porch.

Add Riddell, of North Bend, spent last Sunday here.

Harvey McGlasson has moved to his father's farm on the hill.

James Dye, who has been confined to his bed since Thanksgiving, is improving slowly.

We will not be surprised to hear of one of our young men leaping into the matrimonial sea.

The young people of the Pt. Pleasant neighborhood gave Milt and Edgar Souther a surprise party last Saturday night.

Allen Goodridge and wife gave their annual dance, last Wednesday night. Mr. G. enjoys dancing now as well as when he was twenty.

Most every one has a bad cold.

Ben and Jim Houston were at home Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Mary Gaines was the guest of Miss Salie Houston from Friday until Sunday.

James Wilson is furnishing telephone poles to build a line from Walton to Hamilton.

Mr. Dave Houston was visiting in the Gunpowder neighborhood, several days last week.

Several from here attended the protracted meeting at Big Bone Lick, last Wednesday evening.

Walter Craven is home for a few days. He has been working on a telephone line near Williamstown.

Chas Macauder is through stripping tobacco. The "Boss" says he has one of the finest crops raised in this part of the county, and will sell to the highest bidder.

Lost, strayed or stolen—dark brown hound, with right eye out. Her name is Daisy. Disappeared last Wednesday. Any one finding her will please report to D. Houston.

Utzinger.

John Lassing and James A. Duncan, of Burlington, attended church here Sunday.

Our telephone line will be in operation in a month hence, and will run from Petersburg.

Fifteen new and as many dogs were making it lively for a fox around Geo. Walton's, last Thursday.

The spreading of new rock on the roads seems to be general, and as a consequeuce travel is very slavish at present.

The dogs still play havoc with the sheep. Since my last report M. T. Graves, James T. Gaines and Watts Bros. have each been the victims of their attacks.

Two strangers are making a tour of these parts, confining their travels mostly to the back roads. They claim to be preschers of the Latter Day Saint faith. They may be all right, but there can be no harm in watching them.

Temp Graves' wagon was run into by an engine in Cincinnati, recently, and his team was knocked down. The traimen backed to where the accident occurred, and inquired of Temp if they had done him any injury. Temp replied, "No. Did I injure your engine any?" This caused a hearty laugh, and the train went on.

The century puzzle has been pretty well ventilated, but we find that in the rural districts still some who think that 1900 years have past and gone, and that we are now in the 20th century. Our opinion is that the end of the year 100 finished and wound up the first century, and the year 101 was the first year of the second century, and so on till the year 1900 completes and winds up the 19th century, and 1901 begins the 20th.

The initial meeting of the Cooking Club was held at Mrs. Geo. Walton's, last Thursday. The attendance was large and the cooking excellent. Each member did the part assigned her in great style, and the dishes prepared were dainty in the extreme. Several new names were enrolled and the membership promises to be large. A small sprinkle of men was present, and they were on their good behaviour to a degree almost painful for fear that action would be taken by the Club excluding them in the future. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. N. S. Walton's, for which an instructive program has been arranged.

INTEREST IN OTHERS

Dr. Talmage Portrays Two Kinds of Busybodies.

The Gift of Evil Speech of Some People—How We May Have a Benevolent Interest in the Affairs of Others.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows how we should interest ourselves in the affairs of others for their benefit, but never for their damage. Text, 1 Peter, 4:15: "A busybody in other men's matters."

Human nature is the same in all ages. In the second century of the world's existence people had the same characteristics as people in the nineteenth century, the only difference being that they had the characteristics for a longer time. It was 500 years of goodness or 500 years of meanness instead of goodness or meanness for 40 or 50 years. Well, Simon Peter, who was a keen observer of what was going on around him, one day caught sight of a man whose characteristics were severe inspection and blatant criticism of the affairs belonging to people for whom he had no responsibility, and with the hand once browned and hardened by fishing tackle drew this portrait for all subsequent ages: "A busybody in other men's matters."

That kind of person has been a trouble maker in every country since the world stood. Appointing himself to the work of exploration and detection, he goes forth mischief making. He generally begins by reporting the infelicity discovered. He is the advertising agent of infirmities and domestic inharmony and occurrences that but for him would never have come to the public eye or ear. He feels that the secret ought to be handed out into light and heralded. If he can get one line of it into the newspapers, that he feels to be a noble achievement to start with. But he must not let it stop. He whispers it to his neighbors, and they in turn whisper it to their neighbors, until the whole town is a-buzz and agog. You can no more catch it or put it down than you can a malaria. It is in the air and on the wing and afloat. Taken by itself it seems of little importance, but after a hundred people have handled it and each has given it an additional twist it becomes a story in size and shape marvelous. If it can be kept going, after awhile it will be large enough to call the attention of the courts or the presbyteries or conferences or associations. The most of the scandals abroad are the work of the one whom Peter in the text styles "a busybody in other men's matters."

First, notice that such a mission is most undesirable, because we all require all the time we can get to take care of our own affairs. To carry ourselves through the treacherous straits of this life demands that we all the time keep our hand on the wheel of our own craft. While, as I shall show you before I get through, we all have a mission of kindness to others, we have no time to waste in doing that which is damaging to others.

There is our worldly calling which must be looked after or it will become a failure. Who succeeds in anything without concentrating all his energies upon that one thing? All those who try to do many things go to pieces, either as to health or their fortune. They go on until they pay ten cents on the dollar or pay their body into the grave. We cannot manage the affairs of others and keep our own affairs prosperous. While we are inquiring how precarious is the business of another merchant and finding out how many notes he has unpaid and how soon he will probably be wound up or make an assignment or hear the sheriff's hammer smite his counter our own affairs are getting mixed up and endangered. While we are criticising our neighbor for his poor crops we are neglecting the fertilization of our own fields or allowing the weeds to choke our own corn. While we are trying to extract the mote from our neighbor's eye we fall under the weight of the beam in our own eye. Those men disturbed by the faults of others are themselves the depot at which whole trains of faults arrive and from which whole trains of faults start. The men who have succeeded in secular things or religious things will tell you that they have no time for hunting out the deficits of others. On the way to their counting-room they may have heard that a firm in the same line of business was in trouble, and they said: "Sorry, very sorry," but they went in and sat down at their table and opened the book containing a full statement of their affairs to see if they were in peril of being caught in a similar cyclone.

Gadders about town, with hands in pockets and hats set far back on the head, waiting to hear baleful news, are failures now or will be failures. Christian men and women who go round with mouth and looks full of interrogation points to find how some other church member is given to exaggeration or drinks too much or neglects his home for greater outside attractions have themselves so little grace in their hearts that no one suspects they have any. In proportion as people are consecrated and holy and useful they are lenient with others and disposed to say: "Wait until we hear the other side of that matter." I cannot believe that charge made against that man or woman until we have some better testimony than that given by these scandal mongers. I guess it is a lie."

How is it that you can always find two opinions about anyone and those two opinions exactly opposite? I will tell you the reason. It is because there are two sides to every character—the best side and the worst side. A well-disposed man chiefly seeks the best side; the badly-disposed seeks chiefly the worst side. Be ours the desire to see the best side, for it is healthier for us to do so and stirs admiration, which is an elevated state, while the desire to find the worst side keeps one in a spirit of disquietude and disgust and mean suspicion, and that is a pulling down of our own nature, a disfigurement of our own character. I am afraid the imperfections of others will kill us yet.

The habit I deplore is apt to show itself in the visage. A kindly man who wishes everybody well soon demonstrates his disposition in his looks. His features may fracture all the laws of handsome physiognomy, but God puts into that man's eyes and in the curve of his nostril and in the upper and lower lip the signature of Divine approval. And you see it at a glance, as plainly as though it had been written all over his face in rose color: "This is one of my princes. He is on the way to the coronation. I bless him now with all the benedictions that infinity can afford. Look at him. Admire him. Congratulate him."

On the other hand, if one be cynical about the character of others and chiefly observant of defects and glad to find something wrong in character, the fact is apt to be demonstrated in his looks. However regular his features, and though constructed according to the laws of Kaspar Lavater, his visage is sour. He may smile, but it is a sour smile. There is a sneer in the inflation of the nostril. There is a mean earvature to the lip. There is a bad look in the eye. The devil of sarcasm and malevolence and suspicion has taken possession of him, and you see it as plainly as though from the hair line of the forehead to the lowest point in the round of his chin it were written: "Mine! Mine! I, the demon of the pit, have scorred his visage with my curse. Look at him! He chose a diet of carrion. He gloated over the misdeeds of others. It took all my infernal engineery to make him what he is—'a busybody in other men's matters.'"

The slanderer almost always attempts to escape the scandal he is responsible for. When in 1741 John Wesley was preaching at Bristol and showing what reason he had to trust in the Captain of His Salvation a hearer cried out: "Who was your captain when you hanged yourself? I know the man who saw you when you were cut down." John Wesley asked the audience to make room and let the slanderer come to the front, but when the way was open the slanderer, instead of coming forward, fled the room. The author or distributor of slanders never wants to face his work.

On the day of Pentecost there were people endowed with what was called the "gift of tongues," and they spake for God in many languages. But there are people in our time who seem to have the gift of evil tongues, and there is no end to their iniquitous gabble. Every city, village and neighborhood of the earth has had driven through it these scavenger carts. When anything is said to you defamatory of the character of others, imitate Joseph John Gurney, of England, who, when a bad report was brought to him concerning anybody, asked: "Dost thou know any good thing to tell us concerning her? Since there is no good to relate, would it not be kinder to be silent on the evil? Charity rejoiceth not in iniquity."

But there is a worthy and Christian way of looking abroad upon others, not for the purpose of bringing them to disadvantage or advertising their weaknesses or putting in "great primer" or "paragon" type their frailties, but to offer help, sympathy and rescue. That is Christlike, and he who does so wins the applause of the high heavens. Just look abroad for the people who have made great mistakes and put a big plaster of condolence on their lacerations. Such people are never sympathized with, although they need an infinity of solace. Domestic mistakes. Social mistakes. Ecclesiastical mistakes. Political mistakes. The world has for such only jocosity and gesture of deploration. There is an unoccupied field for you, my brother. No one has been there. Take your case of medicines and go there and ask them where they are hurt and apply divine medicament.

There is a public man who has made a political mistake from which he will never recover. At the next elections he will be put back and put down into a place of disapproval from which he will never rise. Just go to that man and unroll the scroll of 100 splendid Americans who, after occupying high places of promotion, were relegated to private life and public scorn. Show him in what glorious company he has been placed by the anathema of the ballot box.

If you are rightly interested in other men's matters, go to those who are just starting in their occupations or professions and give them a boost. Those old physicians do not want your help, for they are surrounded with more patients than they can attend to, but cheer those young doctors who are counting out their first drops to patients who cannot afford to pay. Those old attorneys at the law want no help from you, for they take retainers only from the more prosperous clients, but cheer those young attorneys who have not had a brief at all lucrative. Those old merchants have their business so well established that they feel independent of banks, of all changes in tariffs, of all panics, but cheer those young merchants who are making their first mistakes in bargain and sale. That old farmer who has 200 acres in best tillage and his barns full of harvested crops, and the wheat at high prices before it was reaped, needs no sympathy from you, but cheer up that young farmer whose acres are covered with a big mortgage and the drought strikes them the first year. That builder with contracts made for the construction of half a dozen houses and the owners impatient for occupancy is not to be pitied but give your sympathy to that mechanic in early acquaintance with hammer and saw and bit and amid all the limitations of a journeyman.

Go forth to be a busybody in other men's matters, so far as you can help ing them out, and help them on. The world is full of instances of those who spend their life in such alleviations, but there is one instance that overtops and eclipses all others. He had lived in a palace. Radiant ones waited upon him. He was charioted along streets yellow with gold, and stopped at gates glistening with pearls, and hosannaed by immortals coroneted and in snowy white. Centuries gave him not a pain. The sun that rose on him never set. His dominions could not be enlarged, for they had no boundaries, and uncontested was His reign. Upon all that luster and renown and environment of splendors He turned His back and put down His crown at the foot of His throne, and on a bleak December night trod His way down to a stone house in Bethlehem of our world. Wrapped in what plain shawl, and pursued by what enemies on swift camels, and howled at by what brigands, and thrust with what sharp lances, and hidden in what sepulchral crypt, until the subsequent centuries have tried in vain to tell the story by sculptured cross, and painted canvas, and resounding doxologies, and domed cathedral, and redeemed nations.

He could not see a woman doubled up with rheumatism but He touched her, and inflamed muscles relaxed, and she stood straight up. He could not meet a funeral of a young man but he broke up the procession and gave him back to his widowed mother. With spittle on the tip of His finger He turned the mild night of total blindness into the midnoon of perfect sight. He could not see a man down on his mattress helpless with palsy without calling him up to health and telling him to shoulder the mattress and walk off. He could not find a man tongue-tied but He gave him immediate articulation. He could not see a man with the puzzled and inquiring look of the deaf without giving him capacity to hear the march of life beating on the drum of the ear. He could not see a crowd of hungry people but He made enough good bread and a surplus that required all the baskets.

He scolded only twice that I remember, once at the hypocrites with elongated visage and the other time when a sinful crowd had arraigned an unfortunate woman, and the Lord, with the most superb sarcasm that was ever uttered, gave permission to anyone who felt himself entirely commendable to hurl the first missile. All for others. His birth for others. His ministry for others. His death for others. His ascension for others. His enthronement for others.

That spirit which leads one to be busy for the betterment of others is going to Edenize the round earth. That spirit induced John Pound to establish "ragged schools" and Father Mathew to become a temperance reformer and Peter Cooper to establish his institute and Slater to contribute his fund for schools and Baroness Hirsch to leave more than $100,000,000 for the improvement of her race and Cornelius Vanderbilt to flood churches and charitable institutions with his benevolence. And, though our means be limited and our opportunities circumscribed, we can do the same thing on a small scale. "Other men's matters!" Be busybodies in improving them. With kind words, with earnest prayers, with self-sacrificing deeds, with enlarging charities, let us go forth on a new mission.

And now my words are to the invisible multitudes I reach week by week, but yet will never see in this world, but whom I expect to meet at the bar of God and hope to see in the blessed Heaven. The last word that Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist, said to me at Plainfield, N. J., and he repeated the message for me to others, was: "Never be tempted under any circumstances to give up your weekly publication of sermons throughout the world." That solemn charge I will heed as long as I have strength to give them and the newspaper types desire to take them. Oh, ye people back there in the Sheffield mines of England and ye in the sheep pastures of Australia and ye amid the pictured terraces of New Zealand and ye among the cinnamon and color in flamed groves of Ceylon and ye Armenians weeping over the graves of murdered households in Asia Minor and ye amid the idolatries of Benares on the Ganges and ye dwellers on the banks of the Androscoggin and the Alabama and the Mississippi and the Oregon and the Shannon and the Rhine and the Tiber and the Danube and the Nile and the Euphrates and the Caspian and Yellow seas; ye of the four corners of the earth who have greeted me again and again, accept this point blank offer of everything for nothing; of everything of pardon and comfort and illumination and safety and Heaven, "without money and without price." What a gospel for all lands, all zones, all ages! Gospel of sympathy! Gospel of hope! Gospel of emancipation! Gospel of sunlight! Gospel of enthronement! Gospel of eternal victory! Take it, all ye people, until your sins are all pardoned and your sorrows all solaced and your wrongs all righted and your dying pillow be spread at the foot of a ladder which, though like the one that was let down to Bethel, may be thronged with descending and ascending immortals, shall nevertheless have room enough for you to climb, foot over foot, on rungs of light, till you go clear up out of sight of all earthly perturbation, into the realm where "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

The man who wants the earth is invariably the first to growl about his taxes.—Chicago Daily News.

ON THE MISSISSIPPI

Quaint Sights and Incidents of Travel and Traffic Along the Great River.

Passenger service on the Mississippi river is in a fairly satisfactory condition. Between St. Paul and St. Louis, and from there to New Orleans, there are large and well-built craft, with comfortable staterooms equipped with running water and spring mattresses. Each steamer has a long cabin extending from stem to stern, where the tables are set for meals, and where the passengers dance in the evening. There is a piano and sundry easy chairs. It costs about as much on the boat per day as it does at a good lakeside hotel, so that a passenger virtually has the pleasure of travel for nothing. The chief difference between the life on a boat and that at a summer hotel is that, instead of viewing the same prospect day after day from a piazza, you have a new view from the boat every moment. The boat stops at every town, so that the passengers may become familiar with the urban as well as the country life of the valley. The freight of the river is always taken to and from the boat on the backs of negro roustabouts. There has been no advancement in the manner of handling it since the steamboats first plowed the river. As soon as the boat's nose touches the shore the gangplank is lowered, and a seemingly endless procession of negroes begins to move back and forth carrying on board the bags of flour, which, on the northern portion of the river, often makes the bulk of the cargo. Plows, boxes, lumber and merchandise are the other products. River lives are much the same everywhere. The cargoes, however, are varied. They all present a picture of a hundred years ago. At Memphis, from the bluffs to the water's edge, is an immense inclined plane of granite paving stones. In the center, about 200 feet from the bluffs, runs a wide road the entire length of the levee, and disappears among the compress factories and oil mills, whose great bulk and tall chimneys appear in the distance. Between this road and the bluffs the levee is nearly level; from here to the river there is a steep descent. Above the road come and go continually a swift stream of cotton loads and empty drays, and great piles of small cargoes to and from local jobbing houses; below it there are, during busy hours, a conglomerate mass of drays, mules, cotton bales, sacks of cottonseed, darkies, and all sorts of freight. Beyond is the long row of steamers that line the shore, and in the background sweep the waters of the Mississippi. The center of activity may be one boat, such as the Big Sandy, of the Memphis & Cincinnati line, just arrived, bringing a cargo of 2,000 cotton bales that have been picked up along the river mouth. The huge pile of boxes of furniture, and bags of cottonseed are being carried, one piece at a time, by a long stream of lazy darkies, over the gangplank into the bowels of the big boat. There some laborers, returning by way of the stage plank at the prow, roll out before them the cotton bales and file them in rows some distance up the levee. Above the din of wheels rumbling over the rough pavement, drivers shout to their stupid mules. There are picturesque oaths and snatches of melody. Escaping steam, shrill whistles, the creaking of loading and unloading freight, and the bellowing of overseers, who are, as a rule, active darkies, with monstrous lungs and an inexhaustible supply of big words, mingle in busy confusion.—Ainslee's Magazine.

HUMAN BODY'S ODOR.

It Enables Animals to Trace Men Through the Densest Jungles.

The fact that certain animals, and especially the dog, will recognize the propinquity of their masters or friends although it may have been impossible for them to have seen them or heard their voices has long since suggested to physiologists and others the idea that every human being has a distinctive odor peculiar to himself, and which remains more or less constant. Otherwise, how would it be possible for the bloodhound, for instance, to take the trail of an individual and follow it for miles through crowded thoroughfares, as well as through open country, and unerringly pick out the individual from among hundreds of others?

This idea has recently received a signal verification, as we are told by Dr. Bett in the Archiv der Gesammten Physiologie. The doctor states that a friend of his, with bandaged eye and every precaution against collision, was enabled by the sense of smell alone to recognize persons with whom he was acquainted, and to call their names the moment they came into the room and at the distance of several paces. The experiments were varied in a number of ways, but with the unerring faculty of the bloodhound, this man detected the identity of every individual presented. Other instances of a similar keenness are cited by Dr. Bett. According to the man who gave the exhibition, every family has a characteristic odor common to all the members thereof, but the intensity of which usually varies sufficiently among the various members to enable him to distinguish each individual.—Indian Lancet.

A New Arabic Notation.

There is a city magistrate living uptown who is possibly raising a mathematical prodigy in the person of his three or four-year-old daughter. She has only recently begun to attend the kindergarten, and as yet medltates changes in the system of enumeration now in vogue, which, while startling, are certainly suggestive.

When asked the other day to count, she hesitated some, and then lisped:

"None, some, one, two, free, fore."—N. Y. Times.

What the Sanguine Senator Beveridge Prescribes for the Philippines.

The speech of Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, in support of his resolution for the permanent holding of the Philippines, enthusiastic, eloquent and optimistic as it is, at the same time suggests disturbing reflections. Mr. Beveridge regards the possession of the Philippines as of the greatest importance to the United States for commercial, military, political and moral reasons, and insists that for these reasons, separately and conjoined, it is our duty to hold fast to them. Yet he says that unless they are ruled in the most ideally perfect manner—in a manner of which the United States has had little, if any, practical experience—the islands had better be abandoned at once. He professes implicit faith that this ideal administration can be secured. Experience has taught older observers than the Indiana senator to limit themselves to hope, shaded with doubt.

Senator Beveridge spent some time exploring the waters and roaming among the islands of the Philippine archipelago. His recital of his observations and experiences is an expansion of the line in the old missionary hymn: "Where every prospect pleases and only man is vile." In glowing periods he pictures the beauties of the islands, their richness of vegetation, the exceeding fertility of the soil, the vast mineral wealth awaiting American enterprise to bring it to the surface, the salubrity of its climate, the boundless possibilities of this "empire of the ocean."

When he comes to speak of the people he takes an altogether different tone. They are described as "a barbarous race, modified by three centuries of contact with a decadent race." In the whole 5,000,000 "there are only three commanding intellects and characters—Arellano, Mabini and Aguinaldo. The first, the chief justice of the supreme court under American jurisdiction, is "a profound lawyer and a brave and incorruptible man." Mabini is "the highest type of subtlety and the most constructive mind that race has yet produced." Aguinaldo is "a clever, popular leader, able, brave, resourceful, cunning, ambitious, unscrupulous and masterful."

Senator Beveridge insists that lasting peace can be secured only by overwhelming forces in ceaseless action until universal and absolutely final defeat is inflicted on the enemy. In this connection it is well to remember what Lieut. Gilmore said after nine months' captivity and forced travel over the island of Luzon. He "thought the insurrection would last as long as there were any Tagalos left." That puts the "lasting peace" in the distant future and presents a prospect of "ceaseless action" by the troops for years to come.

But when peace does come Mr. Beveridge aims against any attempt to give the Filipinos self-government, for, he says, they are not capable of it. "They are orientals, Malays, instructed by Spaniards in the latter's worst estate." Mr. Beveridge says the government must be "simple and strong." Neither the Dutch nor the English methods in the Malay states will do. The ruling power must be exclusively in American hands, with perhaps an advisory council to discuss measures with the governor general, but with no power beyond discussion. Even that elemental plan, "will fail in the hands of any but ideal administrators." They must be "men of the world and of affairs, students of their fellow men, not theorists nor dreamers. They must be as incorruptible as honor, as stainless as purity, men whom no force can frighten, no influence coerce, no money buy." If such men cannot be had, then it is better "pure military occupation for years." Mr. Beveridge says we had "better abandon this priceless possession, admit ourselves incompetent to do our part in the world-redeeming work of our imperial race, haul down the flag of arduous deeds for civilization and run up the flag of reaction and decay than to apply academic notions of self-government to these children or attempt their government by any but the most perfect administrators our country can produce."

Senator Beveridge is rather new to national politics, but he is old enough and ought to have seen enough to judge whether his "ideal administrators" for the Philippines are, under existing conditions, likely to have the support of the political bosses, without whose sanction appointment and confirmation are doubtful.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DEFENSE OF MR. GAGE.

What Was Wrong Under a Democratic Administration Does Not Seem to Be Wrong Now.

That may be a very fine defense of the practice of depositing many millions of public money in banks which Mr. Gage has sent to congress in response to certain resolutions of inquiry. But the question remains whether Mr. Gage has completely refuted a certain speech made by William McKinley on a certain occasion.

That speech was made when Cleveland was president the first time, and that was some years ago. But principles do not change with the times, though some people change their principles with the times. At that time Mr. McKinley declared that it was all wrong to deposit over $60,000,000 of the public money in national banks. And he grew red in the face with righteous indignation as he thought of the odious favoritism to pet banks which such a disposition of the public money implied.

If it was wrong then to deposit some $61,000,000 of the public money in banks it is certainly wrong now to do the same thing with over $87,000,000 of the public money. Mr. McKinley was then very impressive in his declaration that if there was any more money in the public treasury than was required to meet current expenditures it should not be handed over to banks to be loaned for their private profit, but should be applied to the purchase or redemption of United States bonds in order to save interest to the dear people.

Well, Mr. Gage tells us there is a surplus now, and we all know that there are bonds of the United States that can be bought in the market. Then why does not Mr. McKinley order Mr. Gage to go into the market and buy them and save interest to the dear people instead of turning over $87,000,000 of money to "pet banks" for them to lend out for their own private profit? Was Mr. McKinley a demagogue 13 years ago or is he wickedly coddling some pet banks now? Let us hear.—Chicago Chronicle.

THIS YEAR'S ISSUES.

Republicans Are Fixing Up the Whole Programme for the Democrats.

There is something amusing about the energy which republican leaders display in making the democratic platform for 1900.

Senator Aldrich, in his opening speech on the gold bill, took great pains to tell his hearers just what the democratic issues were to be and exactly what the republicans were going to do about it.

This is a harmless sort of diversion for the republicans, and if they enjoy it it is quite as well that they should keep up the farce indefinitely.

One thing is certain, however, and that is the republicans cannot make issues and force the democrats to assume responsibility for them.

In the first place the democrats are quite able to choose their own ground, and in the second place it is too early yet to set squadrons in the field for a battle which will not open before June or July next.

Of course the republicans would like to choose issues. They would be pleased to put trusts, imperialism and administration blunders of all kinds in the background and get up a contest over questions suggested by themselves and on which they think they could win the fight.

There will be many issues before the people in the campaign of 1900. The democrats will not look to the opposition for a selection of those issues, and Senator Aldrich has wasted his breath in attempting to tell in advance what the democratic party is going to do.

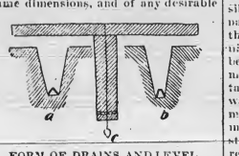
Let the able republican senator possess his soul in patience. In good time he will know what issues will be taken up by the democrats and he can be assured that they will be of a character to interest the people and to make it lively for the republicans.—Chicago Democrat.

Bryan on the Philippines.

"I have for one year been discussing imperialism, and I have tried to distinguish between such an extension of the nation's limits as would not change the character of the government and an expansion which converts a homogeneous republic into a heterogeneous empire. When the annexation of any given territory is under consideration the question is whether the people want to come in, and, second, whether the people are capable of sharing in the government and destiny of this nation. I believe that all people are capable of governing themselves, and that the Filipinos should be allowed to govern themselves, but I don't think that they are sufficiently advanced to share with us the government of the nation. If the Philippine islands are annexed the people there must either become citizens or subjects. I am not willing to admit them as citizens, and do not believe that a republic can have subjects; therefore I want this nation to give them independence and then protect them from outside interference. Each proposed annexation must be considered on its own merits, but in considering these merits the condition of the people should have more weight than geographical position or commercial advantage."—W. J. Bryan.

——Mr. Gage willing to have his official acts investigated by a congressional committee? To be sure! What has Mr. Gage done that is not indorsed by the administration? And will not the committee appointed by a republican speaker be in hearty accord with the administration, and therefore sure to declare that Mr. Gage has acted the part of a great and good patriot, and wise financier?—Omaha World-Herald.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.



DRAINAGE FOR FARMS.

A Very Satisfactory System May Be Introduced at a Comparatively Small Expense.

Quite often tile drains do not come up to expectations. The term of their usefulness is much shorter than the durable nature out of which the tile are made would indicate. In soft or quicksandy ground they are apt to get out of line. At places the line of the drain may come near the surface. At such places and at the outlet, tile are apt to be crumbled by freezing, unless they are vitrified, which adds much to their cost. In common with all kinds of drains they are, more or less, liable to become choked with roots or silt or injured by the presence of vermin. There is scarcely a farm but needs drainage and were it more generally known that wood or stones form a very respectable substitute for tile, perhaps there would be more improvement along this line. Doubtless many are deterred by the cost of tile, especially in more remote sections where freight rates are high, but it is in just such localities that the farmer has an abundance of the other materials for constructing drains.

Large stones, if they have to be removed from the fields, may be advantageously used. In this case the ditches have to be dug wider at the bottom and require the removal of more earth. A row of stones should be laid on each side of the ditch bottom, leaving an open space through the middle which is covered with flat stones and then plenty of smaller ones thrown in. If smaller stones for filling are not to be had, straw or some waste material should be placed in before the dirt is thrown back.

A board drain is quickly made and when carefully laid with durable wood is very lasting. Oak and chestnut are the most durable of our northern woods. Chestnut is easily rived, and rived boards last longer than sawed. Cypress rives easily and when placed under the ground where it is wet all the time, almost indestructible. The earth becomes packed around the boards which being where they receive no blows or jars retain an open passage for water long after the material begins to decay. A board six inches in width should be nailed to one of the same dimensions, and of any desirable length, and laid along the bottom of the drain like an inverted trough as at a. If the material is rived and there are some narrow boards, the narrow ones may be nailed over two others as shown in b.

The ditch need not be over a spade's width on the bottom. Its depth is altogether a matter of circumstances. In draining out low places you have to cut the surrounding land deep enough to get the minimum of fall. This minimum of fall for a board drain is greater than for round tile, and may be set down as about three inches per 100 feet of drain. The deeper the drain the farther it will drain, but it is not thought to be of advantage to make very deep drains in stiff clay soils. In these kinds of soils the drain will not do its best at first, but will improve with years—the ground gradually becoming more porous. Two feet of stiff clays and three feet for lighter soils are good depths to work to. In laying the boards, have them fit closely and cover any holes with small pieces of boards, so the dirt cannot get in. Be sure to stop up the outlet with coarse wire screening, so as to keep out rats, rabbits, etc.

In laying drains with boards it pays to have the bottom even and straight as possible and the grade uniform, otherwise the dirt bottom may wash out or fill up in places. In getting the grade the assistance of an engineer is sometimes advisable, but I will describe below an instrument which a farmer of ordinary ingenuity can make at home and with it do his own grading. Many practical ditchers make use of water in the bottom to dig by, and where there is plenty of fall for short distances this does very well. But sometimes there is no water and experience has taught that in digging by the water the ditcher will get a large fall, and oftentimes it is of the greatest importance to get the minimum of fall.

Take a straight pine board six feet three inches long, as shown at c, and fix it in the center and at right angles another board one-half as long. At ends of long arm fix sights and from the center suspend a plumb bob with string thread. The apparatus can be fastened to a Jacob's staff with a thumb screw and clamped in any position. When the instrument is clamped so that the thread coincides with zero on the scale, then the sights on the long arm will be level. The scale is divided by lines one-sixteenth of an inch apart. When the instrument is moved so that the thread covers one space, the line of sights will correspond to a grade of two inches to 100 feet. When moved two spaces from zero the line of sights will correspond to a grade of four inches to 100 feet, etc.—American Agriculturist.

TYPICAL DAIRY FORM.

Some of the Principal Points Which Distinguish the Milk Cow from the Beef Animal.

An outline is herewith given—taken from an illustration of a noted Guernsey cow—that shows almost the ideal shape for a dairy cow. In breeding to raise the herd year by year to a higher average of merit, it will be well to keep such an outline as this constantly in one's mind. It is true that not every cow with a perfect dairy form shows herself to be of exceptional dairy merit, but the best dairy cows so uniformly correspond to such external characteristics that one will make no mistake in making the dairy form his ideal in breeding. Not all cows with "dairy form" show excellence at the pail and churn; but few, on the other hand, show such excellence that do not show these external characteristics. It is the only wise course, then, to breed for them, and to regard the exceptions that occur as "proving the rule."

The distinguishing external mark that characterize a good dairy cow—which are so excellently shown in this outline—are wedge-shape for the body, large in the "barrel" and rear quarters, and light and thin in the fore-quarters; a large udder with large, well-placed teats, looseness and yellowness of skin; severe leanness of body as opposed to the rounded and plump form of the partly beef animal, thinness of neck, fineness and waxiness of horns, a "dishing" face, and full, mild eye. Experience has shown that the great body of the best dairy cows possess such points as have been mentioned. It is safe, then, for the breeder to photograph such an outline as is here given firmly upon his mind.—Webb Donnell, in Orange Judd Farmer.

THE DAIRY STABLE.

To Keep It Clean and Free from Bad Odors Should Be the Proprietor's First Duty.

Keeping the cow stable clean and sweet is one of the necessary requisites of good dairying. It is impossible to draw milk in a stable that is nauseating in its atmosphere and have the milk pure. The atmosphere furnishes the cause of bad odors that become worse when developed in the milk. It is not infrequent that a man takes great pains to have his hands washed and clean clothes on when he milks, and yet allows the odors of the manure to so permeate the whole stable that it is impossible to get good results as to a clean product. Every few months the stable should be given a thorough cleaning, using not only lye washes but disinfectants as well. Then the daily task should be to keep it clean. Of course it is not possible to do as a great New Jersey dairyman does—keep a man to do nothing but to remove the droppings as fast as they are made, but the barn should be cleaned out often enough to prevent the odors from permeating everything. Whitewashing is valuable because it not only covers up germs that may have escaped the disinfectant washes, but acts as a reminder to the dairyman that his stable is to be kept clean. Dirt cannot accumulate on whitewash without being recognized, and thus the cleanings are likely to be nearer together. Some have adopted the practice of painting the boards near the cows with coal tar. This would appear to be a good thing, as it prevents the boards taking in filth and holding it. They should also be easier cleaned for this painting.—Farmers' Review.

HINTS FOR DAIRYMEN.

The cow loves a generous feeder.

Better let that calf be a little fat than a little starved.

No man can have a clean conscience and a dirty cow-stable.

Be sure you are feeding the good cow enough; be more sure you are not feeding a poor one too much.

The good cow will make milk either from her food or from her system—feed is cheaper than cow.

Let the cow's bed be warm and clean and comfortable these nights—Jack Frost is an insatiable consumer of milk.

Not the least valuable merit of good rich silage is its palatability; to make the cow's "mouth water" is a wise part of feeding.

Cows don't always know enough when turned out in the cold to skip around to keep warm and make themselves "healthy." They are more likely to find the most protected spot and stand still while they ruminate upon the proposition that their owner is a fool.—W. F. McSparran, in National Stockman.

The Consumption of Butter.

The statement that the consumption of butter per capita is increasing is true and is likely to have an important bearing on the dairy interests of the whole country. Butter has become a necessary article of food for the great mass of people, and is being more generally used every year, especially when wage earners are well employed. People need not be very old to remember when butter was a luxury to the working man and during the winter was seldom on the table. Now it is a staple article of food all the year round and must be sweet and good at that.—Rural World.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR.

The philatelic world awaits the stamp changes resulting from the Boer-British conflict.

Victor Robert, the well-known French stamp collector, has presented his splendid collection to the Paris Cabinet de Estampes in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the introduction of postage stamps in France.

An entirely new set of postage stamps for Persia has been made in the Netherlands. They were made in consequence of wholesale thefts on the part of high Persian postal officials. The new series has been changed in color, but not design.

The post office department is having trouble with people who are putting revenue stamps on their letters instead of the two-cent red postal. All such letters, if they bear the imprint of the sender, are returned; otherwise they go to the dead letter office.

Cuban stamped envelopes have been issued. The head of Columbus is in the center, Cuba above, and the value below. The colors are: 1-cent, green on white and amber; 2-cent, red on white and amber; 5-cent, blue on white and amber; wrapper, 1-cent, green on manila; 2-cent, red on manila.

TRADE IN WILD ANIMALS.

Tigers and elephants do not thrive in captivity as do lions, and their young are scarce.

Elephants have decreased in value to importers from $10,000 to $1,500 each.

It used to be that an importer of animals could get $5,000 for a fine lion, but nowadays young lions bred in captivity are so many that they are a drug on the market.

There is a considerable demand abroad for American animals and a young bison will sell for $1,000, while moose and elk, diamond-back rattlesnakes and alligators are much called for.

Hippopotami are rare and expensive animals and it is not possible to name a set price for them, as sales are few. The only instance of a hippotomus being born in captivity in this country was when the zoo at Central park, New York, was added to by one of these queer babies.

FRENCH AFFAIRS.

There were 197 wolves killed in France last year, and the bounties equaled 13,075 francs, of $2,615.

The French government pays the Eastern Extension, Australasia and China Telegraph company $300,000 a year.

It is asserted that the wine cellars of France contain champagne enough to supply the world's demand for three years—nearly 150,000,000 bottles.

As the storage of bicycles in Paris during the winter months is expensive, a great many Parisians pawn their machines in the Mont-de-Piete, or state pawnshop. The interest paid on the advance of money is very small, and is a great saving on what would be paid for storage. Besides as the pawnshops cannot say for certain that the bicycles will be reclaimed, they have to keep them in good order, so that they will fetch a satisfactory price should they be placed on the market.

The Craving for Stimulants.

This question has lately attracted a great deal of attention from the medical profession. The use of stimulants seems to be increasing. This clearly shows an exhausted condition of the nerves and blood, which may be remedied only by strengthening the stomach. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do this for you. It brings all the energy of a stimulant with no injurious effect. It cures dyspepsia, constipation and nervousness.

WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES

Regard Peruna as Their Shield Against Catarrh, Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrhal Diseases.

MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, LATE CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent barrister, of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. She is the best known woman in America. As the pioneer of her sex in the legal profession she has gathered fame and fortune. In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, she says:

"I have used your Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Bennett, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, hay fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down, and with nerves unstrung."

Yours truly, Belva A. Lockwood.

Catarrh may attack any organ of the body. Women are especially liable to catarrh of the pelvic organs. There are one hundred cases of catarrh of the pelvic organs to one of catarrh of the head. Most people think, because they have no catarrh of the head, they have no catarrh at all. This is a great mistake, and is the cause of many cases of sickness and death. Something for Mothers to Think About.

EVERY CHILD born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available.

That the Cuticura remedies are all that could be desired for the alleviation of the suffering of skin-tortured infants and children and the comfort of worn-out worried mothers has been demonstrated in countless homes in every land. Their absolute safety, purity, and sweetness, instantaneous and grateful relief, speedy cure, and great economy leave nothing more to be desired by anxious parents. Evidence is found in the mass of letters received from grateful parents, testifying to the incalculable benefits they have derived from the use of these preparations in the treatment of infantile skin and scalp disorders. There is a ring of truth and sincerity about the testimonials here submitted that stamps them genuine, and when a mother writes, as does Mrs. E. Butler of 1289 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., in simple, grateful language, of the good Cuticura has accomplished in her home, parents everywhere must regard these remedies as household necessities. Mrs. Butler says:—

"My oldest boy, ago nine years, was troubled with sores on different parts of the body, especially on the leg, about twenty-four in all. They would break out the size of a five-cent piece, and would fester very much and eject a pus. They were very painful. After my former experience with the cure of my little girl with CUTICURA remedies, I did not bother with the doctor in this case, but gave him the CUTICURA treatment which completely cured him in four weeks. As a rule, my four children are very robust and healthy, these two, the baby and the eldest boy, being the only ones ever troubled with anything like this I mentioned, but thanks to CUTICURA remedies they are all now in perfect health."

What can be more convincing to a mother than the following graphic letter from Mrs. J. C. Freese of 300 South First Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.:—

"My baby was about four weeks old when he began to suffer from that terrible disease, eczema. I tried every remedy I thought would do him good. I even called in the doctor, but I used his medicine to no avail. I did not know what to do with him. He cried all the time and his face was equal to a raw piece of meat. It was horrible, and looked as if there never was any skin on it. I had to carry him around in a pillow. I was fairly discouraged. It was then recommended to use CUTICURA remedies. The first time I used them I could see the change. I used about half a box of CUTICURA Ointment, and not one half cake of CUTICURA SOAP, and at the end of one short week my baby was entirely cured. There has never been a trace of it since. To-day his skin is as smooth and soft as a piece of silk."

Another remarkable instance of the effectiveness of the Cuticura remedies is found in the terrible experience of the baby daughter of Mr. R. A. Lapham, 111½ West Side Square, Springfield, Ill. Mr. Lapham writes as follows:—

"Our little daughter was troubled from her birth with eczema. Her face, arms, hands, and neck would break out with red pimples which would swell and become terribly inflamed, water would ooze out like great beads of perspiration, finally this would dry up and the skin would crack and peel off. She suffered terribly. Had to wear soft mittens on her hands to keep her from scratching. We gave two of our leading physicians a good trial, but neither of them helped her in the least. I purchased CUTICURA SOAP, CUTICURA Ointment, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT. She improved at once and is now never troubled, although we used less than one bottle of RESOLVENT, three boxes of CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP."

In a few forceful words, Mrs. C. Brand of Conesville, N. Y., vividly portrays an experience common to many mothers, and her letter, which follows, is full of comfort and encouragement for anxious parents:—

"Two years ago this winter my boy began to break out with a scaly rash. It nearly covered his back and calves of legs. I heard glowing reports of CUTICURA remedies and thought to try them. Three cakes of CUTICURA SOAP, two boxes of CUTICURA Ointment, one bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT cured him. I think them wonderful remedies."

The economy of the Cuticura treatment is shown by the letter of Mr. W. M. Nichell, of Lexington, Okl., who spent one thousand dollars with doctors, specialists, and medical colleges in a vain attempt to find relief for his little son. A friend recommended the use of the Cuticura remedies, and he gives the following account of the cure:—

"My son, when he was six weeks old, had a breaking out on the top of his head. It spread all over his head, and then his arms broke out from shoulder to wrist. Around his body and around his legs from his knees to his ankles, was a solid sheet. My family doctor treated him for eighteen months, but no good was accomplished. I tried four more, and then a medical college in St. Louis six months. No good yet. Spent not less than a thousand dollars in money and time. Old Mr. Barney Clap insisted on my trying CUTICURA remedies, telling me he had a spell like my child's himself. By the time my wife had used the CUTICURA Ointment up, he began to improve and got so he could sleep short naps, and gave me and my wife some rest. Thank the Lord, he is now well, fat, hearty, and stout as any boy, after six long years of itching, crying, and worrying. CUTICURA remedies cured him."

Three children in one household suffering simultaneously from eczema. Such was the distressing condition of Mrs. Annie Ring of 515 East Thirteenth Street, New York City, who tells her experience in these words:—

"My second child got eczema when seven months old. Three months later my first child got it, and following him the last one, two years old, fell a victim. For twenty months they suffered fearful agony. Their whole bodies, especially their faces, were so sore and raw that the little ones were blind half the time. No words can describe the suffering of my second child, whose whole body was one bloody mass. He was constantly crying, could get no sleep, and he actually did not look human. I tried doctor after doctor, but none afforded the slightest relief. I decided to try CUTICURA. The first application brought relief in each case, and after fourteen days' treatment with CUTICURA SOAP and CUTICURA Ointment, the worst case was cured, and the whole neighborhood is surprised at the wonderful effect of CUTICURA."

One of the most wonderful of cures is that of the little daughter of Mrs. G. A. Conrad of Lisbon, N. H., whose sufferings from eczema were so intense that her hands had to be tied to keep her from tearing her flesh. The mother writes:—

"When my little girl was six months old, she had eczema. We had used cold creams and all kinds of remedies, but nothing did her any good; in fact, she kept getting worse. I used to wrap her hands up, and when I would dress her, I had to put her on the table, for I could not hold her. She would kick and scream, and, when she could, she would tear her face and arms almost to pieces. I used four boxes of CUTICURA Ointment, two cakes of CUTICURA SOAP, and the CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and she was cured, and I see no traces of the humor left. I can truthfully say that they have saved her life."

It will afford us pleasure to have parents whose little ones are afflicted with any form of skin, scalp, or blood humor, write to any one of the above addresses for corroboration of the facts given, and we have no doubt that such an appeal will elicit still stronger testimony regarding the wonderful curative properties of the CUTICURA remedies. The full set, for complete external and internal treatment, costs but $1.25, and consists of CUTICURA SOAP (35c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA Ointment (50c.), to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp, and blood humors, rashes, itchings, and irritations, with loss of hair, when the best physicians, and all other remedies fail.

A few days ago one of our prominent citizens received a "green-goods" letter from a New York sharper, who is fishing for rural suckers, but in this instance the dealer in "green-goods" lost his bait. In the letter the Walton man is told that 99 out 100 up-to-date men gladly accept the proposition made him. Full particulars as to how to conduct the negotiations for the "queer" is given our friend, but he wants none of Mr. Green-goods Man's supplies.

Miss Emma Osborn has two bills of Continental Currency, each bearing date 1778. One is a forty dollar bill, and the other is a five. While Mr. Carlisle was Secretary of the Treasury she forwarded these two bills to him, to ascertain if they were redeemable, but they were returned with the information that "Continental Currency" was never redeemable by the United States. This money is printed on very indifferent paper, and considering its very great age has surely been carefully preserved.

SENATOR GOEBEL

Shot Down By An Assassin at Frankfort

About 11:15 a. m., yesterday after Senator Goebel had entered the Capitol Grounds on his way to the Senate Chamber, he was shot down by some person who fired from a window in the Executive Building. Jack Chinn, who was with the Senator at the time says:

"Senator Goebel, Eph Lillard and myself were walking through the yard, going to the State House. I heard a shot, and, looking in the direction of the east window of the Capitol, I saw a cloud of smoke. There were four or five shots fired. I could not tell from whence the shots were being fired. Three or four shots were fired from one direction, but the shot which hit Goebel came from a different part of the building."

As to which window the assassin fired from statements conflict, but they all agree that it was a third story window in the Executive Building. Five shots were fired from a Winchester, but only one took effect, striking the Senator in the breast near the right nipple, passing clear through his body.

In a few minutes after the shooting Taylor had called out troops and the Executive Mansion and the Executive Building put under guard, while other companies from out in the State were ordered to Frankfort at once.

A man by the name of Whittaker, ran out of the Executive Building immediately after the shooting, was arrested and sent to Louisville.

It may be that a mountaineer did the shooting and it may not, at any rate Urey Woodson told a truth when he said:

"The man now in jail accused of firing the shot, even though he be guilty, is not the real criminal. Threats of this deed and incendiary newspaper articles for months past have brought it about.

It appears that the Excutive Building has been housing mountaineers and guns, for several days, and it is now incumbent upon the occupants of that building to bring the assassin to justice, as in that way only can they escape the odium that will otherwise attach.

The papers that have been preparing men for this desperate deed are out in editorials pretending to deplore the awful affair, but an intelligent public knows a thing or two. Had these same papers been engaged for the last few months promulgating the same sentiments that they avow this morning, this terrible crime would have been averted.

Some of the leading Republicans in the State denounce the diabolical crime.

The contest board has reported in favor of the seating of Goebel and Beckham. The well laid plot to assassinate Goeble has made him many warm friends all over the State.

It was thought at first the wound would prove fatal in a few hours, but the last report from the capital this morning, at ten o'clock was that Senator Goebel appeared to be better.

Wittaker, who was arrested for shooting Goebel says the report that he had five pistols on him is untrue; that he had only three.

THE intimidating tactics that have been so prominent in Frankfort for the last few weeks are only a continuation of those instituted in Louisville a day or two before the last election.

JOSEPH H. LEWIS a Republican, and at one time Chief Justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, publishes a lengthy card over his signature, from which the following is an extract:

"In making the contest Goebel simply exercised a legal right which a candidate for any other office in the State from Constable up has and which public policy requires to be exercised whenever reasonable grounds exist for doing so. Whether Goebel has or has not reasonable grounds for his contest, it is not in my province as a private citizen to say. But that his opponents do not regard them as trivial attempts to bribe and overawe members of the General Assembly, and threats of forcible resistance to a decision in his favor plainly show. The act of March, 1898, sometimes called the "Goebel law," amending the existing law, though not legitimately affecting the contest, is often referred to evidently to create prejudice. That act did not materially change the duties and responsibilities of officers of election and of the boards of canvassers and contest, but the principal purpose was to change the mode of selecting and appointing the officers. Whether it be a good or bad law is for the General Assembly to say. But be it one or the other, Taylor is not complaining of its operation; for upon returns of officers of election, and finding of a Canvassing board, appointed in pursuance of it, he now holds the certificate of election. It is Goebel who complains that under that law he was wronged. If the decision of the contest be in favor of Goebel he will become the legal Governor, and upon taking the oath of office entitled to take possession and discharge the duties, and Taylor will be powerless to do any official act, and not entitled to official recognition by the Legislature or judicial department or any civil officer or soldier. What, then would be the result of the threatened forcible resistance to a decision favorable to Goebel? There might be rioting and bloodshed. But if a soldier should under order of Taylor, claiming to be Governor, kill a peace officer or citizen, he would be guilty of murder; for the law would require him to know Goebel, not Taylor, was the legal Governor. It has been said that failing in forcibly resisting the decision, the Judge of the District Court would be applied to for an injunction or some other process by which to prevent the man decided by the proper tribunal to be the legal Governor, from acting as such and to enable the man decided not to be such to hold the office. I do not believe the Judge of that court would interfere, for he has not a semblance of jurisdiction. If, however he does so he will subject himself to both civil action and to impeachment. I hope that upon sober second thought all will agree in the matter of the pending contest to let the case take its course."

THAT correspondent who wrote to his paper from Frankfort, last week, that not one of that mountain mob that overrun that city on Thursday, uttered a word that could not with propriety, have been spoken in a church, probably attends church so seldom that he does not know what kind of language is used there. With the exception of two or three accounts of the mob, all others agree, and justify the conclusion, that it was the roughest collection of Kentuckians, the number considered, that ever assembled for any purpose.

If it is such an outrage for Mr. Goebel, Democrat, to contest the seat of Mr. Taylor, Republican, why is it not equally as great an outrage for Walter Evans, Republican, of Louisville, to contest the seat of Oscar Turner, Democrat, who defeated him for Congress? The majority against Evans in his district is larger than Taylor's plurality against Goebel in the State.

How would it do for Oscar Turner to send a special train load of Louisville's rag-time politicians to Washington for the purpose of overawing the members of Congress, and thus secure a vote in his favor and against Walter Evans, the contestee?

Editorial Paragraphs.

There is still chance for the owners of cotton captured during the civil war and sold by the United States, to make good their claims. There are still $9,000,000 available for paying them,

It will soon be difficult to find a Republican statesman who has not been mentioned for the Vice-Presidential nomination. Hanna is about the only one who has escaped that sort of notoriety so far.

Why wasn't Roberts born in Sulu? Then the administration might be paying him a salary to maintain his harem, instead of trying to drive him from public life while it appoints his co-polygamists postmasters.

It seems that Montague White, who was supposed to visit Washington as agent of the Boer government, has no credentials as such. But the administration, believing that he had, clearly showed its subserviency to Great Britain by refusing to receive him before it was asked to do so.

Now virtuous Kansas, which always gives huge Republican majorities, has had a lynching, and it is stated that no steps will be taken to punish the perpetrators. It is now in point for the New England critics to talk of the horrible crimes perpetrated where the Republican party controls.

Senator Platt, of New York, wants an international commission to investigate the effect of the diversion of the waters of the Great Lakes on the surrounding country. The Chicago river is not mentioned, but the bill is clearly aimed at that odoriferous stream. Senator Platt's interest in the matter is not quite clear.

A decision of Chief Justice Marshall has been found in which he states that the United States means "all territory over which the United States exercises control." This certainly includes the Philippines and all the other islands. But it will make no difference to the Republican leaders. Having repudiated the Constitution, they will not hesitate to overrule the Supreme Court.

General Buller's flanking movement will not go down in history with former brilliant efforts in that direction. When Grant tried to flank Lee out of Richmond, for instance, he fought at every opportunity, but General Buller holds back whenever he finds the Boers. He may well fear to attempt to storm such positions, but a constant succession of such refusals of battle will ruin the morale of his troops.

The Democratic Senators and Representatives got together on the occasion of Mr. Bryan's visit to Washington, and agreed to a definite Philippine policy to be pursued until the next National Convention. Its principal tenets are the suppression of the rebellion, organization of a republic, withdrawal of the army, abandonment of sovereignty, and substitution of a protectorate, retention of coaling stations, and repayment by the Filipinos of the $20,000,000 paid for the islands.

Democratic charges that the President had knowingly appointed polygamists to office, appear only too well founded. The Post Office Department has been forced to admit that it had received petitions against the appointments detailing the facts under oath, and had filed them away with merely a formal acknowledgment of their receipt. The Secretary to the President has admitted that he received such petitions and merely passed them on without consideration. The attitude of the President and his advisers was clearly one of indifference as to whether the men he selected for important posts were violating the laws or not.

PISTOLS were more plentiful than spoons in Frankfort, last Thursday, and some of the mountain guardians of the peace used theirs to stir their coffee with.

THE Boers keep the English troops guessing all the time, and up to date they have proven themselves very poor guessers.

Milton Kendall and his sons, who are accused of the Cassell murder, were taken to Nicholasville, guarded by a detachment of militia. The examining trial was set for February 1, and the soldiers will remain until that date.

Bourbon county is noted for its lovers of fine dogs. Messrs. John Brennan, Aylette Buckner, C. R. James, Henry Fuhrman and Junius Clay each recently shipped fine dogs to Ed Norton, a professional dog trainer, at Eustes, Florida, to be educated.

The bill for an appropriation for a new Capitol building will be reported favorably by the Committee, and will pass without a kick? The Legislators, Democratic and Republican, in the present Assembly, we are glad to say have pride in the old Commonwealth.—Argus.

Dan Wireman, a prominent citizen of Magoffin county, shot and killed Jake Hale, jr., a school teacher. Wireman, Lee Shepherd and Benjamin Hale, were in a row, and Jake Hale was trying to keep down the fight, when Wireman discharged his gun accidentally, and the ball struck Hale in the breast under the heart.

Mr. John Johnson, of the Bohon neighborhood, killed a pigeon one day last week, in which he found a tapeworm over four feet long. The "hydra-headed monster," as the patent medicine man would say, was about three-eighths of an inch in width—in fact, it greatly resembled a piece of white tape.—Harrodsburg Sayings.

The indictment against John Whallen for conspiracy to bribe a State Senator, was dismissed in the Franklin Circuit court, and rereferred to the grand jury. During the investigation one of the grand jurors was excused on account of illness, and another man put on the jury in his place, making 13 men that participated in the hearing of the evidence, hence the dismissal.

R. R. Pickering, ex-Sheriff, of Caldwell county, was mortally wounded by Ed N. Daniel, a prominent merchant. Pickering accused Daniel of inciting Mrs. Boyd to swear out a warrant for Pickering, charging abusive treatment, and went to Daniel's store and began abusing him. Both opened fire at the same time. One shot pierced Pickering's bowels and Daniel is slightly wounded. Both men emptied their guns.

It is believed by some that there are phosphate beds in Logan county as rich as those in Tennessee, and considerable interest is being aroused. A few weeks ago a stranger put in several days in this county prospecting, and it has since been learned that he was an experienced phosphate miner of Franklin, Tenn., and had located a mine not far from Russellville and within a mile and a half from the railroad, but he declined to give further particulars.—Russellville News.

Back in 1864 Tom Storms, of Goldsbury, a slave, was sold and taken South, his wife remaining here. After the war was over nothing was heard from him, and his wife married another negro name Bill Woodson, and she still lives with him in the upper end of the county. It is now reported that some days ago old man Tom Storms returned to Grayson, and the aged woman now has two husbands. The first husband having been sold away from her, the case presents a complicated feature and some difficulty may arise as to which matrimonial knot is not knot.—Litchfield Gazette.

The law in Kentucky against carrying concealed deadly weapons is a farce. The horrible tragedy at Frankfort last week by which several innocent men lost their lives is the result of this lawless practice, and as strange as it may seem, a vitiated public sentiment not only tolerates, but sometimes justifies it. If the laws were more rigorously enforced, men with private grievances would be less prompt to take the law into their own hands. Human life needs to be better protected. Let it be hoped that the recent tragedy, committed almost within the presence of the law-makers of the State, shall quicken public sentiment to a full realization of the dangers that surround us, that proper remedies may be applied to the evil until such horrible occurrences are made impossible.—Georgetown Times.

The grand jury adjourned at noon Saturday, after having found 56 indictments, mostly all for misdemeanors. Thirty-seven of these were against persons for failure to properly list their property for taxation, which is something that has never occurred before, so far as we know. There was one against a corporation for doing business in the State without place of business being filed with the Secretary of State. One true bill was against two young men for racing their horses on the public highway; three were for gaming; one operating a game; three for operating shanty boats without license; one for selling liquor to a minor; one for selling on Sunday; two for carrying pistols; one for cruelty to animals; one assault and battery and two against overseers for failure to properly work the roads.—Carrollton News.

A Prominent Chicago Woman Speaks.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I found it was pleasant to take and it relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered, saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I will never be without this splendid medicine again." For sale by W. F. A Trip to Walton.

Sheriff Beall had some important business at Walton, last Thursday, and we accepted an invitation to accompany him to that hustling town. The journey was made in a buggy, and the first hour and a half after our arrival was consumed in restoring a normal temperature by keeping in close proximity to the large stove in 'Squire Curley's store. About the time the thawing-out process was completed our efficient Walton correspondent, George M. Casey, put in his appearance. He is one of the best posted men in the town, and holds the honorable position of permanent chairman of the Democratic caucus that meets at 'Squire Curley's store every night.

Several persons having passed in and out and our friend Joseph Glenn not having been one of the number, we asked, "what has become of Joe Glinn?" and some member of the crowd answered, "when he is not trying to pursuade a veal calf to go to the morning train, he can be found at home studying a war map of South Africa and noting the movements of the opposing armies. He has announced that the English will soon meet with a severe reverse." Recent military events in the Transvaal prove that Mr. Glinn knew whereof he predicted.

The noon hour having arrived, the sheriff escorted us to Mrs. King's where an appetite keyed up to the highest notch by a long, cold ride, was satisfied with a good, substantial meal. Mrs. King and daughter are very attentive to the comforts of their patrons, and their house is the stopping place for many of the weary and hungry travelers who visit Walton.

After dinner we started out to take in the town, but a stiff breeze from the west soon drove us into Richard & Dean's store, where several persons were enjoying a good fire. Among the crowd were Joe Glinn and Joe Fisher, the latter trying to intimidate some of the boys who had been hunting foxes down in his neighborhood, but they made a date for another visit to that section, and Fisher appeared reconciled to their coming. It was here that the crowd was discussing the excitement that Shaw, a buyer for the tobacco trust, had created among the growers of parts of Grant, Boone and Kenton counties. He had been paying several dollars more on the hundred than the local buyers, and Dry Ridge, the town at which he was receiving, was litterly blockaded with wagons loaded with the weed. One farmer present said he took his tobacco to Dry Ridge on Monday, and that he had been notified that it would be unloaded in time for him to get his wagon on Sunday. Shaw had been paying as high as $10 and everybody was willing to take that price.

Just before leaving the town, we called at Edwards Bros'. hardware store, as a fellow would not feel like he had visited Walton if he did not meet Kirk and Dolph. W. H. Metcalf, local manager for the T. A. Snyder Preserves Co., who has contracted for the growing of about 500 acres of tomatoes in the vicinity of Walton, was there dishing out tomato seeds for those who desired them, and gave us a package to bring home with directions to distribute. His orders have been obeyed, the seeds being placed in the hands of the best gardeners hereabout.

It was two o'clock when we bid adieu to Henry Diers and his clerk, A. R. Hance, and started on the return trip, which, before half completed, made us wish we had a hot drink like the one Joe Glinn had, a few hours before, told a crowd about him and Richard Finnell taking several years ago.

It was decidedly the dullest day we ever saw in Walton, owing, of course, to the very disagreeable weather.

Old People Made Young.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Heart trouble, Constipation and Rheumatism, by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion, and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It is a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." The members of the Massachusetts legislature present a cosmopolitan record when it comes to the question of nativity. Six of them were born in England, six in Ireland, four in Canada, two in Scotland and one each in Nova Scotia, Germany and Russia.

An item in the estimates for the congressional library is $1,845 for the purchase of an automobile for the use of Librarian Putnam. At present the librarian is supplies with a horse and carriage, and it is claimed that the purchase of an automobile will really work a saving to the government.

During the last year 23,209,901 bushels of grain and 2,198,513 gallons of molasses were used for the manufacture of liquor in this country, which produced 107,618,120 gallons of spirits and 1,657,808 gallons of rum, making a total of 109,275,928. This is about one gallon and a half to every man, woman and child in the country.

Speaker Henderson has made a new regulation in regard to obituary addresses. Hereafter doorkeepers are not allowed to take in cards, or summon members to the corridor while these addresses are making. His idea seems to be to encourage the few members who remain to pay their respects to the memory of their former associates.

During a murder trial at New Brunswick N. J. the other day, one of the witnesses testified that in Hungary all persons intending to immigrate to the United States are given to understand that nearly every American carries a revolver, and is very quick on the trigger. To this fact, the witness said, is due the readiness of Hungarians to use knives and guns in quarrels.

"The portfolio of the navy," said Secretary Long, the other day, "entails some hard work, but for my part I have never known such hard work as I went through with as a teacher, when, for two years, I was connected with the Westford academy, in Massachusetts. Germany, which ranks next to the United Kingdom as a market for the products of American agriculture, received about 13 per cent. of the exports for 1894-1898, the average yearly value amounting to $86,320,274. France, with purchases that averaged $43,988,700 a year, or about 6.6 per cent. of the total, was the third country in importance. These three countries—the United Kingdom, Germany and France—received together nearly 75 per cent. of the total agricultural exports.

The newest addition to the Hamburg-American line's fleet, the twin-screw express steamship Deutschland, has just been launched at the famous yards of the Vulcan Shipbuilding Co., of Stettin. The new vessel is contracted to be the fastest and one of the most magnificent vessels in the world. Her length is 686½ feet, her width 67½ feet and depth 44 feet; her capacity is 16,600 tons, and her twin-screw engines of 35,000 horse-power will develop an average speed of 23 knots.

Of the 200 teachers employed in the New York state normal schools, 13 receive the same salary as the messenger in the executive chamber and 135 receive smaller salaries. Thirteen receive the same salaries as the porters in the department of public instruction, and a change to the position of porter would raise the salaries of 149 teachers. More than half the teachers are worth less to the state from a financial standpoint than the janitors and firemen of the state normal school buildings.

It is thought that an important discovery has been made in New Orleans by which certain gums can be removed from cottonseed oil, thus making an oil for mixing with paint where linseed oil is now used. If the expectations are realized an immediate result will be the reduction in the price of paint, and an increase in the market for cottonseed oil. The new product is said to be superior to linseed oil, giving the paint a gloss equal to the finest enamel and withstanding a heat of 185 degrees.

Digging up Babylon is a scientific work continued by a party of Americans representing the University of Pennsylvania. Since February they have kept from 200 to 400 natives employed on the ruins of Nippur. The finds for 1899 embrace over 4,700 tablets, silver and bronze rings, bracelets, nose and earrings, anklets and beads, coins, pieces of jade and a gold coffin-plate. Graves were opened to the number of 431. A small head of yellow marble in fine preservation, and a torso of black stone were discovered.

Dawson City is doing pretty well, according to reports from the vice counsul stationed there. While the town has lost in population during the past summer, it has gained in wealth, and is now a thriving, substantial town. The Yukon council has expended in building roads and trails during the year about $70,000 out of the $175,000 appropriated for this purpose by the Dominion government. Considerable improvement work has been done on the streets, and $15,000 has been expended on drains and ditches, which had the effect of improving the sanitary condition of the town.

LOSS WAS VERY HEAVY.

Buller Details Warren's Capture and Retreat From Spion Kop.

His Forces Have Withdrawn to the South of the Tugela River—Dr. Jameson Wounded—The Latest News From the Front.

London, Jan. 29.—A dispatch from Gen. Buller gives details of the attack, capture and abandonment of Spion Kop by Gen. Warren's forces. He says that Spion Kop was abandoned on account of lack of water, inability to bring artillery there and the heavy Boer fire. Gen. Buller gives no list of casualties. His whole force withdrew south of the Tugela river, with the evident intention of reaching Ladysmith by another route.

The Boers say that the British lost 1,500 killed Wednesday. It is believed here that this includes the wounded.

If Boer reports are to be accepted, the abandonment of Spion Kop was due to the inability of the British to resist the Boers; that the Boers carried the first trenches and took 150 prisoners.

Following is the text of Gen. Buller's dispatch, dated Spearman's Camp, Saturday, January 27, 6:30 p. m.:

"On January 20 Warren drove back the enemy and obtained possession of the southern crests of the high table land extending from the line of Acton Homes and Monger's Poort to the western Ladysmith hills. From then to January 25 he remained in close contact with the enemy.

"The enemy held a strong position in a range of small kopjes stretching from northwest to southeast across the plateau from Acton Homes through Spion Kop to the left bank of the Tugela.

"The actual position held was perfectly tenable, but did not lend itself to an advance, as the southern slopes were so steep that Warren could not get an effective artillery in position, and the water supply was a difficulty.

"On January 23 I assented to his attacking Spion Kop, a large hill, indeed a mountain, which was evidently the key to the position, but was far more accessible from the north than from the south.

"On the night of January 23 he attacked Spion Kop, but found it very difficult to hold, as its perimeter was too large, and water, which he had been led to believe existed in this extraordinarily dry season, was found very deficient.

"The crests were held all that day against severe attacks and a heavy shell fire. Our men fought with great gallantry. I would especially mention the conduct of the 2d Camerons and the 3d King's Rifles, who supported the attack on the mountain from the steepest side, and in each case fought their way to the top, and the 2d Lancashire fusiliers and 2d Middlesex, who magnificently maintained the best traditions of the British army throughout the trying day of January 24, and Thornycroft's mounted infantry, who fought through the day equally well alongside of them.

"Gen. Woodgate, who was in command at the summit, having been wounded, the officer who succeeded him decided on the night of January 24 to abandon the position, and did so before dawn January 25.

"I reached Warren's camp at 5 a. m. on January 25, and decided that a second attack upon Spion Kop was useless and that the enemy's right was too strong to allow me to force it.

"Accordingly I decided to withdraw the force to the south of the Tugela. At 6 a. m. we commenced withdrawing the train, and by 8 a. m., January 27 (Saturday), Warren's force was concentrated south of the Tugela, without the loss of a man or a pound of stores.

"The fact that the force could withdraw from actual touch—in some cases the lines were less than 1,000 yards apart—with the enemy in the manner it did is, I think, sufficient evidence of the morale of the troops, and that we were permitted to withdraw our cumbrous ox and mule transports across the river, 85 yards broad, with 20-foot banks and a very swift current, unmolested, is, I think, proof that the enemy has been taught to respect our soldiers' fighting powers."

Boer Headquarters, Modder Spruit, Upper Tugela, January 24, midnight, via Lourenzo Marques, January 25.—Some Vryheid burghers from the outposts on the highest hills of the Spion Kop group rushed into the laager saying that the kop was lost and that the English had taken it. Re-enforcements were ordered up, but nothing could be done for some time, the hill being enveloped in thick mist.

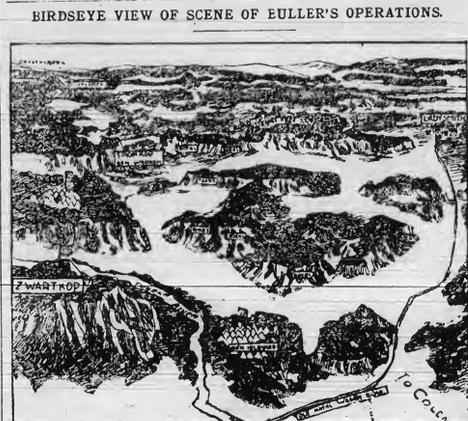
At dawn the Heidelberg and Carolina contingents, supplemented from other commandos, began the ascent of the hill. Three spurs, precipitous projections, faced the Boer position. Up these the advance was made. The horses were left under the first spur of rocks.

Scaling the steep hill, the Boers found that the English had improved the opportunity and entrenched heavily. Between the lines of trenches was an open veldt, which had to be rushed under a heavy rifle fire, not only from rifles, but of lyddite and shrappel from field guns.

Three forces ascended the three spurs co-ordinately, under cover of fire from the Free State Krupps, a Creusot and a big Maxim. The English tried to rush the Boers with the bayonet, but their infantry went down before the Boer rifle fire as before a scythe.

The Boer investing party advanced step by step until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when a white flag went up and 150 men in the front trenches surrendered, being sent as prisoners to the head laager.

The Boer advance continued on the two copjes east of Spion Kop. Many Boers were shot, but so numerous were the burghers that the gaps filled automatically. Toward twilight they reached the summit of the second kopje, but did not get further.



The British Maxims belched flame, but a wall of fire from Mausers held the English back. Their center, under this pressure, gradually gave way and broke, abandoning the position.

Firing continued for some time, and then the fusiliers and the light horse, serving as infantry, threw up their arms and rushed out of the trenches.

The effect of the abandonment of Spion Kop by the English can hardly be gauged as yet, but it must prove to be immense.

An unusually high proportion of lyddite shells did not explode.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF SCENE OF EULLER'S OPERATIONS.

This view, drawn from topographical maps, shows the country in the vicinity of Ladysmith as it wou'd appear viewed from a balloon. Spion Kop, the height captured and later evacuated by Gen. Warren, and the plateau back of it are prominent features of the drawing. The nature of the country still between Buller and Ladysmith, the routes of the main roads, and the location of the principal Boer forces are all indicated.

Willing to Help the English.

North Judson, Ind., Jan. 29.—Daniel Lake post, G. A. R., passed a resolution, offering the services of the post to Queen Victoria in the war with the Boers.

Was Lincoln's Partner in Business.

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Charles Maltby, who, for three years was associated in business with Abraham Lincoln, at Waynesville, Ill., is dead, aged 88 years. He was born in Vermont and during an active life occupied many positions of trust.

Prospects of Trouble.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 27.—The prospects are good for a serious conflict between the agents and telegraph operators and the Southern railway system. Possibly the firemen, conductors and trainmen will finally be involved.

Will Wood a Reporter Now.

Lebanon, Ind., Jan. 29.—Wm. Wood, of Pearl Bryan fame, son of Rev. D. M. Wood, of this city, has quit the envy, becoming a regular member of the staff of the San Francisco Report.

Private Telegrams Stopped.

Chaplain in the Navy Appointed.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The president announced that he would appoint Father Reynolds, of St. Matthew's Catholic church of Washington, chaplain in the navy, to succeed Father Parks, resigned.

A SETTLEMENT SOON.

Operators and Employes May Adopt a Compromise Scale.

The Miners Will Come to the Screen Agreement Remaining as It Is, With the Double Standard in Illinois.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 29.—The delegates to the conference between the miners and operators have been talking the situation over, and the surface indications are that both sides stand ready to make some concessions, and the probability is the first meeting of the joint scale committee will result in each side giving out some hint of what these concessions are.

The final outcome of the matter, as predicted by those who have attended other conferences, is that the operators will pay a few cents per ton more than their first offer of 9 cents advance; the miners will come to the screen agreement remaining as it is, and Illinois will come into the double standard agreement now in force in the three other states of the competitive field.

In order to arrive at this settlement, sufficient pressure will be necessary to bring the Illinois miners into a compact of this kind. The miners of that state are making money, and have a large sum available for a defense fund. These conditions do not exist in all of the other states, and the influence needed to make Illinois accept a return to the use of screens must come from the delegates representing the miners in Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania.

Illinois operators are a unit in the desire to go back to the double standard. In this they are backed by their colleagues from other states, and as the majority generally rules, the logical conclusion forces itself upon the observer that Illinois must yield the point.

The miners, especially those from Illinois, who outnumber the delegations from other states, say they despair of effecting an agreement at this convention. They say that an advance of even 25 cents a ton and the re-enactment of the double standard of measurement would mean a reduction to them, and that they would rather remain out of work an entire year than accept the double standard.

In the matter of the establishment of a differential rate, the miners take this position: Under the present conditions in Ohio, the operators pay 33 cents for loading after a machine, 3 cents for drilling and 8 cents for cutting, making a total of 44 cents for a ton of machine-mined coal ready to be hauled out of the mine. The price of a ton of pick-mined coal is 66 cents; hence the differential between machine and pick mining is 22 cents.

Miners say the evil of the system of machine mining is that whenever the rate for pick mining is advanced, the differential increases, which is unfair to the miner, because if the machine mine operators can secure a market at a fixed differential, there is no good reason why the differential should be increased whenever the pick miner secures an advance in the mining rate.

KILLED WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Horrible Deed Perpetrated By a Cincinnati Man—Attempted to Burn the Bodies of His Victims.

Cincinnati, Jan. 29.—A tragedy, horrible in all its details, was enacted Sunday morning on the third floor of a tenement house at 212 Magnolia street. Charles Bartruff, a demented man, killed his two little children and bent his wife so badly with a heavy glass cake stand that she died a few hours later.

Not content with his terrible deed the maniac tried to burn the bodies of his victims. In order to accomplish the act of cremation the maniac made a pyre of the furniture in the dingy apartment. The interference of neighbors and the police only prevented the murderer from burning the horribly mutilated bodies of his victims.

Will Enforce the Protocol.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 28.—The Brazilian gunboats Jurucuma, Iguahy, Tamhen and Tonantins, besides a force of troops, have been ordered to proceed to Acre to enforce the protocol agreed upon between Bolivia and Brazil and to protect all citizens. Gen. Leitre Castro has been made commander of the national guard, in place of Gen Fernando Mendez, editor and proprietor of the Jornal de Brazil.

Hot Weather in Australia.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 28.—The weather in the vicinity of Melbourne, Australia, has broken all records for heat recently. On New Year's day five deaths occurred from heat prostration, and as late as 5 o'clock in the afternoon the thermometer stood at 114 in the shade. In the sun the temperature was recorded as high as 156 degrees, and it stood at that point for several hours.

Dropped Dead in a Postoffice.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 27.—Col. Louis Strassburger, of this city, dropped dead in the post office, the result of a stroke of apoplexy. Col. Strassburger formerly resided in Baltimore. He served on the military staffs of three governors of Maryland, McLean, Lloyd and Jackson. Col. Strassburger served for a year and a half in the confederate army, enlisting at the age of 13. He had been poor commissioner and a city councilor of Baltimore and was prominent in business life here.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senate—It was another day of oratory in the senate. Little business beyond routine being transacted. Mr. Pritchard (N. C.), delivered a long and carefully prepared address upon the race question in the south, his remarks being addressed particularly to-day to the proposed amendment to the constitution of North Carolina, which, if enacted, he said, would disfranchise a large class of voters, both white and black. He was followed by Mr. Turner (Wash.) in a speech on the Philippine question in which he arraigned the administration's policy as set out in the president's message.

House—The house was in session only 10 minutes, and nothing of public importance was done except to refer in the speaker for settlement a dispute between the appropriations and military affairs committees over jurisdiction of the estimates for appropriations for the manufacture of small arms at the Rock Island and Springfield arsenals. A few District of Columbia bills of minor importance were passed.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Senate—The committee on privileges and elections made a report on the Quay case. A majority report was against seating him, and the minority advocates giving him the seat. No action was taken. The rest of the day was devoted entirely to speech-making. Mr. Turner and Mr. Ross discussing the Philippine question, and Mr. McEnery delivering his speech on the race question in the south.

House—The Roberts case was the one subject that occupied the time of the house. Arguments were made in favor of and against the polygamist's seat, Messrs. Tayler and Shafroth defending his position in a lengthy speech. No action was taken.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Senate—Routine business occupied the attention of the senate in a brief session. The resolution by Mr. Pettigrew (S. D.), calling upon the president for information regarding the treaty entered into with the sultan of Sulu, was passed. An extended debate was precipitated by a conference report on the census administrative bill, but the census committee gained its point and the measure was sent back to conference.

House—The Roberts case occupied the entire time of the house, the most of the speeches being made in favor of the majority report. No ballot was taken.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senate—A bill was introduced to repeal the war revenue stamp tax; also one for the incorporation of the National Association of Manufacturers, the object being the promotion of the manufacturing interests of the United States. Bills were reported as follows: For erection of 12 light houses and fog signal stations in Alaska; giving United States military attaches at foreign courts the rank and pay of colonel for the time of such service. The urgent deficiency bill, carrying about $3,000,000, was passed without division and practically without debate.

House—The case of Brigham H. Roberts, the Mormon representative-elect from Utah, which has occupied so much of the attention of the house since the assembling of congress, was decided by the adoption of a resolution to exclude him by a vote of 268 to 50. Some minor business was transacted before the debate was resumed. A bill was passed to create another judicial district, in the eastern division of Tennessee. A bill was passed fixing the salary of the postmaster of Washington at $6,000. February 10 was set aside for paying tribute to the memory of the late Representative Settle, of Kentucky. Bills were introduced to pay each volunteer soldier who served in Cuba $250, and each one who served in the Philippines $150, in lieu of travel pay; to prohibit persons not officers of the army or navy from wearing the uniform of the United States.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The greater portion of the session of the house was devoted to eulogies upon the life and public service of the late Vice President Hobart. The tributes paid to his memory were not perfunctory eulogies, but breathed the love and admiration and respect in which he was universally held. Before the eulogies began the conference report on the census bill was adopted and an attempt was made to pass a bill to pay the cost of repairing the Manila cable, which Dewey cut just previous to the great victory. Opposition developed, however, and it went over. Sherman (Rep., N. Y.), reported the Indian appropriation bill, immediately after which he called up the general deficiency bill and asked for the appointment of a conference committee on the senate amendments. Cannon, Barney (Wis.) and Livingston (Ga.) were appointed the conferees.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The house gave an hour to eulogies on the late Representative Baird, of Louisiana, and beyond this transacted no business of importance.

NICARAGUAN CANAL BILL.

The House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce Adopts a New Section.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce Friday reconsidered the Nicaragua canal bill, which had been reported with an appropriation section so as to make $10,000,000 available, with authority to contract for the entire excavation, construction, defense and completion of the canal at a total cost not exceeding $140,000,000.

Mr. Corliss, of Michigan, offered the following new section, which was adopted:

Section 6.—That the sum of $10,000,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated towards the project herein contemplated, and the secretary of war is further hereby authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for materials and work that may be deemed necessary for the proper excavation, construction, defense and completion of said canal, to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time hereafter be made, not to exceed in the aggregate $140,000,000.

New Railroad Line Proposed.

Marshall, Mich., Jan. 28.—General Passenger Agent T. M. Schindler, of the Cincinnati Northern railroad, was in the city. Anent his visit there is a well defined rumor that the Cincinnati Northern, Ohio Southern, Detroit & Lima Northern and Chicago & West Michigan are about to be consolidated into one big system, known as the Ohio and Lake Michigan line.

Clerk of the Senate Dead.

Washington, Jan. 29.—C. C. Morrow, for a long time one of the executive clerks of the United States senate, died here, aged 58 years. He was a native of Missouri.

Honeymoon in Jail.

Wayne, W. Va., Jan. 28.—Mordecai Ferguson and Miss Polly Lucas were married here by Rev. J. C. Lambert. The wedding occurred in the county jail and was witnessed by a number of county officials, as well as the father and mother of the bride. The honey moon will be spent in jail, as the groom is under indictment.

Prominent Jurist Dead.

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 29.—Judge Thos J. Wharton, one of the oldest and most prominent jurists of the state is dead.

WILLIAM KEPT TAB.

An Elevator Boy Who Was a Regular Gustatory Budget for the House.

Monday morning.

The passenger in the elevator of the large apartment house sniffed the air.

"Seems to me, William," she said, "I smell cabbage."

"Yes'm," replied the elevator boy. "The Ferguson's, on the third floor back, is cookin' 'em for dinner."

Tuesday afternoon.

"If I'm not mistaken, William, there is a strong odor of mutton here."

"Yes'm.—They're havin' mutton for dinner at the Welkersons', on the next floor, about halfway back."

Wednesday.

"William, where does that smell of onions come from?"

"Comes f'm the Cluppinses', ma'am. Their company's gone, and they don't have no meat to-day."

Thursday evening.

"I think I notice a flavor of soap in the atmosphere, William."

"Yes'm. The Brinkaieyers is doin' their washin'. They do that every two weeks."

Friday.

"Who's having fish to-day, William?"

"The Swallingers, on the fourth floor, the Biddlecombes an' the Shadwells, on the second floor, an' the Jordleses, on the third. The Dorans is goin' to have turkey, but they hain't begun to cook it yit."

"Do you know what we are to have for dinner, William?"

"Yes'm. Cold meat an' turnips—but I won't tell anybody, ma'am."—Chicago Tribune.

A Modest Request.

Ambition is an admirable trait, but it is not the single qualification for success. Among highly ambitious youths must be numbered a German who for several years had been apprenticed to a cooper. The young man felt that constant coopering was not compatible with his hopes for the future. Accordingly, after deliberation, a few months ago he addressed a letter to the head of the great Rothschild banking house at Frankfort, setting forth at some length his strong dislike for his trade, and asking for reception as "an apprentice millionaire," promising diligence and all application in learning "the business." The young man is still a cooper.—Youth's Companion.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition, during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement. It is such a relief."

FIGHTING FILIPINOS.

Our Troops and Insurgents Have Had Several Engagements.

Two Americans Were Killed and Eleven Wounded During the Different Encounters—Loss to the Rebels Was Much Heavier.

Manila, Jan. 27.—A dispatch from Sorsogon, dated January 25, says Brig. Gen. Kobbe's expedition has occupied Sorsogon, Donsol, Bulan, Legaspi and Mirac, on Catanduanes island. The only resistance was at Legaspi, where five Americans were wounded, and 45 dead and 15 wounded Filipinos were found.

It is estimated that there are 125,000 bales of hemp in these provinces and 75,000 bales in the ports of Sorsogon and Legaspi. The United States gunboat Nashville's shrapnel burned 8,000 bales in Legaspi.

The expedition arrived off Sorsogon January 20, and the town displayed white flags. Gen. Kobbe and Col. Howe, with a battalion of the 47th infantry, landed here and raised the United States flag. The insurgents force, numbering 300 men, evacuated the place. The natives were passive.

During the morning of January 22 the Nashville and Venus, with four companies of the 47th regiment under Maj. Shipton, approached Legaspi. Filipino flags were flying and the streets were crowded. A detachment of 150 picked men led by Maj. Shipton landed on the beach about a mile north of the town. The Nashville bombarded the trenches and the enemy retreated to Albay, whence they were easily dispersed to the hills.

About 200 insurgents, armed with rifles, forced 600 unwilling villagers, armed with bows and arrows, to serve in the trenches in the close range street fighting before the enemy fled.

The Filipino dead were mostly villagers who were attempting to flee.

The expedition will proceed to Samar and Leyte, where the 43d infantry and a battalion of the 3d artillery will be distributed.

The natives complain of lack of food resulting from the blockade. They are strongly opposed to the return of the Friars. Native priests are officiating in the churches.

Lieut. Col. Webb C. Hays has defeated an entrenched force of the enemy at Suriaga. One American was killed and five wounded. A record of 11 American prisoners was found.

Capt. Casteel, while scouting near Baras with his company, encountered 400 insurgents. He was reinforced by Capt. Gracie and the enemy was driven to Tanay. One American was killed and one wounded.

Washington, Jnn. 27.—The progress of the movement begun about three months ago toward the return to Spain of the prisoners released from the Filipinos is reported by Gen. Otis in the following cablegram, received at the war department, dated at Manila, January 26:

"Released Spanish prisoners, 74 officers, 1,060 enlisted men, 22 civilian officials, 21 wives and 35 children, were furnished transportation to Spain."

Washington, Jnn. 27.—Gen. Otis' report of the movements in the campaign in Luzon is as follows, under date of January 26: "Hayes' cavalry reported at Santa Cruz, drove enemy out of Luzena, Tayabas and adjacent towns, rescued 20 Spanish prisoners and five women; other Spanish prisoners moved back in small detachments into mountains; enemy dispersed and greater part believed to be seeking homes at Tayabas. Found record dated 15th inst. saying 11 American prisoners leave to-morrow —know not to what place. Hayes' casualties one killed, three mortally wounded, two slightly wounded."

Was Defended to the Last.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The navy department has made public reports from Coxswain Greene and Appentice Powers, members of the ill-fated Urdaneta crew, describing the capture of that boat by the Filipinos last September. In endorsing the reports Adm. Watson says that they show that the little gunboat, under command of the late Naval Cadet Wood, was gallantly defended, and was captured only because she was hard and fast aground.

Amused at the Result.

Santiago de Cuba, Jan. 27.—Gen. Lee, accompanied by Gen. Rios Rivera and the other members of Gen. Wood's party, who arrived here on the Ingalls, paid a visit to the battlefields. Gen. Lee expressing, as all militia men do when they first see the ground, his amazement that the result should have been attained as it was.

Dr. Hunter in Washington

Washington, Jan. 25.—Dr. Hunter, United States minister to Guatemala and Honduras, has arrived in Washington, and called at the state department Wednesday to pay his respects. He is on leave of absence from his post and came east from his home in Kentucky in order to seek treatment for his wife, who is now ill at Hot Springs, Va.

PHIL D. ARMOUR, JR., DEAD.

The Son of the Millionaire Pork Packer Expires After a Short Illness in California.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 28.—News has been received of the sudden death of Phil D. Armour, Jr., at Montecito, near Santa Barbara. Young Armour was ill but 24 hours, and his death was due to congestion of the lungs. He was 31 years of age. He left Chicago three weeks ago in excellent health.

Young Mr. Armour left Pasadena the first of last week and had been at Montecito about 10 days. A special train was engaged to take relatives and friends from Pasadena to Santa Barbara. On the advice of his physician, P. D. Armour, Sr., father of the young man, did not go, his health being delicate. Mr. Armour is standing the shock well.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—The news of the death of P. D. Armour, Jr., the youngest son of the millionaire Chicago packer at Montecito, near Santa Barbara, Cal., came as a complete surprise, as it was known that when he left for the Pacific coast he was in the best of health. A telegram from a member of the party that accompanied young Mr. Armour from Chicago a few weeks ago when he went to California to join his father, conveyed the information to J. Ogden Armour a brother.

BATTLE WITH BURGLARS.

Two Unknown Men Shot and Killed and Another Badly Wounded By Police Officers at Quincy, Ill.

Quincy, Ill., Jan. 29.—Quincy police officers killed two expert safe blowers, supposed to be from Chicago, and wounded another badly. The tragedy included a running fight through a hotel in which the armed burglars were pursued by the officers. The men are believed to be those who recently operated in Galesburg, Freeport and other Illinois cities, making a specialty of cracking safes in building and loan association offices.

The men were all well dressed, had diamonds, jewelry and plenty of money. Skeleton keys were found on all of them. When the two men came here January 5, they registered as J. M. Burt and H. E. Crowley. Saturday Burt was registered as C. H. Rogers. From letters found on him it appears he also has the name of C. H. Prince, of Chicago, and has a woman friend in Des Moines. The men are believed to be three of the best workers in the country.

CONTEST SETTLED.

The Kentucky House By a Close Vote Unseats a Republican and Declares a Democrat Elected.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 29.—The unseating of Representative Henry Berry, of Fayette county, by the house, Saturday, changed the political complexion of that body one degree, making it stand 60 democrats and 40 republicans instead of 58 democrats and 42 republicans before the unseating process began.

Three contests have now been voted on, and in each the democratic majority has hung together and dominated the action of that body on a strictly party basis, which has been disappointing to the minority. The other contests disposed of were the seating of Mr. Taylor, republican, of Trigg county, whose seat was given to Mr. McKinney, democrat, and the seating of Mr. Hay, democrat, of Garrard county, whose seat was contested by Mr. Walker, republican.

PHILIPPINE COMMERCE.

The Total Value of Articles Imported in the Island During July, 1899, $1,577,530.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The war department made public the following summary statement of the commerce of the Philippines during the month of July, 1899:

"The total value of merchandise imported at all ports in the archipelago during said month amounted to $1,577,530, of which amount articles to the value of $192,192 were imported free of duty.

"Articles of food and animals imported amounted to $581,022, or 37 per cent. of the total; manufactured articles to $479,231, or 30 per cent. of the total. The total value of merchandise exported during the month amounted to $1,156,469. Products of agriculture amounted to $1,019,881, or 88 per cent. of the total."

Legislation Urged By Labor Leaders.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and several other representatives of labor interests, had a conference with the president to urge upon him their desire that he should advocate certain legislation in which they are interested. They want an eight-hour law for all government work; a law to prohibit the products of convict labor from being transferred from one state to another, and a law to restrict the federal courts in law to restrict the authorities of the federal courts in the issuance of injunctions in labor troubles.

Public Schools in Cuba.

Havana, Jan. 28.—Mr. Frye, superintendent of public schools, is in receipt of reports showing that 879 schools have already been organized. Reports are coming in at the rate of 75 a day, and it is expected that the number will reach 2,000, representing 100,000 children.

Bought a Paper Mill.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 28.—E. S. Badger, of this city, has just closed a deal for the Crosby paper mill plant at Marion, Ind. The consideration is $13,000.

CAN HE GIVE FEDERAL AID?

Will Be No Interference in Kentucky Unless It Becomes Necessary to Enforce a Decree.

Washington, Jan. 28.—There will be no federal interference in Kentucky unless the situation should so change as to involve the necessity of enforcing a decree of a United States court. No such factor enters into the situation at present. The president has no constitutional authority to send federal troops to Kentucky, the legislature now being in session, unless the request for federal aid came from the legislature, and as that is a Goebel body, it is not to be supposed that it would ask for United States soldiers to overturn its own decisions.

The significant wording of the clause of the constitution under which it originally was thought federal aid might be demanded by the friends of Gov. Taylor has been considered by President McKinley. The president, fully understands that, as the constitution now stands, he has no authority to send troops to Kentucky, nor, save to enforce the decree of a United States court, would he have any such authority unless the demand came from the legislature.

Should Gov. Taylor, in the event that he is unseated, take his case before the federal courts upon the ground that his constitutional privileges are abridged, as he might do under the fourteenth amendment, and should the federal courts sustain his contention, then, of course, the whole power of the government would be used to enforce the decree of the courts.

WILL WATCH SMALLPOX.

Inspectors Will Be Appointed By the State Board of Health to Examine All Suspected Cases.

Columbus, O., Jan. 29.—Upon the authorization of the state board of health Secretary Probst will appoint inspectors in various sections of the state to examine suspected cases of smallpox.

The following appointments are already announced: C. A. Collamore, Toledo; B. F. Lyle, Cincinnati; F. A. Landick, Lima; James H. Moninger, Columbus; C. F. Hoover, Cleveland; M. Burt and H. E. Crowley. Saturday Burt was registered as C. H. Rogers. From letters found on him it appears he also has the name of C. H. Prince, of Chicago, and has a woman friend in Des Moines. The men are believed to be three of the best workers in the country.

Masked Robbers' Work.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Three masked robbers entered the factory of Dr. Peter Mnherney & Sons Co., bound and gagged four employes of the concern, blew open the safe, and escaped with $1,700 in currency and a considerable amount in notes and other valuable paper. The explosion shattered the safe and made a complete wreck of the office in which it stood. The shock was felt a block from the scene of the robbery, and the whole neighborhood was aroused by the detonation.

Steamer Merrimac Probably Lost.

London, Jan. 29.—It has been learned that the British steamer Malin Head, Capt. McKee, which sailed from Ardrossan for St. John, N. B., on January 23, picked up a piece of wood marked "Merrim—." The board is supposed to be a part of one of the boats belonging to the missing British steamer Merrimac, which sailed from Quebec October 27 for Belfast in command of Capt. Shallis. Nothing has been heard of her since she left Canada.

Prominent St. Louis Man Dead.

New York, Jan. 29.—James H. Britton, former mayor of St. Louis, and for many years one of the leading bankers of the west, is dead at Ardsley, N. Y., aged 83 years. He was a member of the Missouri legislature in 1853-54. Mr. Britton was president of the board of directors under whose supervision the bridge connecting St. Louis with East St. Louis was built. He was also president of the National Bank of Missouri. Mr. Britton retired from business 15 years ago.

Escaped Prisoner Recaptured.

Johnson City, Tenn., Jan. 29.—Ike T. Jobe, late captain of the 6th immunes, was captured at Piney Flats, Sullivan county, by Government Detective F. M. Benz, of Cincinnati, and Deputy C. W. McCall, of Knoxville. He was tried before United States Commissioner Charles M. Taylor here and his bond fixed at $3,000. Jobe recently escaped from the Columbus, O., jail. He is charged with using penalty envelopes from the war department. Efforts to secure bail are being made.

Big Fire in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—Fire totally destroyed the four-story building at No. 218-220 Chestnut street, occupied by the Missouri Tent and Awning Co. The total value of the building, stock and machinery is $320,000, fully covered by insurance. The Cantnet building adjoining was heavily damaged, more by water than by flames It is thought it may be a total loss It is valued at $200,000, and is insured for $100,000.

Will Advance Prices.

Toledo, O., Jan. 29.—Manufacturers of baby carriages and children's wagons will soon advance prices. Representatives of the Toledo Metal Wheel Co. and the Gendron Iron Wheel Co. of Toledo; the American Rattan Co. of St. Louis, and the Wilkinson Toy and Carriage Co., of Troy, N. Y., held a secret meeting here, at which a 30 per cent increase was agreed upon Those interested deny any plans of forming a combination, but say a uniform advance is necessitate by increased prices of iron.

WILL RESIST FOREIGNERS.

The Coup d'Etat in China Seems to Be an Open Step Against Any Outside Interference.

London, Jan. 27.—The news of the sudden move of the dowager empress of China in deposing the present emperor, Kuang Su, and appointing a successor, Put Sing, who is practically unknown, has created considerable excitement in government and diplomatic circles.

The most important aspect of the change is contained in the Pekin report that the prospective emperor has been since early childhood under the influence of two inteasely antiforeign tutors. The father of Put Sing is at the head of the two great antiforeign societies, "The Great Sword" and "The Boxers."

The choice of Put Sing thus appears to be the most open step to resist foreign influence in China.

The dowager empress has dismissed Jung Lu, generalissimo of the Chinese forces, on account of his supposed disapproval of the coup d'etat. Other high officials have been superceded. Extraordinary precautions have been taken at the vice regal capitals to prevent risings. The troops have been served with ball cartridges.

The interior of China is greatly excited and progressive Chinese are begging the American, British and Japanese ministers to intervene and restore the emperor to power.

An official communication received here from Pekin says: "Pu Chun, who has been appointed heir apparent to the throne, has been given the status of a son of the last emperor. The statement that a new emperor has ascended the throne is premature although it is liable the present action is preparatory thereto."

EULOGIES ON HOBART.

Members of the House Pay Tribute of Respect to the Late Vice President of the United States.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The greater portion of the session of the house was devoted to eulogies upon the life and public service of the late Vice President Hobart. The tributes paid to his memory were not perfunctory eulogies, but breathed the love and admiration and respect in which he was universally held. Those who spoke were Messrs. Gardner, Stewart, Parker, Fowler and Daly, of New Jersey; Mr. Payne, of New York; Mr. Dalzell and Mr. Brossius, of Pennsylvania; Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, and Mr. Griggs, of Georgia.

Before the eulogies began the conference report on the census bill was adopted and an attempt was made to pass a bill to pay the cost of repairing the Manila cable, which Dewey cut just prior to his great victory Opposition developed, however, and it went over.

AN X-RAY PHOTOGRAPH.

It Was Introduced as Evidence in Criminal Branch of the Atlanta Superior Court.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 27.—An X-ray photograph was introduced as evidence in a case which was placed on trial before Judge John S. Candler, of the criminal branch of the superior court, in the case of the state vs. Andrew Cook, a young white man charged with assault with intent to murder. The photograph is introduced to show that the knife which was used by the defendant in making his assault broke off and part of the blade remained imbedded in the breast of a Mr. Askew, living near this city. The photograph plainly shows the ribs and spinal column of Mr. Askew, and the astute lawyers will point out the foreign substance and contend it is the knife.

BURNING OF A MILL.

One of the Employes, a Young Girl, Is Missing, and May Have Perished in the Flames.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—The Angora Manufacturing Co.'s plant was destroyed by fire and one of the employes, Lizzie Lockburn, aged 17, is missing. Her body is believed to be in the ruins. The fire is believed to have originated from an overheated bearing. The flames spread rapidly and soon the entire mill, a four-story brick, was leveled to the ground.

The mule employes, most of whom worked on the first floor, escaped without difficulty, but there was a panic among the women and girls, many of them being injured by jumping from windows and others severely burned. The loss is about $150,000, partly covered by insurance.

British Expedition Successful.

London, Jan. 27.—The British expedition against the rebellious Tagas, under Mat Salleh, in British North Borneo, has been entirely successful Capt. Harrington, with 100 Sikhs, after two days' fighting (January 8 and 9) against 1,000 rebels, captured two forts and two villages, blew up the rebel magazine and killed or wounded 60 Tagas. The British had four men wounded. The remaining villages of the disturbed district submitted.

More Bubonic Plague.

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 27.—Official notification has been received of the appearance of the bubonic plague at Rosario, on the west bank of Parana about 230 miles by water northwest of Buenos Ayres. The government has issued a decree of absolute isolation.

Working on a Government Lock.

Richmond, Ky., Jan. 27.—The land purchased by the government at Valleyview for a lock in the Kentucky river has been condemned, and work will begin at once.

STATE NEWS ITEMS.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Our Lawmakers Are at Work at Frankfort—Bills Introduced and Passed.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 23.—Senate—The contest committee in the case of Milton Young, republican, against Embry Allen, democrat, from Fayette county etaolnu, democrat, from Fayette, reported unanimously in favor of Allen retaining his seat, Burnam and Whitehead, the two republican members of the committee, both signing the report. The report was unanimously adopted by the senate. Mr. Johnson presented a resolution requesting congress to pass a law regulating the granting of retail liquor license.

House—Dr. H. Taylor, republican, from Trigg county, was retired on account of being a postmaster in his county, and J. W. McKinney, democrat, given his seat. Bills were introduced as follows: Increasing the penalty for disturbing public worship; to enable the trustees of common school districts to repair or build and furnish schoolhouses and inclosures; to tax the owners of dogs for the protection of sheep; to repeal an act prohibiting barbering on Sunday; providing for the extension of the common school term; relating to the time of opening the polls on election days; to regulate the courts of a justice of the peace; providing protection for cattle from diseased cattle.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 24.—Senate—The senate passed the Puryear resolution memorializing congress to enact some presidential bankrupt law so that it will apply to counties, townships and quasi-corporations. Bills were introduced as follows: To amend the revenue law so that state and county taxes on whisky shall be paid annually instead of at the end of the bonded period; to amend Section 1208 of the Kentucky statutes to prohibit horse racing on public highways; to amend the charters of sixth-class towns by requiring publication in a newspaper of the financial condition of the city and providing a manner of settlement with the city marshal; to amend the pharmacy law by including "cocaine, cocaine and all other alkaloids and salts of coca and compound of coca" in the list of medicines to be sold only on prescription of a regular physician; to prevent extortion and compel payment of debts for labor in lawful money.

House—Mr. Willingham, of the contest committee of Walker (rep.) against Ray (dem.), from Garrard, reported with the expression of opinion that Mr. Ray should retain his seat. The report was unanimously adopted. The Van Meter (dem.) against Berry (rep.), contest from Fayette, reported that his committee was not ready to report, and further time was granted. It was made a special order for 10:30 o'clock Friday morning. The Gill (dem.) against Brisler (rep.) contest from Logan county, was made a special order for the same day and hour. The Rangland (dem.) vs. Strong (rep.) contest from Jefferson county, and the Roberts (dem.) vs. Allen (rep.) from city of Louisville, were made special orders for Tuesday at 10:30.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 25.—Senate—Bills were introduced as follows: Appropriating $100 to Mrs. Margaret A. Diamond whose son was killed while with the state militia at Mayfield in 1898; to establish the office of fish, game and bird warden; to regulate and define the power of corporations organized for religious, charitable, educational or other lawful purposes from which no private gain is to be derived; to amend section 38, chapter 47, of the law relating to roads and passways, by prohibiting the superintendents from being interested in teams or horses worked on the road; to amend section 15 of the common school law, so that the governor and chief justice shall select the state board of education. A resolution was adopted calling on the state auditor for information as to taxes paid by certain banks.

House—On account of so many armed men being in the city, the galleries were cleared of all visitors and the doors locked. The only business transacted was the filing of various petitions, asking for an appropriation for a new capitol building, and one requesting the repeal of the Australian ballot system. The committees reported a number of bills favorably, all of minor importance, excepting the one authorizing the appointment of a state house commission and providing for the erection of a new state house building. The bill was slightly changed by the committee.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 26.—Senate—Senator Johnson's bill to prohibit women wearing high hats in theaters furnished fun for a half hour, and was passed by a vote of 31 to 6. Other bills passed as follows: To authorize school boards of second-class cities to issue bonds not to exceed $50,000 to build and equip school-houses, provided the question of issuing said bonds has been approved by two-thirds of the voters of said cities, was passed unanimously; authorizing the clerk of the Jefferson circuit court to issue warrants for money instead of the city treasurer, as now provided, was passed; providing for the purchase of statutes and codes for the use of the legislators passed. Pending consideration of senate bill 20, requiring railroads of less than 40 miles in length, to run one passenger train each way every day the senate adjourned.

House—When the house met the contested election case of Van Meter-Berry was taken up. Representative Crider presented a motion that in hearing contests the house should go into a committee of the whole, listen to both sides when majority and minority reports are presented, and giving to each side 40 minutes for argument. After some debate Representative Finn moved to table the Crider resolution and the yeas and nays being called for the motion to table was lost by a vote of 45 to 47. Two republicans and one democrat were absent. Speaker Trimble, democrat not voting. After some further debate the case went over and the house adjourned.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 27.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The Van Meter-Berry election contest was taken up as soon as the house convened. After lengthy arguments were made by both the majority and minority reports a ballot was taken which resulted in Van Meter, democrat, being seated by a vote of 54 to 42, on strict party lines. The house then adjourned until Monday.

Boy Shot Through Heart.

Middlesboro, Ky., Jan. 29.—Sam Jones and Henry Maggard engaged in a fight at a stillhouse on Poor Fork of the Cumberland river. They drew their pistols, when Joe Maggard, the 12-year-old son of Maggard, rushed between them. Jones' pistol was discharged, the ball going through the boy's heart, killing him instantly. Jones immediately surrendered to the authorities, asserting that the shooting was accidental.

Blackburn After His Certificate.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 28.—Senator-elect Blackburn procured the records of his election to the United States senate and will ask Gov. Taylor for his certificate. It is said the governor will sign the certificate without delay.

Ellis Graham on Trial.

Mayfield, Ky., Jan. 28.—The examining trial of Ellis Graham, charged with poisoning his wife, was begun Friday. Two hundred witnesses were summoned to testify in the case and the trial proceeded behind closed doors, presumably because the feeling against him is so bitter that an open trial might create excitement.

A Thirteen-Year-Old Bride.

Scottsville, Ky., Jan. 27.—A. Trammel and Miss Hermie Kelley were married here. The groom is 21 years old, while the bride is but 13.

LONGER TIME GRANTED.

It Will Be Three Weeks Before a Vote Will Be Reached in Kentucky Gubernatorial Contest.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 25.—It will be approximately three weeks before the gubernatorial contest board will be able to make their report to the legislatrne and a vote can be taken by that body. Chairman Hickman, of the Goebel-Taylor contest board, announced that it had been determined to allow each side four days longer for the presentation of evidence. At least two days will be taken up by arguments, and Mr. Hickman said the board would require at least one week in which to go over the evidence and prepare its report. Ex-Gov. Bradley for the contestee, asked more time and the democrats gave him two days out of their four.

The churches of Frankfort united in a prayer service, asking that all trouble from the political situation might be averted and that all danger of bloodshed be avoided. Three services were held in the Episcopal church, one in the morning, the second in the evening and third at night.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 26.—Many witnesses were examined before the gubernatorial contest boards. The evidence related chiefly to the alleged use of tissue ballots in democratic counties and to the use of the militia in Louisville. Chairman Hickman said he believed all testimony would be in by Wednesday, January 31, and that the committees report will be ready for joint assembly not later than February 15.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 27.—Tissue ballots and intimidation continue the burden of the evidence offered by the contestees before the board hearing the gubernatorial contests.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 27.—Judge Sterling B. Toney said that he had forwarded to the commission certified copies of the records of his court with a letter stating that he doubted the propriety of the judge of the circuit court appearing to testify concerning the matters involved in this contest but that if the commission disagreed with him as to the propriety of the occasion that he would promptly respond to their summons.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 28.—The gubernatorial contest boards overruled the motion of ex-Gov. Bradley that the contestees be allowed until Wednesday night to conclude their testimony. Messrs. Yarberry and Reed, republican members of the boards, voted to sustain the motion and made additional protest against the action of the majority. Attorney Yost, for the contestees, protested also and gave notice that a written protest would be filed. The boards agreed to add half a day to the contestees time which compels them to rest their case Saturday night. The contestants will have all of Monday for rebuttal and the argument will begin Tuesday.

COLSON OUT OF JAIL.

Removed to the King's Daughters' Hospital, Where He Is Kept Under a Special Guard.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 29.—Col. David G. Colson has been removed from the jail to the King's Daughters' hospital on an order from Judge Cantrill permitting him to be kept there under a special guard. The order was based on affidavits filed by Dr. E. E. Hume, of this city, and Dr. J. G. Furnish, state senator from the Boone county district, who stated that Colson's confinement in jail seriously retards his recovery from the wounds which he received in the Colson-Scott battle in the Capitol hotel, in which Scott, Demaree and Julian were killed.

Col. Colson's examining trial is set for next Wednesday, but it is believed by many that he will waive examination, and withdraw the motion for bail if the commonwealth consents that he may remain a patient at the hospital till the spring term of circuit court, when his trial will come off.

Famous Race Horse Dead.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 29.—Imp. Candelenas, the famous race horse, property of J. B. Haggin, died from an attack of vertigo. He was bought by Haggin from C. J. Enright here in 1896 for $12,000. Enright having purchased him eight years before at Tattersalls, New York, from English owners for $12,500. He was 17 years old.

Franklin Grand Jury Report.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 28.—The Franklin county grand jury filed a report declaring that the report of further attempt at bribery of legislators is without foundation. Meeting was held at the Baptist church, Friday night, January 25th, by Rev. Swindler, of Covington. A business meeting was held Saturday morning. They have organized a Sunday-school with 38 pupils, and all seem to take quite an interest. The school meets every Sunday evening at three o'clock. Bro. Adams, of Walton, will hold meeting here on Friday night before the second Sunday in February.

Venus Lodge, No. 154, I. O. O. F., of this place, is having quite a boom of late, several members joining. On last Saturday night one was initiated and three took degrees. They had quite a large attendance of visiting members. Lodges were represented as follows: Washington Lodge, No. 3; Wolford Lodge, No. 68; Alline Lodge, No. 19; Viola Lodge, No. 278; Bond Lodge, No. 219; West Lodge, No. 176; Carroll Lodge, No. 45; Naomi Lodge, No. 129. After the meeting of the lodge, all repaired to the second floor of the hall, where the good wives of the Odd-Fellows had prepared a bountiful spread for all, where every one partook of the delicacies of the season to their hearts content. Your correspondent heard the ladies talking and they must have enjoyed it as much as the members of the lodge. With the churches and Odd-Fellows' lodge in flourishing condition, we have great hopes of our old town.

Mrs. G. M. Riley returned home Monday, from a week's visit to her sister, Mrs. J. G. Ellis, at Lovelaud, O.

A party of four from G. M. Riley's went to Cincinnati, Friday evening, to see Mr. Francis Wilson play Cyrano de Bergerac. All reported a splendid time and say that Mr. Wilson excells in this play.

Mr. Rennels and acrobatic troop, the family who bought W. O. Kirtley's place, invited the school children to come down and see the performances, Saturday morning. The little folks enjoyed it very much indeed, and are going to have a troop of their own in a few months, when they get in better practice.

Gunpowder.

Another pretty good winter snap struck us last Thursday.

Miss Katie Lentz, of Cincinnati, is the guest of her Uncle, Rev. H. Max Lentz.

The trustees of Hopeful church are arranging to make a new fence around the cemetery.

Florence precinct will probably offer a candidate for Assessor, whose name will be presented in due time.

Ed Snyder delivered his crop of tobacco to Thos. Stevenson a few days ago, at 5cts for all grades except trash, for which he received one cent per pound.

Nearly all of L. H. Busby's family have been on the sick list, supposed to be poisoued from eating hominy cooked in a tin bucket; but through the skilful treatment of Dr. Cronch they were brought around all right in a few days.

Daddy Rice while coming from the city last Thursday stopped on the road to feed his horse and warm himself, and while away from his wagon some one needing protection from the cold, relieved him of his laprobe, and he had to face the wind home. While Daddy is good natured and always ready to help the needy, he concluded before he got home that he needed it worse than the other fellow.

There has been considerable said on the centennial question and it seems that wise men still differ, and as Gunpowder has not been heard from I will submit the following. If A owes B one dollar, it takes 100 cents to pay that dollar. If he pay 99 ceuts he still owes one cent. Hence if it takes 100 years to make a century, 1899 was the 99th year of the 18th century and 1900 is certainly the 100 and last year of that century, therefore the 19th century will begin the first of January 1901.

Hathaway.

J. S. Mason had a wood sawing, last Tuesday.

February, 1900, will have no new moon, and pray tell us, when such a thing occurred before?

Rev. John Davis, of Sow Chow, China, preached at the Presbyterian Church, Friday night, Saturday and Sunday.

Elbert Rice has been getting along like a charm since he began farming and became a benedict, but lacked one thing to make his success complete and that was the RECORDER—so he subscribed.

James A. Smith was a guest of the Blade Club, Saturday night until 7:30. Mr. Smith joined in debate upon the 20th century question with his usual zeal, and soon let the boys know this is the 20th century right now.

Anse Gadd raised on the Rice farm 2¼ acres of tobacco and it invoiced 2,014 sticks or 4,120 pounds, and brought 7½ round. Some of the leaf measured 3 ft. 10 in. making it one among the best crops purchased by Mr. Kennedy this year.

Golden Grange will have Mr. Walcott deliver a lecture in Union the second Saturday in February, at 1 o'clock Mr. Walcott is editor of the Grange Bulletin, and is prepared to enlighten the people upon all questions pertaining to the Grange.

Postmaster H. W. Riley, notwithstanding he is about 90 years old, has been writing a few winter hours away in novel reading and talks about the "Gun Maker of Mosco," "Three Hearts Woven into One," "Hommer and Rapler," "Out of the Foam," and other thrilling stories with all sorts of pleasure.

Simeon A. House is a strong believer in evolution, as it relates to politicians being evolved from one belief to another in order to keep "in the swim," but Bro. Tolin will never convince him that a "dead politician" can ever be evolved into a living one after he is pronounced dead by the voters of the grand old state of Boone. Never!

James L. Huey is as well versed in hog and cattle-ology as any man, but in tobacco, is not so up to date. James W. Kennedy is not so well up in hog and cattle-ology, but tobacco, he knows like a book and reads many profitable lessons therefrom, when occasion offers. Mr. Huey and Mr. Mc. Intire hauled their crops down, the other day, when Mr. H. bantered Mr. Kennedy to guess the crop off at so much. Mr. K. hesitated and Mr. H. threatened to report him to the Recorder as afraid to risk his judgment. Well, the crop was guessed off and Messrs Huey and McIntire lost $9 75. Mr. K decided that Mr. Mc. ought to have a premium for handling the crop so nicely and presented him a "V," but Mr. H. was ashamed to go home nursing a bad case of disdurred judgment and minus $4 75 in cold cash.

Walton.

In the recent spelling matches at the Walton Academy, Volney Dickerson, of Union, and Lillie Hammond, of Richwood, have carried off the honors.

Clifford Sanders having attended the Sunday-school the whole year without missing a day, was presented by his teacher, Miss Stella Senour, with a handsome illustrated copy of "Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress." Now, Miss Stella, it is incumbent on some one to explain fully to the lad the true meauing of the greatest allegory in our language.

An enjoyable affair was the 6 o'clock birthday, diuner, January 27, of Mrs. H. C. Moxley. It was the fiftieth anniversary of her birth. Those present were Rev. Moss, of Lexington; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. VanLeuveu, Miss Gertrude VauLeuven. Mr. J. M. VanLeuven, of Walnut Hills; Mrs. J. W. Lamb and daughter, Alice, of Covingtou; Mrs. Emma Marshall, of Keuslugton; Mrs. Lora Rouse and daughter, Leona, Mrs. Amanda Aldrich.

Mr. Charles H. Lermond, who went some time ago to Paris, Tenn., was taken sick and had a high fever. At church today, the 29th, his sisters were asked if Charley had yellow fever. The truth of the matter may be as follows: Charley was not feeling very well the day he left and asked this correspond eut to give him a few of the pills that had been distributed over the town as samples, many of which were given to me by people who supposed that my stomach was a patent chemical laboratory. Charley may have been taking some of the pills.

No one was surprised at the sudden reappearauce of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrel, and their occupation of the Harrel house on Pike, or Main street, one day last week. They may safely be classed as "Migratories," this being the 21st migratiou since their marriage, about twenty-one years ago, and they have been moving back and forth all that time from Kentucky to Indiana. The time before this last move to Kentucky they moved into their residence at Verona, and probably they have varied their residence in Indiana. Strange isn't it how some folks feel the need of a change? Anyhow they are welcome back.

Mr. Brown, the gentlemanly and obliging mail carrier between here and Hamilton, on the Ohio river, was getting subscriptions, last week, to build a turnpike from Big Bone Springs to Beaver, a distance of about three miles, more or less. It reminded me very forcibly of my first visit to "The Lick" as the noted watering place was then called It was in the year 1834. My cousins, Tom and Will McGlasson, proposed a pawpaw hunt and promised to take me to the Lick. I was only too willing to go auywhere, to huut anything, and to see all that was to be seen. We climbed the rugged, precipitous hill back of Hamilton, then called Lauding, and it was a climb for an 8-year-old lad, who looked with awe on the hills west of Covington, and never thought of climbing them. Approaching the springs, my eyes were filled with about as cheerless and desolate a view as could be imagined—certainly they have never rested on a more forlorn and uninviting scene since. A big sycamore gum, a tall rock chimney and slopes showing the bottom soil—the top having all washed away. After we had been there a little while, old Capt. Ben Finney, who lived some distance from the creek came up, and being told that I had been brought out to look at "The Lick," asked me how I liked it? In the innocence of my boyhood my reply conveyed to his mind the impression that it was the most lousesome place of which one could have any conception. He laughed, and said that in a few years I wouldn't know it. "Why," said he, "we are getting up a big subscription now to build a road to Florence, and then all the land you see around you will be set in trees and grass and people will be here in hundreds." Is it not euough to make one smile, when told that they are raising a subscription to build a road to Big Bone?

P. S.—The old man, as the editor is invariably styled about the office, was up to see us, and Joe Reed didn't get to see him.

[Too late for last week.]

The Christian Church yesterday, the 29th inst., was rather chilly during the meeting of the Endeavor Association and at the night meeting it was positively too cold for the members to become very enthusiastic about religion or anything else.

Miss Alice Wilson, of Bank Lick, who came on a visit to her sister, Mrs. J. E. Botts, has been quite ill since Sunday the 24th. It is quite a consolation for Miss Alice, as she has always enjoyed the best of health.

John Thomas, working at the Mayhugh Planing Mill, found himself falling from a trestle and made a jump, lighting on his heels and bruising them so badly that he may be laid up some time.

On Monday, January 22d, appeared at the residence of Rev. L. Johnson, Marion Stephenson, bachelor, and Beulah Dudgeon, spinster, and having made the proper responses required in the premises, were made man and wife in due form, and with proper ceremony, after which the happy couple and their friends repaired to the residence of the groom's mother, Mrs. Susan Stephenson, where they had a joyous reception. The Recorder's whole force, editor, correspondent, foreman and pressman wish them much joy in their new venture.

A skin disease has appeared in several localities, this winter, and in some it is pronounced barber's itch, in others, exzema, while some say it is Cuban itch. The barber's itch theory seems to be upset by the fact that many persons who never occupied a barber's chair are infected.

The little friends of Miss Mabel Kirtley to the number of about thirty, gave her a surprise party on the 23d inst., in commemoration of the 11th anniversary of her birth. Refreshments were served, and the little people had a delightful time. Misses Lottie Hall and Susan Roberts assisted Miss Sadie to entertain her little sister's guests and the occasion was made one long to be remembered by the children.

Fred Burkhardt, who, several years ago, was captured in Gallatin county with two horses he had stolen in Ohio, in his possession, is in custody again. He is supposed to be the fellow who robbed Beall's store on Sugar Creek twice in the last few months. It was through the efforts of County Clerk Adams that Burkhardt was captured with the Ohio horses. For stealing the two animals Burkhardt was sent up for 14 years, from Batavia, Ohio, 8 years of which he served and was then pardoned.

Prof. J. H. Cravens, of Veroua, and D. M. Snyder, of Bellevue, were in town last Thursday, assisting Supt. Voshell with the examination of applicants for common school graduation. There were three applicants: Miss Virgie Johnson, daughter of the late John S. Johnson, of the Walton precinct; Miss Arrilda Roberts, daughter of Geo. W. Roberts, of Verona, and Miss Eunice Johnson, daughter of Geo. Johnson, of Verona. Miss Virgie Johnson made 79.4, Miss Roberts, 88.7, and Miss Eunice Johnson, 91. The first young lady is a pupil of Prof. Yaley, and the last two, pupils of Prof. Craveu.

Last Saturday's Kentucky Post contained the announcement that Congressman Berry had secured a Sunday mail for Burlington via Erlanger. Congressman Berry is ready to secure rural mail delivery for such communities in the county as can comply with the requirements of the law under which that service is conducted. The purpose of the Rural Free Delivery System is to give postal facilities to those who have none; to carry the mails daily to remote rural communities the residents of which would otherwise have to travel from two to twelve miles to receive their letters and newspapers. The roads must be good. This is an essential pre-requisite. No route can be established that is less than from 20 to 25 miles in length, or which serves less than 100 families. The route should be so arranged that the carrier will not be required to travel over the same ground twice on the same day. Those desiring the delivery must be prepared to put up, at their own expense, at some convenient location which can be reached by the carrier without dismounting from his buggy, appropriate and secure boxes for the reception of the U. S. mails. Rural carriers are not required to deliver mail to houses standing back from the main road. The service is one of mutual accommodation, and the patrons are expected to meet the Department half way in affording facilities for its establishment. We have a paper at this office that gives full particulars to anyone wishing to apply for a Rural Free Delivery.

The Mother's Favorite.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite. It is pleasant and safe for children to take and always cures. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is the best medicine made for these diseases. There is not the least danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other injurious drugs and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

The following complimentary notice of Miss Nannie Arnold from the Sherman, Tex., Daily Democrat: "Miss Cook, teacher of Mathematics and Science in the Carr-Burdette College having resigned with the statement that she would be married and would therefore have to leave at the close of the work before the holidays, Miss Nancy G. Arnold, of Kentucky, a distinguished A. B., of Wesleyan College, Virginia, has been chosen to fill the vacancy. Miss Arnold taught Mathematics and Science at the Carr-Burdette and at Hamilton College, Ky., and was noted in each for her fidelity and efficiency She is one of the most enthusiastic and thoroughly trained teachers that Sherman has ever had. She will receive a hearty welcome from her many friends in Sherman. Carr-Burdette College is to be congratulated upon the return of a tried and true friend, a skilled teacher, and a refined christian woman of the purest Southern type. This is the kind to infuse true nobility into the character of school girls.—Williamstown Courier.

The hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Revill was thrown open, last Friday evening, for the entertainment of the "Kooking Klub," and not in the history of the "Klub" has it spent a more delightful evening. An elegant supper was discussed at 6 o'clock, after which the Pickaniuny cake-walk, by Misses Mable Kirtley and Pattie Revill, was given in a style equal to professionals, and proved to be the leading feature of the evening's amusement. The young Misses had evidently been well drilled by some one who has a splendid conception of that now popular amusement. At the conclusion of the cake walk charades were begun and indulged in until the hour for dismissal. The menu provided for the occasion, was as follows:

Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck	Chicken.

Beat Out or an Increase of His Pension

A Mexican war veteran and prominent editor writes: "Seeing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I am reminded that as a soldier in Mexico in '47 and '48, I contracted Mexican diarrhoea and this remedy has kept me from getting an increase in my pension for on every renewal a dose of it restores me." It is unequalled as a quick cure for diarrhoea and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. VALUE OF THE HAND.

Dr. Talmage Calls It the Soul's Executive Officer.

Its Construction Illustrates Divine Wisdom and Its Right Employment Makes Mankind Better and Happier.

The discourse of Dr. Talmage is a lesson of gratitude for that which none of us fully appreciate and shows the divine meaning in our physical structure; text, I Corinthians 12:21: "The eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee."——

These words suggest that some time two very important parts of the human body got into controversy, and the eye became insolent and full of braggadocio and said: "I am an independent part of the human system. How far I can see, taking in spring morning and midnight aurora! Compared with myself, what an insignificant thing is the human hand. I look down upon it. There it hangs, swinging at the side, a clump of muscles and nerves, and it cannot see an inch either way. It has no luster compared with that which I beam forth." "What senseless talk," responds the hand. "You, the eye, would have been put out long ago but for me. Without the food I have earned you would have been sightless and starved to death years ago. You cannot do without me any better than I can do without you." At this part of the disputation Paul of my text breaks in and ends the controversy by declaring: "The eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee."

Fourteen hundred and thirty-three times, as nearly as I can count by aid of concordance, does the Bible speak of the human hand. We are all familiar with the hand, but the man has yet to be born who can fully understand this wondrous instrument. Sir Charles Bell, the English surgeon, came home from the battlefield of Waterloo, where he had been amputating limbs and binding up gunshot fractures, and wrote a book entitled: "The Hand; Its Mechanism and Vital Endowments as Evidencing Design." But it is so profound a book that only a scientist who is familiar with the technicalities of anatomy and physiology can understand it.

So we are all going on opening and shutting this divinely constructed instrument—the hand—ignorant of much of the revelation it was intended to make of the wisdom and goodness of God. You can see by their structure that shoulder and elbow and forearm are getting ready for the culmination in the hand. There is your wrist, with its eight bones and their ligaments in two rows. That wrist, with its bands of fibers and its hinged joint and turning on two axes—on the larger axis moving backward and forward, and on the smaller axis turning nearly round. And there is the palm of your hand, with its five bones, each having a shaft and two terminations. There are the fingers of that hand, with 14 bones, each finger with its curiously wrought tendons, five of the bones with ending roughened for the lodgment of the nails. There is the thumb, coming from opposite direction to meet the fingers, so that in conjunction they may clasp and hold fast that which you desire to take. There are the long nerves running from the armpit to the 46 muscles, so that all are under mastery. The whole anatomy of your hand as complex, as intricate, as symmetrical, as useful as God could make it. What can it not do? It can climb, it can lift, it can push, it can repel, it can menace, it can clutch, it can deny, it can affirm, it can extend, it can weave, it can bathe, it can smite, it can humble, it can exalt, it can soothe, it can throw, it can defy, it can wave, it can imprecate, it can pray.

A skeleton of the hand traced on blackboard, or unrolled in diagram, or hung in medical museum, is mightily illustrative of the divine wisdom and goodness, but how much more pleasing when in living action all its nerves and muscles and bones and tendons and tissues and phalanges display what God invented when He invented the human hand. Two specimens of it we carry at our side from the time when in infancy we open them to take a toy till in the last hour of a long life we extend them in bitter farewell.

With the divine help I shall speak of the hand as the chief executive officer of the soul, whether lifted for defense, or extended for help, or busied in the arts, or offered in salutation, or wrung in despair, or spread abroad in benediction. God evidently intended all the lower orders of living beings should have weapons of defense, and hence the elephant's tusk, and the horse's hoof, and the cow's horn, and the lion's tooth, and the insect's sting. Having given weapons of defense to the lower orders of living beings, of course He would not leave man, the highest order of living beings on earth, defenseless and at the mercy of brutal or ruffian attack. The right, yea, the duty of self-defense is so evident it needs no argumentation. The hand is the divinely fashioned weapon of defense. We may seldom have to use it for such purposes, but the fact that we are so equipped insures safety. The hand is a weapon sooner landed than any gun, sooner drawn than any sword. Its fingers bent into the palm, it becomes a bolt of demolition. Solomon speaks of the hands as the "keepers of the house," or the defenders. Surely such a castle as the human body needs such protection as the hand alone can offer.

What a defense it is against accident! There have been times in all our experiences when we have with the hand warded off something that would have extinguished our eyesight, or broken the skull, or crippled us for a lifetime. While the eye has discovered the approaching peril, the hand has beaten it back, or struck it down, or disarmed it. Every day thank God for your right hand, and if you want to hear its eulogy ask him who in swift revolution of machinery has had it crushed, or at Chapultepec or South mountain or San Juan hill or Sedan lost it.

And in passing let me say that he who has the weapon of the hand uninjured and in full use needs no other. You coward who walk with sword, cane or carry a pistol in your hip pocket had better lay aside your deadly weapon. At the frontier, or in lawless lands, or as an officer of the law about to make arrest, such arming may be necessary, but no citizen moving in these civilized regions needs such reenforcement. If you are afraid to go down these streets or along these country roads without dagger or firearms, better ask your grandmother to go with you armed with scissors and knitting needle. What cowards, if not intended murderers, uselessly to carry weapons of death! In our two hands God gave us all the weapons we need to carry!

Again, the hand is the chief executive officer of the soul for affording help. Just see how that hand is constructed. How easily you can lower it to raise the fallen. How easily it is extended to feel the invalid's pulse, or gently wipe away the tear of orphanage, or contribute alms, or smooth the excited brow, or beckon into safety. O the helping hands! There are hundreds of thousands of them, and the world wants at least 1,000,000,000 of them. Hands to bless others, hands to rescue others, hands to save others. What are all these schools and churches and asylums of mercy? Outstretched hands. What are all those hands distributing tracts and carrying medicines and trying to cure blind eyes and deaf ears and broken bones and disordered intellects and wayward sons? Helping hands. Let each one of us add two to that number if we have two, or, if through casualty only one, add that one. If these hands which we have so long kept thrust into pockets through indolence or folded in indifference or employed in writing wrong things or doing mean things or heaving up obstacles in the way of righteous progress might from this hour be consecrated to helping others out and up and on, they would be hands worth being raised on the resurrection morn and worth clapping in eternal gladness over a world redeemed.

The great artists of the ages—Raphael and Leonardo da Vinci and Quentin Matsys and Rembrandt and Albert Durer and Titian — have done their best picturing the face of Christ, but none except Ary Scheffer seems to have put much stress upon the hand of Christ. Indeed, the mercy of that hand, the gentleness of that hand, is beyond all artistic portrayal. Some of His miracles He performed by word of mouth and without touching the subject before Him, but most of them He performed through the hand. Was the dead damsel to be raised to life? "He took her by the hand." Was the blind man to have sight nerve restored? "He took him by the hand." Was the demon to be exorcised from a suffering man? "He took him by the hand." The people saw this and besought Him to put His hand on their afflicted ones.

His own hands free, see how the Lord sympathized with the man who had lost the use of his hand. It was a case of atrophy, a wasting away until the arm and hand had been reduced in size beyond any medical or surgical restoration. Moreover, it was his right hand, the more important of the two, for the left side in all its parts is weaker than the right side, and we involuntarily, in any exigency, put out the right hand because we know it is the best hand. So that poor man had lost more than half of his physical armament. It would not have been so bad if it had been the left hand. But Christ looked at the shriveled up right hand dangling uselessly at the man's side and then cried out with a voice that had omnipotence in it: "Stretch forth thy right hand!" and the record is "he stretched it forth whole as the other." The blood rushed through the shrunken veins, and the shortened muscles lengthened, and the dead nerves thrilled, and the lifeless fingers tingled with resumed circulation, and the restored man held up in the presence of the skeptical Pharisee one of Jehovah's masterpieces—a perfect hand. No wonder that story is put three times in the Bible, so that if a sailor were cast away on a barren island, or a soldier's New Testament got mutilated in battle and whole pages are destroyed, the shipwrecked or wounded man in hospital would probably have at least one of those three radiant stories of what Christ thought of the human hand.

A pastor in his sermon told how a little child appreciated the value of his hand when he was told that on the morrow it must be amputated in order to save his life. Hearing that, he went to a quiet place and prayed that God would spare his hand. The surgeon, coming the next day to do his work, found the hand so much better that amputation was postponed, and the hand got well. The pastor, telling of this in a sermon, concluded by holding up his hand and saying: "That is the very hand that was spared in answer to prayer, and I hold it up a monument of Divine mercy."

Again, the hand is the chief executive officer of the soul when wrung in agony. Tears of relief are sometimes denied to trouble. The eyelids at such times are as hot and parched and burning as the brow. At such time even the voice is suppressed, and there is no sob or outcry. Then the wringing of the hand tells the story. At the close of a life wasted in sin sometimes comes that expression of the twisted fingers —the memory of years that will never return, of opportunities the like of which will never again occur and conscience in its wrath pouncing upon the soul and all the past a horror, only to be surpassed by the approaching horror. So a man wrings his hands over the casket of a dead wife whom he has cruelly treated. So a man wrings his hands at the fate of sons and daughters whose prospects have been ruined by his inebriety and neglect and depravity. So the sinner wrung his hands when after a life full of offers of pardon and peace and heaven he dies without hope. When there are sorrows too poignant for lamentation on the lip and too hot for the tear glands to write in letters of crystal on the cheek, the hand recites the tragedy with more emphasis than anything in "Macbeth" and "King Lear."

Worse than the wringing of the hands was the punishment that Cranmer gave his right hand when he put it in the fire of the stake and without flinching said: "Forasmuch as my hand offended in writing contrary to my heart, my hand shall therefore be the first punished. It shall be the first burned. This was the hand that wrote it."

Of course there is a wicked shaking of hands, and Solomon refers to it when he says: "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished." Shake hands in conspiracy to damage individual or community or nation, shake hands to defraud, shake hands to stand by each other in wrongdoing. You help me stuff this ballot box, and I will see that when I am in power you shall have promotion. You help me in my infamy, and I will help you in your infamy. Oh, that is profanation of a holy rite; that is sacrilege against a Divine arrangement; that is gripping your own destruction. Pilate and Herod, though antagonists before, shook hands over Christ's projected assassination.

But shake hands the way William Penn shook hands with the Indians for their civilization. Shake hands the way Missionary Carey shook hands with the Hindoos, for whose salvation he became a lifetime exile. Shake hands the way Havelock shook hands with besieged women at Lucknow whom he had come to save from massacre. Shake hands as David Brainerd did with the American Indians whom he offered a glorious Heaven through the Gospel. Shake hands as Lincoln shook hands with the agitated mother to whom he gave back the boy who had fallen asleep from overfatigue as a sentinel. Shake hands as during the civil war Anna Ross shook hands with the wounded soldier in Cooper Shop hospital, Philadelphia. Shake hands as Van Meter, the city evangelist, shook hands with the waif of the street coming penitent into the midnight mission. Shake hands as heaven shook hands with earth that night when a doxology in the gallery of clouds woke the Bethlehem shepherds.

But it is not always in such glad greeting that we can employ our right hand. Als, that so often we have to employ the hand in farewell salutation. If your right hand retained some impress of all such uses, it would be a volume of bereavements. Oh, the good-bys in which your right hand has participated! Good-by at the steamboat wharf. Good-by at the rail train window. Good-by before the opening of the battle. Good-by at the dying pillow. We all needed grace for such handshaking, though our hand was strong and their hand was weak, and we will need grace for the coming good-bys, and that grace we had better seek while amid the felicities of health and homes unbroken. Thank God, there will be no good-by in Heaven.

Again, the hand is the chief executive of the soul when employed in benediction. No gesture of the human hand means more than the outstretched gesture. In many of our religious denominations we are not permitted to pronounce an apostolic benediction until we have been regularly ordained as ministers of the gospel, but there are kinds of benediction that you may all pronounce without especial permission from presbytery or conference or convention. You have a right to spread abroad both right and left hand in bestowing a blessing of kindness and good will upon all you meet. With both hands bless the children. Take them in your arms and kiss their fair cheek. Take with them a round of merriment in the room before you leave it, and by prayer put them in the arms of the Christ, to go to whom in olden time they struggled to get out of the arms of their mothers. God bless the cradles and high chairs and nurseries all around the world.

Extend your hands in benediction for the aged. Take their counsel and ask their prayers, and smooth the path down the declivities. By neglect and unfilial demeanor add no wrinkles to their brow, no more stoop to their shoulders. They have their hand on the latch of the door through which they will soon go out of sight of your homes and churches. May the mantles of Elijah fall upon the Elijahs! Spread your hand for the benediction upon all the men and women in the rag of life, many of them tired and buffeted and disheartened. Never go out of a store or shop or office or field without pronouncing a benediction.

And what better use can I make of my hands, which are the chief executive officer of my soul, than now to spread them abroad in the apostolic benediction which has been pronounced for centuries, and over hundreds of thousands of assemblages, at coronations and obsequies, at harvest homes and on fast days, by all the ministers of the Gospel in the past as it will be by all ministers of the Gospel until the church militant reaches up its right hand to take the right hand of the church triumphant; a benediction which, when it has its full sway, will leave nothing for our world to want on Heaven to bestow. "May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all forever. Amen."

FASHION'S MIRROR.

Pretty Gowns for Evening Wear—Latest Hair Dressing—Coats and Sacques.

The old-fashioned box plaits are to be seen as the trimming of underskirts. A box-plaited ruffle is four or five inches wide. There are one or two-inch wide box plaits separated by an equal space, and the pluiting is stitched on an inch or so below the upper edge, and the top of each plait is caught down.

A pretty dinner gown is made of alternate narrow strips of accordion-plaited crepe de chine and lace. The plaits are set close together at the waist line, and gradually widen to the lower edge of the skirt. The narrow panels of lace are slightly narrower at the waist, and also widen gradually at the edge of the skirt. The bodice is made of alternate horizontal rows of the lace and plaited crepe also.

Toques with sable crowns and brims of mirror velvet, trimmed with muslin flowers, are a feature of millinery. Roses are the special kind and the smaller sizes are much used, a wreath of white roses being the only trimming on a sable hat.

Long coats of velvet, a half-fitting loose sacque, in shapes without any seam in the middle of the back, are one of the specialties in winter garments. Wide bands of stitched panne are the trimming and distinguishing feature in his style of garment, whether of cloth or velvet, and triple revers, one of cloth like the coat, one of white satin embroidered with lace on the edge, and one of colored cloth covered with stitching.

For evening a pretty way to dress the hair is first to wave it with hair curlers, if nature has not done this for you. Arrange the hair in the revived French twist style, coiled, however, very loosely, and softly puffed at the top in front; save out a strand that you roll a la pompadour, and if you wish this effect accentuated, twist the hair over night on rather large pins. Curl little tendrils of short hair about the forehead, fasten a half wreath of pink or damask roses, with a delicate rosebud aigrette, and one or two effective loops of black velvet ribbon, just back of the pompadour roll—and the effect is charming.

Effective evening gowns have net overdresses worn over contrasting silk foundations, and small silk flowers, such as are used in millinery, are tacked to the net. They are in a color to match the goods beneath or in a contrasting color, as red flowers on black net over white satin.

Applique effects and cutwork are always in vogue when braiding is fashionable. Laid over rich satin, velvet or ladies' cloth, the elegant pieces of lace or silk passementerie en applique show to distinct advantage, but it seems a pity to see these handsome patterns laid over gowns or jackets of inferior fabric without any apparent reason. Lace is always so beautiful that it seems a waste to utilize it for many of the everyday uses, for which any amount of it is ruthlessly applied this winter.—Boston Budget.

CHILDREN AND THEIR STUDIES

Five Hours' Brain Work, the Maximum; Two Hours' Play, the Minimum.

The cramming system and its accompanying evils are a national crime at the feet of American parents. No child under 15 years of age should be given any home study whatever by his teachers. He should have not more than from one hour to four of schooling each day, the hours increasing with his years. Outside of school hours he should have at least three hours of play. After 15 the brain has another period of rapid development, with special increase of the higher faculties. Four hours of schooling, then, is not too much, provided the child's physical being is capable of it, and in time an hour of isolated study may be added. But that is enough. Five hours of brain work a day is the most that we should ask of our children, and the child should pass at least two hours a day in the open air. Our boys and girls do not get enough fresh air and sunshine into their bodies and natures. The higher institutions of learning understand the need of physical development for brain growth far better than do our lesser schools and our homes—and as it is to admit it.—Edward W. Bok, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Child's Sleeping Hours.

The baby should be taught to sleep at regular hours. At first he will sleep most of the time not occupied in feeding. At the age of six the child should sleep 10 or 12 hours at night and two hours during the day. Between these ages the amount of sleep should gradually diminish. The method of training babies to sleep is simple: Be sure that they are comfortable as to externals, and are well, then leave them alone in a properly guarded crib. After several months' humoring it may be dangerous to leave a child alone, as the little tyrant may work himself into such a rage as to have convulsions or to do himself physical injury, but the young infant may be trusted to "cry it out" in safety, and after the first disappointment is over he will be happier and more contented to take the ups and downs of life uncomplainingly.—Dr. A. L. Benedict, in Woman's Home Companion.

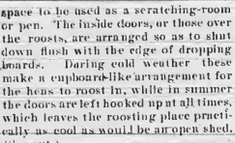
AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

CHEAP POULTRY HOUSE.

An Excellent Structure to Keep Hens in a Laying Condition Through the Winter Months.

When approximating the cost of housing fowls comfortably and well, one dollar per head is considered a proper estimate here in New England.

Nearly every henhouse on my farm, in fact every one that is arranged for laying stock, has its annexed scratching shed, tight roof, sides and back, with open front covered by wire netting to admit the air. These fronts are provided with oiled muslin curtains which can be opened and closed at will during very cold or stormy weather, hinged at top or on the end, whichever may be most convenient for hooking the frame up out of the way when not in use.



In the fall of '98 I had about 125 extra late-hatched pullets that must need either be housed or sold then at a sacrifice. I bought some second grade spruce timber and hemlock boards for

CHEAP POULTRY HOUSE.

$14 per 1,000 feet. The sills 4x4 inches were set on cedar posts with a stone underpinning between posts. Balance of framing, 2x4 spruce. The lumber was all 14 and 16 feet in length, which cut with very little waste. The roof was covered with packing paper and over this two-ply tarred felting kept well washed with gas tar.

As to the exterior, much can be understood from the picture, which is from a photograph. The interior is 14x28, with a partition from the front to rear, making two rooms 14x14. The platforms or floors of roosting places are raised two feet from the sills and are four feet wide. These extend the entire depth of each room, running along the partition, which, of course, is in the highest part of the house. This arrangement leaves the entire floor space to be used as a scratching-room or pen. The inside doors, or those over the roosts, are arranged so as to shut down flush with the edge of dropping boards. During cold weather these make a cupboard-like arrangement for the hens to roost in, while in summer the doors are left hooked up at all times, which leaves the roosting place practically as cool as would be an open shed. (See cut.)

Small windows for light and ventilation are put in front of each roosting-room, and one on each side of the shed part. The laying nests are arranged around these latter pens. In buildings of this kind we can scatter the birds about the farm on the colony plan without having any yards. Where it was necessary to confine the flock the house could set in an inclosure or have adjoining yards.

The pullets that were housed in this building in November were quite small and immatured Barred Plymouth Rocks, but with these lodgings they developed rapidly and commenced laying early, keeping up a remarkable egg yield throughout the entire season. I have another lean-to-shed fixed up after the same principles, with only one pen; the pullets in this shed were the best layers on the farm last winter.

I have spent over 20 years of my life in connection with practical poultry keeping and different methods and have yet to learn of a better plan to keep hens in a laying condition during the winter months.—D. J. Lambert, in Farm Journal.

The Idea of a Crank.

There is talk of a continuous asphalt road from New York to Chicago, via Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, etc. It is estimated that such a road can be built for $4,000,000, but where the money is to come from is not stated. No one wants a toll road, and the several states are not likely to tax themselves for such a luxury, so it must be the national government that is expected to foot the bill. The trouble would be that every other section of the union would immediately demand a similar road, and in consequence the expense would loom up so tremendously that the whole project would have to be abandoned. It is not likely that we will ever get good roads on the wholesale plan; they will come gradually as all reforms do.

Soda as a Fertilizer.

Where the potash supply is limited, the soda is useful to certain plants either as a direct plant food or indirectly by virtue of its liberating potash from the soil, as demonstrated at the Rhode Island station. The results at hand have not yet shown definitely whether or not it is profitable to intentionally limit the potash supply enough to make the soda act, nor can conclusions be drawn as to the direct manurial action of the soda until the analysis of the material is completed.

HOW TO CURE MEAT.

Something Which Everybody Thinks He Knows, But Which Only a Few Do in the Right Way.

One important item in curing meat of all kinds is to lay it out in a cool place, where there is a good circulation of air, until the animal heat is thoroughly cooled out.

There is a process of sugar-curing pork that requires that the salt, sugar and spices be rubbed in while the meat is still warm, but it requires experience to do the work properly, and the average farmer can hardly afford to run the risk of failure.

Generally at this season there is little difficulty in thoroughly cooling out meat if it is spread out over night.

Meat should not be allowed to freeze before it is salted, as it will not take salt while frozen. The salt is apt to form in cakes over the meat, and unless looked after when a few warm days come the meat will be certain to spoil. In applying the salt the best plan is to take a quantity in the hand and rub it on the meat.

This will cause the meat to take salt more readily than if it is simply sprinkled over it. After rubbing well lay the meat in the box or on the shelf arranged for it and sprinkle it liberally with salt. If the weather is moderate so that the meat is not frozen it is best to go over it a second time in a week or ten days, rubbing as at first, and then sprinkle again. If the weather is cold enough to keep the meat frozen this may be done in a few days after the weather moderates.

When meat is pickled instead of dry salted the brine should be made as strong as possible and should fully cover the meat. In three days the brine should be drawn off and either fresh brine put on or the old brine be boiled and the scum that rises to the surface skimmed off and then when cool poured back.

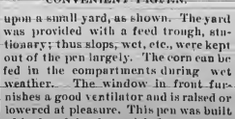
In both brine and dry salting the addition of some sugar, saltpeter and pepper will improve the quality of the meat as well as aiding in preserving it.

Allowing the meat to remain in salt too long has a tendency to make the lean part hard and unpalatable. When ever sufficiently salted it should be hung up and smoked and then packed down. If this is done before the warm weather comes the risk of loss will be greatly lessened.—St. Louis Republic.

THE SHEPHERD DOG.

When Properly Trained, He Is an Inestimable Value to General Farmers and Stock Raisers.

My way is, first, to have a pure bred pup, not mongrel. As soon as it is old enough put it to work. If you have no work for him to do you have no business with a shepherd dog. They must have something to do. Take him with you among all kinds of stock, and he will soon get accustomed to the different duties that belong to him, and he will become eager and anxious to do it. If he is headstrong, or wants to go too far, or go to the head instead of heels, make a close-fitting halter of wool or binder twine and have enough string to let the dog go just as far as you want him to go and no farther. Make him stop at your command. Be prompt and resolute, but never whip or abuse; chastise, if necessary, by pulling the ears or cuffing a little, but be careful. Teach him to have confidence in you and in himself.



As soon as you make him understand what you want him to do help him to do it as near right as possible, and caress him, to let him know he has done right. Always tell the dog what you want him to do and make him understand, if possible, before you start him out, and if you are careful you can work him by the motion of the hand if he is too far away to hear your voice. The main thing is to be patient, and, above all, keep your temper. Have but one boss for the dog.

I have two as fine bred sluts as there are in the state, well trained, and one dog, but he is too old now for much good. I can take either of them and drive more stock with less labor and with less friction than if I had six boys or that many impatient men about. If you will come and stay with me one week and see what a good shepherd dog can do, and is willing and glad to do, you will be surprised. I can work them a half mile away if they can see my motions. They mind me at the first bidding. If a horse, cow, hog or sheep gets out of place he must get back, whether I am around or not. They know what is right or wrong almost as well as a human being does. A good deal depends on the breeding of the dog and the patience of the owner. The shepherd dog is given up to be the best farm or all-around dog that lives.—Ohio Farmer.

WESTERN CANADA.

The following extracts from an interesting letter to the Mason City (Iowa) Republican, written by Mrs. S. A. Brigham, late of that place, but now of Ross Creek, Alberta, Canada, so nearly describes most of the districts of Western Canada that we take pleasure in presenting same to the attention of our readers:

WESTERN CANADA.

Crop Prospects and Climate About Edmonton, N. W. T.

[Interesting letter from Mrs. S. A. Brigham, late of Mason City.]

Editor Mason City Republican.

Ross Creek, Alberta, N. W. T., Canada, Aug. 7, 1899.

Dear Sir:

We are located in the Beaver Hills, 30 miles from Ft. Saskatchewan and 50 miles from Edmonton. To the east of these is an immense area of bottom lands, which furnishes abundance of hay for the settlers. It is dotted with small lakes, the largest of which is called Beaver Lake, 16 miles in length.

There is shelter for the cattle and horses now feeding there.

The Beaver Hills are covered with small green willows which are easily gotten rid of before breaking up the land. Here and there poplar, birch and tamarack trees abound. Small meadows are numerous. The soil in these hills is much richer than the bottom lands, being a kind of black leaf mould. There is no tough sod to break and it is very productive. Wheat, oats and barley do finely, and vegetables are the finest that can be grown. Potatoes especially are large and solid, easily producing from 200 to 300 bushels per acre, and best of all never a "taty bug" to wrestle with. Wild fruit—strawberries, gooseberries, saskatoons (or pine berries), raspberries and cranberries—are found in the hills. Small tame fruit does finely; the red and white currants in my garden are as large again as common sized ones.

We have long days during the months of June and July, one can see to read many evenings until 10 o'clock in the twilight. Some nights less than 3 hours of darkness and the birds are singing at 2 o'clock. Then again, it rains so easily. You look toward the west and see a little cloud coming up, a gentle shower follows, the sun shines forth again, and in a little while you forget it has rained.

Cyclones are unknown here and the thunder and lightning is very light. We had two storms this summer accompanied with wind and hail, but nothing to lodge the grain. The average heat is about 78 degrees. We had three or four days in July at 90. The nights are always cool.

The winter season is one of great activity. All the fencing is gotten out then and logs for the farm buildings. By paying 25 cents you are granted a permit at the land office to cut logs upon vacant lands. The roads are good and smooth, for the snow never drifts, not even around the buildings, and this is a great saving of time to the farmer. Hay is hauled from the bottom lands all winter long, and a man can work outside every day as far as the weather is concerned. There are cold snaps when it reaches 40 and 48 below zero, but the lack of wind prevents one realizing it and the mountains 150 miles west of us are a great protection.

Our neighbors are mostly Canadian, Scotch, Swede, and we have a nice sprinkling of people from the States.

The creeks abound in small fish.

We are now in the midst of haymaking (Aug. 7th). Wheat will not be cut until early September, this being a little later season than common, but the crop will be immense. I send you a sample of wheat and barley—its height is almost even with my shoulders, average 50 inches. Newcomers lacking binders can hire their grain cut for 75 cents per acre. Prairie chickens are here by the thousands.

The water is good. We have a fine well 15 feet deep. In the creeks the water is soft and of a yellowish colour.

Then again we are surrounded with bachelors; we have no less than 18 single men in this neighbourhood, on matrimony bent. When a feminine gender of any age between 14 and 40 visits these hills we pity her, so great is the demand for her company.

In conclusion, if the remainder of our loved ones were here with us, we should better enjoy life on Ross Creek, and unless the unexpected develops, consider this will be a pretty fair place to end our days.

MRS. S. A. BRIGHAM.

Felt Smaller Than He Looked.

The dwarf of the new house is John L. Burnett, from Alabama. An Alabamian the other day related this story, which will best illustrate how the diminutive member will appear to the speaker when he makes his maiden speech. Burnett, commonly known in his district as "the Jack of Spades," is a shrewd lawyer who has had much practice before the Alabama supreme court. The greatest embarrassment of his life was suffered when he made his debut before that dignified tribunal. He was seated behind a high table, stacked with law books and papers, and when he arose in his turn to address the court there were unable to even see the top of his head above the pile. "The learned counsel," said the chief justice, rapping vigorously with his gavel, "will kindly do the court the usual courtesy of rising when addressing it." It is needless to add that Burnett felt manifoldly more diminutive than he looked.—Philadelphia Call.

GOLD BRICK HANNA.

The Ohio Sure Thing Boss Runs Up Against a Film Flam Game.

It does not violently wrench one's conception of the peculiarly Philadelphian standards of moral probity to find that the good and great Senator Hanna has been made the victim of a confidence game. A community that not merely stomachs but idolizes Quay, that has water steals, municipal building steals, and other big and little steals too numerous to mention, is not likely to balk at a little matter like a bogus check.

The surprise, if there is any, comes from the unmistakable evidence that the usually astute senator from Ohio was caught napping. For once the memories of Wanamaker's princely contributions to the republican rain-making fund were allowed to be cloud his business sagacity. The great prestidigitateur was lulled to a sense of false security by an ordinary bit of handwriting. Surely, we may imagine Hanna as reasoning, the city of brotherly love at least can be trusted. If the center of republican sanctity and the domicile of holy John himself is not worthy of our faith then whom in this vale of tears may we trust?

But this is just where Mr. Hanna, like the agriculturist who buys a gold brick and carefully carries it home, trusted once too often. He took the word of the smooth Quakers that their check was genuine and that the funds were behind it. The republican campaign committee needed cash—$100,000 of it—and the republican national convention was sold to the oleaginous gentlemen from Philadelphia for a piece of paper, about two by eight, with certain hieroglyphics on it. The latter now turns out to be about as efficacious in producing the coin of the constitution, for which the republican campaign languishes, as would the cabalistic characters on an Egyptian papyrus.

In other words, the $100,000 check which temporarily found a lodging place in Maj. Dick's right-hand vest pocket while Senator Hanna instructed the auctioneer to label the republican convention "Sold" now turns out to be worthless or nearly so. Mr. Hanna is compelled to make an undignified scramble for what he can get from the thrifty Philadelphians by way of compromise for his check. He is said to have sealed the indebtedness to $60,000, but of this less than one-half, or $30,000, is actually pledged. Meanwhile Mr. Hanna has been forced to take what ready cash the committee chose to give him and to return to campaign headquarters with the old, old necessity of liberal fat-frying still staring him in the face.

The trouble is that it is too late for reprisals. Philadelphia has the convention and any attempt at changing the assignment would give rise to national scandal. Of course the committee is collectively and severely indignant that the convention was not awarded to Chicago, whose refusal to bid for it with a cash bonus and whose ample guaranty to pay all the expenses had at least the merit of honesty. But regrets will not now help matters.

Let us hope that Philadelphia will be generous enough not to require the members of the national republican committee to pay their own expenses. That would be charging our lucolic friends for the privilege of being swindled.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Mark Hanna and another Ohio gentleman over whom he exerts great influence are fearful that the people will take the sober second thought before next November, and turn their backs upon imperialism. As soon as the craze of conquest shall die out and voters realize what it truly signifies woe unto any candidate who has betrayed the principles of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln and set his face toward foreign aggrandizement, colonialism and empire. Signs of the revulsion are already becoming widespread and they cannot multiply too fast if the republic is to be saved from the blighting curse of imperialism.—Troy (N. Y.) Press.

RIGHT TO THE POINT.

Well-Founded Protest Against the Administration Policy of Imperialism.

Congressman Bailey, of Texas, had good warrant for his protest to the effect that, while the minority of the rules committee of the house agreed with the majority as to the propriety of the creation of a congressional committee on insular affairs to have jurisdiction over all matters (excepting those affecting the revenues and the appropriations) pertaining to the islands which came to the United States through the treaty of 1899 with Spain, and to Cuba, it did dissent from the idea that the committee should be created for the purpose of "permanently dealing" with the islands.

It will be well for congress to remember that the United States government is not yet definitely committed to the permanent holding of the Philippines or to the annexation of Cuba. It is true that the administration policy is authoritatively outlined by President McKinley declares that we cannot abandon the Philippines, and hints at the possible necessity for annexing Cuba, but not until a majority in congress shall have voted to sustain the president's policy will it go into effect as dictating and controlling government action. The debate and the vote on this vital question are still to come, pending which provisional action alone may be taken with propriety.

The democratic minority in congress stands opposed to the administration policy of imperialism, and its plain duty is to combat that policy with an unceasing loyalty to the sound American principles that forbid its acceptance by an American government. The issue must be fought out before the American people—it must not be taken for granted that it is already settled because the president has urged imperialism in his message to congress. Powerful as is the administration influence, the time has not yet come for "permanent dealing" with the Philippines as an American colonial possession.

Congressman Bailey's point, therefore, was well taken, and indicates the line to be followed by the democratic minority in all legislation affecting the Philippines and Cuba. The radical departure from American principles involved by adoption of the policy of imperialism must not be conceded as in effect until so declared by a vote of congress. The issue is too serious to be settled by an incidental acceptance of the duties and responsibilities that will accompany imperialism as an accomplished fact.—St. Louis Republic.

THE NERVES OF WOMEN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves the Suffering from Overwrought Nerves.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so grateful for the benefit derived from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I wish you to publish this testimonial that others may know the value of your medicine. I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all and was too weak to walk across the floor without aid. The disease had reached a condition where my heart was affected by it, so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."—MISS ADELE WILLIAMSON, 196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Thin, Sallow and Nervous

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was thin, sallow and nervous. I had not had my menses for over a year and a half. Doctored with several physicians in town and one specialist, but did not get any better. I finally decided to try your medicine, and wrote to you. After I had taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and three of Blood Purifier, my menses returned, and I feel as well and strong as I ever did, and am gaining flesh."—MISS LENA GAINES, Visalia, Tulare Co., Cal.

40 YEARS OF SUFFERING!

NEURALGIA Gentlemen: I have been sending to you for your "5 DROPS" for several parties who have used it and who say it is the best they ever used. One old lady has had NEURALGIA FOR 40 YEARS, has tried nearly everything she could hear of without relief until she commenced using "5 DROPS" and now she is not troubled with the disease. Each one that has used it says it is a wonderful remedy, and all join in praise of "5 DROPS." For the enclosed money please send me three large bottles of "5 DROPS," one package of Pills and one Plaster, and hurry them forward without delay.

Jan. 11, 1900. SAMUEL SPEEGLE, Falkville, Ala

RHEUMATISM Gentlemen: My mother, Mrs. Eliza Austin, of Fremont, Wis., has been almost an invalid for years with RHEUMATISM and for the past five years has not been able to walk 40 rods until she began to use "5 DROPS," about two months ago. She now walks a mile at a time and is doing all her own work in the house, a thing she has not done for years. You are at liberty to publish this testimonial, with my name and also my mother's. Dec. 27, 1899. MRS. C. H. PURDY, Waupaca, Wis.

Prevent Baldness

And Cleanse the Scalp of Crusts, Scales, and Dandruff by Shampoos with

And light dressings with CUTICURA, purest of emollient skin cures. This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of Women

Use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines the emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. The Set, $1.25 A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. CROP AND STOCK.

A hen that roosts in a tree in winter weather won't produce many eggs.

A coat of white wash on the inside of the hen house will be a good investment.

J. T. Tate, of Shawhan, has purchased 334 head of sheep, of J. Cook & Co., of Lexington, at $3 85 per head.

In Garrard, a fatal disease, pronounced paralytic indigestion, is killing mules, one farmer having lost 7 in a few days.

Carey Devore, of Dover, on eleven acres of ground raised 14,500 pounds of tobacco, which he sold to Mr. Loudenback at 10½ cents a round.

John P. Gaines, of Clark county, killed a 19-months old jersey hog that weighed 605 pounds, after being fed 105 days. It made 26 gallons of lard.

Jas. T. Williams, of Louisville, has purchased the famous old Swigert farm of 250 acres, near Spring Station, for $20,500. This farm is one of the oldest nurseries of thoroughbreds in Kentucky.

A Fleming county farmer's wife has kept account of her egg sales during the year 1899, and she finds that she has sold during this year 7,800 dozen, which averaged probably 12½ cents per dozen.

The government report of the wheat crop says the yield this year was 547,300,000 bushels. The area sown this fall is estimated at 30,150,000 acres, which is 200,000 more than last year. The average condition is 96.1.

Anderson & Spillman, the Danville millers, have bought from different parties in Boyle over a thousand acres of the growing wheat crop at sixty cents per bushel. Many Boyle farmers, however, refuse to accept this price so far in advance of the harvest.

O. S. Johnson, of Winchester, shipped Monday to Cobb & Lillard, of Danville, 16 Shorthorns; 8 from his own fine herd and 8 purchased at the Bigstaff sale at Mt. Sterling, last week. Mr. Johnson has sold this firm 17 Shorthorns in the last six months.—Democrat.

The prospect for wheat was never finer than at present. Unless some causes arise to give the growing crop a backset the yield next summer will be one of the largest for years. The supply will exceed the demand and the price will likely not be over 50c.—Midway Clipper.

There are most encouraging signs in the tobacco trade looked at from every standpoint. The present year gives promise of a volume of business never before attained. The past few months of '99 could be construed as meaning nothing less than great trade for the coming year.—The weed.

The Paris Kentuckian dives into its old files and tells of June court 1853. On that day over $200,000 worth of stock was sold at auction on the streets. Over $50,000 of this was from the sale of negroes. A large lot of mules sold at private sale at $165 each. Fully two thousand mules were on the market.

C. P. Foster and J. F. Summers finished delivering their crop of tobacco to T. H. Gray Saturday. This crop consisted of 26,275 pounds, and was considered one of the best crops in Fleming county. It was grown on fourteen acres of ground and all told brought the owners $2,086.34. Mr. Foster states that the cost of raising the crop was something over $200.—Fleming Gazette.

For thirty years William Johnson, of Kokomo, Ind., has run a farm of six acres without having a horse on the place. He is known as the "horseless farmer." He raises corn, potatoes, celery, melons and all kinds of vegetables and does all the work himself by hand. Even marketing is done without the aid of a horse, as he trundles his crop to town in a wheelbarrow, making an average of three trips a day all the year round. Johnson says that he has an aversion to horses, owing to the fact that he was kicked by one when a boy.

The Duluth, Minn., Herald says: "Embalmed butter is the latest thing to look out for. Everybody heard of embalmed beef during the late war, and probably everyone knows that one of the charges that were made was that boric acid had been put into the beef to make it keep. When one buys butter here now, unless he has the most implicit confidence in his dealer, he cannot tell whether or not his butter has been subjected to the same treatment. It is being done and quite extensively, but no actual convictions have been made on it here."

That it is sometimes better to sell your tobacco at home rather than ship to the city market was demonstrated the past week. One of our prominent tobacco buyers recently tried very hard to purchase a crop of the weed from one of our largest growers, offering what might be termed a fancy price and at the same time presenting an argument to show why the grower would have to sell for less on the city market because of the manner in which he would have to assort and ship it as a single crop. The purchase was not effected, however, and last week the said grower sold his crop on the Cincinnati market for nearly three-fourths of a cent a pound less than the home offer.—Falmouth Pendletonian.

"Snakes as food for hogs beat chestnuts, acorns or any of the fancy foodstuffs." said Mr. Henry Arbuthnot, at the Metropolitan. "Of course, you know that in some parts of Europe pigs have killed out the vipers. I was in West Virginia some months ago, and found there that a novel industry has been undertaken by a number of men whose lands were overrun by the small variety of snakes that infest that section. The snakes were so numerous as to be a nuisance. One farmer tried the hog as an exterminator. He succeeded so well that he found the drove of animals he had turned loose on the plantation had not only decreased the number of snakes, but that they were actually thriving on them. He told his neighbors about it, and now the whole valley is one large hog pen, in which hundreds of the animals are feeding literally on snakes. Formerly no one would buy land there notwithstanding the beauty of the place, because of the snakes, but now that the remedy has been found, and at the same time big money is made on the pigs that grow fat on snake food, the land is destined to be in great demand, as it is the most fertile land in West Virginia. This may sound like a fairy snake tale, but I assure you that it is correct, and that hundreds of pigs are sold from that valley every year that have literally become fat on snakes.—Washington Post.

Congressman D. H. Smith wants a public building erected at Elizabethtown to cost $75,000.

Ellis Graham, of Graves county, is under arrest charged with poisoning his wife. Opinion as to his guilt is divided in his neighborhood.

At Flemingsburg, J. M. McGregor sued Augustus Poston, a schoolteacher, for $1,000 damages for correcting a grandson in school. The Circuit Court acquitted Poston, who in turn sued McGregor for malicious prosecution, getting judgment for $1.

William Elliston, son-in-law of Gen. Jackson, and who shot Edward Sinclair at Keysburg, two weeks ago, has left the country, and in a letter to a friend says he has gone to South Africa to join the Boer army. He is one of the crack trap and wing shots of the country.

It is not likely that Wheeler has found things at the scene of action in such shape as he was led to believe them, and thus one more convert to McKinley's policy has experienced a change of heart.—Chicago Democrat.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1900. NO. 16.

THE British have lost 10,000 men in the war with the Boers.

THE United States Supreme Court has incidentally decided that the 20th century begins with January 1, 1901.

THEY had a hot old time in the United States Senate, last Wednesday. The Philippine question was under discussion.

OOM PAUL'S armies are composed of very successful trappers, and the trapping of the British lion is their leading sport.

BYNUM, of Indiana, who is about to receive his reward for his services in the election of McKinley, by being made appraiser of customs, at New York, says it is nonsense to say that there are fewer sound money Democrats now than there were in 1896.

D. A. JENNINGS, editor of the Searchlight, published at Salem, Indiana, was severely beaten one night last week by a mob of disguised men, and his paper destroyed. The people of the town were incensed against him because of certain articles he had published.

IF the Scott county Assessor's report is correct, the people of that county get along with very little cash. The Assessor reports $49,028 cash on hand and $41,816 cash on deposit in banks. How do the Scott county people reconcile the Assessor's statement as to the amount of cash in bank, with the statements of the cashiers of the several banks in her boundary?

THE War Department is preparing a statement to Congress showing what sums have been collected and what expended in the various islands. It is reported that the accounts are in a greatly tangled condition and that it will be impossible to account for a tithe of the expenditures. Rumors of corruption are plentiful, and it is certain that the Department would never make public these accounts unless compelled to do so by Congress.

THE Louisville Republicans are very much out of humor because Miss Virginia M. Murry, of Dayton, Ohio, has been appointto a $600 per annum position in the pension office in that city, over several worthy local applicants. That is too small a matter to make a fuss about so long as the best appointive office in the Seventh Congressional District is held by an Ohio Republican carpet-bagger.

THE following from the Philadelphia Ledger shows how well people and papers at a distance are posted in regard to Kentucky politics: "There is a new and altogether unprecedented situation in Kentucky, where the taking of testimony in the contested election case began yesterday. As stated by the Republicans, the Republican candidate for Governor, John Young Brown, was clearly elected by a majority of from 25,000 to 30,000."

SINCE the assemblying of the Legislature at Frankfort Ethelber Scott, George Julian and a Mr. Demarec have been committed to untimely graves, while Colson and Golden are suffering from serious wounds, and to-morrow all that is mortal of Hon. William Goebel will be consigned to the tomb. This is the result of shootings in frankfort since the meeting of the Legislature, and yet not a grain of Democratic powder was burned in bringing about these awful results.

IN days gone when Kentucky statesmen assembled in bi-ennial sessions at the capital and discussed, dispashionately, dog laws, stock laws and fence laws, their coming together was hailed with delight by the citizens of Frankfort, but in these latter days when the meeting of the General Assembly is the forerunner of the appearance of mountain mobs armed with Winchesters, the concealment of assassins in the State buildings, the hurry call for the State militia and the mounting of gatling guns in front of the capitol building, the people of Frankfort live in dread of the coming among them of State's law makers. Would it be strange if they did not?

THOUSANDS WEPT

At the Bier of Kentucky's Dead Statesman at Covington.

The remains of Gov. Goebel were conveyed by special train from Frankfort to Covington, arriving at the latter place about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, where they lay in state that day and were viewed by thousands of sorrowing friends. Tuesday night the body was returned to Frankfort, where it lies in state to-day at the Capital Hotel, and to-morrow at noon it will be placed in a vault in the Frakfort cemetery to await final interment, which will be at Frankfort.

The attorneys for the Democrats and Republicans met in Louisville, Monday night, and agreed upon terms for a settlement of the existing troubles, and the following is given out as the substance of that agreement:

"The Republicans are to be recalled from London and meet with the Democrats at Frankfort.

"In order to finally and completely set at rest any doubt as to the titles of Goebel and Beckham to the offices of Governor and Lieutenant Governor, the Legislature is to pass a joint resolution validating the acts of the Democrats since last Tuesday.

"That Taylor will then retire and Beckham take charge as Governor, not later than Monday, February 12.

"That in the meantime the militia will be gradually withdrawn from Frankfort, enough remaining to protect Taylor.

"That the State Contest Board will be left to decide as to minor offices.

"That Republicans will not be proceeded against on charges of contempt of court, usurpation of office or any other charge for any act since last Tuesday.

"The Goebel election law is to be modified, the changes to be agreed upon by two leading Republicans and two Democrats.

"It was agreed to leave to Gen. Dan Lindsay (Rep) the number of troops that should remain in Frankfort to guard Taylor until after the Goebel funeral.

"The Democrats at first demanded that the proceedings of the Legislature since their adjournment to London by Governor Taylor should be recognized as legal. This was done that Goebel might be recognized as having been legal Governor of Kentucky.

"The Republican conferees at first refused to concede this point, but finally reluctantly yielded and it was agreed that Taylor should recall the Republican Legislators from London and that the vote of the Legislature shall be taken in Frankfort after the Goebel funeral.

The names attached to the agreement are:

Republicans — John Marshall, Judge J. W. Barr, Gen. Dan Lindsey, T. L. Edelen, Dr. T. H. Baker, David W. Fairleigh, C. T. Ballard.

Democrats—J. C. S. Blackburn, J. C. W. Beckham, Sam J. Shackelford, Urey Woodson, James B. McCreary, Phil Thompson.

The following telegram under date of February 4th, from Senator Deboe, it is thought had considerable to do with bringing about the peace treaty. The telegram was as follows:—"Hon. W. S. Taylor: The unanimous sentiment here is that you are wrong in preventing the Legislature from meeting, and that you should submit the disputed question to the civil courts. Federal assistance can not be given you on your requisition so long as the Legislature is in session or can be convened. There is no doubt but it can b convened if you will permit. The Democrats intend that if any violence occurs you shall be the aggressor. You will, by forcible resistence, alienate all who formerly sympathized with your cause. No assistance.

W. J. DEBOE."

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4th."

Taylor remains in the Executive building, surrounded by soldiers. Yesterday detectives were permitted to enter the yard at the capital and make measurements.

In renewing his subscription to the RECORDER, D. C. Peck, of Milton, Trimble county writes:

You will observe that I have computed the amount I owe you on the 19th century basis, but I see in your county, they are about to establish this as the 20th century; and should this be done before the check reaches you, of course, I shall owe you a little more or a little less I am not able to tell which. I undertook to make the calculation on the 20th century basis, but soon found I did not understand ciphering well enough to tell what the answer is, so I have concluded to ask you to put a stamp on my check and we will call it even, if you are willing. As to the time to which this check will pay, we will just have to wait till we find out "where we are at," then cipher it out. Will, it does seem to me that if those gentlemen in your county do succeed in establishing this as the 20th century it will throw things in a terrible shape. We are all opposed to it down here, and I do hope they will not do it. Down here the people have been used to counting 100 years a century for so long that it would take them a long time to learn to count 99 years 100 years. Besides, they would have to count 99 cents a dollar, and no man or woman would be willing to take 99 cents for adollar. I don't believe the 20th century advocates would do it. The oldest men tell me that for 18 centuries they had no trouble over the beginning and the ending of a single century. I learn they called 100 years a century for 18 centuries, and now when we come to the end of the 99th year of the 19th century it seems that the old fogies who managed the beginning and ending of 18 centuries are gone and men more progressive step forward, calling 99 years a century, and wish to jump over into the 20th century. Should the jump be made this time, in all probability by the end of the 98th year of the 20 century, other men, still more progressive, will come forward, claiming 98 years make a century, and jump into the 21st century. And no doubt other men would soon arise who would invent or discover some means of accelerating the motion of the earth around the sun. So its velocity would correspond with the movement of time, as measured by those progressive gentleman, and finally the whole human family would be jumped into eternity, perhaps before all are ready.

Will, if you should ask these gentlemen to please stop and think where this thing would lead to don't you suppose they would drop the matter?

"Peach buds in good condition. Kindest regards to every body.

Yours Truly,

D. C. PECK.

To-day's papers say Taylor is refusing to sign the protocol, and there is no telling when he will if at all. The rump legislature held a few minutes session at London yesterday. No quorum was present and no business was transacted. Democratic members of the Legislature continue to make themselves scarce in the State to avoid being arrested and taken to London to make a quorum for the rump Assembly.

Commonwealth's Attorney J. E. Rowe, of Owensboro, has confessed his sins again. He says: "I will never take another drink, and if I ever am found drunk again I will resign as Commonwealth's Attorney and retire to private life." This makes the fourth time Rowe has fallen from grace.

MANY of the leading Republican papers in the country are decidedly emphatic in their expressions of disapproval of the manner in which Taylor has been conducting affairs since the assassination of Goebel.

AN effort is now being made to create a belief that Goebel was shot from the back instead of from the front. The autopsy held by the doctors will settle that question beyond all controversy.

"Tell my friends to be brave and fearless and loyal to the great common people," was the last message before his death of the great Democratic chieftain.

SOME of the friends of the late John Sandford denounce, in unmeasured terms, the claim made by some people that one of his friends assassinated Goebel.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I wish to devote this communication to a portion of our county known as North Bend, representing the most northern portion of our county as well as of our State it fronts on the Ohio river for a distance of five miles, and has for a background lofty hills with a slope sufficient for cultivation. It is, in my estimation, the most valuable as well as the most beautiful portion of our county. In looking through the dark vista of time, I can perceive the dawning of a bright future for this part of the county. I predict that in ten years from now this beautiful and rich bottom will be converted into a profitable garden spot. Enterprising Germans will realize its many advantages as such will purchase it and devote it to the production of small fruits and vegetables, to which it is peculiarly adapted and happily located. The city of Cincinnati will have extended its limits to include North Bend, the village across the river, and a continuous city extend along the opposite shore of the Ohio. A steam ferry will connect the two, and an immediate intercourse will exist between the producer and consumer of garden products. The garden and fruit products will be in possession of the consumer within an hour after it is gathered.

One morning, during the late harvest, standing upon the crest of a hill above the home of Mr. Wm. Moore, I was wonderfully impressed with the beautiful picture in nature, that lay at my feet. Fifteen hundred acres of this beautiful land lay before me, commanding a panoramic view to which no artist could do justice. Comfortable homes surrounded by orchards laden with luscious fruit, and thousands of golden sheaves collected in stacks regularly dotted this beautiful land, promising a rich harvest to its possessors. I fear its present owners do not realize its present worth or appreciate the golden apple they hold in their hand, else they would cease raising so much corn and wheat and assign the best portions of it to small and large fruits, such grapes, strawberries, blackberries, raspberries and bellflower apples. Last fall Mr. Wm. Kirtley sold $300 worth of bellflower apples from about three acres of ground, the purchaser taking them on the trees.

While nature has bestowed upon this land richnes and fertility, providence has placed a large portion of it in hands that affliction and misfortune prevent from developing its richest resources. Mr. Wm. Moore owns about 200 acres of this bottom, but, on account of bodily affliction that has confined him to his bed for more than three score years, he is compelled to trust to hired help to nurture, beautify and adorn his possessions. Last fall it was my privilege and pleasure to spend five weeks with this grand old man, tearing down neglected and dilapidated fences and replacing them with my neat and substantial Cyclone fence. Appreciating his helplessness, I took special pains in rectifying and repairing the neglect of others in whom he had trusted. He is one of the most remarkable men I ever knew. He is scrupulously honorable, a high-toned gentleman—has a cultured mind and retentive memory—is 77 years old and has never worn glasses—is near-sighted in one eye and far-sighted in the other, but is able at his advanced age to read the finest print.

Mr. William Henry Harrison owns a farm of 80 acres adjoining Mr. Moore's. He has been an invalid for several years, and for a year his health has been so bad that he has been denied the privilege of looking after his landed interest. Mr. Harrison is a hightoned, cultured gentleman, and has more distinguished blood coursing through his veins than any man in Kentucky. He is a grandson of ex-President William Henry Harrison, who carried the country by storm and defeated the Democratic party overwhelmingly after forty years rule. He is also first cousin to ex-President Benjamin Harrison. He is closely related to other distinguished families, as the following brief outline will show: Back in the 18th century John Carter, of Virginia, owned such large acreage in that territory, that he was known as King John Carter, the land king. He had six children—three sons and three daughters. From these children descended the Harrison, the Lee, the Goodridge and Carter families. The two daughters married a Harrison and a Goodloe. Two of the sons died without male issue, their lineal descendants cannot be traced through the cycles of subsequent history. Ex-President Wm. H. Harrison; the mother of Robert E. Lee; the grandfather of William Goodloe of the Swope and Goodloe tragedy, and Goodloe Carter, my grand father, were of the same generation in the regular line of descent from King John Carter. Goodloe Carter, my grandfather, was the offspring of a union by marriage of the Carter and Goodloe branches. Your correspondent has the honor of bearing the testimony of this union in his name, since his initials stand as a memorial to perpetuate, not only the identity of the two branches, but the fact of their subsequent union by marriage. The descendants of King John Carter can boast of having produced two Presidents of the United States—the greatest military genius the world has ever known, and one of the ablest jurist in the history of our government.

Mr. Columbus Kirtley owns the next farm, which contains about seventy acres. He, too, is sorely afflicted, and had to abandon his farm to be treated. He is the only land owner in this rich bottom who has been permitted to look into the future and see its demands upon him as the possessor of this rich inheritance. He has assigned the richest portion of his farm to the cultivation of strawberries, blackberries and a choice selection of other fruits.

The next farm, of seventy acres, was a few months ago sold by Mr. Wm. O. B. Kirtley to Mr. A. Reynolds. This is one of the most desirable farms in the bottom. Mr. Reynolds is a professional man, being at the head of a troup of acrobats. They are known in the professional world as the DeComas family. He stands in the front ranks of his profession, and is considered the best director in the art in the United States. He is a gentleman of agreeable manners, and is ably assisted in his profession by his wife, who is an accomplished lady with pleasing address.

This farm with about 350 acres east of it—the property of Wm. Riley, Tom Balsly, C. S. Balsly and Mrs. Balsly, is the central, most beautiful and most fertile portion of the bottom. It lies between the county road and the Ohio river. It is unfortunate that the owners of this valuable property live in other neighborhoods, and trust its care to tenants.

South of the county road Mrs. W. P. Cropper owns a very valuable farm of 200 acres, one-half of which comprises a portion of this rich, fertile body of land. The remainder of her farm is elevated land, well adapted to grazing purposes. With the expenditure of a small capital in rearranging fences and adding to the dwelling, this could be made one of the most beautiful and desirable homes in the Bend. The homestead stands up on a beautiful mound, near the foot of the hill, which forms the southern boundary of this beautiful body of land, and commands the view of the country, north and south of the river, and for miles east and west. G. C. GRADDY

An extremely modest Mississippi editor is credited with the authorship of the following: "We have hanging up in our sanctum a plain black band of generous dimensions, which appears too small for a belt and too large for a sleeve holder. The article was found on the street, and in case the owner comes in and proves property, the same will be turned over without the customary charge for advertising. It is not a dog collar.

The claim that other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

IT is said 100,000 people viewed the remains of Gov. Goebel in Covington yesterday.

CROP AND STOCK.

Wheat in Garrard county is 10 per cent better and the acreage is 5 per cent greater than an average.

Joe Wallace raised 20,524 pounds of tobacco on 11 acres of land and sold it to Murphy at Newtown for 10 cents all around.—Georgetown News.

The Woodford Sun mentions the sales of 1,100 bushels of wheat at 70 cents, a lot of corn at $2 per barrel and 130,000 pounds of hemp—1898 crop—at $5 per cwt. on board the cars.

D. B. Terhune has bought the crop of tobacco raised on Morris Threlkeld's farm near town, consisting of 13,000 pounds, at an average of eight cents a pound. He also bought ten thousand pounds of M. H. Cecil at four and eight cents a pound.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

The question which is the most profitable crop for the farmer to raise, corn or wheat, is being discussed in some quarters. The consensus of opinion seems to favor wheat as not only producing more money to the acre but as being cheaper to produce, in other words that $1,000 worth of wheat can be raised with less labor and expense than $1,000 worth of corn.

Market men say that there was never known in the history of this country such a scarcity of mules. The breeders have been actually brought out, and many large Western dealers have been compelled to send out buyers through the country to purchase from the farmers in order to keep up their stocks. Thus the farmers throughout the country are also short and will need to stock up for the coming spring.—Danville Advocate.

D. W. Peed, of Paris, bought the samples at the Maysville Tobacco Fair and will send them over the Atlantic to the Paris Exposition to compete for the $2,000 prize in the Tobacco Exhibit. He paid $22 for the 102 samples of red, $21 for 125 samples of bright and $36 for 48 samples of lugs. He says they are the finest he has seen during his many years experience in the tobacco business. He will add a few picked samples to this fine purchase.

If you are going to raise a horse for your own use, the market that you are going to supply with that horse is your own home market; then raise exactly what you want, and it you haven't the horse you like there is nobody to blame but yourself. But if you are going to raise horses to put on the market study the market and find out what it demands. If you are going to raise horses aim to raise the very best; as with horses as well as any other kind of stock, that which tops the market brings the greatest profit to the producer. And there will be enough that do not come up to this high standard to fill all the places for the so called general purpose horse.—H. A. Briggs.

Stood off Death.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowls, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous disease, kidney trouble, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50 cts, at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, J. G. Oelsner's, Florence, and M. J. Crouch's, Union.

NOT in the history of Kentucky has the death of one of her citizens cast a deeper gloom over the State, than has that of William Goebel. And this gloom is intensified by the manner in which the death was brought about—from ambush. It is bad enough for a man to be murdered when in a positon to see his adversary, but the work of the assassin is not endorsed by any person who claims to be a Kentuckian, no matter what his feelings towards the assassin's victim.

The daily papers have had a harvest in Kentucky for the last four weeks.

THE RECORDER said last week that Judge Lewis is a Republican—mistake. He is a Democrat.

THE FIGHT ON SATAN

Dr. Talmage Says We Have Lost Many of the Weapons.

A Warning to the Christian Church to Protect Itself Against the Assaults of Unrighteousness and Unbelief.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows how the cause of righteousness has lost many of its weapons and how they are to be recaptured and put into effective operation: text, I. Samuel xiii., 19-21.: "Now there is no smith found throughout all the land of Israel, for the Philistines said: Lest the Hebrews make them swords or spears. But all the Israelites went down to the Philistines, to sharpen every man his share, and his coulter, and his ax, and his mattock. Yet they had a file for the mattock, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and to sharpen the goads."

What a galling subjugation for the Israelites! The Philistines had carried off all the blacksmiths and torn down all the blacksmiths' shops and abolished the blacksmiths' trade in the land of Israel. The Philistines would not even allow these parties to work their valuable mines of brass and iron, nor might they make any swords or spears. There were only two swords left in all the land. Yea, these Philisines went on until they had taken all the grindstones from the land of Israel, so that if an Israelitish farmer wanted to sharpen his plow or his ax he had to go over to the garrison of the Philistines to get it done. There was only one sharpening instrument left in the land, and that was a file, the farmers and mechanics having nothing to whet up the coulter, and the goad, and the pickax, save a single file. Industry was hindered and work practically disgraced. The great idea of these Philistines was to keep the Israelites unarmed. They might get iron out of the hills to make swords of, but they would not have any blacksmiths to weld this iron. If they got the iron welded, they would have no grindstones on which to bring the instruments of agriculture or the military weapons up to an edge.

Oh, you poor, weaponless Israelites, reduced to a file, how I pity you! But these Philistines were not forever to keep their heel on the neck of God's children. Jonathan, on his hands and knees, climbs up a great rock, beyond which were the Philistines, and his armor bearer, on his hands and knees, climbs up the same rock, and these two men, with their own swords, hew to pieces the Philistines, the Lord throwing a great terror upon them. So it was then; so it is now. Two men of God on their knees mightier than a Philistine host on their feet!

I learn, first, from this subject, that it is dangerous for the church of God to allow its weapons to stay in the hands of its enemies. These Israelites might again and again have obtained a supply of swords and weapons, as, for instance, when they took the spoils of the Ammonites, but these Israelites seemed content to have no swords, no spears, no blacksmiths, no grindstones, no active iron mines, until it was too late for them to make any resistance. I see the farmers tugging along with their pickaxes and plow, and I say: "Where are you going with these things?" They say: "Oh, we are going to the garrison of the Philistines to get these things sharpened." I say: "You foolish men, why don't you sharpen them at home?" "Oh," they say, "the blacksmiths' shops are all torn down, and we have nothing left us but a file."

So it is in the church of Jesus Christ to-day. We are too willing to give up our weapons to the enemy. The world boasts that it has gobbled up the schools and colleges and the arts and the sciences and the literature and the printing press. Infidelity is making a mighty attempt to get all our weapons in its hand, and then to keep them. You know it is making this boast all the time, and after awhile, when the great battle between sin and righteousness has opened, if we do not look out we will be as badly off as these Israelites, without any sharpening instruments. I call upon the superintendents of literary institutions to see to it that the men who go into the classrooms to stand beside the Leyden jars and the electric batteries and the microscopes and telescopes be children of God, not Philistines.

The Tydallean thinkers of our times are trying to get all the intellectual weapons in their own grasp. We want scientific Christians to capture the science, and scholastic Christians to capture the scholarship, and philosophic Christians to capture the philosophy, and lecturing Christians to take back the lecturing platform. We want to send out against Schenkel and Strauss and Renan a Theodore Christlieb of Bonn and against the infidel scientists of to-day a God-worshiping Silliman and Hitchcock and Agassiz. We want to capture all the philosophical apparatus and swing around the telescopes on the swivel until through them we can see the morning star of the Redeemer and with mineralogical hammer discover the Rock of Ages and amid the flora of all realms find the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley. We want some one able to expound the first chapter of Genesis, bring to it the geology and the astronomy of the world until, as Job suggested, "the stones of the fields shall be in league" with the truth, and the stars in their course shall fight against Sisera. Oh, church of God, go out and recapture these weapons!

Let men of God go out and take possession of the platform. Let any printing presses that have been captured by the enemy be recaptured for God and the reporters, and the typesetters, and the editors, and the publishers swear allegiance to the Lord God of truth. Ah, my friend, that day must come, and if the great body of Christian men have not the faith, or the courage, or the consecration to do it, then let some Jonathan on his busy hands and on his praying knees climb up on the rock of Hindrance and in the name of the Lord God of Israel slash to pieces these literary Philistines! If these men will not be converted to God, then they must be overthrown.

Again, I learn from the subject what a large amount of the church's resources is actually hidden and buried and undeveloped. The Bible intimates that that was a very rich land, this land of Israel. It says: "The stones are iron, and out of the hills thou shalt dig brass," and yet hundreds and thousands of dollars' worth of this metal was kept under the hills. Well, this is the difficulty with the church of God at this day. Its talent is not developed. If one-half of its energy could be brought out, it might take the public iniquities of the day by the throat and make them bite the dust. If human eloquence were consecrated to the Lord Jesus Christ, it would in a few years persuade this whole earth to surrender to God. There is enough undeveloped energy in this city to bring all the United States to Christ—enough of undeveloped Christian energy in the United States to bring the whole world to Christ, but it is buried under strata of indifference and under whole mountains of sloth. Now, is it not time for the mining to begin, and the pickaxes to plunge, and for this buried metal to be brought out and put into the furnaces and be turned into howitzers and carbines for the Lord's host?

The vast majority of Christians in this day are useless. The most of the Lord's battalion belong to the reserve corps. The most of the crew are asleep in the hammocks. The most of the metal is under the hills. Oh, is it not time for the church of God to rouse up and understand that we want all the energies, all the talent and all the wealth enlisted for Christ's sake? I like the nickname that the English soldiers gave to Blucher, the commander. They called him "Old Forwards." We have had enough retreats in the church of Christ; let us have a glorious advance. And I say to you as the general said when his troops were affrighted—rising up in his stirrups, his hair flying in the wind, he lifted up his voice until 20,000 troops heard him crying out: "Forward, the whole line!" We want all the laymen enlisted. Ministers are numerically too small. They do the best they can. They are the most overworked class on earth. Many of them die of dyspepsia because they cannot get the right kind of food to eat, or, getting the right kind, are so worried that they take it down in chunks. They die from early and late exposure.

If a novelist or a historian publishes one book a year, he is considered industrious, but every faithful pastor must originate enough thought for three or four volumes a year. Ministers receive enough calls in a year from men who have maps and medicines and lightning rods and pictures to sell to exhaust their vitality. They are bored with agents of all sorts. They are set in drafts at funerals and poisoned by the unventilated rooms of invalids and waited upon by committees who want addresses made until life becomes a burden to bear. It is not hard study that makes ministers look pale. It is the infinity of interruptions and botherations to which they are subjected. Numerically too small! It is no more the work of the pulpit to convert and save the world than it is the work of the pew. If men go to ruin, there will be as much blood on your skirts as on mine.

Let us quit this grand farce of trying to save the world by a few clergymen, and let all hands lay hold of the work. Give us, in all our churches, two or three aroused and qualified men and women to help. In most churches today five or ten men are compelled to do all the work. A vast majority of churches are at their wits' end how to carry on a prayer meeting if the minister is not there, when there ought to be enough pent up energy and religious force to make a meeting go on with such power that the minister would never be missed. The church stands working the pumps of a few ministerial cisterns until the buckets are dry and choked, while there are thousands of fountains from which might be dipped up the waters of eternal life. Before you and I have the sod pressing our eyelids we will, under God, decide whether our children shall grow up amid the accursed surroundings of vice and shame or come to an inheritance of righteousness. Long, loud, bitter, will be the curse that scorches our grave if holding within the church today enough men and women to save the city we act the coward or the drone.

Again, I learn from this subject that we sometimes do well to take advantage of the world's grindstones. These Israelites were reduced to a file, and so they went over to the garrison of the Philistines to get their axes and their goads and their plows sharpened. The Bible distinctly states it — the text which I read at the beginning of the service—that they had no other instruments now with which to do this work, and the Israelites did right when they went over to the Philistines to use their grindstones. My friends, is it not right for us to employ the world's grindstones? If there be art, if there be logic, if there be business faculty on the other side, let us go over and employ it for Christ's sake. The fact is we fight with too dull weapons and we work with too dull implements. We hack and we haul when we ought to make a clean stroke. Let us go over among sharp business men and among sharp literary men and find out what their tact is and then transfer it to the cause of Christ. If they have science and art, it will do us good to rub against it.

In other words, let us employ the world's grindstones. We will listen to their music, and we will watch their acumen, and we will use their grindstones and will borrow their philosophical apparatus to make our experiments, and we will borrow their printing presses to publish our Bibles, and we will borrow their rail trains to carry our Christian literature, and we will borrow their ships to transport our missionaries. That was what made Paul such a master in his day. He not only got all the learning he could get of Dr. Gamaliel, but afterward, standing on Mars hill and in crowded thoroughfare, quoted their poetry and grasped their logic and wielded their eloquence and employed their mythology until Dionysius the Areopagite, learned in the schools of Athens and Heliopolis, went down under his tremendous powers.

That was what gave Thomas Chalmers his power in his day. He conquered the world's astronomy and compelled it to ring out the wisdom and greatness of the Lord, until, for the second time, the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy. That was what gave to Jonathan Edwards his influence in his day. He conquered the world's metaphysics and forced it into the service of God, and not only the old meeting house at Northampton, Mass., but all Christendom felt thrilled by his Christian power. Well, now, my friends, we all have tools of Christian power. Do not let them lose their edges. We want no rusty blades in this fight. We want no coulter that cannot rip up the glebe. We want no goad that cannot start the lazy team. Let us get the very best grindstones we can find, though they be in possession of the Philistines, compelling them to turn the crank while we bear down with all our might on the swift revolving wheel, until all our energies and faculties shall be brought up to a bright, keen, sharp, glittering edge.

I learn from this subject what a sad thing it is when the church of God loses its metal! These Philistines grew that if they could only get all the metallic weapons out of the hands of the Israelites, all would be well, and therefore they took the swords and the spears. They did not want them to have a single metallic weapon. When the metal of the Israelites was gone, their strength was gone. This is the trouble with the church of God to-day. It is surrendering its courage. It has not enough metal. How seldom it is that you see a man taking his position in pew or in pulpit or in religious society and holding that position against all oppression, and all trial, and all persecution, and all criticism. The church of God to-day wants more backbone, more defiance, more consecrated bravery, more metal. How often you see a man start out in some good enterprise, and at the first blast of opposition he has collapsed, and all his courage gone, forgetting the fact that if a man be right all the opposition of the earth pounding away at him cannot do him any permanent damage. It is only when a man is wrong that he can be damaged. Why, God is going to vindicate His truth, and He is going to stand by you, my friends, in every effort you make for Christ's cause and the salvation of men.

Go forth in the service of Christ and do your whole duty. You have one sphere. I have another sphere. "The Lord of Hosts is with us, and the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah." We want more of the determination of Jonathan. I do not suppose he was a very wonderful man, but he got on his knees and clambered up the rock, and with the help of his armor bearer he hewed down the Philistines, and a man of very ordinary intellect attainments on his knees can storm anything for God and for the truth. We want something of the determination of the general who went into the war and as he entered his first battle his knees knocked together, his physical courage not quite up to his moral courage, and he looked down at his knees and said: "Ah, if you knew where I am going to take you you would shake worse than that!"

There is only one question for you to ask and for me to ask: What does God want me to do? Where is the field? Where is the work? Where is the anvil? Where is the prayer meeting? Where is the pulpit? And finding out what God wants us to do, go ahead and do it, all the energies of our body, mind and soul enlisted in the undertaking. Oh, my brethren, we have but little time in which to fight for God! You will be dead soon. Put in the Christian cause every energy that God gives you. "What thy hand findeth to do do it with all thy might, for there is neither wisdom nor device in the grave," whither we are all hastening. Opportunities of usefulness gone forever, souls that might have been benefited three months ago never again coming under our Christian influence. Oh, is it not high time that we awake out of sleep?

Church of God, lift up your head at the coming victory! The Philistines will go down, and the Israelites will go up. We are on the winning side. I think just now the King's horses are being hooked up to the chariot, and when He does ride down the sky there will be such a hosanna among His friends and such a wailing among His enemies as will make the earth tremble and the heavens sing. I see now the plumes of the Lord's cavalrymen tossing in the air. The unchanged before the throne has already burnished his trumpet, and then he will put his golden lips to his own, and he will blow the long, loud blast that will make all the nations free. Clap your hands, all ye people! Hark! I hear the falling thrones and the dashing down of demolished iniquities. "Hallelujah, the Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Hallelujah, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ!"

HIS FOES ARE WITHIN.

McKinley's Victory in the Coming Election Is Not a Foregone Conclusion.

We quoted not long ago the remark about the approaching presidential campaign with which a shrewd republican politician from a state in the central west surprised an eastern acquaintance. The New Yorker had said, almost as a matter of course, that he supposed his visitor thought that McKinley had "a sure thing" in 1900. "I'm not so sure about that," was the unexpected reply. "I can foresee contingencies under which it seems to me that Bryan will have more than a fighting chance of being elected."

Evidence accumulates each week that this excellent party authority is by no means alone in his apprehension of possible republican defeat next November. The chairman of the Indiana republican state committee is quoted as saying that the campaign of 1900 "is going to be the hardest campaign in many years," and that "the state can only be carried by the most thorough organization." The Washington correspondent of that prominent republican organ, the Iowa State Register, reports "one of the oldest and ablest of the republican senators" as sounding a note of alarm. Twelve states beyond the Missouri are yet to elect United States senators for the term beginning March 4, 1901. Eight of the men whose terms expire are republicans. "There must be great care taken in some of these states," is the warning of this veteran politician, "or we will lose strength, and have either democrats or populists sent to the senate. If we lose five of those states, we will lose control of the senate. The republicans, who are now overconfident, may as well look the situation squarely in the face and prepare to meet it. While I do not believe in alarmist statements, I do believe that the republicans of the whole country should be cognizant of these facts."

But there is still higher authority than "a shrewd republican politician," whose name cannot be published, or "one of the oldest and ablest of the republican senators," whose identity is not revealed, even if he seems to be William B. Allison. The great Hanna himself openly confesses that the republicans must do the hardest kind of work from this time on if they expect to carry the country next fall. On a recent trip to Philadelphia he impressed upon the republican mayor "the exceeding importance" of the "immediate furnishing" of at least a portion of the $100,000 for the republican campaign fund which was promised from that city when it made the successful bid for the national convention. He added that this fund "is needed at once," and declared that "one dollar of campaign funds to-day is worth five dollars three months hence."

Senator Hanna's idea is that the immediate and energetic opening of work by the republicans is necessary, because the coming campaign—which, in his opinion, will turn upon the two questions of the prosperity of the working people and the retention of the Philippines—"will be an exceedingly vigorous one;" because the democratic party has already "engaged numerous labor agitators to foment among the working people of the entire west as much dissatisfaction with existing conditions as lies in their power," and has supplemented their work by the distribution of great quantities of campaign literature; and because the republican campaign management must meet these agitators by the employment of men and the distribution of republican literature to counteract their influence. Mr. Hanna thinks that "our men are the better in character and of higher standing," and "our literature," too, equally superior; but he holds, nevertheless, that "only by the utmost intelligence and assiduity" can the efforts of the wicked democrats be thwarted.

The fact must now be accepted that the McKinley administration contemplates the possibility of defeat for the republican party next November. Its recognized spokesman admits that the utmost efforts must be put forth to ward off this danger. The amazing feature of the situation is that nobody in the inner circle sees either the real cause of the danger, or the true policy to adopt that it may be averted. Whence comes the chief ammunition used by the democratic agitators? The most effective weapons have been forged by the familiar friends, the authorized representatives, the special champions, of the president himself.—N. Y. Post.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——What Hanna admires in Woodruff's waistcoats is the denominations of the bills in the pockets.—Chicago Democrat.

——If political and personal favorites were sent to govern the Filipinos their cupidity and inefficiency would in time become as intolerable to the natives as the maladministration of Spanish officials before President McKinley adopted his policy of giving the Filipinos freedom by shooting them to death.—Baltimore Sun.

——When very respectable citizens contribute their thousands of dollars and hand the cash over to Chairman Quay or Chairman Hanna to place where it will do the most good they are not privileged to thereafter turn up the whites of their eyes and read their fellow men homilies on the impropriety of the use of money in politics.—Philadelphia Record.

——When Mr. Blaine proposed the policy of reciprocity which President McKinley is endeavoring to put into practice it was predicted that trouble was ahead for the protective system. It has come, and by the irony of fate comes through the man who made his fame as a politician and won his nomination for the presidency almost solely by his devotion for high protective tariff.—Atlanta Journal.

THE LAWS AND TRUSTS.

There Are Means for Relief, But Republicans Refuse to Employ Them.

Republican logic concerning the trusts is fearfully and wonderfully constructed.

It consists in making a lot of affirmations and in denying every affirmation that has been made.

It affirms that there are laws enough against trusts and denies that the laws can be enforced. It affirms that trusts are beneficient and denies that trusts exist.

Moreover, after denying the existence of trusts it makes a record in the way of fostering and protecting these combines to the extent of thousands of millions of capital.

Discussing this matter, William J. Bryan said recently in one of his eastern speeches:

"During the last three years you can scarcely find a republican who will denounce a trust. This is so because republicans are in power and more trusts have been organized during the last three years than in the entire previous history of the party.

"If you say anything to a republican now about the passage of a new law to kill trusts, he tells you that we have a law that is broad enough to answer the purpose, that you do not need a new law. Then you point out a trust and ask him why the attorney general does not destroy it, and he says the law does not reach this case.

"Or you can take Mr. Hanna, who said in the last campaign in a speech he made: First, 'There are no trusts.' Then, 'The trusts are a necessary evolution of business,' and finally, 'Do not be afraid of the trusts; they cannot harm you. If they're injurious, we will take care of them.'

"There is no good monopoly in private hands, not until God sends us angels to take care of monopoly will it be safe to trust them to private hands, and from our experience we are inclined to think that they come from below, and not from above."

But whatever Hanna may say, whatever the lame logicians of the republican party may say, the people know that trusts exist. They know this, because they are robbed by the trusts. Their pocketbooks are emptied by the trusts. They face a condition and not a theory.

There are laws against trusts, which would give some relief, but the republican party refuses to enforce them. There should be stronger laws, and if the people hope for relief they must elect a democratic executive who will approve good laws and enforce them.—Chicago Democrat.

WEBSTER'S EXPANSION VIEWS

The Position Which the Great Statesman Took During the Mexican War.

I am against all accessions of territory to form new states. And this is no matter of sentimentality, which I am to parade before mass meetings or before my constituents at home. . . . It is a matter of firm, unchangeable purpose. I yield nothing to the force of circumstances that have occurred, or that I can consider as likely to occur. . . I resist to-day, and forever, and to the end, any proposition to add any foreign territory, south or west, north or east, to the states of this union, as they are constituted and held together under the constitution. I do not want the colonists of England on the north; and as little do I want the population of Mexico on the south. . . . It is said we must take territory for the sake of peace. We must take territory. It is the will of the president. . . . I speak of the president, as of all presidents, without disrespect. I know of no reason why his opinion, and his will, his purpose, declared to be final, should control us, any more than our purpose, from equally conscientious motives, and under as high responsibilities, should control him. . . . I say, sir, that, according to my conscientious conviction, we are now fixing on the constitution of the United States, and its frame of government, a monstrosity, a disfiguration, an enormity. . . .

Arbitrary government may have territory and distant possessions, because arbitrary government may rule them by different laws and by different systems. Russia may rule in the Ukraine, and the provinces on the Caucasus, and Kamchatka by different codes, ordinances, or ukases. We can do no such thing. They must be of us, part of us, or else strangers. I think I see a course adopted which is likely to turn the constitution of the land into a deformed monster, into a curse rather than a blessing; in fact, a frame of an unequal government, not founded on popular representation, not founded on equality, but on the grossest inequality; and I think that this process will go on, or that there is danger that it will go on, until this union shall fall to pieces. I resist it, so-day and always. Whoever falters or whoever flies, I continue the contest!—From Webster's Speech in the Senate, March 23, 1848.

——Will some prosperity shouter please explain the difference between hard times when wages are low and the necessaries of life are in corresponding proportion and vaunted good times when wages have advanced in a few places from five to ten per cent, and the necessaries of life have advanced from 25 to 100 per cent.? Is the man who depends upon his daily toil, either at the desk or bench, benefited by this so-called wave of prosperity?—Rock Island Argus.

——If Mr. McKinley's second-term campaign debts shall be as large as those he incurred in his first presidential canvass it will be better to elect almost anybody else. The debts of a successful presidential nominee have to be paid, not by himself, but by the people.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Senate—Senator Mason, replying to a British vice consul at New Orleans who had criticised his Transvaal views, severely flayed the vice consul and criticised the British government in going to war against the Boers. He asked that the peace treaty be ratified, so that the barrier to mediation will be removed. Senator Hoar spoke in the same strain, as did also Mr. Lodge. Mr. Tillman delivered a speech on the Philippine question, maintaining that this government ought to extend to the Filipinos the right to govern themselves.

House—Representative Brown introduced a bill appropriating $100,000 for the construction of a public building at Xenia, O. Representative Boreing, of Kentucky, introduced a bill to pension Lieut. Col. L. H. Rousseau, Somerset, Ky., at the rate of $50 a month. Col. Rousseau was the officer of the 12th Kentucky infantry. Mr. Boreing introduced also a large number of minor pension bills. Representative Johnston, of West Virginia, introduced a bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to pay to the trustees of the Mouth of Greenbrier Baptist church, Summers county, West Virginia, $500 for a church edifice destroyed by United States troops during the civil war. Mr. Johnston introduced a resolution that on July 4, 1900, the military and naval forces of the United States be withdrawn from the island of Cuba, and that the government thereof be left to the Cuban people. A number of pilots and officers of steam vessels to make oath to their applications for licenses was passed.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senate—A bill providing that the cannon on the gunboat Nashville, which fired the first shot that was fired in the Spanish-American war, be condemned and presented to the city of Nashville was passed. Senator Bacon occupied three hours in a speech on the Philippine question. The pension calendar was taken up. Among the bills passed were the following: Granting to Annie Brumby, mother of Lieut. Brumby, who was Adm. Dewey's flag lieutenant, $50 a month; to pay $5,000 to the widow of John Phillips, in view of his services as a dispatch bearer in the Sioux war. W. Y. Sullivan, recently elected senator from Mississippi, was sworn in.

House—The house was in session only a short time and transacted no business. A number of pension bills and claims were introduced, among them being the following: To pension Mary E. Penn, widow of Lewis E. Penn, 4th Independent company Ohio volunteer cavalry, at the rate of $12 a month; authorizing the payment to Charley Conerty $300, with interest at 6 per cent. since October 16, 1863, that being the amount paid by him in resisting a draft into the army, though he was incapacitated for service; to pension Maggie M. Myers, widow of Scannard Myers, Company C, 18th Ohio volunteer infantry, and Lee Kinney, Company C, 11th Ohio volunteer infantry, at the rate of $24 a month each.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Senate—A heated debate took place over the Philippine question, Mr. Pettigrew attacking a statement made by Aguinaldo, that Dewey had offered to recognize the Filipinos, printed in the Record. His actions were denounced by a number of senators, Mr. Hawley going so far as to say they were treasonable. At the conclusion of the scene the financial bill was taken up and discussed by Mr. Berry and Mr. Teller.

House—After the transaction of miscellaneous business the house went into committee of the whole on the Indian appropriation bill. The bill carries $7,328,282.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Senate—Nearly the entire morning hour in the senate was occupied by Mr. Allen (Populist, Neb.) in discussion of the report of Secretary Gage concerning his transactions with the National City bank of New York. Mr. Daniel (dem., Va.), then delivered an extended speech on the pending financial measure. He vigorously opposed the proposition that the country should go to the gold standard. Daniel M. Ransdell, of Indiana, and Charles G. Bennett, of New York, were sworn in as sergeant-at-arms and secretary of the senate, respectively.

House—Representative Joseph Sibley, of Pennsylvania, who attained great prominence in the Forty-fourth house by his earnest championship of free silver, assailed his democratic colleagues for their opposition to expansion in a speech that made the floor and galleries roar. Mr. Sibley recounted his own efforts to free silver and is now generally out of line with his colleagues on the democratic side. The remainder of the day was uninteresting. It touched the question of mediation in the Transvaal war, lynchings in the south and the navy bar in Hawaii. Not much progress was made with the Indian appropriation bill, which was under consideration.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Senate—Several bills were passed as follows: To extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable goods to the port of Astoria, Ore.; recognizing the gallantry of F. H. Newcomb, commanding revenue cutter Hudson, of his officers and men; to retire Capt. D. B. Hogsdon, of the revenue cutter service, for efficient and meritorious service in command of the Bush and Mocho at Manila; authorizing the secretary of war to use $60,000 of the appropriation for the support of the regular and volunteer army for the year ending June 30, 1900; for the construction of a modern military hospital at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; authorizing the payment of commutation or ration to the petty officers of the navy ordered on detached duty but ween March 1, 1898, and November 4, 1899.

House—The house devoted its attention to the Indian appropriation bill. It got no further, however, than the appropriations for Indian schools, an effort was inaugurated by Mr. Fitzgerald, of New York, to permit the secretary of the interior to contract with sectarian for the education of Indian children where the government lacks facilities. No appropriation is made for the education of Indians in this bill. It is claimed that the present Indian school facilities are inadequate.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The Indian appropriation bill was passed. It was slightly amended in unimportant particulars. An attempt to revive the policy of making contracts with religious schools for the education of Indian children, which has been gradually abandoned by the government during the last five years, was defeated on a point of order. The latter part of the session was devoted to miscellaneous private and public services of the late Representative Ermentrout, of Pennsylvania.

Mosquitoes and Malaria.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Prof. Robert Koteh, the celebrated bacteriologist, in the Deutsche Medicinitsche Wochenschrift, reporting upon the results of the Java malaria expedition, says that these fully corroborate his theory that where there are mosquitos there is always malaria and that where there are no mosquitos there is no malaria.

Gen. Torres Slain.

Bisbee, Ariz., Feb. 4.—A dispatch has been received here from Guaymas, conveying the startling information that Gen. Lorenzo Torres, commander of the Mexican forces in the Yaqui war, was killed in the Bacatete mountains two days after the battle of Mazocoba. This report is lacking in detail, and has not as yet been confirmed.

Funeral Train Reaches Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The funeral train bearing the bodies of Maj. Gen. Henry W. Lawton and Maj. John A. Logan, both killed in action in the Philippines, and Dr. E. L. Armstrong, who died in Manila hospital, arrived at the Chicago & Northwestern depot 14 hours ahead of time.

British Steamer Leaking.

London, Feb. 5.—The British steamer Silverton, Capt. Davy, arrived at Aarhuus from New Orleans and Norfolk. She is leaking, having grounded at Mosegrounde.

WHAT A FORMER AMERICAN SAYS.

Doubled Their Cultivated Lands and More Than Doubled Their Stock.

The following letter written by Mr. John Cummings of Wetaskiwin, Alberta, Canada, formerly of Washington, to a friend in the United States is only one of a hundred similar cases, and what was done by Mr. Cummings can more easily be done to-day by any good, sober and industrious farmer who chooses to make his home in the Dominion.

Dear Sir:

You want to know how I got along since I came into Northern Alberta. I am happy to inform you that I am not ashamed to tell.

We located five miles northeast of Wetaskiwin; left Farmington, Washington, on the 29th of May, driving all the way.

We had time to build our log house the first fall and to make us comfortable for the family and stock. We then built four stables 18x20 inside, so that we could put everything inside them when the cold got down to the fifties, and worked hard getting up the stable and got through dubbing on the 1st December, but to our surprise we had no use for the stables only for the milk cow and two span of horses. The balance of the horses lived on the prairie all winter and took care of themselves. The doors of two stables were left open for them to go into in a cold time, but they would not do it, but stayed out on the prairie the coldest night we had, and looked as spry as crickets.

I can go ten rods back of my house and count ten residents. I know all of their circumstances. Every one of them have doubled their cultivated land and doubled their animals, and a great deal more. All of us are comparatively out of debt and an unusually big crop to thresh and prospects of a fair price, and I expect we are as well contented bit of people as there are from Florida to the Klondike.

My son bought two pounds of twine to the acre, and when we started to bind some barley, we found that instead of taking two pounds to the acre, it was taking nearly five pounds. Then you ought to have seen him hitch up a team and make for town for 100 lbs. more. I cannot say how it will thresh. All I can say is that it is well headed, and takes an enormous amount of twine.

Business Acumen.

Old Hardcash—I've decided to take young Scatpluph into business with me as soon as he and my daughter get back from their honeymoon.

Bullion Bonds—But I thought you saw no good in the fellow?

"I didn't at first, but I've changed my mind. I told him he couldn't have my daughter till he had at least £1,000 in the bank. He got me to put it in writing, and then went out and borrowed the £1,000 on the strength of becoming my son-in-law. Such business ability as that mustn't be allowed to go to waste."—Tit-Bits.

President Kruger Ahead.

Pretoria, Transvaal, South Africa, Dec. 7, 1899.

Messrs. Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.: Gentlemen—Your last shipment and communication received. I am very much pleased with the information that you have so kindly given me.

Please find enclosed bank draft to the amount of £412 10s, for which send me twenty five (25) gross of Swanson's "5 DROPS." Ship same as before in order that there may be no delay, as the medicine will be greatly needed before it reaches us. The last shipment is almost disposed of, as the medical department of our army uses large quantities. This order is entirely for use in the army.

I have been told that our success on the battlefield is due in a certain extent to the use of "5 DROPS" Rheumatic Cure, which has relieved and prevented a great deal of suffering among our men from Rheumatism, Neuralgia and other acute pains caused by exposure. Your "5 DROPS" is as good as a Transvaal soldier! In one of the battles, a small quantity of "5 DROPS," together with other medicines, was captured by the English, which was a great loss to our men. The Rinnecks won't do it again. I am, respectfully yours,

PETER HAAS.

"5 DROPS" is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. It is a perfect cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Catarrh, La Grippe, Neuralgic Headache, etc. Large sized bottles (300 doses), $1.00, or three (3) bottles for $2.50. Sample bottles 25 cents.

HOW SOME MEN PROPOSE.

Off-Hand Way of Popping the Question That Leaves Something to Be Desired.

"No," said the sweet thing in the Valenciennes - lace - trimmed dimity dress, "I really wouldn't care to have him 'fall to his knees,' and 'exclaim in a tone of passionate entreaty:' 'Give me but a single ray of hope!' I think that would be absurd beyond all things. I am sure I should feel like laughing in a young man's face if he did any of these ridiculous things. Yet I think even the old-fashioned, high-falutin', my-life-would-be-a-blank-without-you way of proposing mentioned in Miss Austen's bread - and - treacle stories would be better than the dreadfully slangy, matter-of fact way young men have of proposing nowadays, according to what a lot of married girls tell me. Only yesterday one of them told me how her husband asked her. They had been going together for six months. One afternoon last October they were walking on F street together. She bowed to a young man she knew.

"'Awfully nice looking, isn't he?' she asked Jack, who is now her husband.

"'Fair-looking duck,' said Jack. 'But who's I double-tee, It, anyhow? Don't I cut in at all?'

"She really didn't know what he meant.

"'Well,' went on Jack, 'you're always telling me what a good looker that geezer is. Now, is he the whole thing, and am I an "also ran," or do I win? I just pass it up to you, you know.'

"She didn't understand him this time, either, and I don't wonder.

"'You're side-stepping and don't want to understand,' went on Jack. 'All right. Can you fix it for about three months from date? That'u plain enough, isn't it?'

"It wasn't, though.

"'Fix what?' she asked him.

"'The day and the hour,' said Jack. 'To get doubled up, you know.'

"Well, of course he makes her a good husband, but just fancy being proposed to in that dreadful way!

"You know my married cousin up on the Hill? Well, Jim just worked a bluff—that's the horrid way he puts it—when he proposed to her. He'd been calling pretty regularly and one night he showed up looking as chipper as a lark.

"'Well, I'm off in a few days,' he said to her. 'Nothing in the government service, anyhow. Going to resign my job and strike out for Oklahoma to grow up with the weeds.'

"She couldn't help but show that she was sorry, of course.

"'I'm sorry you're going,' she said. She's a remarkably serious-minded girl, you know.

"'Yes, you are,' he said, satirically.

"'Really, I am,' she said.

"'Say, he said, then, 'if I thought you were on the level—I mean really sorry, you know, why—er—I wouldn't go, you know.'

"'Why do you wish to leave so beautiful a city as Washington?' she asked him. 'Surely, you don't expect to find a prettier place to live in?'

"Well, of course that gave him a chance to say that he was only staying in Washington on her account, but that as long as she didn't seem to care, etc., etc.

"Another girl told me that the sheer impudence with which her husband proposed to her was simply captivating. It was just about this time last spring, and they were walking along Lafayette square.

"'Trees and flowers look nice, don't they?' he said to her, in an off-hand sort of way. 'Swell season in Washington, spring, isn't it. We won't be a thing but married when the lilacs show up next spring, will we?'

"Did you ever hear of such assurance?

"I heard of another bit of brazen impudence just like that. She told me about it herself. He came up in the evening and sat on the front steps with her.

"'Got promoted to $1,400 to-day,' he said, and then he deliberately pulled out a piece of paper with a lot of figures on it.

"'Did a little figuring on a pad this afternoon,' he said. 'The thing ought to go through easy. Listen; House rent, about $35 or $40 a month; servant $15 a month; gas and fuel—'

"Mind you, he hadn't ever said a word to her about getting married. But you ought to see what a pretty home they have got now!

"The diffident young men are just as matter of fact as the independent ones, too, I hear. You know little Mrs. Finally, up on Columbia Heights, and what a quiet, bashful man her husband is? I often wondered how he ever mustered enough courage to ask her, and you know they did go together for three years before they were married. She told me about it not long ago. They went car riding one Sunday afternoon and rode to the end of the Fourteenth street line. Then they got off and walked. He showed her the house where they now live. She admired it.

"'I'm buying it,' he said. 'Got it all furnished, too.'

"It was the very first she knew of it, and of course she had to ask him if he meditated starting a boarding house. That made it comparatively easy for him, although she said that she thought he'd have a stroke, even then, before he got it out.

"Well, they all appear to be as happy as can be, but I do think that I'd like to have just a teeny bit more of sentiment in a case of that kind. I don't think there's half enough sentiment in the world, as it is."—Washington Star.

WIT AVERTED A STORM.

The Capital Device of a Congressman to Cool His Wife's Anger.

In the seclusion of the house cloakrooms a story is being told on a western member. There are 357 men in the house. Three hundred and fifty-six are hereby released from any connection with the story. The other man—and the other man's wife—will recognize the truth of what is here recorded.

The western member went home at a very early hour in the morning. He had made a night of it with some friends. He knew that his conduct would be considered reprehensible by his better half, and so as he ascended the steps of his modest home he racked his brain for some plan to avert the lady's wrath. As he entered the hall he saw an umbrella. Instantly it occurred to him that the umbrella might be his salvation.

He carried the umbrella upstairs. Seating himself on a chair in the corner of the bedroom, he raised the rain guard over his head and then coughed loudly. His wife awoke and saw in the dim gaslight her liege lord sitting solemnly under the raised umbrella.

"What are you doing?" she asked in natural surprise.

"It is three o'clock, my dear," said he, "and I am waiting for the storm."

The congressman's ready wit saved him from a Caudle lecture. He is worrying now, however, to find an equally effective act for the next time he stays out late.—Washington Post.

Vest's Stolen Pigs.

"Another story that Vest told related to his candidacy for the legislature in 1861 against A. S. Walker. The canvass was exceedingly exciting because of the near approach of war, and all the questions incident to it were discussed with much animation. Charges and counter-charges were made. Both sides knew that about six votes either way would determine the contest, and on the day before election Walker raised the point on Vest that he had stolen some pigs. The only way that Vest could meet the charge was to acknowledge smilingly that he had the pigs in his pen and in his possession. If he had gone further and said that he had bought them—which they hoped he would do—they had witnesses to show that he had not bought them, but Vest was too shrewd to be caught in the trap, and turned the accusation off with a laugh and the remark:

Nervous Women

are ailing women. When a woman has some female trouble she is certain to be nervous and wretched.

With many women the monthly suffering is so great that they are for days positively insane, and the most diligent efforts of ordinary treatment are unavailing.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

comes promptly to the relief of these women. The letters from women cured by it proves this. This paper is constantly printing them.

The advice of Mrs. Pinkham should also be secured by every nervous woman. This costs nothing. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

THE OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Isaac Brock, a citizen of McLennan County, Texas, has lived till years. He now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

In speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper remedy for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate.

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhœa. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but in reading Dr. Hartman's books I have found out that these affections are the same and that they are properly called catarrh.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe and found it to be just the thing.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only, reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

"Very truly yours,

Isaac Brock,

One of the great advantages of going to Texas via Memphis and the Cotton Belt is, that you avoid the annoyances and discomforts of changing cars, necessary on other routes.

The Cotton Belt trains are the only ones that run through from Memphis to Texas without change.

These trains carry Pullman Sleepers at night, Parlor Cafe Cars during the day, and Through Coaches and Free Reclining Chair Cars both day and night. The service compares favorably with that of any road in the country.

Write and tell us where you are going and when you will leave, and we will tell you what your ticket will cost and what train to take to make the best time and connections. We will also send you an interesting little booklet, "A Trip to Texas."

Neighborhood News.

Erlanger.

Len Childress is opening a new grocery on Lexington pike.

K. of P. conferred the Esquire Rank on one candidate, Saturday evening.

Wm. Hilker, aged 79, of Erlanger Road, one of our best citizens, died Saturday morning, leaving seven children to mourn his death.

The entertainment given for the benefit of the Catholic church, last Saturday evening, proved to be one of the best. The hall was crowded and all enjoyed the performance.

Maple Grove.

Miss Katie Smith's school will close this week.

Walter Gordon and Cory Utz returned from Pittsburg, last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wahl gave the young folks a dance, last Tuesday evening.

Miss Ada Smith returned to her home at Cleves, Ohio, after a pleasant visit to relatives in this vicinity.

Constance.

Capt. Kotmeyer's boat has laid up again on account of the ice.

Henry Peno, son of Joel Peno, fell into a grate and was badly burned.

Andy Smith gave the benches in the Constance church a coat of new paint.

Richard Peno and Miss Pearl Rouse were married, last Wednesday. We wish them much joy.

The boys and girls have been enjoying themselves very much skating, during the past several days.

John Prather, who was working on the Lawrenceburg electric road, let a handful of jack slip, and it threw him 10 feet. In his fall he was cut about the left eye considerably, the wound requiring three stitches by Dr. Murat to close it.

Beaver.

The Excelsior Literary Club met Friday evening, January 26th, at Mingie Woods, the lovely home of Mr and Mrs. John Sleet. The night was intensely cold, but there was quite a large attendance. The president being absent, Miss Lizzie Cleek presided. Reading the scripture was followed by prayer offered by Miss Luin Jones. Recitations by Miss Bedinger, Mr. Columbus Bedinger and Elbert Rouse were splendid and highly appreciated. The Misses Cleek favored the club with an instrumental duet; the guitar and mandolin duet by Garfield Slater and Tom Huey was rendered in their usual happy style. As it was the meeting to elect new officers that duty was attended to and it was again put before the society whether it would be best to meet every two or four weeks—the motion to meet every four weeks was carried by a large majority. After a short time of social enjoyment the club adjourned to meet in three weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Omer Cleek.

Flickertown.

Mrs. Foster Hensley is some better.

Several from here attended C. L. Crisler's sale, Saturday.

Harry Pasons and Irven Rue were calling on the girls, Sunday.

Sunday was such a nice day that Charley Hensley thought he would take a buggy ride.

Edgar Hensley, of Scattersville, was in our burg, one day last week. Come again, Ed, when you have got longer to stay.

Dame Rumor says there is to be a wedding here in the near future. Joy go with them is the wish of the RECORDER.

According to the ground-hog sign we are to have six weeks more winter weather, but I think we have had quite enough of that kind.

Goebel had many friends in this vicinity, who were sorry to hear of the cowardly way in which he was killed. May God puuish them as they deserve for their cowardly act.

Frank Voshell's house caught fire, last Wednesday, and came very near proving a fatal blaze. They lost several things in the fire, but the timely arrival of Miss Pearl Aylor, James Aylor and Chas Finn, saved the house.

Gunpowder.

Wm. Starr has moved on the J. H. Aylor farm.

The zero weather ended with a rainy day last Sunday.

Supt. Voshell and Mr. Bruff, of Tennessee, visited our school, Wednesday.

D. I. Rouse has rented and will move onto the Albert Beemon farm in the spring.

Pink Neal, of Hathaway, passed through our burg, last Saturday, enroute to Erlanger.

Ground hog day was the brightest day we have had for some time, and if he came out he certainly saw his shadow, and we may expect winter to continue six weeks.

S. J. Orem, of East Bend neighborhood, was calling here, last Saturday. He reports everything lovely in his end of the county. He is now engaged in his 5th term of school at East Bend.

The school at Pleasant Ridge closed last Friday. This is the fourth term Miss Orem has taught in this district, and has given general satisfaction as a teacher. She will teach a three months spring term beginning the 19th of March.

No doubt a number of the readers of the RECORDER will criticise our statement of last week concerning the century problem. We wish to correct the statement by saying that the 20th century will begin the 1st of January, 1901 instead of the 19th century.

Hamilton.

C. E. Williams killed hogs Tuesday.

T. W. J. Ryle is the guest of J. R. Ryle.

Mr. Harris Kent has been on the sick list.

Most of the tobacco is sold in this neighborhood.

Some of the neighbors have burnt their plant beds.

Mrs. Robt. Allen, who has been on the sick list is some better.

There was a small congregation at Big Bone church, Saturday.

Some one broke into G. M. Allen's meat house and stole some of his meat.

Mrs. Perry Johnson, who has been on the sick list for some time, is some better.

The Steamer Workum could not make her through trip on account of the ice last week.

Rev. Green, of Warsaw, and Rev. Cram, of Williamstown, spent last Wednesday with Perry Johnson.

Prof Fogg, of Covington, assisted the Methodist at the Springs in their protracted meeting with his cornet.

Hathaway.

Robert Adams had a good horse to die, last Sunday.

Dou Williamson, of Beech Grove, gave a dance one night last week.

Mrs. Emily Presser, who has been on the sick list, is convalescent.

The thermometer registered at 6 below zero here, one morning last week.

Ben Rue and wife gave a play party at their home last Friday night, which was enjoyed by all present.

Last Friday was ground hog day. We guess he saw his shadow, which predicts six weeks more winter.

There was quite a seed distribution at this office last Thursday from Col. A. S. Berry. Thanks to the Colonel.

Robert Moore had his horse to get its foot caught in a culvert, one day last week, and it had to be prized out.

Things funny to see:—Mat Ryle and Frank Rue with their mustaches shaved off. Everett Franks facing a snow storm. Ed Sullivan taking care of a boil.

L. J Riley has purchased the store of Mrs. Emily Presser, at this place, Mrs. Presser's health not permitting her to care for it any longer. Mr. Riley will take charge as soon as the goods are invoiced.

The public school closed here last Friday with a good attendance. The evening exercises consisted of speeches, &c. Several visitors were present and Miss Edna delighted the children with a generous treat.

Rabbit Hash.

There is considerable ice in the river.

Mr. Elijah Ryle Scott gave a woodsawing, last Mouday.

E. L. Clements returned to the city to commence work again.

J. R. Stephens sold his farm on the East Bend road to Robt. Clore.

We are sorry to hear of Goebel's misfortune, but glad to hear he is elected.

Maggie Scott has returned to her home at A. G. McConnell's in East Bend.

The young folks called on Misses Lulah and Minnie Ryle, last Saturday night.

Filmore Ryle and wife entertained the young folks with a dance, last Friday night.

Several of the farmers have prized and shipped their tobacco to Louisville. All brought good prices.

Ransom Ryle and Ribern Williamson, of Gunpowder, called on two young ladies, one night last week.

Mrs. Missouri Holmes (Pope) has sold her place to J. R. Stephens. She will move to the city in the near future.

Lula and Minnie Ryle, Lute and Kate Stephens, Bert and Hubert Clore, Jim Hager and Chas. Craig called on Della Wingate and Alice Scott, last Thursday night.

It was quite a surprise to W. B. Ryle, last Wedueslay, when all the young folks gathered in and entertained him with a dance. I'll tell you Babe, you had better hurry up and get married before another birthday rolls around.

Walton.

Perry Rouse, formerly of this place but now residing near Midway, Ky., was here last week endeavoring to sell his house on High st.

Amoug the pensions to be paid here to day, Feby. 5. will be that of Mrs. Malinda B. Jones, widow of Wm. Jones, who was a soldier in the war of 1812 against Great Britain, the power which our President seems more than willing to cast the United States at its feet. To sum it up in brief: this toadying of our high functionaries to our ancient and natural enemy is going to cost the groveling statesmen engaged in it some bitter humiliation before the game is finished.

The house occupied by Jas. Jones was burned, with nearly all his household and kitchen furniture, to the ground, Tuesday, Dec. 30th. Ambrose Easton, who was living with him had $157 dollars which he had received a few days before for his crop of tobacco somewhere in the house, $50 of which was in gold. He found the gold fused together in such a manner that the denomination of each piece was recognizable. It was weighed in a druggist's scales and the nugget had lost in value $12 80, according to the calculation of cashier R. C. Green.

The war in South Africa in a measure is engrossing the attention of the people and it is a fact that not a man in this community, nor in any other hereabouts, from which information is obtainable that wishes to see the British triumph over the intrepid Boers. As for the President's war in the Philippines, no one takes the trouble to read any of Otis' dispatches, as they are so doctored after being censored (which latter alone is bad enough) that there is scarcely a line of truth in them.

In another column it will be seen that manager Joe Reed will introduce the "Walton Thespian Club" to the public on Friday evening the 16th of the present month, at the Opera House. Mr. Reed is a first-class general actor himself, and has labored assiduously to develop the talent shown by the members of the club, and should be rewarded by a good attendeance. It is also his opinion that some of the members will surprise many of their friends. All who have attended entertainments under Mr. Reed's management, know that something pleasing, instructive and exhilerating will be presented, nothing repulsive to the most refined and fastidious taste.

Bellevue.

Mrs. Selmes and Miss Wooley are still slaughtering porkers.

The Swan went to the bank again last week on account of the ice.

H. Jerome Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, called on your scribbler, last week.

Miss Katie Craig's school closes on the 8th. She has given satisfaction.

We hope by our next report that Gov. Goebel's assassin will be known.

B. H. Pope and W. L. Acra, of Huntsville, were in the burg Thursday.

Atty. Ome Rogers, of Erlanger, was the guest of his parents near here, last Saturday.

Sorry to hear that Frank Voshell lost a portion of his household goods by fire, last Thursday.

Orlando Snyder, of the Petersburg neighborhood, was visiting his friends here, last Thursday.

Mrs. Joseph Waltou, of East Bend, was visiting Hubert Brady and wife, several days last week.

Miss Mary Huey returned home, last Saturday, after a week's visit at her uncle Oscar's, at Erlanger.

The assassination of Senator Goebel, the brave, courageous statesman, was the cowardly act of a demon.

Sheriff Beall and J. J. Huey, were in town, Friday. We did not learn what the Sheriff proposed to do with Jack.

Mrs. James Rogers returned home on Monday of last week, after a visit of several days with her mother at Erlanger.

D. H. Snyder, M. J. and A. B. Corbin filled Mrs. Corbin's ice-house, last Saturday, with some very fine Middle Creek ice.

O. N. Grant says that the postal money order business of his office, last month, was about double that of previous months.

Francesville.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Columbus Kirtley is improving.

Our village is proud of her visiting dentists, Drs. Sayre and Battersou.

We presume that all law-abiding citizens deplore the assassination of Governor Goebel.

Rev. Hoover preached Saturday at 11 o'clock at Saud Run. He will preach on the third Sunday at 3 p. m., at the same place.

Our public school closed on the 2d inst., with credit to teacher and pupils. We should have a longer term than five months. Let us petition for it. If all the patrons were as enthusiastic for a spring school as Charlie Beall and Harry Kilgour, we would certainly have one.

We wish to call attention to the condition of the road between the village and Hebron. It is almost impassable. The supervisor for this portion of it has had bad health some of the time, we know, but hope he will be able to get out this way soon, and when he finds that what we say is true, he will soon make an improvement, as he is a man of the right sort.

Hebron.

Sunday was a March day.

Mrs. John Taueous is slowly improving.

Walter Gordon has returned from Colorado.

Mrs. Maggie Clayton, of Indiana, is visiting relatives here.

Mr. Verner Hann was visiting friends in this vicinity several days last week.

Mr. Charles Stephens and Mr. Mike Dye, we also hear, will leave for Colorado in the near future.

Mr. Joel Clore, of Cincinnati, was visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity, Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Pearl Rouse, of this place, and Mr. Peno, of Constance, were married Thursday afternoon at Burlington.

Mr. G. S. Hann shook the Kentucky soil from his shoes, last week, and left for Ohio, where he will attend Hanson school.

T. J. Dinn will have a sale of his personal property on the 20th of this month. He will then rent his farm and leave for Colorado to seek his fortune.

All Democrats regret to hear of the death of Senator Goebel at Frankfort. He leaves a host of Democratic friends to mourn his loss; but God doeth all things for the best. We hope the assasin will be captured and punished to the full extent of the law.

Richwood.

Bad colds are very popular now.

Miss Sarah Bedinger was out from the city over Sunday.

Mr. Chas Wolfe, of Corinth, Ky., is visiting his cousins here.

Miss Kate Lord, of Covington, stayed over Sunday at the manse.

Mr. Park Gilmore, of Covington, was in our neighborhood last week.

Mr. Philip Fall and Mr. Spencer Smith were in our community Friday.

Miss Norveil Bedinger went to Covington, last Friday, to stay until Monday.

Rev. D. E. Bedinger and family have returned home after an absence of two months.

Mrs. Arnold Bowers spent part of last week at her old home with her uncle, Mr. Batty Long.

Miss Stella Taylor and Miss Fannie Long spent last Saturday night at Erlanger, with Mrs. Broughton.

Mrs. Irvine Tanner was visiting her sister, Mrs. Willie Wolfe, last week. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner will go to housekeeping near Hopeful church, soon.

Miss Lottie Fall's winter school closed, last Friday and her spring school opened Monday. This is Miss Fall's first year at teaching, and the patrons are very much pleased with her work.

Died, Friday January 26, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Taylor, Mrs. Cawthorne. The funeral was preached Saturday by Rev. Davis and the remains were interred at Richwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hutsell, who for a long time have lived in our neighborhood, have returned to their old home in Kenton county, near Erlanger. They have been excellent neighbors and we are sorry to give them up. Their friends hope they will be very happy in their new home.

Dr. John W. Davis, who, for 25 years has been a missionary in Soo-chow, China, is visiting his brother, Rev. W. H. Davis. On Monday and Tuesday night, January 29th and 30th, he lectured at Union, and on Monday night, Feb. 5th, at Richwood. His lectures are illustrated by a magic-lantern and are very interesting. He will be at Burlington on Saturday, the 10th, and will have protracted services through the next week.

Union.

Chas. Cleek filled his icehouse with 8 inch ice, Friday.

Joe Scott, Jr., & Co., were hauling hay from this vicinity, Wednesday.

Our young friend, Abe Rice, of Covington, was shaking hands with the boys here, last week. Abe can handle clothing with the best of 'em.

Mrs. James A. Huey entertained a number of relatives and friends at dinner, one day last week, in honor of her mother and Mrs. Robt. Rice, who were her guests for several days.

We care as little about what people do or do not do so long as they do not interfere with our affairs or misrepresent the real facts in speaking of us or our affairs, but we despise and abhor the habit some people have of saying we have done things and said things that we never thought of saying or doing.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Knaley entertained a number of relatives and friends, Saturday, with Prof. Collins and wife as guests of honor. Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Voshell entertained them with an elegant dinner and invited a number of friends to meet them. Mr. and Mrs. Collins will soon be permauently located in West Covington, where they have purchased a lovely home.

Boys have a fashion of saying much in a few words, and Harvey Phillows, of Richwood, is one of that kind, as the following will show: "Say, Mr. RECORDER, it was awfully bad about Gov. Goebel getting killed, wasn't it?" "Yes," we answered, "it was very bad." After a moment's reflection he said: "Yes sir, it was, and then follows that doue it was a lot of sneakers, too." In the word "sneakers" is expressed assassins, murderers, &c.

We regard our friend J. W. Kennedy as one among the best posted men in the Union precinct, and have always listened with great delight to many long and interesting talks he has given the club on politics, farming, tobacco buylug, tobacco raising, and all questious of public interest before the club, but we were surprised to find him at sea on the 20th century question as to believe the 19th century, and this the 19th hundredth year is the first year of the 20th century.

The scientific editor of the Union Blade has this to say about the 20th century. "Every person knows that the 20th century will begin January 1st, 1901, but without giving the question serious thought, many persons have said January 1st, 1900, is the time. They forget that we must begin to count with one and the 100 is not completed until two ciphers are added, and then the new hundred begins as did the old one, with its close marked completiou of 1st century. So will close of the year 1900 mark close of the 19th century.

Thursday morning about 10 o'clock, what promised to be a dangerous and destructive fire was nipped in the bud. The residence of Mrs. Mary Hedges was found on fire, with a strong wind blowing from the southwest and the house would have burned up in forty minutes, but in five minutes after the alarm was given, twenty men were there with ladders, buckets and other implements to fight with. J. W. Taliaferro, Louis Taggart, B. L. Norman and Pat Norman ascended to the roof; Tom Burkett headed the bucket brigade; James Bristow headed the ladder company. Louis Taggart cut the cornice off; Pat Norman dumped the water on and we all saw the fire go out. Chimney caught fire and that set fire to a bird's nest in the cornice.

The assassination of Gov. William Goebel, the unlawful and high handed course pursued by Mr. Taylor and his cohorts, since his assassination lead us to think a lot of things. One thing we think is that the real manhood of Kentucky will get on its feet some fine day (if this business continues very long) and then the deciples of "Be-hear" college along with the mountain climbers and cave dwellers, who have made mid-day and mid-night assassinations a part of their religion for 20 years past, hunt their holes like prairie dogs. One other thing we think is that the real manhood of Kentucky does not wear linen trowsers in January, carry a winchester, 2 Smith and navies, eat soup out of tin cups at the State's expense and assassinate Governors, but they are the people with enough nerve to renovate and reconstruct the State in twenty-four hours when the time comes.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that was ever made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union, and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. J. S. Clutterbuck was quite ill last week.

Four Latter Day Saints were in town one day last week.

M. T. Garnett is F. Riddell's bodyguard at night for the present.

Chas. Tanuer, of Richwood, made us a pleasant call, last Saturday.

John P. Ryle, of Rabbit Hash, was transacting business in town, Saturday.

Mr. A. G. Winston, of Hebron, was transacting business in Burlington yesteday.

Mrs. William Lucas is visiting the family of her father, in Peudleton couuty.

William Gaines was received into the Universalist church here, last Sunday, by letter.

C. H. Acra, our old friend and worthy contributor, of Bellevue, called on us, last Saturday.

J. M. Stephens and Milton Weldon, of the Grauge Hall neighborhood, will move to Covington in a few days.

Mrs. Jane F. Conner, of Walton, has gone on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Geo. M. Bedinger, in Rosedale, California.

H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, brought a drummer and a wagon load of samples over from the railroad yesterday.

Mrs. J. H. Ryle, of Florence, spent several days last week with her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Clutterbuck, of this place.

Mrs. Belle Brady and Mrs. Annabel Kirkpatrick are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Piper, of Dayton, Campbell county.

The first Sunday's mail was received at the Burlington office, last Sunday about noon. This is a new departure in local postal affairs.

Richard Peno, 22, and Pearl E. Rouse, 22, daughter of Elbert Rouse, were married by Rev. M. J. Hoover at his residence, last Thursday.

Jasper Sullivan, of Waterloo, was in town Saturday. He says a large crop of tobacco is being planted in his neighborhood, at present.

Mr. John Miller, of the Florence neighborhood, presented his daughter, May, with a very handsome Everett piano, on her 15th birthday.

R. N. Utz, of Valley Falls, Kansas, has paid further in advance for his RECORDER than anyother subscriber on its list—to January 1, 1902.

M. J. Brough, of Highland, Lincoln county, was meeting many of his old acquaintances in Burlington, Monday. Many years ago he was a successful educator in this county.

John Crisler, horticultural editor of the Union Blade, called on the Recorder, Monday. He is a jolly, good fellow, and makes his departmeut of the Blade both interesting and instructive.

Dr. Furnish was home a few hours, Sunday. He was at the bedside of Gov. Goebel a greater portiou of the time after he was shot, and to him the Governor spoke his last words, which were, "old friends, doctor, old friends."

William Sebree called at this office, Saturday, the first time he had been in town since his return from Hot Springs, Arkansas. He was greatly pleased with his trip and thinks the springs are all that is claimed for them in regard to relieving many humau ills.

J. F. Blyth and James L. Clore, arrived home from Frankfort, Friday evening, and A. B. Rouse put in his appearauce Saturday morning. The latter has acquaintances among the Republican officials, and secured a pass upon which he was permitted to mingle with the crowd occupying the Executive Buildiug.

J. W. Kennedy, of Union, Boone county, spent Friday night of last week, with his cousiu, our clever post master. He was on his way to Frankfort, to attend a meeting of the creditors of W. G. Dorman, of New Columbus, who has gone into bankruptcy. Mr. Kennedy is one of the most substantial and successful farmers in Boone county.—Williamstown Courier.

Those desiring Sunday's Enquirer can be accommodated by meeting me on the road as I return from Erlanger on every Sunday morning.
J. M. EDDINS.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one evening," says Wesley Nelson, of Hamilton, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith in any medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it according to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Baisly, Bullittsville.

For sale—The fine Stallion, Ugo—sired by Simmons 2744; dam by Almont Boy 4308. He is a dark chestnut, 16½ hands high, a kind driver and a good saddler. SCOTT CHAMBERS, Utzinger, Ky.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

SWYGERT, ILL., Feb. 5th, 1900.

With nothing else to do I will take the pleasure of writing to my Boone county friends through the RECORDER. I am out here about 300 miles from home and when I came, two weeks ago, I did not know but one person in this part of the country, but it did not take me loug to get acquainted. The people here are not the kind that are afraid of a stranger and wont have anything to say to him. When a stranger comes in this neighborhood, they try to treat him right and make him feel like he is at home. I kuow that some of my Boone county friends will think because this is my first trial away from home, that I will get pretty homesick, but I have not felt the least homesick yet. The people out here are all friendly and treat me like they had known me all their lives. They are more like home folks to me than any strangers I was ever with. And the country too, is just as nice as the people; just as far as eye can see in any direction, there is not a hill to be seen; it is not like climbing those steep, rocky hills along old Woolper creek. I got the RECORDER last week, and that made me feel more at home than ever. If there is anything that will make a fellow feel good, I believe it is to read that good, old Democratic paper, but there was one thing in it that did uot make me feel good and that was the columu about Mr. Goebel getting shot. I hope the villain who did it has been captured before now. If he has I think Kentuckians kuow how to haudle him. Rope is cheap.

By the way, I see the Petersburg correspondent got off a good one ou Dubie. Is it so Dubie? If it is, here's wishing you all the success aud happiness this world affords.

If there are any of our Flickertown boys who are out of a job, and are laying around waiting for good times, I would advise them to come out here and they will not have to look any further. A good hand can get $20 per month and his board, washing and mending. What better are you looking for than that, boys? I don't think you will fiud anywhere else where you can beat it. You might think it is too cold out here. It is pretty chilly, but I don't think it is any colder than it is in Kentucky. The wind blows a great deal more, but a fellow can stand a little more in winter to get that good, refreshing breeze during those long, hot summer days. Well, I will close for this time. If I see this in print I will write again when I have more to tell.
Yours truly, BERT SMITH.

Quite a large crowd atteuded C. L Crisler's sale, last Saturday, and prices realized were very satisfactory. The two work mares were offered as a pair, and $107 was bid for them; they were then offered singly, and one brought $81 and the other $50. The road wagon brought $37; one cow, $39 50.

Next Wednesday is Saint Valentine's day.

The wife of Jason Boon, an aged resident of Nansemond county, Va., lately gave birth to her twenty-eighth child, a lusty infant, which, at birth, had two front teeth.

In the New York legislature has been introduced a bill requiring street car companies operating in New York city to employ three persons, a grip-man, a fare collector and a conductor on all cars exceeding thirty feet in length during rush hours. The duty of the conductor is to stay on the rear platform to stop and start the car.

So close is the personal resemblance between Senator Kinney, of Delaware, and Senator McComas, of Maryland, that the presiding officer has on several occasions mistaken the man who rose for recognition. Each now sends up his card before he arises unless when speaking hurriedly, when he usually announces his name to avoid mistakes.

It is nearly six years since the first electric boat, imported from the United States, was placed on a Venetian canal. Evidently the innovation has won popular approval, despite the opposition of gondoliers, for it is announced that a company has been formed to operate both steam and electric launches between the Lido and the Piazzetta.

Denmark's kings for 384 years have all been named Christian or Frederick. This is not the result of accident. It is the law of Denmark that Christian must be succeded by Frederick and Frederick by Christian. To attain this and without the changing of names in case of death or other reason every Danish prince, no matter what other names he may receive, always includes Christian and Frederick among them.

A post mortem examination has revealed that Miss Ella Gates, who died recently at her home near Ontario, N. Y., had two perfectly developed hearts. Miss Gates was in her 25th year. She never enjoyed robust health, and since her early teens had been an invalid. The slightest overexertion brought on complete prostration. She died while writing a note to her brother, leaving a sentence unfinished.

France, Germany and the United States are endeavoring to secure a stable and safe powder that will at the same time give low pressure and high velocity. England has contented herself with the use of cordite. Ordnance officers agree that cordite is a very suitable powder, but it has one defect. Guns from which cordite is fired quickly erode, and the heat is so intense that the life of a gun is considerably lessened.

A Pittsburgh concern has received an order for some wire glass strong enough to walk on and fireproof, to be used on the tower of London. Thus American visitors to the tower will add to their recollections of Julius Cæsar, William the Conqueror, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Walter Raleigh, the Traitor's Gate and the Beefeaters the memory of good, solid Pittsburgh glass with steel wire wound with asbestos yarn imbedded in it.

A sample of Egyptian porcelain found at Memphis was recently submitted to M. Le Chatelier for analysis, and the interesting fact was brought out that it was entirely different from the Chinese porcelain. This leads to the conclusion that the manufacture of true porcelain was known to the ancient Egyptians. To duplicate this particular kind of porcelain would require forty parts of blue glass, fifty parts of fine sand and five parts of white clay.

The newly founded town of Triangle, Tex., promises to be unique. It is laid out in the form of an equilateral triangle; its lots are triangular in shape, and the ground plan of each of the 23 houses which have thus far been erected there is three cornered. The three principal streets are Equilateral, Scalene and Isosceles, and the residents have carried their curious idea into the local government, which consists of a so-called triangular council, having three members.

War critics, in discussing the Tugela, seem disposed to count "knowledge of the ground" as a factor largely in favor of the Boer combatants. Whatever the relative advantages enjoyed by the opposing forces may have been, ignorance of the locality on the part of the British can hardly be reckoned as a point in favor of the Boers. For years past Ladysmith has been a military camp of some importance, and for months, at least, the whole neighborhood south of it must have been familiar to British commanders.

FOUR COMMISSIONERS.

The President Has Decided to Send Them at Once to Replace the Military Government at Manila.

Washington, Feb. 5.—President McKinley has decided not to wait for congress to act on the matter of replacing the military government by a civil administration in the Philippines, recognizing that much time will be consumed in deliberating over details before any comprehensive plan for the the government of the islands can be adopted, and that more than a month would be required after that time for the officials to reach their stations. It has been decided, therefore, to send out three or, at most, four, commissioners to establish provisionally the form of territorial government recommended in the report of the Philippine commission sent to congress Saturday. According to present intentions, the head of the new commission is eventually to become the governor of the territory of the Philippines, its secretary will become the secretary of the territory and a third member is to be selected with a view to his qualifications for becoming the presiding justice of the territorial supreme court when it is established.

Among the men who have been already canvassed for membership of this commission are Gov. Roosevelt, President Schurman, Robert P. Porter, Col. Denby, Gen. Frederick D. Grant and ex-Minister Barrett. It has been found that Gov. Roosevelt and President Schurman can not be induced to accept, and various objections have been raised to the others as possible governors of the territory.

CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The United States and Great Britain have reached an amicable agreement respecting the operations of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty as affecting the right of construction and control by the United States of the proposed Nicaraguan canal.

Great Britain agrees to a modification of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty by which she practically relinquishes any claims respecting the legal control of the Nicaraguan canal after it shall have been constructed. The result, therefore, is to eliminate that feature of the treaty bearing on the subject of dual control and to leave the United States free to construct and thereafter control this great interoceanic waterway.

It is rumored that in return for the British renunciation of rights under the treaty the state department has promised a free port in Alaska for Canada.

A STRANGE SWINDLE.

Wealthy West Virginia Man Signs a Marriage Certificate as Witness That Turns Up a Check.

Point Pleasant, W. Va., Feb. 4.—A. L. Thorn, a member of the Mason county court and a man of wealth and of business qualities, was beaten out of $1,000 by a novel method last week.

Tuesday evening a stranger in clerical garb stopped at his house and asked to stay over night, explaining that he was a Baptist circuit rider who had lost his way.

About 9:30 a young-looking couple drove up and asked to be directed to a minister to be married. Thorn's romantic turn cropped out and he invited them in to be married by the itinerant minister. The knot was tied and Thorn signed the certificate as a witness, treating to coffee, cake, pie and apples in celebration of the event.

Friday Thorn came to the bank here and was astonished to find that his check for $1,000 had been cashed. He had signed it, payable to bearer, through a slit in the marriage certificate.

Governor for Samoa.

Laporte, Ind., Feb. 5.—Private advices received here state that President McKinley will this week officially announce the appointment of Hon. Albert Couden, of Michigan City, to the position of governor of the Samoan islands. Mr. Couden is now an attache of the United States navy, with official rank, and his appointment has been urged by Senators Fairbanks and Beveridge.

One Day Session Only.

St. Johns, N. F., Feb. 5.—In deference to the desire of the British cabinet the New Foundland legislature will meet in special session on February 15 to renew the Anglo-French modus vivendi respecting the treaty shore. The session will probably occupy only one day as the country is unanimous in supporting such a proposal.

Good Prices for Cotton.

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 3.—Spot cotton is selling here for eight cents and there is great rejoicing. Farm mortgages of 20 years' standing are being paid off. The good prices of the staple, however, threaten prosperity. Over-production next year is predicted.

Trusted Postoffice Clerk Arrested.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Henry Walsh, an old and trusted clerk in charge of the mailing department of the Chicago post office, was arrested by post office inspectors charged with robbing the mails. It is calculated that Walsh has robbed 3,000 letters during the past year.

William Stanley Hasleton Dead.

New York, Feb. 5.—William Stanley Hasleton, the marine, is dead in Rome, aged 64 years. He was a native of Philadelphia, where his father was a wealthy merchant.

CROSSED THE TUGELA

Gen. Buller Has Again Begun His March on to Ladysmith.

British War Office Holding Back Dispatches, but a Few Press Dispatches Allowed to Pass the Censor—Latest From Front.

London, Feb. 5.—Although there is no actual confirmation of the report that Gen. Buller has recrossed the Tugela on a third desperate attempt to relieve Ladysmith, it is known that the war office has received several South African dispatches which have not yet been published and if the advance is an actual fact the secret is being well kept.

There are newspaper dispatches in plenty from Spearman's Camp up to Sunday, but there is no hint that an advance had been begun and it is assumed in some quarters here that Lord Dundonald's reconnaissance in the District of Honger's Poort may be the only foundation of the statement that Gen. Buller has started.

On the other hand dispatches from Ladysmith rather indicate that the advance is in operation by reporting heavy firing on Friday and Saturday in the direction of Potgieter's drift and Colenso.

A dispatch to the Daily Chronicle from Ladysmith dated Sunday says: "A report is reached us that one brigade has crossed the Tugela."

The reports that the Boers are reconcentrating around Ladysmith are also an indication that preparations are being made to resist Gen. Buller for an attempt at re-attack upon the garrison in anticipation of his advance. The fact, however, that no firing has been reported under Sunday's date either from Ladysmith or Spearman's Camp might be interpreted to mean either that the attempt had failed or that Gen. Buller had merely made a demonstration on Friday or Saturday.

Various rumors are current. One says that Gen. Buller is again attacking Spion Kop from the side of Gen. Littleton's camp. Another is that he received information from the owner of Spion Kop farm and crossed by fords further west than Trichard's drift.

The military authorities in London think it more likely that the crossing would be made east of Zwart's Kop. Speculation, however, is useless. The public can only wait in patience and, it may be said, also in trepidation. Nor is the feeling of anxiety much relieved by the possibility that Gen. Buller has been considerably reinforced since the disaster at Spion Kop.

Modder River, Feb. 3.—The Landrost at New Boshof read publicly on January 26 a telegram which he said he had just received.

"Lord Roberts is a prisoner. Gen. Buller has been killed. Nine thousand British have been killed and 7,000 captured. The British also lost eight guns last Saturday."

London, Feb. 5.—The Daily Telegraph has the following from Spearman's Camp, dated Sunday evening: "Messages are now freely exchanged between the camps of Gen. Buller and Gen. White—by night with calcium lights, by day with heliograph. The men here are enthusiastic at the prospect of a speedy advance under Gen. Buller's instructions. A very large convoy with stores for the besieged garrison will accompany the relieving force. The Boers have repaired the road bridge over the Tugela at Colenso sufficiently for the passage of cavalry."

Ladysmith, Feb. 4.—By Heliograph from Signal Hill. The garrison were much cheered by hearing tien. Buller's guns yesterday. The result of the engagement is not known. The Boers are again massing near Ladysmith, also moving another gun toward Surprise Hill. We are quite ready for them, if they contemplate another attack. The health of the garrison is improved.

Rensburg, Feb. 3.—The New Zealanders, Remington guides and a squadron of life guards made a sweep of several miles along the hills adjacent to the British right flank. One kopje occupied by Boers was rushed, the Boers clearing out after a slack resistance. One New Zealander was wounded. Small parties in the distance retreat whenever British horse appears.

London, Feb. 5.—The war office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, February 4: "Mafeking well on January 17. Trenches extend toward enemy's big gun battery, causing it to be vacated. Enemy now pushing back on northern, southern and western sides, well out of rifle fire. Otherwise no change in situation."

Arrested for Murder.

Sioux City, Ia., Feb. 2.—Oscar Goodrich was arrested here on the charge of having murdered John Robson, his partner in the contracting business. Robson, who was a leading contractor, was murdered in his office about a month ago.

Neck Possibly Broken.

Fostoria, O., Feb. 5.—Joel Shuck, a farmer, was thrown from his carriage. It is feared his neck is broken. His wife, who was also in the buggy, finally stopped the horse by crawling on his back and turning him toward the fence.

In Memory of Gen. Lawton.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Memorial services in honor of Gen. Henry W. Lawton, were held at the church of Our Father, and were attended by many veterans of the wars who had known and loved the deceased general.

FIRE IN A SCHOOL.

Sister Stanislaus and One of Her Pupils Were Suffocated in the Dense Smoke.

St. Louis, Feb. 2.—Two lives were lost by a fire which partly destroyed St. Lawrence O'Toole's parish school on Fourteenth street. The victims were Sister Stanislaus and a pupil, Mary Foley, 10 years old. They were imprisoned by a pall of smoke that no one could penetrate.

Firemen attempted to rescue them, but found the smoke an impassable barrier. They were afterwards found suffocated and unconscious in each other's arms. Both died a few minutes after being carried to the hospital. Four hundred pupils escaped from the burning building without injury.

Sister Stanislaus was 24 years of age. Her name before she became a nun was Nellie Mahoney. Her mother and sister live in Scranton, Pa., and she has a brother in Kansas City and another in Little Rock. The loss on the building will not exceed $6,000.

BIG FIRE AT ST. LOUIS.

One Fireman Killed and Eight Others Badly Injured—Property Loss Between One and Two Millions.

St. Louis, Feb. 5.—Property estimated in value between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 was destroyed by a fire that burned over portions of three blocks and resulted in the death of one fireman, Charles Mappes, and injury to eight others. One of the latter is probably fatally hurt. The following buildings were wholly or partially destroyed: Penny & Gentle's, dry goods; Schnper Bros., dry goods; People's house furnishing store; Johnson Bros. Drug Co., partially; Schisler-Cornelia Seed Co., Plant Seed Co., Kreuning Glass Co., Bassett Plumbing Co., Deer Bros.' 5 and 10 cent store, Famous, dry goods, partially; Mueller Block Commission Co., Biel Bros.' dental parlors, partially; Nelson Distilling Co., McLain & Alcorn Commission Co., Hake & Son's commission house, Benton & Co.'s commission house, Bauer Flour Co. and William Rock's saloon.

FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Four firemen and two spectators were injured during the progress of a fire in the basket factory of John S. Benedict, at 240 North Green street. One of the injured firemen may die.

The building, filled with dry lumber and machinery, was entirely destroyed. Loss, $16,000; no insurance.

Snowstorms in England.

London, Feb. 4.—This metropolis awoke Saturday morning to find the streets two inches deep in snow, which was soon converted into mud and slush. Snow and bitter cold, blizzard-like weather, are reported from many points in the provinces. In Bedfordshire the people are suffering from the worst snowstorm experienced in years, lasting until noon, and covering the ground more than a foot deep. The roads are impassable, and the drifts reach to the hedge tops.

Indiana Man Killed in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Charles Morris, stationary engineer of Muncie, Ind., was found unconscious beside the tracks of the Western Indiana railroad. He was suffering from internal injuries and his right arm was crushed. He was removed to the Englewood Union hospital, where he died. Morris had been out of employment for some time and it is supposed he fell from a train while on his way to his home in Indiana.

Smallpox in West Virginia.

Weston, W. Va., Feb. 4.—Two new cases of smallpox are reported from Glenville, Gilmer county—Senator B.F. Kidd and Hon. J. H. Barnett—making six cases in all. Both gentlemen contracted the disease while attempting to isolate the early cases. There are no new cases Friday in Weston or on Alum fork. There are now sixty cases in the three central West Virginia counties.

A Shorter Mail Route.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The post office department has directed that a shorter mail route, entirely within American territory, shall be established to communicate with the Cape Nome gold fields. This will be from Katmai, then to the coast, via Nushagok and St. Michaels, and will be several hundred miles shorter than the present one by way of the Yukon river.

Changed His Religious Belief.

New York, Feb. 5.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, who resigned the pastorate of the Bloomingdale Reformed church, did so because he had come to the conclusion that the Bible teaches baptism for believers only, and because he could not in good conscience continue the practice of infant baptism or baptism by sprinkling. He will leave New York and enter the Baptist ministry.

Elections in Alabama.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 5.—Returns received indicate that Gov. Johnston has carried Russell county by a narrow margin. From Winston county nothing definite has been received. Winston usually elects a republican representative. A summary of the United States senatorial situation to date seems to indicate that Senator Morgan has 19 votes in a joint ballot against 16 for Gov. Johnston. Ex-Congressman Howard, the populist candidate, will probably carry Marshall county.

Our Increased Trade with China.

England can no longer compete with us in the shipment of many products to China. Our trade with the Chinese has increased almost forty per cent. within the last year. This is merely natural. The best wins in everything. For a like reason, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the best remedy in the country, has for fifty years acknowledged no superior to cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness.

He Was Satisfied.

A married couple who are in the habit occasionally of going out at night to entertainments and social affairs, at such times make themselves solid with their little boy by saying that they are going out to see a sick man. One week these social affairs came pretty frequently. On Monday night they went to the theater, and told the lad that they had to sit up with the sick man. Tuesday night they went out to visit a neighbor, and explained that they were going to give some medicine to the man who was sick. On Wednesday night they proposed to attend an entertainment, and apologized to the young chap by saying they had to put a plaster on the sick man's back to draw out the pain. "Papa," asked the youth, "is the sick man in much pain?" "Very much, my son." "And is he pretty near dead?" "Yes, he's in bad shape." The lad thought deeply for awhile, and then remarked: "Well, papa, he can't die any too soon to suit me."—Memphis Scimitar.

Sleep for Skin-Tortured Babies

In a Warm Bath with Cuticura SOAP

And a single anointing with CUTICURA, purest of emollients and greatest of skin cures. This is the purest, sweetest, most speedy, permanent, and economical treatment for torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, and pimply skin and scalp humors with loss of hair, of infants and children, and is sure to succeed when all other remedies fail.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet soap and BEST baby soap in the world.

GOV. GOEBEL'S DEATH.

It Took Place While Only His Brother and Sister Were By His Bedside.

MR. BECKHAM SWORN IN AS GOVERNOR

An Armed Conflict Averted By the Release of Alonzo Walker By Gov. Taylor.

Gov. Taylor's Order for the General Assembly to Meet at London, Ky., Has Been Rescinded.

The Political Situation Less Threatening—Both Sides Will Rest Until After the Funeral of Gov. Goebel—Detectives Are Busy.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 5.—William Goebel died Saturday evening at 6:44. His last words spoken were addressed to Dr. Furnish, state senator from Boone county, at 5:15. He called him by name and asked to be given a drink of water. At 6 he nodded assent when the physicians asked if he would attempt to take liquid nourishment. Soon thereafter he fell into complete unconsciousness and so remained until the end.

At 6:30, when it was apparent that the end was near, the physicians left the room. Only the brother and the sister of the dying man, Arthur Goebel and Mrs. Bronnecker, entered the room and were the only ones present when the death summons came.

Justus Goebel, a brother of the dead statesman, with his wife and two children, who had been traveling night and day for four days as fast as steam would carry him from Phoenix, Ariz., arrived one hour too late in his race against death.

Gov. Goebel's death was not made public for some time after it had occurred. In the meantime messengers summoned democratic leaders quietly to the room of Senator Blackburn on the same floor of the hotel. Arrangements were soon made for transferring the office and authority of governor to Lieut. Gov. Beckham.

Dr. McCormack was present and Mr. Shackelford in his notarial capacity as clerk of the court of appeals, swore Dr. McCormack's signature to the affidavit of death.

Gov. Beckham then took the oath of office. After he signed it and affirmed the oath he said: "And may God help me to meet this responsibility."

"We all trust that he will," said Col. Young, and there was a murmur of "Amens."

It was in subdued and solemn tones that Gov. Beckham received the congratulations of those who witnessed his induction into office.

Immediately after Gov. Beckham had been sworn in the news of Gov. Goebel's death was made public. The effect was a general demonstration of grief, such as Frankfort had never seen.

Although the burial will take place in Frankfort, in accordance with the wishes of the friends of the dead man, the funeral services will be held in Covington, his home. The remains will be taken to Covington on a special train. The train will consist of three cars, one car for the casket and the actual pallbearers. A private car will be furnished the relatives of the dead man, while a sleeper will be furnished for the members of the legislative committee, which has not yet been selected, judges of the court of appeals and other political friends.

Tuesday morning the remains will be conveyed to Odd Fellows' hall, in Covington, and from 8:30 in the morning until 10 o'clock in the evening will lie in state, the hall being kept open in the evening to allow the working people an opportunity to review the remains.

The funeral services will be extremely simple, in deference not only to the wishes of Mr. Goebel, but also of the members of his family. There will be a guard of honor in Covington selected by Arthur and Justus Goebel, consisting of 50 citizens, but outside of this there will be no ceremony, or display of any kind. Even the funeral cortege will be meking.

Wednesday morning the remains will be brought back to Frankfort, and placed in the big hall room of the Capitol hotel, where they will lie in state all that day. Some apprehension is felt of trouble on that day, as it is believed from 30,000 to 50,000 strangers will be in the city to view the remains of the democratic leader, and bitter feeling engendered by his death may result in a clash. Precautions are being taken irrespective of party, to prevent trouble, and no serious outbreak is looked for.

The interment will take place Thursday from the Capitol hotel, but the actual arrangements for the burial have as yet not been decided on. The remains will be buried in the cemetery overlooking the Kentucky river, where lie the remains of Daniel Boone, Vice President Richard Johnson and several Kentucky governors, eminent jurists and soldiers.

Already a movement has been started to erect a fitting monument for Mr. Goebel's memory on the spot in the state house grounds where he was shot.

Gov. Taylor Adjourns Legislature.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb 1.—Never was there a more complicated political situation than that which confronts the politicians of Kentucky, and never was there one of which it seemed so difficult to form an accurate guess at the outcome

Gov. Taylor issued a proclamation declaring that a state of insurrection existed in Kentucky, and particularly in the city of Frankfort, and because of this he adjourned the legislature, to meet at London, Laurel county, on February 6.

The democratic members of the legislature declined to accept the adjournment, and decided to meet elsewhere

The members of the legislature went to the state house, but soldiers would not let them within the building. Afterwards they marched to the opera house only to find a body of soldiers drawn up before it and admittance was refused.

Then the legislature decided to deliberate in the court house, and tore through the streets in that direction. A second company of soldiers beat the lawmakers to the goal, and they then took to the streets, looking for a place in which to hold a session and declare Goebel governor of Kentucky.

Goebel Declared Elected.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 31.—While Wm. Goebel lay at the point of death in his room, as the result of an assassin's bullet, the contesting board which for two weeks had been listening to the evidence in the contest for the governor's chair, declared him entitled to the seat.

The Beckham-Marshall contest was then voted upon, and a strict party vote of 9 to 2 settled this matter. No announcement was made of the reasons leading up to report, the boards taking everything at one leap. Each member of both committees announced that he had made up his mind as to the merits of the case and voted promptly as his name was called.

Goebel Sworn In.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1.—William Goebel was shortly before 9 o'clock last night sworn in as governor of Kentucky, and J. C. W. Beckham a few minutes later took the oath of lieutenant governor. The oath was administered to both men by Chief Justice Hazlerigg, of the court of appeals.

Mr. Goebel was propped up with pillows and was unable to raise his hand only with the greatest difficulty as he listened to the words of Judge Hazlerigg. When the oath had been given Mr. Goebel sank back exhausted, the effort having been almost too much for his strength.

Immediately upon leaving the room where he had sworn in Mr. Goebel, Judge Hazlerigg went to an adjoining room where he swore in Mr. Beckham as lieutenant governor. This done he returned to his home.

Taylor Explains.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1.—Gov. Taylor late in the afternoon issued the following address to the people:

"To the People of Kentucky:

"The most lamentable condition of affairs ever experienced by our people has rendered prompt action on the part of the chief executive of the state absolutely necessary. A long series of unprecedented and unlawful acts practiced by those in charge of the legislative interests of the state has culminated in the most fearful condition of the period in the state. The dreadful event which occurred yesterday shocked and startled all and can be no more sincerely deplored by any one than myself.

"To attempt to legislate under such conditions of excitement and threatened violence as now prevails in Frankfort would be sheer madness, and I have, therefore, in the exercise of my constitutional powers, adjourned the legislature to convene in London, Ky., on February 6.

"I have taken every precaution to preserve the peace, that every citizen may know that life and property are safe, and will be protected with every resource of the commonwealth. I trust that in this laudable effort I will have the support of every law-abiding citizen of Kentucky."

Met in the Hotel.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—At 8 o'clock Speaker Trimble posted a notice in the office of the Capitol hotel calling members of the house to meet in one of the hotel parlors. Forty-four members only were present and this being no quorum an adjournment was taken. The meeting was not originally intended as much for business purposes as to serve notice on the military that the legislature was able to meet when it chose. The notice was posted in ample time to have allowed the soldiers to prevent the gathering.

The senate also held a short caucus and nominated Senator Carter, of Anderson county, to be president protem of the senate, a position heretofore held by Goebel.

Taylor Appeals to McKinley.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Gov. Taylor has sent a communication to President McKinley which is in its nature a memorial. It goes at great length into the situation in Kentucky, making an explanation of the condition there.

Gov. Taylor Defied.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—Two direct slaps were given Gov. Taylor by public officers who declined to obey his orders. The first came from President Rodman of the Farmers' bank, which is a state depository. Some vouchers on the bank were signed by Gov. Taylor in favor of some of the militia officers who wanted money for their companies. When they were presented at the bank payment was refused. President Rodmann said that he did not see how he could pay out the money on orders signed by Gov. Taylor until he knew for certain who was the actual governor of Kentucky. He had asked an opinion from the attorney of the bank, he said, and when it was received would act accordingly. He declared that he would take no chance of paying out money until he was satisfied that he was acting under proper authority.

The second instance was when Gov. Taylor issued a pardon to Dougias Hayes, a convict in the Frankfort penitentiary who is serving a five-year term for manslaughter, having been sentenced in March, 1899. When the pardon was sent to Warden Lillard he decided that he could not turn the man loose until he was satisfied regarding the legal status of the governorship. He made no reply to Gov. Taylor, but declined to honor the pardon, and informed the penitentiary commissioners of his action.

Conflict of Authority.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 3.—The first clash between the executive and judiciary powers of the state has occurred, and a still greater clash is imminent, and beyond lies a sea with skies so lowering, and so stormy an aspect that no politician of either party can predict where it will carry the Kentucky ship of state. There is the chance that things will, as Congressman Jane Gayle expresses it, "drift around all right," but there are other chimnees also, and if things are to "drift around all right" they must strike a counter current and strike it soon. There can no longer be any concealment of the fact that affairs in this state are bordering upon conflict in arms and the beginning of the crisis is at hand. It may be that political difficulties will be settled by the courts of law, but the hearts of men are hot in Kentucky now and legal process may provide a remedy too dilatory to please a few of the more impatient and it is in the power of these to create a world of woe at almost any time.

The clash came when an officer of the circuit court of Franklin county was arrested by the military while attempting to serve notice of a legal proceeding upon Gov. Taylor. The next clash may come when the officers of that court attempt to enforce the rulings of its presiding judge. Behind this judge the democrats will have for the first time an active executive head in the person of Acting Gov. Beckham, and from the democratic standpoint a regularly appointed adjutant general, whose orders the troops now encamped around the capitol building are bound to obey. If they decline to obey, the new adjutant general will, the democrats claim, have the power to organize military forces of his own and proceed against all people who defy the authority of his office and that of the governor of the state, whom he represents.

On the other hand, the republicans are fixed in their attitude that there is an insurrection in the state; that Beckham and his actions, his adjutant general and his orders, are those of people acting in opposition to law. They believe that they alone are in the right, and, as there can be but one right and all else wrong, those who show resistance to the proclamations of Gov. Taylor are in rebellion against the commonwealth. They will resist any attempt of any kind to remove them from their position around the capital, meeting force with force, and that means civil war.

The first clash came when Alonzo Walker, a stenographer employed by the democratic attorneys was placed under arrest in the capital grounds charged with conduct tending to incite mutiny and riot. The conduct consisted in pinning to the door of the private office of Gov. Taylor a notice that the democratic attorneys would appear before Judge Cantrill, of the circuit court, and ask for an injunction restraining Gov. Taylor from all interference with the movements of the legislature and from his announced attempt to remove it to London in this state. Walker was at once taken into custody by orders of Col. Roger Williams, the commanding officer of the force now gathered around the capital.

Injunction Against Taylor.

An injunction will be asked and there is no doubt that it will be granted. Judge Cantrill has the reputation of being a man who will attempt by all means in his power to enforce the rulings handed down from his bench. He will most certainly use all the power in his hands to secure the operation of his injunction. It is equally certain that the republicans will pay no attention to Judge Cantrill or his writs.

The democrats claim the action of the republicans in arresting Walker while he was attempting to carry out orders of the court, has placed them in contempt of court, and they will make all of the point that is possible.

Taylor's Reward for Goebel's Assailant.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 3.—Gov. Taylor has personally offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the man who shot Gov. Goebel. In making the offer of the reward Gov. Taylor states that the authorities of Franklin county, in which the crime was committed, have never requested him to officially offer a reward, and he therefore offers $500 as an individual.

No Federal Interference.

Washington, Feb. 3.—A Kentucky delegation consisting of Senator-elect Blackburn, Representatives Rhea, Smith, Allen and Gilbert, and ex-Representative Thompson, called on President McKinley Friday to protest against any federal interference in that state. Senator Lindsay was also there, but did not come with the other gentlemen.

The Kentuckians said that federal interference in Kentucky would be sure to result in serious trouble, as the first movement of troops would cause an uprising that could not be easily quelled. They expressed the opinion that the difficulties would be adjusted without further violence if the people of Kentucky were allowed to settle the matter themselves.

After leaving the white house Senator Lindsay telegraphed his friends in Kentucky, saying there would be no interference in Kentucky. Federal authorities think there is no justification for it.

Washington, Feb. 3.—At the cabinet meeting Friday it was decided that the situation in Kentucky is not such as to require federal interference, and consequently the president will take no action under the present conditions.

A Conflict Averted.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 5.—Armed conflict between the civil authorities of Franklin county and national guard of the state of Kentucky has been averted, and, unless new causes should come to the front, there is small likelihood that the political situation will again become as threatening as it has been during the last 48 hours.

Gov. Taylor Sunday morning ordered the release of Alonzo Walker, for the possession of whom Judge Moore had declared that Sheriff Suter would swear in a posse and take possession of the capitol grounds, if such an extreme beeame necessary. While not recognizing in his action the existence of the writ of habeas corpus which had been sworn out on behalf of Walker, Gov. Taylor by releasing the man removed the most threatening sign of trouble. The commanding officers of the troops which guard the capitol grounds are careful to say that the situation is entirely a military affair, and that they extend the writ of habeas corpus very little consideration; but, whether they regard it or not, Walker is free, and Sheriff Suter will not be called upon to summon force in the attempt to secure his release.

The clash came when an officer of the circuit court of Franklin county was arrested by the military while attempting to serve notice of a legal proceeding upon Gov. Taylor. Taylor's Reward for Goebel's Assailant.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 3.—Gov. Taylor has personally offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the man who shot Gov. Goebel. In making the offer of the reward Gov. Taylor states that the authorities of Franklin county, in which the crime was committed, have never requested him to officially offer a reward, and he therefore offers $500 as an individual.

Gov. Taylor Sunday morning ordered the release of Alonzo Walker, for the possession of whom Judge Moore had declared that Sheriff Suter would swear in a posse and take possession of the capitol grounds, if such an extreme beeame necessary. Both sides will take a rest pending the session of the republicans called by Gov. Taylor at London. No democrats will attend this unless they are taken there by the military forces of the state, and no attempt will be made in this direction by Gov. Taylor until he has afforded them every opportunity to go to London of their own accord. What will be done when it has been made certain that the democrats will not visit London has not been definitely determined by Gov. Taylor.

It is likely that matters will on both sides be allowed to drift until after the funeral of Gov. Goebel.

Will Not Meet in London.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 5.—The correspondent of the Courier-Journal at Frankfort wired his paper as follows:

The session of the general assembly which the republicans were to have held at London has been called off. Many democratic members of the general assembly are now in Louisville, which place they secretly adjourned last Friday in order to avoid arrest and a forced trip to London, but they will not have to hold sessions in Louisville, as they had intended.

The republicans are all in London preparing to caucus to-morrow and to hold a session on Tuesday, but they will be informed that the London session is not to be held at all, and it is believed that on Tuesday the republican members will be back in Frankfort.

In fact the clouds this morning for the first time began to lift, and, while peace is not assured beyond a doubt, the developments are such as to make it reasonably certain that the war is drawing to a close.

Detectives Are Busy.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 5.—The detectives are working night and day, and seem to be meeting with great success. While very reticent, they talk enough to lead the admirers of the dead governor to believe that they are on the track of the coward and his accessories, and think it but a matter of a few days until several people are arrested. They still have the man whom they believe knows the whole party, and will hold him until he confesses or they become satisfied that they have the wrong person.

Featherweight Championship Fight.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Terry McGovern, of Brooklyn, at Tattersall's proved his right to the title of feather-weight champion of the world by knocking out Eddie Santry, of Chicago, who claims the leadership of the 122-pound class by virtue of a knockout of Ben Jordon, of England. The knockout came in the fifth round after a fierce mix-up in which Santry did some clever work, but Terry was too strong for the Chicago lad. Referee George Siler declared McGovern the winner to save Santry from further punishment.

Children Bitten by a Mad Dog.

Cynthiana, Ky., Jan. 31.—A little boy and girl of John Cain's and a boy of John Snapp's, living at Ruddell's Mills, seven miles east of this place, were playing with a pet dog, when the animal began to show sudden symptoms of hydrophobia. The children were bitten before they could be rescued. They were brought to this city. The mad stone, on being applied, stuck three hours on the Snapp child and two and one half hours on the Cain children.

A Fire Chief's Narrow Escape.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Fire Chief Swenie had a narrow escape from death early Friday morning in the burning factory of the Rauch Furniture Manufacturing Co. The veteran, head of the department was overcome by smoke and fell unconscious in the rear of the office on the first floor. Members of engine company No. 3 bore Chief Swenie from the building just in time to save his life.

Destructive Fireln Little Rock.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 3.—A loss of $130,000 was caused Friday by a fire that destroyed the store of the Dickinson Arms Co., and partially destroyed eight smaller business houses. A quantity of dynamite and giant powder in the building occupied by the Dickinson Arms Co. exploded with tremendous force breaking at least $15,000 worth of window glass throughout the city.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Our Lawmakers Are at Work at Frankfort—Bills Introduced and Passed.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 31.—Senate—Not in session.

House—The Van Meter-Berry election contest was taken up as soon as the house convened. After lengthy arguments were made for both the majority and minority reports a ballot was taken which resulted in Van Meter, the democrat, being seated by a vote of 54 to 42, on strict party lines. The house then adjourned until Monday.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 2.—Senate—Bills were passed as follows: To regulate the importation into this state of dependent children from other states; appropriating $1,500 annually for continuing in conjunction with the United States government the geological survey; continuing permanently the stenographers for judges of the court of appeals; prohibiting teachers in normal or high schools from serving on county examination boards. The following bills were presented: Act concerning free public libraries in cities of the second class, making it imperative upon said city councils to appropriate $5,000 a year whenever the sum of $20,000 has been accumulated as a library fund, and declaring that the city of Covington now has $20,000 for said fund; making it unlawful to construct bridges over navigable streams and rivers wholly within this state, provided the location and plans thereof have been approved by the federal authorities before construction is commenced.

House—The house did nothing but swear in Mr. Van Meter, the representative from Fayette, who won his contest against Mr. Berry Saturday. The Gill-Brister contest committee was ready to report, but neither side was ready for a fight over the adoption of the report seating Brister, the republican, on account of so many absentees, and the house adjourned.

FOUND HIS LOST CHILD.

Meeting of a Mother and Her Twelve-Year-Old Daughter After Eight Years of Separation.

London Depot, Ky., Feb. 3.—Mrs. May Harris arrived here from Birmingham, Ala., to identify a 12-year-old girl, who says her name is Stella Green, who was kidnaped eight years ago at her Alabama home. The meeting between them was attended with tears of joy.

Mrs. Harris was the divorced wife of a man named Young when he stole from her her daughter, she subsequently married Harris. The courts had allowed her the custody of the daughter, which on being kidnaped, it is alleged was abandoned in the mountain section of Kentucky. She sees in the child a resemblance to the kidnaped infant.

Business at a Standstill.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 3.—Business of state is at a standstill. Assessor Menninger, of Covington, went to the state house Friday morning to make his report to the state auditor. He found the office in the hands of the militia and mountaineers. Chief Clerk Johnson said to him:

"No mail has been opened here in three days. Business is at a standstill and the militia have usurped everything." Mr. Menninger was unable to make his report which shows the valuation of Kenton county as $9,705,461.33.

A Lexington Lady Warned Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—On Monday Senator Goebel received a message warning him not to go to the statehouse and informing him that a plot to assassinate him existed. The message came from Mrs. Allen Lake, manager of the East Tennessee Telephone Co., which had headquarters at Lexington, Wednesday Mrs. Lake sent a basket of flowers to Goebel's room. There was no word with it concerning his disregard of the warning.

Women Call a Mass Meeting.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2.—The women of this city have taken the initiative in a movement to enlist the women of the state in an effort to bring about better social conditions in Kentucky. The Women's Relief association, 2,000 strong, has called a mass meeting for next Tuesday to inaugurate the movement. Leading ministers and citizens will address it. Resolutions will be passed against carrying pistols.

Trial of the Kendalls.

Nicholasville, Ky., Feb. 3.—The examining trials of the Kendalls, father and two sons, were called in the county court here. In addition to the charge of murder, the charges of horse-stealing, house-breaking and grand larceny were brought against them and warrants issued. The trial will probably consume the entire week.

Kentuckian Assassinated.

Middlesboro, Ky., Feb. 3.—A special from Hagan, near here, states that Hon. William S. Wright a prominent democratic politician and a member of the Kentucky legislature in 1870, was assassinated on Boone's fork of the Kentucky river. Five shots were fired from a Winchester, two of which took effect. Boone's Fork is very remote from Middlesboro, and it is impossible to get particulars.

Shooter Acquitted.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 3.—Craig Ireland, who shot Ike Williams, colored, Tuesday, at his examining trial before County Judge Moore was acquitted.

Quarreled About a Woman.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Feb. 3.—Henry Adams and Henry Downer, both colored, quarreled about a woman on the street. They pulled pistols and fired. Adams was shot through the hand and Downer through the leg. Both were arrested.

Fatally Shot Himself.

Scottsville, Ky., Feb. 3.—Kenwell A. Youth, aged 18, of Westmoreland, Tenn., 15 miles from here, shot himself accidentally through the bowels while recklessly handling a revolver. He will die.

GOEBEL'S PROCLAMATION.

He Commands the Soldiers to Return Home and Not to Interfere With the General Assembly.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—The following proclamation was issued by Gov. Goebel:

"Commonwealth of Kentucky,
"Executive Department,
"Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 31.

"Whereas, It has been made known to me that certain persons, without authority of law, have banded themselves together for the unlawful purpose of forcibly preventing the general assembly of Kentucky from assembling and discharging their official duties at the seat of the government and have for said unlawful purpose assembled in the city of Frankfort the First and Second regiments of the Kentucky state guard, and by force of arms have unlawfully taken possession of the hall of the house of representatives and the senate chamber of the state of Kentucky, as well as all other public buildings and archives of the commonwealth, and have by force, intimidation and violence expelled the general assembly from the capitol buildings and refused to permit the senate and house of representatives to hold their sessions therein, and are now terrorizing the representatives of the people and other good citizens of the commonwenlth; now, therefore, I, William Goebel, governor of the commonwealth of Kentucky, do hereby command the said 1st and 2d regiments of the Kentucky state guard and each and every officer and member thereof to return to their homes and several avocations and there remain until lawfully called into active service.

"I also command all other persons whatsoever who are now unlawfully engaged in interfering with and intimidating members of the general assembly of this commonwealth to disband and desist from terrorizing and intimidating the said members of the general assembly and all other good citizens of this commonwealth.

"Given under my hand as governor of the commonwealth of Kentucky, at Frankfort, Ky., this 31st day of January, 1900. William Goebel."

PREPARATIONS AT LONDON.

Thirty Men Are at Work Building Three Telegraph Lines From the New Capital.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 3.—The Western Union Telegraph Co leased a large room in London, Ky., near the court house, to be used as an office for handling the reports of the proceedings of the legislature there next week. Thirty men began work Friday morning building three lines out of London, making an aggregate of 13 wires. A 1,000-cell battery was shipped there and more than a carload of material has gone out.

It will require the building of over 75 miles of lines to make the connections at Lexington, Knoxville and Louisville, but the managers of the company say they will have ample facilities for handling the matter offered by the press. The largest amount of specials ever sent out of the state was sent during the past month. The day Col. Colson killed three men the Frankfort office sent out 43,000 words, and the Lexington office 25,000.

When Goebel was shot the Frankfort office sent out 82,000 and the Lexington about 15,000. On Wednesday Frankfort sent out 67,000 and Lexington 15,000.

London, Ky., Feb. 3.—Republican leaders here, on the positive assurance of Taylor that the meeting of the legislature adjourned to this place (at least the republican side of it) will be held February 6, are preparing for the coming of the same. By Taylor's orders the Faris building, a three-story brick structure at the corner of Main and Manchester streets, is being fitted up as a place of meeting.

The hotel accommodations are very poor. There is room for not more than 100 persons in the three small structures, the Catchings house, Riley house and Eversole house. Probably 150 more could be accommodated in private dwellings.

God-fearing citizens do not want a meeting here. They fear the concourse of lawless mountaineers that would be attracted, with the probable renewal of feuds which have been suppressed for a time through the failure of the factions to meet.

Gov. Bradley's Regrets.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1.—Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley, chief counsel for Gov. Taylor, said: "I regard the attempt to assassinate Senator Goebel as one of the foulest crimes in the history of the state. While we differ widely in politics, we have always been on good terms personally, and I can not express the deep regret I feel."

What It is Costing Taxpayers.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 2.—The taxpayers of Kentucky are facing a problem of importance. Added to the legislative expense of $1,000 a day, and about $75,000 for contests, is a military expense of perhaps $5,000 a day. No more or scheme seems too hazardous to be undertaken on either side.

Farmer Frozen to Death.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—S. R. Dowling, farmer, was found frozen in his buggy at home, five miles from the town. He was about 45 years old and leaves a family.

Of all the barefaced steals that has been perpetrated, one in the Drury Chapel neighborhood last Friday night takes first premium. The moon was shining brightly and in the early part of the evening a man drove a two-horse wagon through the farm of Robert Sandford, left all the gates open, helped himself to a lot of corn and poultry and drove away again as if he owned the premises. Mr. Sandford was not awakened, but others saw the man and the team.—Warsaw Independent.

The whole State of Kentucky is at the mercy of smallpox. With disease prevalent in about thirty-five counties the State board of health finds itself without money to fight the disease. Secretary J. N. McCormick has received the resignations of the county boards of health in about a dozen counties in which the disease is the most serious, the last being that of Caldwell county, where nearly 50 per cent of the people are suffering from the disease. The cause of these resignations is the lack of money with which to combat the disease.

It is impressively announced that President McKinley did not mean to acquire the Philippine Islands when peace was made, but he had to change his mind.—New York Evening Post.

One of Ohio's Gold Democrats has been deprived of a good Federal office, and Mr. Bynum is lingering on the outskirts of the exterior. Is the prosperity of the country genuine?—Washington Post.

It would be interesting to be informed where Mr. Rhodes and Dr. Jameson are in hiding, and who are the generous gentlemen who are impersonating them at the front.—New York Tribune.

There is considerable difference of opinion as to who started the Philippine War. One Barrett says it was Hoar. Hoar says it was Otis. Otis intimates that it was McKinley, and McKinley seems to have a dark suspicion that it was Aguinaldo.—Denver News.

This year it seems that not only as individuals but as an organized class the commercial travelers and the hotel men are engaged in promoting the success of the Democratic party as the only party that will undertake to suppress the trusts by law.—New York times.

Mr. Roberts made the mistake of not standing by the Administration. Were he only "loyal" he might have a harem with as many wives as the Sultan of Sulu, and be pointed out as an illustrious specimen of the "good" polygamists of Utah.—Columbus Press Post.

It seems that executive officers also are giving the Government trouble. Witness the case of the wild, amazing Webster Davis, who is making his way to Pretoria in "Oom Paul's" private car, pursued by a heavy fire of disavowals from the State Department.—New York Times.

If politics and personal favorites were sent to govern the Filipinos their cupidity and efficiency would in time become as intolerable to the natives as the maladministration of Spanish officials before President McKinley adopted his policy of giving the Filipinos freedom by shooting them to death.—Baltimore Sun.

D. B. Hampton sold to William Green his crop of lambs for the present year at 5½ cents.—Winchester Democrat.

At Campton the prisoners in jail would jeer at passers-by on the street until Charley Smith shot four times through the window and frightened them.

The Stanford Journal notes the sales of 100 ewes at 5.30 each; a pair of two year old mules for $160; some good feeding steers at 4½ cts; 200 barrels of corn at $2 25; bunch of 2 year old heifers at $18 90.

When Henry Clay was stumping Kentucky for re-election, at one of his mass meetings an old hunter of wide political influence said: "Well, Harry, I've always been for you, but because of that vote (which he named) I'm goin agin you." Let me see your rifle, said Clay. It was handed up to him. "Is she a good rifle?" Yes." "Did she ever miss fire?" Well, yes, once." "Why didn't you throw her away?" The old hunter thought a moment and then said: "Harry, I'll try you again." And Harry was elected.—New York Telegram.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth. They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61-64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1900. NO. 17

Editorial Paragraphs.

A glance at Kentucky ought to assure Aguinaldo that the Filipinos have no monopoly of the movable capital idea.

General Joubert has again risen from his death bed and returned to the front. Some one should tell the man that he is dead and induce him to stop making such and exhibition of himself.

Now that the Hague peace treaty has been ratified, will President McKinley kindly offer mediation, as he is entitled to do under it without his action being considered an unfriendly act by either party?

The President, it is said, has yielded to the wishes of his party, and consented to deprive Porto Rico of the privileges to which he, two months ago, declared her entitled by every consideration of justice and fair dealing.

British North Borneo is in revolt. It is merely a "little war" of course, in which a few dozen British and a few thousand natives will lose their lives. Nothing that need give the smug church-going imperialists the least concern.

Do the American people realize that to ratify the Hay-Pauncefort treaty is to recognize Great Britian as our suzereign? By it we give her the right to oversee our treaties with independent countries, which is exactly what she claims in reference to the Boers.

The new amendment offered by the Senate Finance Committee makes most decent people ill. It provides that the act is not to be construed to place any obstacles in the way of international bimetallism. Whom do the Senators think they can deceive by this farcical addition? Haven't they even the courage of their conviction?

Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, will be delighted to learn that committees of both the House and the Senate have decided that they are on the same plane as Porto Rico and the Philippines, and have absolutely no rights whatever except those that Congress has seen fit to grant to them. They are officially declared to be "outside the Constitution."

Philadelphia seems to have bunconed the Republican National Committee. So far, by the most strenuous efforts, that city has raised only $12,000 in cash and $40,000 in promises towards the $100,000 bonus that it offered for the national convention. Merchants there will not put up the cash to secure such a cut-and-dried affair as the convention will be.

The promoters of the ship subsidy steal are straining every nerve to get votes for their measure. At first they carried things with a high hand, announcing that the bill was going through with a rush and that all who didn't get on the band wagon at once were likely to get left. Day by day, however, the measure has lost strength and now it is extremely doubtful whether it will pass at all. The farmers of the middle west have seriously damaged its prospects.

An effort is being made to create the belief that Goebel was not shot from the Executive Building, but that the fatal shot came from anyother locality will never be established. Those who, at this late hour, are claiming to have witnessed the shooting, can be regarded only as frauds. Had they seen the person at the time the shot was fired they would have given out the information immediately.

It is plain to be seen from the way things political are shaping up in this district, there will soonbe beunder way a decidedly lively contest for the Democratic nomination. An unusually large amount of new timber will be presented, and the race may turn out to be anybody's. Dark horses are going to be very scarce, as every fellow who has the bee in his bonnet will show up in the fight.

Fighting Prairie Dogs in Texas.

There has been such an increase in the number of prairie dogs in the panhandle section of Texas during the past few years that many farms will have to be abandoned unless some method of exterminating the pest is adopted soon, writes an Austin correspondent of the Chicago Record. These animals have multiplied many told since the country has become settled up with stockmen and farmers. The other wild animals, such as coyotts and wolves, have been driven out, and the prairie dogs now have undisputed sway. In some parts of the panhandle there are colonies of prairie dogs which literally overrun the country. There are often as many as 5,000 of them occupying a few acres of ground. The cultivation of wheat around Abilene and other localities of the panhandle is seriously impeded by the destruction wrought by the little animals. It frequently happens that colonies of the prairie dogs are established right in the center of a large wheat field, and the animals forage on the growing grain, completely destroying the crop.

Many farmers and stockmen have undertaken the task of exterminating the prairie dogs on their own land. Among those who have made a war against the pest is Frank Sterrett, a prominent stockman of Abilene. Last year he expended $1500 in exterminating prairie dogs on his ranch. All of the dogs on about 60 sections of land were killed. This year he reports that the dogs have invaded the land from the adjoining territory on all sides and he will have to do some slaughtering of the animals around the outer edges. He claims that the money expended in killing the animals is a good investment, as the increase in the yield of grass compensates for the outlay. The favorite method of killing the dogs on farms where live stock is not running at large is by poison. A stockman living at Sweetwater invented a trap for killing the animals several months ago, and it is rapidly coming into general use.

The Post Office Department is contemplating a new plan for issuing stamps, which is expected to be of great benefit to the people of the county. It proposes to issue them in little books, of a size to go into the vest pocket, and containing 12 each, separated by oiled paper. The books will be sold for 25 cents a piece, thus allowing one cent for the cost of the book. If they sell as expected the profit to the government will be large. The only difficulty in the way of their immediate issue, is the fact that no appropriation for this specific work is available, and the Bureau of Printing and Engraving doubts its authority to embark in the enterprise without Congressional authority. The question has been submitted to Secretary Gage, whether or not a submission of the matter to Congress is necessary.

"I will do my duty. If I fall my death will be to the Democratic party what the blowing up of the Maine was to Cuba."—Governor Goebel when warned that he would be assassinated.

"Tell my friends to be brave and fearless and loyal to the great common people."—Governor Goebel when dying.

Judge Taft, of the Federal Court, will decide to day whether he will issue the injunction to restrain the State Board of Election Commissioners from acting in the contest for State offices now pending. The motion for the injunction was argued by both sides in Cincinnati, Monday.

It has been suggested that the exportation of mules be prohibited by an act of Congress, until the supply in this country equals the demand. The war with Spain and the war now in progress in South Africa has been a heavy drain on the mule product in this country.

The day after Goebel's funeral a Louisville paper indicated another man whom it will doubtless pursue until another assassin comes forward to execute its murderous designs. Look out, Colonel.

Mr. Bryan was received with open arms by the eastern Democrats at the several places he spoke last week.

Bryan and McKinley will head the two national tickets again this fall.

CHARLES LEWIS LATIMER.

It is, perhaps, not inappropriate for one who was long acquainted with Mr. Latimer, to offer a few words written in tender recollection of him, as he was in his home, and as his character was revealed to the many who knew and appreciated his rare qualities of mind and heart. He welcomed his intimates to his fireside with a cordial hospitality unequaled, and to every claim which life held for him, he was absolutely loyal; the troubles and sorrows, the joys and pleasures of his friends, being likewise his own. But not only to those in his own circle were his ardent sympathies extended; those upon whom the frown of fortune lowered found in him a benefactor and pitying friend. Not by the utterance of platitudes expressive of charity did he comfort the poor, as is the custom of some who are perhaps louder in the professions of Christianity than was this unassuming gentleman, but in accordance with the injunction given in the Bible, he gave freely to those in need, not letting his right hand know what his left hand bestowed.

"The sick be soothed, the hungry fed;
Bade care and sorrow fly.
And loved to lift the downcast head,
Of friendless poverty.

To him it appeared a practical demonstration that love to God is best shown by love to man and from those composing the human brotherhood, within range of action for him, there was nothing withheld which was in his power to confer that would tend to the welfare of any suffering or needy person. And all these things were given in the spirit of him who said, "When ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done it unto me."

In the legend concerning Abon Ben Ahem, the angel appearing in the vision speaks to say that he loveth best his God who loveth his fellowman, and a verification of this fact was contained in Mr. Latimer's whole life in the matter of outward appearance, the individual bearing which characterized him will never be forgotten by those to whom the same was familiar. The gallant and chivalrous courtesy, innate with him and also the result of early training and the association with the high circle of society in which he was born, was noteworthy and distinguished him from the ordinary person. His unusually keen sense of wit and humor, and entire appreciation of satire and the finer elements of literature were prominent features of his character, but were not more strongly marked than his reverance for religion, his belief therein and his admiration and endorsement of all that is good, pure and uplifting in this life. His devotion to his wife, only daughter and only son, was too apparent to require comment, as it was ever the motive of his life to protect them from the rough usage that the world extends to most. His relation towards his family was ideal, and well may their hearts bleed for their absence and offer up tenderest homage to his memory.

The following lines found after his death, where they were carefully put away in his pocket book, give a true idea of the trend of his inmost thoughts and are a fitting close for this brief tribute to his memory:

A PRAYER.

"Teach me father how to go,
Softly as the grasses grow.
Hush my soul to meet the Shock
Of the wild world as I rock;
But my spirit propt with power,
Make as simple as a flower.
Let the dry heart fill its cup
Like a poppy looking up,
Let life lightly wear her crown
Like a poppy looking down
When its heart is filled with dew.
And its life begins anew,
Teach me Father how to be,
Kind and patient as a tree
Joyfully the crickets croon
Under shady nook at noon;
Beetle on his mission bent
Tarries in that cooling tent
Let me also cheer a spot
Hidden field or garden grot—
Place where passing souls can rest
On their way and be there blest."

Stood off Death.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood, aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowls, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous disease, kidney trouble, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50 cts. at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, J. G. Oelsner's, Florence, and M. J. Crouch's, Union.

The Lexington Observor has the following romantic history of the life of Milton Kendall, who was arrested some time since, accused of the murder of a farmer by the name of Eugene Cassell in Jessamine county, and the father of Amos Kendall, who was run over by a train and killed in that city:

"Milton Kendall, guilty or not guilty of the dastardly murder with which he is charged, presented a pitiable picture for contemplation. A few years ago he was a man of wealth and social standing. In an evil hour in an altercation, over a cornfield he killed a man; his fortune of a hundred thousand dollars was largely spent in getting himself and boys free from the clutches of the law. The rest of it rapidly disappeared, and soon Milton Kendall has gone so far down the social gamut that he is no longer recognized by those who had once been proud of his friendship.

"The years roll on, and he has grown old. Seventy-odd years have left their blighting touch upon him. But his retribution is not complete. A son acts queerly; he grows worse and in a little while the wild eyes of a maniac stare the aged father in the face, and the boy is hurried off to the madhouse. The night before a heinous murder had been committed, and in another day officers are again at his door, and he and a son are arrested as thieves and murderers. They are placed in jail, and an outraged populace thirsts for their blood. Another son is hunted for, but not found. The old man is brought out for trial, and in earnest and eloquent words he declares his innocence. The days go by—the search continues; the wires bring the news that the boy is found—but a railway train has ground his life out, and the old father bears with bowed head the story of his youngest son's tragic death. But his sorrow and humiliation are not complete. The next day a hundred soldiers appear at the jail door, and in their midst he is marched off to trial.

"Surely, Nemesis is following close in his footsteps. But do not let justice miscarry. If it be proved that he is guilty let no maudlin sentiment or mawkish sympathy intervene to save him from the full penalty of his crime. But if he be not guilty then let us pour out upon him our gentlest sympathy while we pity the sorrows of a poor old man."

Cincinnati Tobacco Market.

[Western Tobacco Journal.]

The best of reasoning fails in judging a market, and this seems to be the case in leaf tobacco to almost a greater extent than in any other staple. Stocks of old are unprecedentedly light: the New crop hardly of average size; the offerings small; and yet prices are easier than they were when stocks and offerings were much larger.

The prices of new tobacco are about as they were last week, with the exception of the best grades. Though many hogsheads sold up to 14, 15 and 16 cents, the sales in general, of this kind, were not satisfactory, and there were quite a number of rejections.

It was rather a gloomy week, with not a day of sunshine, and the light was poor for selling tobacco nearly all the time.

In old tobacco we could not see much change, except in colory lugs which sold higher. The offerings were considerably lighter than the previous week. All the buyers were in attendance. The demand seemed fair, but there was not much snap in the bidding. However, the market closed much stronger than it opened.

The fact that a large proportion of the crop is in the hands of dealers, at figures rather too high for the present market, may induce a great many to redry their purchases, and this will curtail the break sales in the near future. Although most of the purchases were made with the purpose of selling in winter orders, circumstances have so changed that this is not possible, and much larger quantities will be dried and carried into summer and fall than it was originally intended.

When women are talking with each other about clothes they never say much about the old things they wear around the house rainy days.—New York Press.

When Gabriel blows his trumpet on judgment day all the women will hurry out under the impression that it is an auction.

When we begin to feel that we no longer understand the young we ourselves are beginning to grow old.

Are We in the 20th Century?

Great men like Pope Leo XIII, of Rome, Emperor William, of Germany, and others have unhesitatingly announced that the world was ushered into the 20th century, Anno Domini, January 1st, 1900. On the other hand I see in your last week's number, in the first column of the Boone Co. Recorder that the United States Supreme Court has incidentally decided that the 20th century begins with January 1st, 1901. Most newspapers seem to be of the same opinion, while a great many people, in consequence, remain confused, and do not know which is which.

Now this question can neither be decided by a Pope, nor by an Emperor, nor even by the Supreme Court of the United States. THE TRUTH SIMPLY DEPENDS ON PLAIN FIGURES, which neither man nor God can change any more than principle and axioms.

NOW ARE WE IN THE 20TH CENTURY, OR NOT?

To prove that we are not in the 20th century, some new-papers have resorted to the argument that no century can begin with a cipher, as 1900; but must begin with the figure 1; and hence claim that the 20th century will not begin until Janury 1st, 1901. RIDICULOUS CONCLUSION! It is true that no century begins with a cipher; but every century is completed with a cipher. It is equally true, that no century begins with the YEAR 1, but evidently with THE FIRST DAY of the 365 days, which it takes to make up the year 1. Now follow me closely!

It takes 100 years to make a century. Now when history closed the Book of Years of the Old Testament, and began THE NEW ERA ANNO DOMINI, when did the 1st century Anno Domini begin? Did it begin with January 1st, Anno Domini 1? or did it begin with the very first day of the 365 days, which it took to make up the first year? Evidently the 1st century began 365 days before historians could write Anno Domini 1. The first day belonged to the first year and first century, as well as the first cent belongs to the first dollar, and first hundred dollars. And when after December 31st, the first 365 days of the new era were completed, and historians wrote Anno Domini 1 of the first century, the very next day Janury 1st, Anno Domini 1, began the 2d year of the 1st century. And so when the new era reached Anno Domini 10, the very next day, January 1st was the beginning of the 11th year of the 1st century, and likewise when historians wrote Anno Domini 100, one hundred years of the new era had passed, and the very next day January 1st was part of the 1st year of the 2d century; as well as when I have saved $100, the very next cent is not part of the first 100; but is part of the 2d hundred dollars. And therefore, when we begin to write 1900, nineteen hundred years of the new era were full, and the very first day, January 1st, 1900, was already part of the first year of the 20th century, as well as when I give a check for $1900.01, the one cent does not belong to the $1900, but is the first saving and part of the 20th hundred. WE ARE THEREFORE IN THE 20TH CENTURY SINCE JANUARY 1ST, 1900, and when after December 31st we write January 1st, 1901, we have completed the 1st year of the 20th century, and have begun the 2d year of the 20th century.

The claim that other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Elder Benson, O. R. Freeman, J. W. Hamilton and C. R. Clegg, of Harriman, Utah, are working in the county in the interest of the church, of the Latter Day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon church. The people hereabouts do not take much stock in their religion, consequently their converts will be few, if any.

Ira Sleet, the young son of our esteemed citizen, Marshall Sleet, narrowly escaped being killed on his farm near Warsaw one day last week by the accidental discharge of a shot gun while hunting. He was getting over the fence and in pulling his gun over, the hammer of the gun caught against something causing it to be discharged, the load striking his hand and some of the shot skinning his arm as far up as the elbow, tearing off his coat sleeve and lacerating his hand in a painful manner.

The officials of the redemption division of the treasury department recently received from an Illinois farmer a cigar box full of what appeared to be the material used on the stage to represent snow. Instead of being pure white; however the hundreds of pieces of paper were tinted with green. A letter in the same mail that brought the box explained the mystery. The bits of paper were all that remained of the fortune of an old couple, living on an Illinois farm. The man was a veteran of the Civil War and by dint of great economy had managed to save in recent years a few hundred dollars. The hoard was kept in a trunk and the letter stated there was $275 in the treasury. The next time the couple went to inspect the money they found a big mass of finely chewed paper and in the midst of the whole was a nest of young mice. The pieces were gathered up and sent to the Treasury Department, where they were turned over to Mrs. Brown, the woman expert. She placed them together with great care, and after several days' work found the claim of the farmer was correct and that all of the $275 was contained in the fragments. New bills for this amount, fresh from the bureau of engraving and printing and without a single crease or fold, were promptly forwarded to the old couple.—Washington Times.

The Democrats are running a legislature with a quorum and Beckham as Governor, at Louisville. Taylor, with less than a quorum of Republican members of the legislature, and about 300 soldiers, is holding forth at Frankfort, Taylor having called the legislature back from Loudon where he attempted to convene it a weekago. An injunction suit, seeking to prevent Taylor from interfering with Beckham as Governor has been instituted.

ST. VALENTINE'S VICTIM.

Ah! WHY do I sit on this stone,
Oh, why do I sit here alone
All the gladsome St. Valentine's day,
While the youths and the maidens are gay?

'Tis because of a maiden so fair;
Like the gossamer soft is her hair.

But she's cruel, as cruel as fair,
And she tortures my heart to despair.

Her eyes are blue as the skies,
Ah! how sweet she can look when she tries.

And she has the most exquisite hand
Of any fair maid in the land;

'Tis a hand that is whiter than snow,
And adown it the bluest veins flow.

If she knew how my bosom was torn,
How I wish I had never been born,

To my wail she would surely reply;
If she don't I shall certainly die.

So that's why I sit on this stone,
So that's why I make my sad moan,

All the gladsome St. Valentine's day,
While the youths and the maidens are gay

DID HE TALK TOO MUCH?

A STORY OF A COMIC VALENTINE.

WHEN a man receives an anonymous communication there is but one thing for him to do. Ignore it. Pay no attention to it. The human being who has not the courage or the fairness to sign his name to a communication is beneath the contempt of good men.

Certainly.

Mr. Leroy Walker had repeated these copy-board rules of conduct so often that he had come to have faith in them. He had even advised his friends in much the same terms. One of his friends, Bradbury, had received an unsigned letter, advising him that he was not a civilized being, that the people who congregated in his flat of an evening were little better than savages, and that it was an outrage for anyone to play the piano at two o'clock in the morning, as at that hour all honest men and women were supposed to be in bed.

Bradbury was very angry. He went to Walker with the anonymous letter in his trembling hand and asked: "Isn't that the most insulting thing you ever read?"

Walker behaved with admirable coolness. He smiled peacefully and remarked: "Never let anything like that worry you."

"Well, I think I know who sent it. What is your opinion of a man who would write that kind of a letter and send it to you without signing his name?"

"Bradbury, a man who would do anything like that is simply beneath contempt. You can't afford to waste any righteous indignation on such a cur. Dismiss the entire matter from your mind. Don't be foolish. If this fellow is too cowardly to sign his name, simply throw the letter into the waste-basket, and let that be the last of it."

Considering that Mr. Walker held such sensible and cool-headed views concerning anonymous insults, his subsequent conduct is not easily explained, unless it be admitted that it is easy enough to ignore an insult which is aimed at some one else.

On the morning of a certain February 14, Mr. Walker went to his breakfast at a later hour than usual. He found a letter lying beside his plate and tore it open, carelessly enough, unfolding a villainous comic valentine, printed in shrieking colors.

It was the picture of a misshapen wretch with a comical head and a large lower jaw which was fastened on in hinge fashion. There were certain lines and explosive marks to indicate that this jaw was in rapid motion. Below the picture was the following doggerel:

TO A NOISY IDIOT.

"You talk and gabble all the day,
But there's no sense in what you say.
On every subject you must spout,
You are a chump beyond a doubt."

For a moment or two Walker was shocked and benumbed by the awful impact of such an insult. He felt the surge of hot blood to his head, and in the dizziness of his wrath all the articles on the breakfast table went swinging in semi-circles. He crumpled the envelope and its contents into his pocket and sat fuming while Mrs. Walker poured the coffee.

"Who sent it?" "Who sent it?" "Who sent it?" he asked himself over and over again. He tried to fix in his memory a list of all who might be his secret enemies and to select from this list the most despicable, vindictive and unprincipled scoundrel of all. This reptile he would meet. He would; meet him and then—and then he would slap him in the face and compel him to get down on his knees and apologize, and then he (Walker) would spurn him (the wretch) with his foot and call him all the vile names which may be used in propriety by a high-minded gentleman whose feelings have been outraged.

Oh, the visions of revenge which are conjured up by a fine, feverish rage!

Walker snapped at his breakfast as if he were a caged animal, and there is no denying that he had murder in his heart. Once Mrs. Walker saw him staring emptily at the popovers and asked what was the matter. He did not reply, for he was absorbed in contemplation of a picture in which he was throttling the villain who sent the comic valentine.

After breakfast and when he was safely away from the house he took the envelope from his pocket and studied the handwriting. He did not recognize it. It was evident that the sender had disguised his penmanship, or else had the address written by some one entirely unknown to Walker.

The coward!

He looked at the valentine and reread the verse of doggerel, and it is needless to say that he discovered depths and varieties of insult not intended by the hack who wrote the lines.

HE SAW HIMSELF AS OTHERS SAW HIM.

Sitting in one corner of the car, with the valentine folded carefully, he took the lines one at a time:

"You talk and gabble all the day."

It was simply brutal. He read it again, and suddenly this question flashed into his mind: "Do I talk too much?"

He knew that the comic valentine was always supposed to touch on a ruling weakness. Could it be possible that the sender of this valentine had struck on his (Walker's) greatest failing and taken an underhand way of rebuking it?

"Nonsense! I don't talk too much," thought Walker. "But if I never talk too much, why did anyone send me this valentine? There's no point to the valentine unless I do talk too much occasionally. But I don't believe I do talk too much. I ought to know it if I make myself a nuisance by talking. Hold on here! Had I ought to know? When a man is a bore and a nuisance, does he ever suspect the fact himself? Is it possible for a man to go on, year after year, deluding himself with the belief that he is a sparkling and entertaining conversationalist, whereas everyone regards him as a pest?"

Walker was compelled to answer in the affirmative. He thought of the case of Howelby. Howelby is the laughing stock of a neighborhood. He is a persistent chatterer, an insipid story-teller, an affected and effeminate doll. Yet Howelby firmly believes that he is the most popular young man on the South side, loved by the women and envied by the men.

"If Howelby has been fooled for so long a time, isn't it possible that some of the rest of us have been fooled too?" asked Walker. "Now I notice that to company Howelby is well received and treated with consideration. After he goes away they poke unmerciful fun at him. I wonder what they say about me after I go away. I wonder if it's possible that they speak of me as a 'noisy idiot' or something like that? I wonder if I've been a bore for years and didn't know it? How would I know it unless some one came right out and told me point blank? But you don't find many people as candid as all that. There'd be no chance of my finding it out unless—well—unless some one wrote in anonymous letter or—sent a comic valentine. Come to think of it, Mrs. Walker has reproved me several times for breaking in while some one else was talking. I wonder if she—. But no, it was some one who hates me. I'll keep quiet and find out."

Walker met many acquaintances that day, and every one of them was under suspicion. Walker even made significant remarks, such as "Well, I suppose I'm a noisy chump," or "I dare say I talk too much," and then watched each face closely if he could detect the guilty flush, but he couldn't. However, he was rather sadly impressed by the fact that no one of his friends contradicted him when he said these disparaging things about himself. It was evident that whoever sent the valentine had done so with at least a measure of justification. If Walker had stopped to consider he would have known that it is never considered polite to contradict a man when he is saying mean things about himself. But he was not in a mood for fair consideration of anything. He had discovered his true character, and he held himself in contempt. Fortunately he had his pride and self-respect remaining, and he decided upon reform.

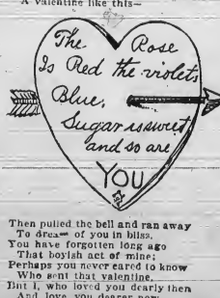
For two days he didn't speak except when he was compelled to do so, and then he talked in monosyllables. Mrs. Walker was frightened and began to fear that he was going into a decline.

On the morning of the 16th, as he was waiting at the corner for a trolley car, a barber with black ringlets came out of the shop next to the drug store and said: "How are you, Mr. Walker—how do you do, sir? Say, I got something here that belongs to you. I guess it was sent to me by mistake, or at least I judge so as far as I can make out, because your name's here, but it came addressed to me all right. I put it in my pocket and I says to myself: 'Now the first time I see Mr. Walker passin' by the shop here I'll give this to him, and probably he'll know what it means; but I was sure it wasn't for me, because I haven't bought any meat from Krasch since I had a little trouble with him about a round steak that my little girl went there and got one morning. I told Krasch in so many words that I'd never deal with him again in no way, shape, manner or form, because I allow no man to send me such meat. My money's as good as any other man's money, and—"

Walker might have heard a great deal more if the car had not come along. In the envelope which had been handed to him by the barber he found an itemized bill from Krasch, the butcher. How did this bill happen to reach the barber? Evidently it got into the wrong envelope. Then what? He saw it all in a flash. That valentine was intended for the talky barber, who had quarreled with Krasch.

"I don't talk too much, after all," thought Walker, with a feeling of infinite relief. "Pshaw! I knew it all the time."—Chicago Daily Record.

A BACHELOR'S VALENTINE.



If I were younger, Mary Jane
Would not so gayly flout me,
Or if she did I'd make it plain
She could not do without me.
She will not be my valentine.
Forsooth, the maids are plenty—
I'll venture that she would be mine
If I were one-and-twenty!

Why, forty years ago there were
A score I could have married,
And every one outfavored her;
But then, of course, I tarried
Till Ann and Joe and Sue and Boo,
And all the rest I mind me,
Dropped me because, they said, they knew
They knew not where to find me.

But as it is the Widow Black,
Thank heaven, has some reason,
And knows that mellow fruit, don't lack
In worth if out of season.
To her I'll send a billet-doux
And state my fortune clearly—
Some thousands—and admit to you—
And she will love me dearly!
—Chicago Record.

A VALENTINE.

Fair maid! When you were very small
And wore your hair in braid,
And I in jackets felt so tall
I was of girls afraid,
I slipped beneath your door one day
A valentine like this—

Then pulled the bell and ran away
To dress, of you in bliss.
You have forgotten long ago
That boyish act of mine;
Perhaps you never cared to know
Who sent that valentine.
But I, who loved you dearly then
And love you dearer now,
Forever will remember when
First Cupid came to me,
That budding love that thrilled my heart,
When I was but a boy
Has blossomed till from you apart
I cannot find a joy.
Nay, more than that. Without you I
Discover only pain,
And so to win you now I try
A valentine again.
And, O! may Cupid's magic dart
Make you this time incline
To yield to me your tender heart
And be my Valentine.

BRYAN'S PROTEST.

The Republican Policy Roundly Scored by the Champion of Democracy.

William J. Bryan is a leader of thought, and he was the first great thinker of this country to protest against imperialism and to point out its dangers to this republic.

It required a great deal of courage for a public man to oppose the trend of war enthusiasm when it was at its height, but armed with the courage of his convictions, Bryan spoke boldly and now the people are with him.

Recently, in discussing the imperialistic policy of the republican administration, Mr. Bryan said:

"In all my speeches I devoted considerable time to the subject of imperialism, and I found that the arguments against a colonial policy were well received.

"I am convinced that effort to engraft such a policy upon our form of government will alienate more republicans than have left the republican party in any previous campaign. As the purpose of republican leaders to forcibly annex the Philippine Islands becomes more apparent, the defenders of that policy become more and more bold in their repudiation of fundamental principles, and as the doctrine of force is more boldly avowed the disaffection among the republicans increases.

"When the republican party meets the speeches of Abraham Lincoln in the next campaign it will find that the gulf between Lincolnism and Hannaism is so great that the admirers of the former cannot be followers of the latter.

"If the republicans assert that an imperial policy will pay, they will be compelled to put a pecuniary value upon the lives that will be sacrificed in the purchase of the supposed advantages. If they assert that the nation is following Divine guidance in the prosecution of a war of conquest they will be compelled to show the credentials of the man through whom the Divine will has been revealed.

"If they assert that circumstances make it necessary to remain in the Philippine islands, they will be met with the reply that a republican administration has created the circumstances which are relied upon to justify the retention of the islands."

Thus clearly and cogently does the splendid logic of the democratic champion meet and overthrow the arguments of the opposition.

Thus are the people enlightened and thus is a brilliant light thrown on the dark counsels of the republican imperialists.

This kind of argument is unanswerable and the McKinley forces in the east are beginning to crumble before the sustained attacks of William J. Bryan.

Imperialism can never appeal to a majority of the liberty-loving voters of this country. On this issue alone the democrats can meet and defeat their opponents, and when there are joined to it the argument against trusts and the aggressions of the money power victory at the polls next autumn will be practically assured.—Chicago Democrat.

——The republican politicians who belong to the Hanna wing ought to stop talking about the reelection of Mr. Foraker to the United States senate. Every time they speak on the subject they only stimulate the current suspicion that they are insincere. The situation is peculiar. They dare not oppose Foraker now, and at the present moment Foraker finds it inexpedient to oppose them. Every sensible man knows that the Hannaites have their knives ready to use on Foraker if they are still in the saddle after the close of the presidential campaign of this year.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

POST THE DELEGATES.

Democratic Organizations Should Thoroughly Prepare Representatives.

Since 1896, events have so shaped themselves to the detriment of the nation and the American people, that no man can scan the principles laid down in the Chicago platform without being convinced that it is the true democratic doctrine in every detail, and that to change a single line of it would be a stultification.

It has been charged against the democratic party that it is too steadfast in its principles and that it is not a party of progress. The plain answer to that is that it never has and never will progress in such fashion that the autonomy of the nation must be destroyed to permit the aggrandizement of a special class and the ruin of the people. It desires no such progress as that contemplated by the republican party; a progress towards imperialism and the destruction of the individual citizen; a progress towards the establishment of a separate sovereignty lorded over by the president of the United States; a progress which puts in the hands of a favored class the money of the people; a progress towards industrial slavery and the apotheosis of plutocracy. Its progress is based upon the progress and welfare as well as happiness and content of the whole people, which is the only American progress.

To maintain the principles of the democratic party, it behooves all democratic organizations to see to it that every delegate to the national convention is an unwavering democrat, a democrat who was not found wanting in 1896, and who will now pledge himself to the Chicago platform and such other issues as may be forced upon the convention by the trend of events towards a policy dangerous to the freedom of the citizen and ruinous to the nation. The mass of democratic voters are unswerving in their faith to the principles set forth in the Chicago platform, and no man must be permitted to trouble that faith. It is the voice of nearly 7,000,000 of people, and to betray them is to be recreant to the greatest trust ever reposed in men.

Beware then and do not let any man deceive you by any sort of specious argument, or by any charge of bossism, but let every delegate be instructed upon the principles of the party and instructed right.

RESCUER GIVEN JUDGMENT.

David Highly, of Indiana, to Pay $1,000 to a Man Who Saved His Wife.

A singular damage suit was closed in the Howard circuit court at Windfall, Ind., the other day by the jury returning a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,000. Some time during the high waters last spring David Highly and wife were driving over the bridge across Pike creek after night when the structure gave way, precipitating the horse and buggy and Highly and his wife in the middle of the stream.

Highly by some means managed to reach the shore, but his wife was carried down stream several rods, where she luckily caught the limb of a tree that extended above the water, and cried for help. The husband ran frantically up and down the bank calling for help. Retherford and a man by the name of Miller, residing near, heard the cry of distress and rushed to the scene to learn the nature of the trouble. When they arrived Highly was offering $1,000 to anyone who would take the risk and rescue his wife.

Retherford and Miller braved the waters, and by wading and swimming reached Mrs. Highly as she still held on to the limb and brought her to the shore. Some time afterward Retherford called on Highly for the reward as offered, but he declined to pay, saying he was excited at the time of the accident and did not really mean to offer the $1,000 reward, hence the suit, with the result of a judgment for the plaintiff for the full amount of the claim.

NEARLY BURIED ALIVE.

Supposed Corpse Comes to Life When Put on Ice—Experience of Alfred Umbricht.

Alfred Umbricht, a well-known caterer in New Haven, Conn., returned the other day from New York city with a story to the effect that he came within an ace of being buried alive. He said he was taken ill with typhoid fever and moved to St. Joseph's hospital in New York in October last. He became so low that the doctors informed his young wife that there was no hope for him.

At that time, Mr. Umbricht says, he was lying in a cataleptic condition, and the doctor thought him dead, but forebore to break the news abruptly to his wife. The house surgeon, after failing to secure any signs of life by the ordinary means, concluded that he was dead and had his body taken to the ice vault, which is used as the hospital morgue.

As soon as the cold air of the apartment struck Umbricht's body it affected him perceptibly, and signs of life were discovered. The body was at once taken back to the ward and Umbricht awoke. He has been improving ever since.

PLEASED WITH ALBANY.

United States Naval Officers Like the New Cruiser Recently Completed in England.

Naval officers are agreeably surprised at the admirable showing made by the new cruiser Albany, which is being completed at the Elswick works in England. The American naval attache in London recently attended the trial trip of the ship, and in his report to the navy department says: "The performance of the engines and boilers on both days gave perfect satisfaction. I have no doubt the ship can readily make 21 knots, as the fireroom and engine-rooom force took the work easily and quietly and steam was blowing off almost continuously during the forced draft runs. So easily were the results obtained the contractors offered to show 21 knots for the forced draft runs for a bonus of $5,000. The engine-rooms and dynamo-rooms were cool and entirely comfortable. Vibration from the screws was considerable in the captain's cabin, but outside of that neither the screws nor the engines were particularly noticeable."

A WORK FOR THEM.

Dr. Talmage Preaches on the Duties of the Strong.

Responsibilities Resting Upon Those Who Possess Physical Power to Do the Lord's Work—The Value of Health.

[Copyright, 1898, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage sets forth the responsibility of those who are strong and well, as in a former discourse he preached to the disabled and "the shut in;" text, Judges, 14:1: "And Samson went down to Timnath."

There are two sides to the character of Samson. The one phase of his life, if followed into particulars, would administer to the grotesque and the mirthful. But there is a phase of his character fraught with lessons of solemn and eternal import. To these graver lessons we devote our sermon.

This giant no doubt in early life gave evidences of what he was to be. It is almost always so. There were two Napoleons—the boy Napoleon and the man Napoleon—but both alike; two Howards—the boy Howard and the man Howard—but both alike; two Samsons—the boy Samson and the man Samson—but both alike. This giant was to double the hero of the playground, and nothing could stand before his exhibitions of youthful prowess. At 18 years of age he was betrothed to the daughter of a Philistine. Going down toward Timnath, a lion came out upon him, and although this young giant was weaponless he seized the monster by the long mane and shook him as a hungry hound shakes a March hare and made his bones crack, and left him by the wayside bleeding under the smiting of his fist and the grinding heft of his heel.

There he stands looming up above other men, a mountain of flesh, his arms bunched with muscles that can lift the gate of a city, taking an attitude defiant of everything. His hair had never been cut, and it rolled down in several great plaits over his shoulders, adding to his bulk, fierceness and terror. The Philistines want to conquer him, and therefore they must find out where the secret of his strength lies.

There is an evil woman living in the valley of Sorek by the name of Delilah. They appoint her the agent in the case. The Philistines are secreted in the same building, and then Delilah goes to work and coaxes Samson to tell what is the secret of his strength. "Well," he says, "if you should take seven withes such as they fasten wild beasts with, and put them around me, I should be perfectly powerless." So she binds him with the seven green withes. Then she claps her hands and says: "They come the Philistines!" and he walks out as though there were no impediment. She coaxes him again, and says: "Now tell me the secret of this great strength!" and he replies: "If you should take some ropes that have never been used and tie me with them, I should be just like other men." She tied him with the ropes, claps her hands and shouts: "They come the Philistines!" He walks out as easily as he did before—not a single obstruction. She coaxes him again, and he says: "Now, if you should take these seven long plaits of hair and by this house loom weave them into a web, I could not get away." So the house loom is rolled up, and the shuttle flies backward and forward, and the long plaits of hair are woven into a web. Then she claps her hands and says: "They come the Philistines!" He walks out as easily as he did before, dragging a part of the loom with him.

But after awhile she persuades him to tell the truth. He says: "If you should take a razor or shears and cut off this long hair, I should be powerless and in the hands of my enemies." Samson sleeps, and that she may not wake him up during the process of shearing help is called in. You know that the barbers of the east have such a skillful way of manipulating the head to this very day that instead of waking up a sleeping man they will put a man wide awake sound asleep. I hear the blades of the shears grinding against each other, and I see the long locks falling off. The shears or razor accomplishes what green withes and new ropes and house loom could not do. Suddenly she claps her hands and says: "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson!" He rouses up with a struggle, but his strength is all gone. He is in the hands of his enemies.

I hear the groan of the giant as they take his eyes out, and then I see him staggering on in his blindness, feeling his way as he goes on toward Gaza. The prison door is open, and the giant is thrust in. He sits down and puts his hands on the mill crank, which, with exhausting horizontal motion, goes day after day, week after week, month after month—work, work, work! The consternation of the world in captivity, his locks shorn, his eyes punctured, grinding corn in Gaza!

First of all, behold in this giant of the text that physical power is not always an index of moral power. He was a huge man—the lion found it out, and the 3,000 men whom he slew found it out; yet he was the subject of petty revenges and outgunned by low passion. I am far from throwing any discredit upon physical stamina. There are those who seem to have great admiration for delicacy and sickliness of constitution. I never could see any glory in weak nerves or sick headache. Whatever effort in our day is made to make the men and women more robust should have the favor of every good citizen as well as of every Christian. Gymnastics may be positively religious.

Good people sometimes ascribe to a wicked heart what they ought to ascribe to a slow liver. The body and the soul are such near neighbors that they often catch each other's diseases. Those who never saw a sick day and who, like Hercules, show the giant in the cradle, have more to answer for than those who are the subjects of lifelong infirmities.

How often it is that you do not find physical energy indicative of spiritual power! If a clear head is worth more than one dizzy with perpetual vertigo, if muscles with the play of health in them are worth more than those drawn up in chronic "rheumatics," if an eye quick to catch passing objects is better than one with vision dim and uncertain, then God will require of us efficiency just in proportion to what He has given us. Physical energy ought to be a type of moral power. We ought to have as good digestion of truth as we have capacity to assimilate food. Our spiritual hearing ought to be as good as our physical hearing. Our spiritual taste ought to be as clear as our tongue. Samsons in body, we ought to be giants in moral power.

It is a most shameful fact that much of the business of the church and of the world must be done by those comparatively invalid. Richard Baxter, by reason of his diseases, all his days sitting in the door of his tomb, yet writing more than 100 volumes and sending out an influence for God that will endure as long as the "Saint's Everlasting Rest." Edward Payson, never knowing a well day, yet how he preached and how he wrote, helping thousands of dying souls like himself to swim in the sea of glory. And Robert McCheyne, a walking skeleton, yet you know what he did in Dundee and how he shook Scotland with zeal for God. Philip Doddridge, advised by his friends because of his illness not to enter the ministry, yet you know what he did for the "Rise and Progress of Religion" in the church of the world.

It is not the small, weak men of the day who do the damage. These small men who go swearing and loafing about your stores and shops and banking houses, assailing Christ and the Bible and the church—they do not do the damage. They have no influence. They are vermin that you crush with your foot. But it is the giants of the day, the misguided giants, giants in physical power, or giants in mental acumen, or giants in social position, or giants in wealth, who do the damage—the men with sharp pens that stab religion and throw their poison all through our literature, the men who use the power of wealth to sanction iniquity and bribe justice, and make truth and honor bow to their golden scepter. Misguided giants—look out for them! In the middle and latter part of the last century no doubt there were thousands of men in Paris and Edinburgh and London who hated God and blasphemed the name of the Almighty; but they did but little mischief—they were small men, insignificant men. Yet there were giants in those days. Who can calculate the soul havoc of a Rousseau, going on with a very enthusiasm of iniquity, with fiery imagination seizing upon all the impulsive natures of his day, or David Hume, who employed his life as a spider employs its summer, in spinning out silken webs to trap the unwary, or Voltaire, the most learned man of his day, marshaling a great host of skeptics and leading them out in the dark land of infidelity, or Gibbon, who showed an uncontrollable grudge against religion in his history of one of the most fascinating periods of the world's existence—"The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire"—a hook in which, with all the splendor of his genius, he magnified the errors of Christian disciples, while with a sparseness of notice that never can be forgiven he treated of the Christian heroes of whom the world was not worthy?

Oh, men of stout physical health, men of great mental stature, men of high social position, men of great power of any sort, I want you to understand your power, and I want you to know that that power devoted to God will be a crown on earth, to you typical of a crown in Heaven, but misguided, bedraggled in sin, administrative of evil, God will thunder against you with His condemnation in the day when millionaire and pauper, master and slave, king and subject, shall stand side by side in the judgment and money bags and judicial ermine and royal robe shall be riven with the lightnings.

You who are seated in your Christian homes, compassed by moral and religious restraints, do not realize the gulf of iniquity that bounds you on the north and the south and the east and the west. While I speak there are tens of thousands of men and women going over the awful plunge of an impure life, and while I cry to God for mercy upon their souls I cry to you to marshal in the defense of your homes, your church and your nation. There is a banqueting hall that you have never heard described. You know all about the feast of Ahasuerus, where 1,000 lords sat. You know all about Belshazzar's carousal, where the blood of the murdered king spurted into the faces of the banqueters. You know of the scene of riot and wassail where there was set before Aesopus one dish of food that cost $400,000. But I speak now of a different banqueting hall. Its roof is fretted with fire. Its floor is tessellated with fire. Its chalices are chased with fire. Its song is a song of fire. Its walls are buttresses of fire. Solomon refers to it when he says: "Her guests are in the depths of hell."

Our American communities are suffering from the gospel of free lovism which 50 years ago was preached on the platform and in some of the churches of this country. I charge upon free lovism that it has blighted innumerable homes and that it has sent innumerable souls to ruin. Free lovism is bestial; it is worse—it is infernal. It has furnished this land with many thousands of divorces annually. In one county in the state of Indiana it furnished 11 divorces in one day before dinner. It has roused up elopements north, south, east and west. You can hardly take up a paper but you read of an elopement. As far as I can understand the doctrine of free lovism, it is this—that every man ought to have somebody else's wife and every wife somebody else's husband. They do not like our Christian organization of society, and I wish they would all elope, the wretches of one sex taking the wretches of the other, and start to-morrow morning for the great Sahara desert until the simoom shall sweep seven feet of sand all over them and not one passing caravan for the next 500 years bring back one miserable bone of their carcasses! Free lovism! It is the double distilled extract of nux vomica, rattlesnake and adder's tongue. Never until society goes back to the old Bible and hears its eulogy of purity and its anathema of uncleanness—never until then will this evil be extirpated.

Behold also in this giant of the text and in the giant of our own century that great physical power must crumble and expire. The Samson of the text long ago went away. He fought one line. He fought the Philistines. He could fight anything, but death was too much for him. He may have required a longer grave, but the tomb nevertheless was his terminus.

If, then, we are to be compelled to go out of this world, where are we to go to? This body and soul must soon part. What shall be the destiny of the former I know—dust to dust. But what shall be the destiny of the latter? Shall it rise into the companionship of the white robed, whose sins Christ has slain, or will it go down among the skipping-rope who tried to gain the world and save their souls, but were swindled out of both? Blessed be God, we have a Champion. He is so styled in the Bible. A Champion who has conquered death and hell, and He is ready to fight all our battles, from the first to the last. "Who is this that cometh up from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah, mighty to save?" If we follow in the wake of that Champion, death has no power and the grave no victory. The worst pang trusting in Him shall have his sting pangs alleviated and his future illumined.

In the light of this subject I want to call your attention to a fact which may not have been rightly considered, and that is the fact that we must be brought into judgment for the employment of our physical organism. Shoulder, brain, hand, foot—we must answer in judgment for the use we have made of them. Have they been used for the elevation of society or for its depression? In proportion as our arm is strong and our step elastic will our account at last be intensified. Thousands of sermons are preached to invalids. I preach this sermon to stout men and healthful women. We must give to God an account for the right use of this physical organism. These invalids have comparatively little to account for, perhaps. They could not lift 20 pounds. They could not walk half a mile without sitting down to rest. Yet how much many of them accomplish. Rising up in judgment, standing beside the men and women who had only little physical energy, and yet consumed that energy in a conflagration of religious enthusiasm, how will we feel abashed! Oh, men of the strong arm and the stout heart, what use are you making of your physical forces? Will you be able to stand the test of that day when we must answer for the use of every talent, whether it were a physical energy, or a mental acumen, or a spiritual power?

The day approaches, and I see one who in this world was an invalid, and as she stands before the throne of God to answer she says: "I was sick all my days. I had but very little strength, but I did as well as I could in being kind to those who were more sick and more suffering." And Christ will say: "Well done, faithful servant."

And then a little child will stand before the throne, and she will say: "On earth I had a curvature of the spine, and I was very weak, and I was very ill, but I used to gather flowers out of the wildwood and bring them to my sick mother, and she was comforted when she saw the sweet flowers out of the wildwood. I did not do much, but I did something." And Christ shall say, as He takes her up in His arms and kisses her: "Well done, well done, faithful servant; enter thou in to the joy of the Lord." What, then, will be said to us, we to whom the Lord gave physical strength and continuous health? Hark, it thunders again! The judgment, the judgment!

I said to an old Scotch minister, who was one of the best friends I ever had: "Doctor, did you ever know Robert Pollock, the Scotch poet, who wrote the 'Course of Time'?" "Oh, yes," he replied, "I knew him well! I was his classmate." And then the doctor went on to tell me how that the writing of "The Course of Time" exhausted the health of Pollock, and he expired. It seems as if no man could have such a glimpse of the day for which all other days were made as Robert Pollock had and long survive that glimpse. In the description of that glimpse he says, among other things:

Begin the woe, ye woods, and tell it to the dolorous winds.
And doleful winds waft to the lowing hills.
And howling hills mourn to the dismal vales.
And dismal vales sigh to the sorrowing brooks.
And sorrowing brooks weep to the weeping stream.
And weeping stream awake the groaning deep.
Ye heavens, great archway of the universe, put sackcloth on.
And ocean, robe thyself in garb of widowhood
And gather all thy waves into a great and utter it.
Long, loud, deep, piercing, dolorous, immense.

The occasion asks it. Nature dies, and angels come to lay her in her grave.

What Robert Pollock saw in poetic dream you and I will see in positive reality—the judgment, the judgment!

The Mystery of Dust at Sea

It is a puzzling fact that the decks of sailing vessels show dust at night, even if they be washed in the morning, and no work is done during the day. This is like indigestion, which creeps on one unawares. However it comes, the only way to cure it is by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a remedy which never fails to cure dyspepsia in all its forms, as well as prevent malaria, fever and ague.

Editorial Comment.

"Poor old Jones, the grocer, died early this morning," said the village editor's better half.

"Huh!" exclaimed the local opinion molder, "he's been dead for years."

"Been dead for years!" echoed the astonished wife. "Why, what do you mean?"

"Just what I said," replied the c. o. "Any man in business who doesn't advertise is a dead one."—Chicago Evening News.

Cleanliness in the Dairy.

Cleanliness counts in no place for more than in the dairy. The milking should be done in a clean place; all vessels used should be washed morning and night in hot water with Ivory Soap, rinsed and well aired. Milk should never be kept in a cellar with vegetables, as an unpleasant taste will be imparted. Attention to these details will insure a supply of wholesome milk and butter.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Sore Hands

Red, Rough Hands, Itching, Burning Palms, and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Sore Hands 8 Years Cured.

Pain So Intense Would Nearly Twist Fingers From Sockets. Hands Puffed Up Like a Toad. Water Ran Through Bandages to Floor. Had to Walk the Floor Until Would Fall Asleep. Fingers Would Peel Like an Onion. Doctors Could Not Cure.

Eight years ago I got sore hands, commencing with a burning sensation on my fingers and on top of the hand. When I rubbed them, you could see little white pimples. I felt like twisting my fingers out of their sockets. I had high fever, and cold chills ran over me, and so I kept it going until I was tired out. Nights, I had to walk the floor until I fell asleep. My hands peeled like an onion, the finger nails got loose, and the water ran out, and wherever there was a little pimple there the burning fire was—that happened at least ten times. I am running a blacksmith shop, horseshoeing, and I would not shut up the shop for anybody, but it was hard. My hands puffed up worse than a toad. When I drove horse nails, the water from my hands ran through the bandage, on to the floor. My customers refused to look at my hand. I had a friend take me to the doctor; he gave a solution of something to bathe my hands. I went to another doctor, I think, for a year. I found your advertisement in a Union newspaper, and I got the CUTICURA remedies. As soon as I used them I began to gain, and after using a small quantity of them I was entirely cured. I would not take fifty dollars for a cake of CUTICURA SOAP if I could not get any more. I would not suffer any more as I did, for the whole country.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

Eugene Coleman, who has been visiting his father-in-law, G. M. Riley, returned to his home in St. Louis county, Mo., last Saturday.

Neighbors, don't be surprised if you see some of your fellow citizens sitting on the roof, gazing over the country with a spy glass. They are merely watching for those Germans who are going to buy the North Bend bottoms.

Hamilton.

The farmers have begun plowing. We are having some wet weather. Wheat looks nice after the last cold snap.

Jeff Williamson is staying with Robt. Allen.

John Ryle will move on to the G. M. Allen place.

J. R. Ryle is fixing to build fence and sow clover and oats.

Mrs. M. Miller joined the Methodist Church at the Springs.

The mud roads are not very pleasant to travel over just at present.

Farmers around here are fixing to put in a large crop of tobacco.

J. E. Ryle, of this place, is going to move to James Stephens' place.

Some of the farmers are talking of holding their tobacco for better prices.

Mrs Sallie Baker was the guest of Mrs. Perry Johnson, last Wednesday.

Mr Charley Hamilton and Miss Lucy Brown, of this place, were married last week.

Two Mormon preachers held meeting at the Hamilton school house, last Thursday night.

Mrs. Eliza Rich and grand daughter, have been visiting Mrs. C. E. Williams for several weeks.

There were two fishermen at the mouth of Gunpowder, Wednesday. They caught some very nice fish.

Mrs Ross Shinkle, of Petersburg, came down on the Workum, the other day, to visit her sons, Sam and Bolivar, of this place.

Misses Jennie Pearl Allen and Pearl Williams were guests of Misses Betsy and Virginia Baker, of Big Bone Springs, last week.

Mr. Moore, our huckster, passed through on his regular trip. The roads are so bad that he had to work four horses to his wagon.

Mrs. Perry Johnson has been on the sick list for a long time. She is not much better. Dr. Cowen was called but he could not come, and they sent for Dr. Bagby, of Walton.

Union.

Prof. Stephens closed his school last Tuesday.

Mrs. Fall has been seriously ill for several days.

Hemp counts, a large acreage of tobacco will be planted in this section of Boone.

Rev. Adams filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church, Saturday and Sunday.

Mr Brough, a prominent and popular educator of this and Lincoln county, has applied for the winter school in Union.

Misses Janey Davis and Sallie Belle Hicks, two accomplished and handsome young ladies, of Richwood, were calling on Miss Lou Williams, Sunday evening.

The teachers and trustees of Boone county are beginning to realize that any business they transact with supt. Voshell has to be done according to law or not at all.

Geo. Crouch, of Florence, will move to James A. Huey's farm, known as the "Williams place," and Owen Bradford who has lived there for two years will move to Florence.

Golden Grange was entertained and edified by Mr. Walcutt's lecture, Saturday evening. The members of this Grange seem earnestly endeavoring to promote Grange work.

Uncle Henry Oelsner, of Florence, has a newspaper published at Kingston, New York, in 1800, and contained the following items: Ufmvizo nigrxv lv tol Dzhs rntgim zhsvhgzpvm rm Grzwv mvtll dvmxsll Hzov.

The boys have organized a "Sucker Club," and we are informed that the first member found standing on his head eating mud out of a pond or creek without a copy of the fish law in his pocket, will be fined 10c, and committed to the care of Bro. Thos. Adams, in Burlington, for 10 days.

Lee Busby loves to walk in the woods, study zoology, commune with nature and enjoy himself as he pleases. We were at a place, recently, when the children came rushing in and gave out the idea that war was declared, but investigation proved that Lee had captured a groundhog, and had him in a pen just outside the yard. Lee is a dandy.

In the Gunpowder news, of last week, we find the Commonwealth reporter claiming there will be a new moon Feb 28th. Prof. S. A. House conducted the astronomical observations that led up to the statement that there would be no new moon during February, and our confidence is bonshaken in his knowledge of such matters, the Commonwealth "Cor." to the contrary notwithstanding.

Walton.

Miss Libbie Ingram has returned from a pleasant visit to Midway.

Mrs. E. P. Holder went to Covington, Monday, on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. N. M. Northcutt.

Mrs. B. F. Sawyer, of Florence, had a most delightful visit, last week, to her friend, Mrs. E. P. Holder.

Mrs. Fannie Harris is back from a three weeks' sojourn at her son's in Danville, Ill. She reports Ed to be in bouyant health and delighted with his new home.

Miss Lyda Percival and Ebra Vallandingham were married at the home of her mother on Tuesday, and had a nice reception at the home of the groom on Wednesday.

The following gentlemen attended the funeral of the late Gov. Goebel at Frankfort on Thursday: T. F. Curley, T. J. Crowe, Jas. W. Clark, J. D. Mayhugh, E. H. Norman, Orin Percival, Edwin Johnson, Lamme Hopkins and W. W. Dean.

The dress rehearsal at the Opera House on last Friday night, showed that the performers are well up in their parts and are more familiar with the stage business than one would be led to suppose from the short time they have been practicing. They are making great efforts to give our citizens creditable representations and success can safely be predicted. "The Toodles' and Michael Erie, will be presented Friday and Saturday nights, the 16th and 17th inst. One the essence of humor and the other of pathos. It is thought better that no mention be made of the special performers as exhibited at the rehearsal as the crucial test will be when they appear before the public. One week after these representations two more will be given on Friday and Saturday the 23d and 24th inst., when "Handy Andy" and another piece will be brought out. (The name of the last one is forgotten.)

Arthur Tanner has contracted to work for E. H. Snyder the ensuing year.

The prospect for the wheat crop is not at all flattering in this neighborhood.

Mud roads are in a very bad condition on account of the heavy rain, last week.

Perry Aylor had some valuable sheep killed, a few days since, by some worthless dogs.

Jonas Tanner, of Grant county, was visiting his father, Eli Tanner, last Saturday.

There are but few lambs, as yet. J. H. Tanner has the highest number we have heard of, 16.

Wood sawings are the order of the day. Ed Snyder was the first to have one, and there will be several to follow this week.

Mrs. Polly Rouse, after several years' stay with her daughter in Kenton Co., has moved back to her home in this neighborhood.

Arrangements have been made to divide the lands of Rachael Tanner, deceased, Wednesday, the 14th inst., among the heirs.

Rabbit Hash.

The mud roads are terribly bad.

Lucien Calvert is improving slowly.

T. N. Stephens visited T. C. S. Ryle, last Tuesday.

Willie C. Ryle has been visiting his relatives in the city, the last week.

Harry Wingate and wife visited his parents, last Saturday and Sunday.

The young set of boys have a lodge of C. M. A. They have ten members.

Mrs. William Douglas died at her home in East Bend, Feby. 8th, and was buried at the Methodist church. She leaves three daughters and a husband to mourn her loss. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community.

Florence

All persons wishing to subscribe or renew for the RECORDER, call on J. C. Buckner.

Arch Corbin and family have moved to Covington, having sold his residence here to Frank Stucky.

Miss Mary Korn opened the pay school Monday morning, the public school being out a week ago.

Mrs Green Higgins, of Independence, has returned home after a pleasant visit here to Mr. and Mrs. Glass.

Mrs. J. P. Tanner and daughter, little Miss Lena, are on a visit to Mrs. Tanner's mother, Mrs. Powers, of Verona.

While at Erlanger Saturday, we were more than glad to meet our old friend, Dr. S. S. Scott, out again, after being confined to his room all winter.

We understand the Town Council contemplates remodeling and fixing up the old Town Hall. Good move, for it is worthless as it is and an eye sore to the town.

Protracted meeting commenced Monday night at the Methodist Church. Hope the good Lord will crown the meeting with success. Prof. Fogg and wife will assist in the meeting and will be a great help as they are both fine musicians.

Monday was a very cloudy and gloomy day, but upon entering the store, who should we meet but our old friend, P. T. Fall, of Union, cracking jokes with the boys. Phillip's good humor and jokes soon drove away the gloom. Come again, P. T.

We wish to notify the county officials that if they need any jurors for Circuit Court, we have two of them—their initials are, Dad Clore and Doc Whitson, for they practice every day. They tried a case the other day against a lot of black crows, and found them guilty of lunacy for going into a man's cornfield to get corn.

We have heard of several inquiring for residences here for the summer, and it does seem to us that parties owning property here to rent, would have the property in first-class repair before they would ask any one from the city to even look at it. What we need is a few good houses in good repair and they will have no trouble to get good rent for them; but to ask big rent for old houses, out of repair is a thing of the past. Hope some of the property owners will view this in the right light and try and bring into our town some new inhabitants this spring, as we have heard of several families from the city that would like to come here for the summer, if they can get houses to suit.

Verona.

E. E. Fry, traveling salesman for the Piano Harvester Co., was home over Sunday.

Miss Letha Callahan is contemplating learning the millinery art in Cincinnati.

Our street crossings continue to improve under the management of J. G. Hudson.

Mathew Cleek, son of Frank Cleek, was seriously kicked in the side by a horse, last week.

W. H. Clore and family have moved to Zion, where he and his sons will engage in merchandising.

The League Institute is enjoying one of the greatest booms in its history. A class of eight will graduate this year.

The first five months of the public school closed Friday. An effort is being made to extend the term three months.

Alvin Smith and bride were visiting relatives and friends near here, Thursday. He married Miss Amanda Johnson, daughter of J. S. Johnson, of Erlanger. They will make Erlanger their future home.

Speaking of candidates for county offices, reminds us that there is in our midst one who would make one of the best Assessors Boone ever had. We refer to C. W. Waller, and do not know of a more capable man for that office. His Democracy is unassailed, and if he can be prevailed upon to make the race, he will have a host of friends throughout the county to support him.

Mr. Editor, if not asking too much we would like to know a thing or two:

1. Did any other State ever contest a greater majority than Taylor claims to have had?

2. Why was anyone not permitted to enter the Executive building to search for the murderer?

3. What causes an insurrection, the killing of one person, or three?

4. Did the mountaineers cause the supposed insurrection?

5. Would Taylor have gone beyond his power if he had called the troops out to drive the mountaineers home before the insurrection began?

6. What article and section of the Constitution provides that he may chase the General Assembly all over town with the militia, and protect the mountaineers, while they are able to defend themselves?

7. Why was the Legislature adjourned to the mountain counties?

8. Would it be cheaper for it to go to the mountains, or for the mountain people to go to Frankfort?

9. Why did Taylor not want the Assembly to meet before Goebel died?

10. Why did not McKinley send him troops?

11. Provided he loses his job, do you think he could secure a good position in the standing army?

Limaburg.

Mud roads are in a bad condition.

Jacob W. Rouse has made 12 gallons of molasses.

Wheat has been damaged to some extent by the freezes.

George Rouse, who was laid up with a carbuncle, is out again.

Claud Rouse is arranging to operate Everett Dixon's large sugar camp.

Henry Clore will move to his new home near Hopeful about the first of next month.

A large number of persons attended the dance given by Eddie Riggs, one night last week.

Quite a number from here attended the Beaver Christian church to hear Rev. Pack Duncan preach his farewell sermon. He will leave lu, a few days, for Palestine, to be gone about 3 months.

C. L Griffith passed through here Thursday with three large loads of tobacco, sold to Mr. Orr, of Warsaw. B. F. Sleet, George Fullilove and Thomas Finnell, also delivered their crops to the same party, Saturday. Price, 8 and 5 cents.

T. B. Roberts' house came near being consumed by fire last Monday morning. The fire had got under good headway before it was discovered, but by the assistance of some neighbors, Mr. Roberts succeeded in saving his home.

Our public school, under the management of Miss Betty Dolph, closed last Friday, with an entertainment consisting of recitations, dialogues, &c. Long before the time appointed for beginning the house was packed with patrons and friends. To say the pupils did splendidly is putting it in a mild way. It is an old saying that a teacher can't please every body, but if their is a man, woman or child in this district, who was not pleased with the school as taught by Miss Betty, they are yet to be heard from.

Hebron.

Mr. Ab Quick is quite poorly at this writing.

Mrs. Maria Dye has been quite sick for several days.

Miss Hattie Clayton began a spring school here Monday.

Benjamin Patrick, of Hartwell, O., was visiting relatives in this vicinity, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoffman, of Petersburg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Clore, Sunday.

Boys, get your horns and tin-pans ready. Madam rumor says we are to have several weddings soon.

We are glad to see Mr. Jordon Beall out again. He has been confined to his room for some time.

The Christian Endeavor Social met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bullock, Saturday night.

Morgan Helm had the misfortune to cut his finger severely with a chisel, Saturday, while working for William Lewis Aylor.

The Hebron school closed last Friday night with an entertainment. Quite a large crowd was present and witnessed the exercises.

B. F. Crisler, of Loug Branch, was in town this morning. He rode a cornstalk horse, on account of the very bad condition of the roads. He says the weather is playing havoc with the growing wheat, and he predicts that new threshing machines will be needed to hull out the crop next summer.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that was ever made is Dr. Klug's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c at W. F. McKim's, Burlington, M. J. Crouch's, Union, and J. G. Oelsner's, Florence."

A Woman Only Knows

what suffering from falling of the womb, whites, painful or irregular menses, or any disease of the distinctly feminine organs is. A man may sympathize or pity but he can not know the agonies she goes through—the terrible suffering, so patiently borne, which robs her of beauty, hope and happiness. Yet this suffering really is needless.

McELREE'S

will banish it. This medicine cures all "female diseases" quickly and permanently. It does away with humiliating physical examinations. The treatment may be taken at home. There is not continual expense and trouble. The sufferer is cured and stays cured.

Wine of Cardui is becoming the leading remedy for all troubles of this class. It costs but $1 from any druggist.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, the "Ladies Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

MRS. C. J. WEST, Nashville, Tenn., writes:—"This wonderful medicine ought to be in every house where there are girls and women."

We are in receipt of a letter from K. M. Gitt, who was a compositor in this office at one time. He writes from San Francisco, California, and sends an extract from the Examiner, of that city, giving Mr. Taylor an awful ripping up the back for his recent action in matters pertaining to State affairs.

Those who expect to be candidates for county offices at the next election, are beginning to make their political aspirations known to their friends. It appears the races for county clerk and sheriff will be a triangular fight, at least, but there may by others before the entry book closes. There is no question but what there will be a field full of candidates when the race is on.

Mrs. Mary Fullilove, 74, a pioneer resident of this county, died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. T. German, of Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, whom she was visiting. Deceased was well known and highly respected and had hosts of friends. She leaves three sons and one daughter to mourn her demise. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. H. Davis at Richwood church yesterday at 12 m.

LAI! KAN! WEN!
Come. See. Hear.

There will be a lecture on the Manners and Customs of the Chinese, illustrated by about seventy magic lantern pictures, in the Burlington Presbyterian church, at 7 o'clock Monday evening, February 19th, by Rev. J. W. Davis, D. D., of Soochow, China. As the pictures are thrown upon the screen, Dr. Davis will describe the scenes represented and enliven his description with many anecdotes drawn from personal observation and experience. He went to China in 1873, and has spent a quarter of a century in that far off land. He will set forth the Chinese as they are at home. Their boats, carts, wheel-barrows, jinrickshas, mule-litters and sedan-chairs; their city walls and towns, pagodas, houses, pleasure gardens, canals and bridges, temples and idols; their rattle male and female, their mandarins coolies, carpenters and beggars, rope-makers, fortune-tellers, traveling kitchens, teapickers and opium-smokers—will all be exhibited in a stream of ever-changing pictures and lively descriptions. These pictures are photographs taken on the spot from life and give an accurate view of the actual condition of China's millions. Admission free. A collection will be taken up at the close of the lecture.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. M. J. Hoover has been quite ill for several days

Mrs. Kirkpatrick has had a new roof put on her residence.

Atty. Tolin made a business trip to Walton, last Thursday.

W. J. Rice and wife visited W. L. Aylor and wife, Sunday.

James Burns, of Utzinger, was among the visitors to town Monday.

Several of the ladies went to the city Wednesday night to attend the theater.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck entertained the euchre club, last Friday evening.

Mrs. H. W. Blyth, of Petersburg, came up Sunday to attend services at her church.

F. P. Walton and wife, of Utzinger, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Blyth, Sunday.

Mrs. B. C. Surface, of Gunpowder, presented our Union correspondent with an orange that grew on a tree she has grown. It is not very large, but has all the attributes of the regulation orange, except size.

Our Union correspondent has been in town for several days, pursuing his vocation. Burlington air and diet appear to agree with him, and if he were to remain here a few months he would become uncomfortably corpulent.

Rubbed Sand in the Tiger's Eyes.

Dr. Davis, the missionary from China, who will lecture on next Monday night in the Presbyterian church of Burlington on Chinese manners and customs tells the following tiger story. A few years ago a little Chinese boy about nine years old was walking along a path in a mountain region in the northern part of the province of Quangtong (Canton). The child was about as large as a six year old American boy and, as we shall see, not lacking in grit. In that region there are many tigers that range at night over a wide area. The country people are frequently engaged in village feuds and clan fights and have plenty of firearms. Gunpowder, you remember, was in use in China centuries before it was known in Europe. But the tigers are not exterminated and when they prowl about through the land it is wise to keep pigs and small children out of the woods. As the little hero of my story was passing along the lonely narrow path a tiger suddenly sprang upon him, knocked him down with one paw, and, seizing him as a cat would seize a mouse, trotted off with him. As the little boy's feet dangled down on one side of the tiger and his hands on the other they occasionally touched the bushes, grass and earth. The child with great presence of mind, grasped a handful of wet sandy earth and bringing it forward rubbed it vigorously into the eyes of "Mr. Stripes," who at once dropped his burden and proceeded to diligently wash his face as a cat does, licking his paws and rubbing carefully till his eyes were clean. The little boy was badly bitten and unable to run away, and soon found himself again moving along as before, carried in the jaws of his terrible assailant. But, encouraged by his former success and now desperate with fear, he scooped up a bigger handful of grit and with all his might again rubbed it into the tiger's eyes. He rubbed so fast and so hard that the tiger's pain soon became unendurable. He dropped the boy and was kept so busy cleaning the sand out of his eyes that he did not come back. The friends of the child found him severely but not mortally hurt and carried him to the hospital kept by the English Presbyterian Missionary, Dr. McPhun who nursed him tenderly till his wounds were cured.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Much is being said on the century question, and bright minds seem to widely diverge in considering this subject. Editors, preachers, lawyers, and intelligent men in the private walks of life, together with Pope Leo, are advocating the 20th century theory. To my mind all this difference of opinion has its origin in this one thought. When, in the Christian Era, did men begin to reckon time by years? Was it in the beginning of the year one, or was it at the completion of A. D. 1? Suppose that the Christian Era began January 1st; then January 1st as the beginning of the year one, and those living at that time, in affixing the date to any document have written it, January the 1st, A. D. 1. If not, they would itten A. D.—what? Hence, nd of the year 10 a decade pleted. At the end of the century century, the end of the century ock which and Chinese Coins.

For centuries the Chinese coined neither gold nor silver. They used both these metals as money, but it was always by weight. There were no coins except those made of copper, and they are still used. As it takes about a thousand copper "cash" to equal one silver dollar, and the weight of the copper is six pounds, this money is not easily handled. The Mexican dollar is made of pure silver and in places near the ocean the Chinese readily accept it. During the past ten years the more intelligent officials recognizing the convenience of the silver coins, have been making money of this metal. They imported machinery from England and have mints in various parts of the Empire. These mints are under control of reliable Englishmen who see to it that there is not too much alloy used. The Chinese, if left to their own devices, would debase the coinage to the utmost extent of their opportunities. The new Chinese silver coins, with their quaint hieroglyphic inscriptions and barbaric dragon images, a convoluted mass of scales and claws and teeth and horns, are objects of curiosity. It is popularly supposed that the Chinese are slow to adopt the methods of western civilization, but in all matters of business a Chinaman needs to see a trick but once to enable him to adopt it. Few readers of the RECORDER understand what coin-sweating is, but many of the Chinese are too well acquainted with the process which is briefly this: The coins are placed in a bath of aqua-regis, a powerful acid, which, if allowed to act long enough, would dissolve the metal entirely. But with refined cunning the Chinaman keeps a coin in aqua-regis a short time only, allowing the acid to eat off a small part of the metal so that the money may be again put into circulation as if it were of full weight. By this method while each coin is robbed of but little silver the aggregate amounts to a great deal. The result of this sweating is that the surface of the coin is slightly pitted as is the face of a man who has had the small-pox. A lot of these silver coins, new and sound, may be seen at the store of Mr. Dudley Rouse, Burlington, Ky. They are in three denominations and can be bought for their face value—one dollar, twenty cents, ten cents, respectively.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham, of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1 Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsner, Florence.

There will be a lecture on the Chinese Language in the Burlington Presbyterian church, at half past 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon, by Rev. J. W. Davis, D. D. This lecture is the result of years of study and research and will be illustrated by hundreds of Chinese charts written on large sheets of paper. It is popularly supposed that the complicated hieroglyhs used by the Chinese in their books are so difficult that it is well-nigh impossible for an American to learn them. The nature of the characters will be exhibited in an analytic manner and the way in which they are built up clearly shown. Admission free.

Seventy years ago about now, Mrs. Sallie Goodridge, mother of Mrs. G. T. Gaines, went to Cincinnati, from her home near here, on horseback, carrying with her 20 yards of homespun flannel for which she got 75 cents a yard. Her sister accompanied her taking a lot of blue jeans which she sold at $1 per yard. Mrs Goodridge will be 90 years old next June, and is remarkably spry and healthy for a person of that great age.

The greatest dangers from colds and lagrippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one evening," says Wesley Nelson, of Hamilton, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith in any medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it according to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

The lowest point of land on the American continent is the grand divide in Nicaragua, where the elevation is only 146 feet. The lowest point of land on the isthmus of Panama, according to the report of the canal commission, is Culebra, which is 333 feet above tide water, and is now the scene of active work by the Panama Canal Co.

Delagoa Bay, around which so much interest is just now centered, is the finest harbor in South Africa, and practically the key to the Transvaal. Its value to England, therefore, if they could number it among their possessions will be readily understood, for it would enable them to cut off the supply of Boer war stores which the Portuguese are allowing to pass through Lourenzo Marques.

There is a submerged forest on the Columbia river between The Dalles and the Cascade mountains. The submergence took place 250 years ago, and since then the roots have been under water, while the upper parts of the trunks have been bared yearly at low water. The bark is gone, and the wood is partly wasted away, but some of it is firm and looks fresh. This fact seems owing to the durable quality of the wood, that species, namely, the pseudotsugn douglassi.

The crops of 1899 have not broken the record, but have approached it closely. The wheat crop was 547,303,846 bushels; barley, 73,351,563 bushels; rye, 23,961,741 bushels, buckwheat, 11,094,473 bushels; potatoes, 228,783,259 bushels; hay, 56,653,756 tons. The average farm prices reported were: Wheat, 58.4 cents; corn, 30.3 cents; oats, 24.9 cents. The figures of production, though exceeded once or twice before, are enormous, and show what a continent we possess.

Lieut. James Munro, 4th cavalry, is now famous for having successfully worked a gigantic "bluff" on Gen. Conon and his garrison of 800 men at Bayombong, in the Philippines, when he secured the surrender of this town and garrison with but 50 men behind him, November 28. He is not much over five feet four inches in height. He is about 26 years of age. He comes of Scotch parents, who reside near Lake City, Minn., and are thrifty and good citizens. He won his West Point spurs by his own exertions.

Carbonic acid gas, says a medical authority, has the singular property of lessening the sense of hunger, and may probably be remembered in dealing with cases of diabetes. The seat of hunger is found in the solar plexus. By the use of water charged with carbonic acid gas the branches of the solar plexus distributed through the mucous membrane of the stomach are influenced in such a way that the abnormal irritation of the plexus which is the foundation for the ravenous hunger often present in diabetes and certain forms of indigestion may be greatly mitigated, if not appeased.

Col. Michener recalls a remarkable combination which appeared in the United States court of Indiana some years ago. Walter Q. Gresham, the presiding judge, afterward became secretary of state. Benjamin Harrison, who prosecuted the case, afterward became president of the United States, while Thos. A. Hendricks, afterward vice president, Joseph E. McDonald and David Turpie, who afterwards became senators, were on the other side. That group, for distinction, was probably never surpassed in a single state; one president, one vice president, a secretary of state and two senators.

At the suggestion of Gen. Otis, military commander of the Philippine islands, the quartermaster's department of the army has adopted the full khaki uniform. This includes even the shirt. The wily Filipino has found the blue shirt of Uncle Sam's boys such a good target that the change will be made as quickly as possible. At the breaking out of the American-Spanish war the khaki cloth was not manufactured in America, but now American weavers can turn out as good, if not better, than the best made by European weavers.

AFFAIRS IN SAMOA.

Agreement to Divide Up the Island Has Caused but Little Real Trouble Among the Natives.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—Samoan advices received by the steamer Alameda are to the effect that the agreement between the three powers as to the division of the Samoan group has caused but little real trouble, though the Mulietoa and Matuafa factions were somewhat discontented, the Matuafans blaming the Mulietoans for causing the trouble which brought this about and vice versa.

Reports have been received in Apia that at Aana and Savaii, the followers of Matuafa, chagrined at the news of the divisions of the islands, resolved that the Mulietoan adherents who had returned to their homes must be driven out of this district. A large force of Matuafan men attacked the homes of the Mulietoans, routed the residents out and set fire to the buildings, and later drove the inhabitants to Saliemoa.

BURGLAR FATALLY SHOT.

He and Three Others Were Attempting to Rob a Safe in the Store of Higby & Sons, Higby's Station.

Chillicothe, O., Feb. 10.—A burglar named John Schumacher, giving his home as Lima, O., was fatally shot at Higby's station at 3 o'clock Friday morning while he and three others were attempting to rob the safe in the store of Higby & Son. The burglars were surprised by Charles Higby, merchant, and Charles McCoppin, Norfolk Western telegraph operator. They fired on the robbers, wounding one. The other three escaped.

It was later ascertained that the wounded man's name is John Johnson, who was released from the Ohio penitentiary January 20, having been sentenced from Fayette county.

DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

Four Coaches Wrecked and Only Two Persons Injured, Neither One of Them Fatally.

Nestoria, Mich., Feb. 10.—A special Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic train, made up at Marquette for the copper country, left the track just as it was entering the station here and four coaches went down a 15-foot embankment. Of the 40 passengers in the cars all but two miraculously escaped unhurt. The injured, neither of whom will die, are Mrs. Raymond, Negaunee and Traveling Engineer William Greene, Marquette.

The train was just entering the station and was going very slowly when the accident occurred or the loss of life would have been appalling.

Death of Gen. John R. Lewis.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Gen. John R. Lewis, one of the best known men in G. A. R. and army circles, died suddenly in this city. At the outbreak of the civil war Gen. Lewis mustered a company of men known as the Fifth Vermont volunteers and was commissioned captain. He was sent south and rose to the rank of brevet brigadier general. He took part in the battle of the Wilderness, where he lost an arm.

Lone Robber Shot and Killed.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—A lone robber, well dressed with money in his pockets, and a ribbed silk mask to cover up his features, was shot and killed in C. H. Woerner's park pavilion, 1859 West Madison street, by Frank Baruna, an Oak Park lawyer, and Edward Sommerfeldt, the berkeeper.

Has Aguinaldo Escaped?

Washington, Feb. 10.—The war department believes that Aguinaldo has escaped from the island of Luzon. The department officials would not be surprised to hear from him next as in London or Paris in company with Agoncillo.

Collieries Closed Down.

Shamokin, Pa., Feb. 10.—Four thousand men and boys were thrown out of work by the collieries of the Mineral and United Coal Cos. being closed down owing to scarcity of cars. It is expected that work will be resumed some time next week.

Planning Rural Delivery.

Plymouth, Ind., Feb. 10.—Two rural delivery routes have been planned in this county, each covering about 27 miles, and Congressman Brick has given assurances that free delivery will soon be established.

PIO DEL PILAR DEAD.

Leaders Disband His Army, Which is Wandering in the Hills.

Rebels in Albay, Province of Luzon, Have Adopted Harassing Tactics Against Towns Which Americans Have Garrisoned.

Manila, Feb. 12.—11 a. m.—A number of ex-insurgent officials arrived here yesterday. They state that Gen. Pio Del Pilar, the insurgent leader, died of fever a fortnight ago in the Morong mountains.

The leaders, after his death, held a meeting, and, seeing it would be futile to offer further resistance to the Americans, they therefore disbanded their forces, which are now wandering in small gangs in the hills.

Manila, Feb. 12.—Guerrilla warfare continues south of Manila. Two attempts have been made to ambush the Americans. Col. Schwan, while returning to Manila with his staff and an escort of 100 cavalry from Batangas, was attacked by the insurgents. The latter were dispersed, but the Americans had five men wounded.

Lieut. Col. Bennett, with six companies of the 43d infantry, had two hours' fight with Gen. Pio del Pilar's command, which attempted to ambush the Americans along the trail through Morong province, near the lake. Here also the insurgents were dispersed, but the Americans had several wounded, among them a captain.

Gen. Bell is operating southward through Zmabales province with a small force. He will soon take two regiments and a battery through the provinces of North Camarines and South Camarines, going there on transports. Many insurgents retreated to that part of the island from Cavite and Batangas provinces.

Another expedition will soon start to garrison towns along the north coast of the island of Mindanao.

It is reported that the insurgent Gen. Mejandro has recovered from his wound and has assembled a large force in that district.

Of late the insurgents in Albay, Province of Luzon, have adopted harrassing tactics against the towns which the Americans have garrisoned. They camp in the hills and maintain a constant fire upon the American outposts. When the troops sally against them, they scatter, returning when the Americans retire. They shoot burning arrows, and have thus burned a large part of the town of Albay. Indeed, most of the larger towns in that province are practically deserted, except by the garrisons. Scarcely any of the inhabitants return to their homes. They are camping in the interior, and it is supposed armed insurgents prevent them going back. It is reported that there is much suffering among them owing to lack of food. As a result of these conditions, the hemp business in that section is seriously hindered and ships going for cargoes are compelled to take gangs of Coolies to do their loading. Hemp held in the interior is quite inaccessible.

The plauge continues. Eight cases were reported last week among the natives and Chinese. There is no excitement, however, and business and social life are undisturbed. Smallpox, however, is prevalent among the natives along the railroad, and in the towns on the northern coast. Two officers of the 36th infantry have died of the disease and another officer and several soldiers have been stricken.

Four Men Fatally Wounded.

Caney, Kas., Feb. 12.—Four men were perhaps fatally wounded at a dance five miles from Caney in Oklahoma territory. "Bob" and Carl Thomson attacked Joseph and James Mickles and Frank Wise with knives inflicting ugly wounds. Len Cushman interfered and Bob Thomson felled him with a blow on the head from his revolver. All four are in a critical condition. A posse is pursuing the Thomsons.

Oldest Newspaper Man Dead.

Anaconda, Mont., Feb. 10.—Beriah Brown, probably the oldest newspaper man in the west, died here, aged 84 years. Mr. Brown was born in New York state. He was an intimate friend of Horace Greeley. For half a century he was engaged in newspaper work on the Pacific coast. He was the founder of the Democratic Press of San Francisco, which afterwards became the Examiner.

Incorporated at $3,000,000.

Columbus, O., Feb. 10.—The Morgan Engineering Co. filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is placed at $3,000,000, half of which is to be preferred. The company is to manufacture and deal in hydraulic, electric, pneumatic, gas and fire machinery, including guns and ordnance. The headquarters are to be at Alliance.

Lightweight Prize Fight.

New York, Feb. 10.—Joe Gans, the Baltimore lightweight pugilist, gained a well earned decision over Spike Sullivan, of Boston, in the 14th round of a bout at the lightweight limit before the Broadway Athletic club.

Lynching in Texas.

Port Arthur, Tex., Feb. 12.—James Sweeny, white, was lynched at 1 o'clock this morning. Sweeny was a cotton screwman foreman, and had killed Charles Crumbach, a fellow laborer, by jamming a bayonet through his neck, the outcome of a saloon quarrel.

Death of an Old Indian Chief.

Perry, O. T., Feb. 12.—Bear Chief, the oldest chief of Pe-Ta-How-E-Rat band of Pawnee Indians, is dead. He was one of the most intellectual men of his tribe

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN CUBA.

The Number Has Increased From 200 to 2,500 Within the Last Six Weeks—Attendance 100,000.

Havana, Feb. 11.—Alexis Frye, superintendent of Cuban schools, in his report to the governor general upon the development of the school system since the work of reorganization began six weeks ago, says that the whole country seems on fire with enthusiasm for an education. The public feeling exceeds all he had ventured to hope for. Six weeks ago there existed in the island less than 200 schools, all based on the old Spanish foundations, with the exception of a few that had been established more than a year before in Santiago by Gen. Wood. There are now 2,058 schools in the island, of which 201 are in Havana city, 152 in Matanzas city, and 170 in Porto Principe city.

Thus far reports have been received from 97 municipalities, and there are 34 others to be heard from, which will probably increase the number of schools by 400. The schools that have already reported show an aggregate attendance of more than 100,000 pupils, and Dr. Frye believes that this attendance will be increased to 150,000 before June 1.

SYMPATHIZE WITH THE BOERS.

A Resolution to That Effect Passes the Senate—The Vote Will Be Reconsidered.

Washington, Feb. 11.—At the opening of the senate Saturday Mr. Allen presented the following:

"That the United States of America extends its sympathy to the people of the South African republic in their heroic struggle for liberty and popular government, and believes it to be the duty of the government of the United States to offer mediation to the end that further bloodshed may be averted and an honorable peace may be concluded between the belligerent governments."

No objection was made to the consideration of the resolution, only about a dozen senators being present. Before anybody realized what was going on, the resolution was put to a vote and declared adopted.

Mr. Pettus (Ala.), addressing the chair, demanded the yeas and nays.

To this Mr. Allen objected, as the resolution had been adopted.

The chair agreed to this point. Pat asked Mr. Allen that he permit the vote to be reconsidered and let the resolution go over. To this Mr. Allen consented.

To Centralize Their Plants

Pittsburgh, Feb. 11.—Negotiations are in progress for the purchase of 100 acres of land on the Ohio river, a mile below Steubenville, O., by the American Ax and Tool Co., the purpose being to centralize the many widely scattered plants of the company in that section. The largest plants of the company are at Beaver Falls, Pa.; Milvale, Pa.; Albany, N. Y.; Portland, Me., and East Douglass, Mass. It is also stated that the headquarters will be moved from New York to Pittsburgh as soon as the centralization of the various plants is completed.

Charred Remains Found.

Escanaba, Mich., Feb. 11.—The charred remains of what are supposed to have been the bodies of nine of the victims of the Chicago & Northwestern wreck, which occurred at Ford river switch, have been brought to this city and placed in the morgue. All but two of them were positively identified by the coroner's jury. These, with the body of Sam O. Green, of Negaunee, which was the first to be recovered, make a total of ten lives lost in the wreck.

Too Many Convicts.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 11.—Warden S. A. Hawk, of the state penitentiary, is in a quandary as what to do with his prisoners. The prison will only accommodate 700, there are within its walls 889, and nine were received from Putnam county Friday. In addition to these there will be 29 government prisoners sent to the institution from Washington, D. C., whose sentences range from 20 to 37 years.

Burrow Not Insane.

New York, Feb. 11.—Warden Johnson, of Sing Sing, said Saturday that George B. Barrow, who last June was sentenced to fourteen years and ten months in state prison for participating in the kidnaping of Marion Clarke, is not insane as has been reported. Barrow, who has been ill, was much better Saturday, and will not be removed to an asylum.

His Skin Turning White.

St. Louis, Feb. 11.—James Tyler, a Negro in the St. Louis jail, is gradually turning white. The discovery was made by Dr. Kearney, who vaccinated the prisoners. He says that Tyler is afflicted with a peculiar and rare disease, and that in four years his skin will turn from its present coal black color to white. The change is attributed to microbes feeding on the pigment of the skin.

Followed His Partner's Example.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 12.—William Metcalf, aged 51, a well known printer and publisher, committed suicide by shooting. For years he was the partner of Clark W. Bryan, the paper trade journalist, who shot himself dead two years ago.

Death of Benton C. Boone.

Clinton, Mo., Feb. 12.—Benton C. Boone, attorney general of the state in 1884 and formerly a member of the legislature, died at his home here of heart disease. He was born in 1834 in Calloway county, Missouri.

BOERS GAIN POINTS.

Successful in Several Encounters With the British Forces.

The Boers Have Secured an Important Position South of the Tugela—The Theory of an Elaborate Feint Has Been Exploded.

Rensburg, Feb. 10.—The Boers outflanked the British here yesterday. A considerable force of the enemy was threatening the British communications between Rensburg and Slingersfontein, 12 miles away, and during a reconnoissance by some Inniskillings and 20 Australians from Slingersfontein the Boers were discovered attempting to get a gun in position to shell the British camp.

The Australians, having come into very close contact with the enemy, took cover under a hill about 9,000 yards from the camp. Thereupon the Boers took up a position with a view of preventing their retirement. Some burghers got within 200 yards of the Australians and called upon them to surrender. They replied by fixing bayonets and shouting defiance.

Sergt. Edwards and two men made a dash, galloping under a hot fire, passed a number of hills held by the Boers, took word that the Australians were safe and confident of holding the enemy at bay and of getting out after dark, which eventually they did.

The Inniskillings prevented the enemy getting their guns in position. The Australians lost one man killed and three wounded.

The convoys have been successfully gotten to Slingersfontein, the British escorts having several brushes with parties of from 20 to 30 Boers infesting the region. Lieut. Col. Pope, with a section of artillery and 150 horses, got one large convoy through by shelling the enemy out of the road.

"The Boers also outflanked us on the west, placed a gun in position at Bastards Nek and fired on one of our outposts, driving off 1,000 sheep.

In Wednesday's brush two correspondents, Mr. Hales, of the London Daily News, and Mr. Lambie, of the Melbourne Age, fell behind. Mr. Hales, who was slightly wounded, was captured by the Boers, and Mr. Lambie was killed. The British took two prisoners.

Out of a patrol from the dufontein, under Capt. Hamilton, composed of eight Tasmanians and eight of Gen. French's scouts, only two Tasmanians and two scouts returned. The others were captured by the Boers.

To-day the Boers shelled the British camp, but with little effect.

Modder River, Feb. 10.—Apparently the Boers have brought all their big guns from Mafeking to shell Kimberley.

Our naval guns shelled Magersfontein today, but the Boer guns were silent. It is supposed that the enemy have withdrawn their artillery. They are blowing up the permanent way beyond Morton Siding.

The Boers still man their trenches, but their numbers are apparently reduced. The bulk of their force has gone to Kimberley or toward our flank.

The Highlanders returned last night. Before returning they found the bodies of 12 Boers. They believe the losses of the enemy were heavier than those of the British, because it is known that, in addition to the dead Boers found, several had been buried.

Lord Roberts is here. Upon appearing before the troops Friday he was enthusiastically cheered. He visited the camp of the Highland brigade this morning and complimented Gen. MacDonald and his men on the steady conduct at Koodoosberg drift.

London, Feb. 12.—The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing Sunday, says:

"The Boers have occupied Bloy's farm, south of the Tugela, which is under an hour's ride from Chieveley and have turned the homestead into a hospital.

"On the farm are hills commanding both bridges over the Tugela, as well as Forts Wylie and Molyneux, and from which a view of Bulwana and Ladysmith is obtainable.

"There is much apprehension here regarding the Boer movements, and the authorities are on the alert."

The latest dispatches from the front showing the real reasons for Gen. Buller's retirement, and his intention to try again, quite destroy the comforting and ingenious theory that the movement was an elaborate feint to facilitate the main advance of Lord Roberts, a theory which obtained acceptance largely because of Mr. Balfour's misleading statement to parliament. These seemingly useless reticences and prevarications on the part of the government and the war office are beginning to be criticised severely.

Durban, Feb. 12.—It is rumored here that Gen. Joubert is marching with a column of 6,000 men to outflank Gen. Buller.

Frere Camp, Feb. 12.—All is quiet here. The British troops are resting and the Boers are inactive.

Bad Outlook for the Gate City.

New York, Feb. 12.—The sea is growing rougher, and the Gate City is still fast aground off East Moriches, L. I., where she struck on Thursday night. The outlook is considered bad now. Sixteen men of the crew were brought ashore so as to make the work of taking off the remainder in case of immediate danger as easy as possible. The men landed in the breeches buoy. Capt. Georgones, of the Gate City, and 20 of his men remain on board assisting the wreckers in the endeavor to float the vessel.

A LESSON IN COURTESY.

Kent Rebuke Given a Haughty Woman by a Man in Working Clothes.

One afternoon a stylishly dressed woman boarded an Illinois Central train at Forty-seventh street. She sat down in the only vacant seat, beside a young workman, who was reading a book. The man were blue overalls and carried a dinner pail. The woman drew herself together superciliously and elevated her eyebrows. In getting her ticket she dropped her purse, and the young fellow picked it up and offered it to her politely. She took it, without a word of thanks. All the way up town she fidgeted and behaved so unpleasantly that the attention of the other passengers in the car was attracted to the little drama.

When the train stopped at Randolph street the woman, in crowding past, knocked the book from the workman's hands.

"I beg your pardon," she condescended.

"Not at all, ma'am," responded the young fellow, cheerfully. "It's quite in keeping with the rest of your conduct."

And everybody thought it served her right.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"I know that," replied Mr. Blair, calmly, and leading to me."—Chicago Chronicle.

HE REFUSED TO SIGN.

Leading Kentucky Republicans Held a Conference in Frankfort Saturday.

Gov. Taylor Issued a Proclamation Reconvening the General Assembly at Frankfort.

Troops Ordered Home—Only a Few Companies Remain to Guard the Capitol—Courts Will Now Settle Controversy.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—Nearly every republican county committeeman came to Frankfort Saturday on the early morning train and also a large number of republican leaders from all parts of the state. Several republican members of the legislature were among the number, including Senators Kirk and Johnson and Representative Lewis. Shortly before 11 o'clock the doors of the capitol were opened, and the state delegations went up to the assembly room, the first time it has been opened since the shooting of Senator Goebel. The republican chairman and members of the legislature refused absolutely to talk in regard to the objects of their visit.

The assembly discussed two propositions—one that the governor sign the agreement and the other that he refuse to sign and "let the law take its course."

Judge George Denay, of Lexington, was elected chairman of the conference meeting and was loudly applauded. He declared Taylor was elected governor by the voters and should not be forced to give up.

A. M. J. Cochran, of Maysville, was the first one to come out of the conference, but he would say nothing as to what was going on inside.

There was evidently much enthusiasm in the conference. Nearly every time the door was opened cheers were heard from the outside.

Gov. Taylor has definitely decided that he will not sign the Louisville agreement. He made the declaration at 1:15 o'clock as he came from the legislative hall, in which he had all morning been in conference with the republican committeemen. He has decided to allow the matter to be settled in the courts, and will abide by their decision.

The legislature will be allowed to meet in the capitol building Monday and will continue its work without further interruption. Immediately after Gov. Taylor came from the hall orders were issued to the troops to go to their homes and Col. Williams at once sent messages ordering cars to be prepared for their transportation.

The meeting was a long and excited one, opinion from the first being against signing any agreement with the democrats which might in any way be construed as a surrender of the republicans. The feeling was also general that it was needless to keep up the fight as it had been conducted during the last two weeks. It was then decided to allow the legislature to come back on Monday, to discontinue the sessions at London, and allow matters to be settled by the legal tribunals. There is no doubt what the decision of the courts and legislature will be, as both of them have already gone on record as favoring the Goebel side of the controversy.

The following resolution was passed by the meeting:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that Gov. Taylor should not sign the agreement referred him by the Louisville conference, and that regarding confidence in his integrity and sense of duty, we are content to follow his leadership after that refusal."

The resolution was passed after Gov. Taylor had left the hall and was adopted with ringing cheers. A small detachment of troops will be left around the capitol building to preserve order.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—Saturday afternoon Gov. Taylor issued the following proclamation:

"The excitement recently prevailing in this city having to some extent subsided, and there appearing now to be no necessity for the general assembly to remain in session in London, I do hereby, this proclamation, reconvene same in Frankfort, Ky., on February 12, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon.

"W. S. TAYLOR,

"Governor of Kentucky."

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 11.—The executive and legislative headquarters of the democratic state government have been established in Louisville, and the leaders assert they will be maintained here as long as necessary. The legislature has resumed its regular work, with a quorum in each house and Beckham, the democratic governor, in lieu of an executive mansion, has taken up his abode at Seelbach's hotel, surrounded by his political advisers. Most notable among these is, by force of circumstances, Gen. John B. Castleman, the adjutant general. Upon him will devolve the duty of carrying out Beckham's purpose to protect his associates from armed interference, whether it comes from Frankfort or London, or both. Little can be learned of these defensive plans. Gen. Castleman declared no steps have been taken toward organizing a military force.

"The only purpose of the proposed military organization," said he, "is to maintain peace, and so long as there is no disturbance and civil authority rules, there will be no need for the use of military force."

The democratic legislators are not so fearful of arrest as they have been of late.

"We will not submit to arrest," said Speaker Trimble. "We know our rights and will call upon the civil authorities to protect us in our resolve to resist any attempt of republican force to take us to London or any other place."

"I fully concur with Speaker Trimble," said President Carter of the senate. "We will not be arrested. That is the shortest way to put it. Both houses will act jointly in this matter if any attempt of arrest is made and we expect the local authorities to aid us in our efforts to protect our rights. We will not go to London."

The democratic leaders say nothing more will be done by them in the matter of peace negotiations. They say they came to an agreement with seven accredited agents of the republican administration, which agreement was signed by all of the 14 conferees. The republicans, they say, gave assurances that the terms they made would be accepted by Gov. Taylor. One clause of the agreement, they say, was that things should remain in statu quo until next Monday, and the democrats regard the proceedings before the federal court at Cincinnati and Gov. Taylor's message to the London legislature advising that warrants be sworn out for the arrest of absent members as a departure from the spirit of the agreement.

The republicans now in the city who were present at the conference refuse to make any statement as to the present conditions of the conference of last Tuesday. One of them, Lieut. Gov. John Marshall, has gone to London to attend the session of the republican legislature there.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—Gov. Taylor has not signed the peace agreement Saturday morning, and as usual declined to give any hint of his intention. The men throughout the state who have been wiring him to stand firm, and whom he invited here to talk over the situation appeared in fairly large numbers Saturday morning. About sixty of them went to the governor's office, among the number being many of the leading republican politicians from Lexington and the territory adjacent to that city. Sergeant-at-arms Howard and Cecil are expected in Frankfort from London Saturday morning with warrants for the arrest of democratic members of the legislature. It is difficult to see how they can execute their mission here, as there is not, at the present time, a single member of the legislature in or around Frankfort. Every democrat has gone to Louisville.

Secretary K. B. Hampton, of the republican state central committee, who arrived in Frankfort Saturday morning from Winchester, gives it as his opinion that the injunction proceedings at Cincinnati will have no bearing whatever on the gubernatorial situation.

"I am unable even to predict the outcome," said he, "but the republicans are confident of making a good case for both the courts and the people. I see no chance of getting the legislature together unless the democrats should be taken to London. If warrants have been issued they will be taken to Louisville at once for service."

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 12.—The state troops, which have been on duty here for nearly two weeks, have nearly all returned home, only the soldiers from Covington, Newport, Lexington and Morgantown are camped in the Capital square. Adjt. Gen. Collier said that only a few companies of infantry would be kept on duty here for a short time, to do police work around the Capital square and guard the public building. They would, he said, interfere in no way with the actions of the members of the legislature and access to the legislative halls would be as free and unrestrained as it was before Taylor issued the proclamation declaring Frankfort in a state of insurrection.

The members of the republican legislature are nearly all here. No intimation has been received as to whether or not the democratic members of the legislature would adjourn their session at Louisville and come to Frankfort to take part in the general session. It is believed here, however, that they will do so, probably by the latter part of the week.

Plan of the Democrats.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 12.—It is reported that the republicans will this week seek to bring the contest for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor before the federal court. Forester Gov. Bradley, chief counsel for the republicans in their application before Judge Taft to restrain the state election commissioners from proceeding with the contest for the minor offices, was in town in consultation with leading republican lawyers. The case involving the minor offices comes up at Cincinnati, and it is believed the other case will also be taken before Judge Taft.

On Tuesday the application of the democrats for an injunction to restrain Taylor from interfering with the legislature will come up in the circuit court at Frankfort. The case has been continued from time to time by the democrats pending the peace negotiations. It is expected a temporary injunction will be granted. The case will then be taken to the court of appeals, the state court of last resort. Upon whether or not an appeal to the federal court will lie depends the republican hope of relief from that quarter.

The legislature will remain here at least until it has received a report from its committee which will be appointed to investigate conditions at Frankfort. From talk among the democratic members it is not believed they will return to the capital while soldiers are about the state buildings.

A receiver has been appointed for the Independent Order of Foresters of Illinois.

A HERO OF THREE WARS.

Burial of the Remains of Maj. Gen. Henry W. Lawton in the Arlington National Cemetery.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Maj. Gen. Henry W. Lawton was buried Friday in the National cemetery at Arlington. The services at the grave were preceded by those at the Church of the Covenant in this city, where President H. S. Stryker, of Hamilton college, N. Y. delivered a funeral oration.

Never in the history of the capital has there been a more representative gathering of the nation's official life to pay a last tribute to the nation's honored dead. No mark of military pomp and ceremony that the regulations could provide was wanting to render the occasion solemn and impressive. Nearly all the available troops of the regular establishment remaining in this country were called out. Three thousand men, infantry, cavalry and artillery, followed the flag-draped caisson to the grave.

But mere official formulae were dwarfed beside the deep popular demonstration that the burial of the dead soldier called forth. Every department of the government paid its official tribute. Flags hung at half-mast. The president and his cabinet, representatives of the supreme court, of the house and senate, and of the army and navy, all combined to fill the darkened church to its utmost, but these official representatives of the people were lost in the crowds which surrounded the church and lined the streets along which the procession passed. Lawton was to the people the ideal American soldier, whose exploits in three wars made his name a household word, and who, being a soldier first and only, died in the line of duty, leaving nothing to his children but the heritage of an honored name.

Soft lights burned above the chancel, where flowers were piled railing-high, while the casket was buried beneath a load of roses, lilies and white carnations that overflowed their narrow resting place and fell in a perfumed avalanche to the floor. The guard- cavalrymen from Lawton's old command, stood at each end of the catafalque, silent and motionless as uniformed statues, and the hush of the silent church was broken only by the soft tread of those who entered with bowed heads to pay their last, silent tribute to the brave.

President McKinley was among the early comers, accompanied by the secretary of war. They came to the church with Adjt. Gen. Corbin. The secretary of the navy, the secretary of the interior and the postmaster general, the attorney general and the secretary of agriculture were also there.

The supreme court was represented by Chief Justice Fuller and several of the associate justices. Adm. Dewey was represented by Capt. A. S. Barker. Ex-Secretary Alger was also present by proxy, having sent from Michigan Mr. Victor Mason, his secretary, while in the war department, who brought a great wreath of flowers for the already overladen casket.

The military committee of both house and senate were present, as well as all the senators and members who could gain access to the church. Army and navy officers in uniform filled most of the forward pews and a press of citizens stood up at the rear and in the wide vestibule beyond the doors.

The Presbyterian burial service was read by Chaplain Pierce, of Lawton's old command, assisted by Rev. Tennis Hamlin, pastor of the church.

The casket, lightened of part of its burden of flowers, was lifted to the shoulders of the troopers, borne down the aisle to the street, past the great crowd outside, and raised to the caisson waiting at the door. The waiting ranks of cavalry moved forward and closed about it as a guard of honor. Orders flung from rank to rank down the crowded avenue, brought troop after troop and piece on after platoon wheeling into line. Then with a rumble of wheels and clash of trace-chains field and siege batteries joined the procession, and the hero of three wars moved on his last march to his final resting place on the Virginia hillside beyond the Potomac.

Committed to the Tombs.

New York, Feb. 10.—William H. Stile, who was arrested in South Bend and brought to this city on Thursday last was arraigned in the court of general sessions and was committed to the Tombs, under bail of $7,500. Stiles, who is 74 years old, is charged by Mrs. Thera Thomas with having appropriated to his own use funds of the estate of Samuel Halstead, deceased, the father of Mrs. Thomas, to the amount of $38,000 while he was acting as co-executor with Mrs. Thomas. Stiles has been away from the city for two years.

Sixteen Passengers Died.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—The hospital ship Missouri was lying in the harbor at Honolulu when the steamer Alameda left that port. The Missouri reported an exceedingly rough passage after leaving Nagasaki and during that trip 16 of her passengers died, most of them from wounds received in the war and from dysentery. The Missouri has 372 sick and wounded soldiers on board when she started from Manila.

Met Death Fearlessly.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 10.—Will Golson, colored, was hanged in the jail yard for the murder of Chief Deputy Sheriff Robert Warnock on November 23, 1898. Golson met death fearlessly.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senate—A bill was passed to amend an act granting the city of Hot Springs, Ark., certain lands for park purposes; also a bill to create a new division of the eastern district of Tennessee. A bill was reported providing a form of government for Porto Rico. Senator Caffery then delivered a speech on the Philippine question. His argument was mainly a discussion of the constitutional questions. He maintained that the constitution extends absolutely over the Filipinos and that they were entitled to all the rights and privileges of citizens of the United States guaranteed by the constitution. In response to a question as to what in the present circumstances he would do with the Filipinos, he said with characteristic courage of conviction: "Turn them loose as soon as we can get rid of them. That would be better for them and infinitely better for us."

House—Two speeches were made by democratic members of the foreign affairs committee, Mr. Dinsmore (Ark.) and Mr. Champ Clark (Mo.) opposing the retention of the Philippine islands. Mr. Sibley (Pa.), who was elected as a democrat, but who made a speech last week dealing with expansion, was goaded into the announcement that the democrats could consider his seat constructively on the republican side. Before the debate began an effort was made to pass a bill providing for the appointment of an expert commission to examine into the question of the pollution of the water supply of cities, but it was defeated.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Senate—The following bills were passed: Recognizing the able and gallant services of Capt. Francis Tuttle, revenue cutter service, his officers and men of the Bear; also the heroic services of Lieut. P. H. Jarvis, Dr. Call, Lindenhoff and Dr. S. J. Call, composing the overland expedition to Point Barrow, Arctic ocean, for the relief of imperiled whalers; to extend the time for the completion of a bridge across the Niagara river; granting the city of New York and Long Island; for the relief of the Catholic church at Mecon City, Mo.; for the relief of Rev. Charles college; to pay the Union Iron works of San Francisco $25,000 horse power penalty levied on account of the coast defense vessel Monterey. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was agreed to, thus passing the measure.

House—At the opening of the session the speaker laid before it an invitation to congress from Secretary Root to attend the funeral services over the late Gen. Lawton at the Church of the Covenant Friday afternoon. The final conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was agreed to. The debate upon the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was then resumed, and occupied all the rest of the time until adjournment.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senate—Mr. Vest introduced an amendment to the financial bill, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue $100,000,000 in bonds the same to have printed on their face: "Treasury Bond Notes," and to be full legal tender. A brief tilt followed over the Philippine affairs between Mr. Depew and Mr. Pettigrew, the discussion of the financial bill was then resumed, speeches being made by Mr. Turner, Mr. Bate and Mr. Allen, all in opposition to the pending measure.

House—The house finished the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, passing it substantially as it came from the committee. A brief but spirited oratory discussion of the Philippine question and the war in South Africa, the principal feature being a speech of Mr. Shafroth in favor of mediation of the Boer-British war under the provisions of The Hague treaty. The diplomatic bill as passed carries $3,713,208.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Senate—The following bills and resolutions were passed: A bill in relation to Cuban vessels; resolution withdrawing the quarantine from the city of Honolulu, Hawaiian islands, from the public domain the land amounts to about 12,000 square miles, to be used as a cemetery and mausoleum of the royal family of Hawaii; to grant to Henry Hardebeck, Julius R. Frederick, Francis Long and Maurice Connell, survivors of the Lady Franklin expedition the relief fitted list; to restore Benjamin W. Loring to the revenue cutter service; to place Francis W. Sedley on the retired list of the army as a captain of artillery; granting a first lieutenant's pension to Lieut. F. S. Carter, U. S. N., for saving two lives at Norfolk, Va., in 1898; to place Andrew Geddes on the retired list of the army with the rank of captain; to pay Albert C. Brown $1,000 for damages sustained in rescuing a shipwrecked crew in Alaska.

House—The house was in session an hour and a half, and only minor business was transacted. The ways and means committee bill establishing tariff rates on goods from Porto Rico into the United States, and vice versa, was reported, and Chairman Payne gave notice that the bill would be called up next Thursday. The debate upon the bill to amend the rules were passed requiring certain lights on steam pilot boats at anchor, and requiring masters of vessels having charge of collisions; to amend the act to relieve certain officers when at the naval or marine corps from the charge of desertion, so as to extend the time within which applications for such relief may be filed.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Senate—Mr. Allison presented the credentials of his colleague, John H. Gear, from Iowa, for a term of six years from March 1, 1901. The credentials were filed. A little routine business was transacted before the financial bill was laid before the senate. The senators who were expected to address the senate on the question were absent on account of the funeral of Gen. Lawton, and an adjournment was taken until Monday.

House—The house held only a short session and transacted no business. The evening session was devoted to private pension bills. Adjournment was taken until Monday.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Senate—Senators were caught napping. Just after the session opened, and while the chaplain, Senator Allen, of Nebraska, offered a resolution of sympathy with the Filipinos and the good offices of this nation to mediate the differences between the warring belligerents. It was read at the clerk's desk, to the amazement of Mr. Allen, no objection being offered, it was passed. Soon, however, the senators became aware of its nature, and Mr. Allen arrived to allow a reconsideration of the vote. Mr. Allen will, however, now accomplish his purpose. The motion to reconsider can not be cut off by the reference to a committee so in effect he will have placed the senate directly on record. A bill to provide pay for citizen retired officers of the marine corps was passed.

House—Not in session.

Sudden Death of an Army Officer.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The adjutant general received a telegram from Col. Gillespie, corps of engineers, at New York, saying that Col. W. H. H. Benyaurd died there Wednesday afternoon. The news came as a great shock to the many friends of the deceased official at the war department, who was not even aware of his serious illness. Lieut. Col. Benyaurd was one of the most distinguished officers of his corps, and had a particularly brilliant record during the war of the rebellion. He was in charge of the river and harbor works in New York and vicinity.

McKinley Honored in England.

Washington, Feb. 10.—President McKinley has been notified of his election as an honorary member of Columbia lodge of master masons of London, Eng.

Both Died Suddenly.

Weston, W. Va., Feb. 11.—Mrs. Almira Farnsworth, the third wife of M. W. Farnsworth, was found dead in bed, presumably from heart disease. Mr. Farnsworth's second wife died very suddenly and under much the same circumstances.

Fire at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

New York, Feb. 12.—Building No. 7 in the Brooklyn navy yard, occupied by the electrical equipment department, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $100,000, equally divided between the building and machinery.

The to Senator William Goe[illegible]e faded, house, owing to the absence [illegible] er Trimble, Braswell and B[illegible]es of were nominated for speaker. Hale declined, and the latter was elected. Judge Faulkner was elected speaker pro tem, and both were sworn in. Resolutions of respect to Goebel were passed and the house adjourned.

The senate was called to order at 12:10 by Senator Hays. The roll call was taken; thirteen members were present. Rev. Dixon offered prayer. Senator Hayes, in an address to the senate, said this was a momentous occasion and the business should be transacted with the greatest concern. Senator Barrett moved the election of Senator Jolly as president pro tem. His election was made unanimous. A. R. Dyche, of Laurel, was made acting secretary. Senator Jolly took the chair, and Frank Riley, of London, was made temporary page. The resolutions deploring the death of their colleague, Senator Goebel, were read and adopted and the senate at 12:22 adjourned to meet 12 o'clock Thursday.

London, Feb. 8.—Mr. Heissmann presented a gavel to the speaker pro tem that has been used in republican convention since 1888. A resolution was adopted that the sergeant-at-arms be requested to extend an invitation to the ministers of London, that one be present each morning to conduct the opening service. F. M. Cecil, of Middlesboro, was nominated and unanimously elected sergeant-at-arms. W. H. Hampton, of Barbourville, was unanimously elected doorkeeper. Willie Pryse, Fred T. Rivell, Jesse Read and Dan Jones were elected pages by acclamation.

The senate convened at 12:05. Jolly presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dixon. The minutes of Tuesday's session were partly read by Temporary Secretary Dyche. Senator Kirk moved suspension of the further reading of the minutes and the motion carried. B. J. Howard was sworn in as sergeant-at-arms.

London, Ky., Feb. 10.—The house convened at 10:18 o'clock Friday. Miss Eliza Parker of London, was unanimously elected enrolling clerk.

The house went into executive session at 10:49 o'clock. It was evident that the object of the session was unknown to a number, which indicated that Thursday's action was conclusive and not to be continued Friday morning.

The senate convened at 12:06 o'clock. The reading of the journal was dispensed with. A resolution was received from the house requesting that the senate meet in joint session immediately in the house chamber. The senate at once complied.

The executive joint session ended at 12:45 o'clock. Senator Burnham, in joint session, delivered an eulogy upon the death of former Senator J. Speed Smith, of Richmond, and presented resolutions of respect, which were adopted. A resolution was presented by Representative Stack that W. S. Taylor was elected governor, John Marshall elected lieutenant governor, Caleb McPowers elected secretary of state, and the other republican incumbents were elected to office as the result of the election, should not be disregarded by compromise. The resolution was adopted, and the house and senate arose. The house adjourned to 10:50 Saturday, and the senate went into secret session.

Quarreled Over Politics.

Elizabethtown, Ky., Feb. 9.—W. A. Dixon, a Goebel democrat and a saloonist here, got into a political argument with his barkeeper, John E. Courtney, a republican. Dixon became very abusive and highly insulting, when Courtney clinched with him. Both fell to the floor, when Dixon whipped out a revolver and attempted to kill Courtney, but the latter seized the weapon by the muzzle and in the tussle it exploded, the ball passing clear through the palm of Courtney's hand. Both men came here from Henry county.

Louisville Jail Delivery.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 12.—Five alleged professional burglars and housebreakers succeeded in making their escape from the Louisville jail about 10 o'clock. The men are "Red" Flannery, George Gorman, George McElroad, Henry Gardner and Thomas Kelly.

New Post Office in Kentucky.

Washington, Feb. 9.—A post office has been established at Fannin, Elliott county, Ky., with B. B. Fannin as postmaster.

Held to Be Sane.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 9.—Charles Van Arx, the swindler, who victimized local merchants and fled to Dayton, O., where he was arrested, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for horse stealing. An effort to prove insanity was unsuccessful.

Mortgaged Its Plant.

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 9.—The Paducah Water Co. mortgaged its plant to Charles E. Dallam, trustee of Henderson, for $100,000, to secure authorized issue of $100,000 in bonds. It was the largest mortgage ever recorded here.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Much is being said on the century question, and bright minds seem to widely diverge in considering this subject. Editors, preachers, lawyers, and intelligent men in the private walks of life, together with Pope Leo, are advocating the 20th century theory. To my mind all this difference of opinion has its origin in this one thought. When, in the Christian Era, did men begin to reckon time by years? Was it in the beginning of the year one, or was it at the completion of A. D. 1? Suppose that the Christian Era began January 1st; then January 1st was the beginning of the year one, and those living at that time, in after the date to any document have written it, January the first, D. 1. If not they would [illegible] quorum. [illegible]ften A. D.—what? Hence, Gov. Car[illegible] of the year 10 a decade a century was completed, Regular [illegible]pleted. At the end of the tions from [illegible] the end of [illegible] assembly of Texas in [illegible]centuries Goebel were read and an [illegible] and [illegible]ate response was made. Resolutions on the death of Goebel were then adopted, and in respect to his memory, the senate adjourned.

Two sessions of the house were held during the day without a quorum. In the evening, however, 53 members, two more than necessary, responded to their names. The Texas legislature's resolution of sympathy were read and a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of Goebel. A resolution was adopted instructing the sergeant-at-arms to order absent members to report here at once, after which the house adjourned.

GOEBEL'S GRAVE.

The Spot Selected Not Approved of By His Brothers, and a Change Will Be Made.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—The remains of the late Senator William Goebel will lie in the little chapel in the cemetery till the Goebel family determine upon a burial site.

Arthur and Justus Goebel are opposed to burial in the lot at first selected, and upon which there is now an open grave, banked with the great profusion of gorgeous flowers sent by admiring friends from this and other states, and it has almost been decided to bury upon a site in the southwest corner, overlooking the bosom of the Kentucky river, and containing a full view of the capital and other scenes of his legislative and political career

Mr. Justus Goebel said that it had not been decided when the burial will take place.

Excitement Over a Shooting.

Nicholasville, Ky., Feb. 9.—The town is somewhat excited over the shooting of Newton Lane by one of his work hands on the Fayette line. A mob was organized here to lynch Lane when he killed Mr. Rodenbaugh and his son in Versailles about four years ago. Rodenbaugh was very popular here, where he had lived. At the request of Mrs. Rodenbaugh the mob dispersed. Lane was arrested here about nine months ago for using abusive language to a Negro.

Collision on a Curve.

Litchfield, Ky., Feb. 10.—At a curve just above the depot passenger train 222 and freight train 251 collided. Thomas Spinks, engineer on the passenger train, was seriously injured. The fireman jumped before the engines met. The engineer and fireman of the freight stuck to their posts. Spinks overlooked his orders. Several passengers were terribly shaken up and trains were delayed several hours.

Federal Prisoners Moved.

Greenup, Ky., Feb. 12.—Deputy United States Marshal Henry Gose took nine prisoners to Louisville to answer to charges as follows: M. V. Pierce, offense against the government; William Collins, Walter Johnson, Richard Lee, Franklin Ward, Jas. Stewart, Jas. Ward, George Coleman and Wylie Adkins, moonshining.

Want the Whisky Tax Reduced.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 9.—The Kentucky Distillers' association met at the Galt house. About 30 distillers outside of the trust were present and Mr. John B. Thompson presided. Resolutions were adopted asking congress to reduce the revenue tax on whisky from $1.10 to 70 cents per gallon.

Found a Pistol in State House.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 9.—Detective Armstrong found a 45-calibre Smith & Wesson revolver in the basement of the state house with one chamber empty. He has been permitted to make a thorough search from basement to garret and this far this is the result of his investigation.

Lost His Diamonds.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 10.—A good many petty thefts were reported to the police, but there was only one of consequence, Kinzea Stone, of Georgetown, had his diamond shirt stud, valued at $1,000 cut from his shirt front with a pair of nippers.

New Post Offices in Kentucky.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Post offices were established in Kentucky as follows: Casper, Lawrence county, Charles Miller, postmaster; Wanata, Jackson county, James M. Gilbert, postmaster.

Newton Lane was shot by one of his work hands on the Fayette county line. It will be remembered that a mob was organized to lynch Lane when he killed H. C. Redenbaugh and his son in Versailles about four years ago. Redenbaugh was very popular where he had lived. At the request of Mrs. Redenbaugh the mob dispersed.

People will kiss, and yet not one in a hundred knows how to extract bliss from lovely lips more than they know how to make diamonds from charcoal, and yet it is so easy.

First, know when to kiss. Don't jump like a trout for a fly, and kiss a lady on her neck, ear or the end of the nose.

Don't kiss everybody. Stand up to it. Take the left hand of the lady in your right; let your hat go where it pleases. Throw the left hand gently over the shoulder of the lady and let it follow down the right side toward the waist. Don't be in a hurry. Draw her gently, lovingly to your heart. Her hand will fall lightly on your shoulder, and a very handsome shoulder strap it makes.

Stand firm, be brave, but don't be in a hurry. Her lips are almost open; bend slightly forward with your head. Take good aim. The lips meet, the eyes close, the heart opens, the soul rides the storms of life, heaven opens before your eyes, the world shoots from under you as a meteor across the sky, the heart forgets its bitterness, and the art of kissing is learned.—Woman's Life.

A large crowd in town Monday. About 1,500 cattle were offered and there were takers at 2 to 6 cents. The trade was brisk. The mule market was exceedingly active. Good mares brought from $100 to $145 each. Others not so good, brought smaller figures. The horse business was about as usual.—Richmond Pantagraph.

The eggs of the catterpillar, so hurtful to orchards, are laid in the form of a bracelet on the slender twigs. It is not a hard matter to find them when the trees are bare, as they are in winter. It is worth while to go through the orchard with a light ladder and a pair of shears, to cut off the twiggs and collect them to be burned. A few hours work will do more towards getting rid of them than that of days after they hatch out.

Every boy on the farm should be given a young animal to raise for himself, he to attend to it and be induced to take an interest in its progress. He will thus early become fond of animals and of farming, and will be more reconciled to farm life when he is grown. The boy who leaves the farm for the city is the one who has never had any opportunities and looks upon farming as a drudgery. Labor becomes a pleasure when there is something to strive for, and the early education of the boy on the farm should be by giving an interest in something. All children love young stock and pet them.—Farmer's Home Journal.

The first thing to be understood in lamb fattening is that any young animal is likely to make extra feed, but when growth is unusually stimulated there is a lack of the best fattening proclivities. Lambs require some peculiar attention in feeding. They should be put on feed very carefully, and when they finally get on full feed should be kept that way by occasionally changing the ration. We have had lambs in the feed lot that after having been on feed three or four weeks seemed to be getting in good condition to lay on the flesh—a sort of a preliminary exercise, so to speak. About that time they will begin to deposit some flesh on the inside the evidence of which may be gained by observing the actions of the lambs. When a lamb is seen standing in a contented, stretching position, a little later it will be found that it is beginning to deposit some fat at the root of the tail, and thence the fat gradually extends along the back over the shoulders, and finally reaches the neck. In fattening lambs it is necessary to keep them as quiet as possible and we have found it a good plan to feed them somewhat different from old sheep, in that they are always kept with a pretty sharp appetite. To keep the lambs constantly gaining flesh and attaining that ripeness so desired is difficult and the feeder should be pretty well acquainted with his bunch of lambs. He should study them, keep a close watch of them, and do anything and everything that will cause them to increase in flesh and at the same time have that freshness that is so desirable.

I'll study to make farming more than plowing, sowing and reaping. Stock will be comfortably sheltered. No more acres will be cultivated than can be tilled profitably. Small fruits will be planted in sufficient quantity for home use. The pasturage question will be diligently studied. Scrub stock from the hen to the horse will be bred off the farm. Unnecessary debt will not be contracted. Some scheme will be devised by which frequent sales will give cash income at regular intervals, and these at least monthly. Farm machinery will not only be used but not abused. Fences will be kept in repair rather than have to be subjected to general repairs consequent to continued neglect. Barns will be made convenient. The fire wood will be in the shed and the latter located convenient to the kitchen door. The water supply will receive careful attention. Paint will be in evidence whenever and where-ever possible. The house will be made convenient and as handsome as income will permit. Walks will be made that will reduce the house-cleaning to the minimum. The family horse and carriage will be a luxury provided as soon as farm receipts will permit. Books, magazines and farm papers will be found on the sitting room table. Wholesome recreation and helpful social intercourse will be provided. Well, this is resolution enough! Yes, the farmer has a big proposition on his hands but such resolutions made and carried out will be largely the solution of that problem which is agitating so many farm homes—How shall we keep the boys and girls on the farm. The farmer who has the will power, business ability and magnanimity of soul to materialize such resolutions will give to futurity sons and daughters who will bless the dear home.—Henderson Gleaner.

FROM CAROLL COUNTY

[News]

Eagle Station, this county, suffered great loss by fire Tuesday night, by which two of the principal business houses and stocks were totally destroyed.

The last trestle was put on the bridge approach on this side Tuesday, and no more can be put in until the piers show up. Three houses have been torn down on the Prestonville side and work will be pushed there.

Boswell Hunter died at his residence at Gap Hill Sunday evening at 2:30 after an illness of several weeks of a complication of diseases, erysipelas being the principal cause. He was about 38 years of age, a man who would go his length for a friend and everybody liked him for his manly qualities.

On Saturday night as Everard Meade was going to his room at T. C. Southworth's he struck his toe against the curbingat the pavement in front of Gaines' drug store at Fifth and Main, throwing him forward upon his face, breaking and mashing his nose, and cutting several gashes on his face and forehead.

The speaker's stand in the court house yard that was erected last fall and upon which Gov. Goebel delivered his speech in October was, on last Monday afternoon, draped in black and will remain so until after the funeral of the governor. Little did any of his hearers think, on that day when he appeared before them so full of life and action, that such an untimely fate awaited him.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

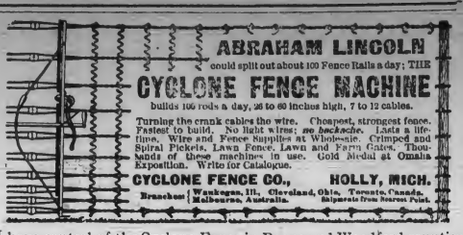
Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our public is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61-64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.



Watch carefully the Cincinnati Enquirer.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1900. NO. 18

KIMBERLY has been relieved, likewise England.

JOHN BULL appears to have been getting the best of the military movements in South Africa for a week or more.

JUDGE TAFT gave the Republicans a black eye, and now some of them are saying they expected him to decide as he did.

THE new bank in Rising Sun is in no hurry to begin business, and it invites the opening of accounts with it with the beginning of the new century.

IF reports are true the State buildings at Frankfort have been in possession of a lot of vandals, and nothing in those buildings escaped their destructive attacks.

SEVRRAL Democrats in Covington aspire to the office of State Senator from Kenton county, which is now vacant, and when the election is called a lively time is likely to develop.

IT takes the English several days after they make an advance to determine whether or not they have been led into one of those traps the Boers have been so successful in planning for them.

THE Rising Sun Recorder deplores the increase of crime in Indiana. That wholesale lynching bee over there a year or two ago did not drive from the State all those who are destitute of a regard for law.

Two or three colored politicians in this State want to be delegates at large from Kentucky in the national Republican convention. It is dollars to doughnuts that their claims along that line are ignored.

THE Postoffice Department has informed the Cincinnati office, with other large distributing offices, that a separate and distinct mark, probably the name of the city where the office is located, will be printed on the stamps in the future.

THERE is a shortage of coal in Europe, and the American market is depended upon to meet the demand for fuel in the several countries that are short. What coal London could secure she can not get transported as all available rolling stock on the rail roads is employed moving war material for use in South Africa.

THE telegram sent from Washington by Senator Deboe to Taylor, has put the Senator's enemies in his own party to work against him, and his desire to be one of the four delegates from the State at large in the next national Republican convention will likely be ignored. Deboe ought not to be punished for sending good advise—to cease bayonet rule.

TUESDAY has been a very important day with the Kentucky legislature. Legislature met on Tuesday, Blackburn was elected Senator on Tuesday, Bryan visited Frankfort on Tuesday, Colson-Scott shooting occurred on Tuesday and Governor Goebel was assassinated on Tuesday. Taylor fixed the first day of his London legislature's session on Tuesday, and he called out the soldiers on Tuesday.

LAWRENCEBURG, IND., has two Mutual Burial Associations, the literature of each of which was in evidence in Burlington Monday. If a person expects to have use for a burial outfit at an early day, a membership in one of those associations might be a good thing to own, but, on the other hand, if a long life is before the member he might find only a few to contribute to his funeral expenses when he needed an equipage.

LAST week the grand jury at Louisville investigated John Whallen's charge against Senator Harrell for obtaining money under false pretenses, and refused to indict the Senator, but not being satisfied, Whallen will have the next grand jury to investigate the charge. No effort will be spared to have Harrell indicted, while an unlimited amount of money will be spent to keep the leader of the "Honest Election League" from being convicted of an attempt to bribe a State Senator.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Andrew Carnegie's, quondam partner, Frick, has testified that the Carnegie Company has been making enormous profits ever since 1892. In 1899, he swears that it made $21,000,000 on a capital of $25,000,000, and that the profits for 1900 were estimated last fall at $42,000,000. Yet Mr. Carnegie cuts wages to the lowest notch and demands protection for iron and steel from the pauper labor of Europe.

When the extreme liberality of our pension laws is considered, it seems almost impossible that that should be cases where special acts of Congress are necessary. At any rate, it is obviously a disgrace that they should be rushed through wholesale at a night session where less than a quorum of the House is present. At the last night session, bills were passed at the rate of one every two minutes.

Teddy Roosevelt has refused to be a candidate for Vice-President next fall. Of course he has! Teddy doesn't propose to be carried down by the landslide that will overwhelm the McKinley administration, the British alliance, and the Porto Rican infamy this fall. He would rather wait until 1904 and take his chances at the head of the ticket.

President Steyn has ordered that no non-combatants, such as doctors, Red Cross attendants, or newspaper men are to be taken prisoners or to be hindered in any way. The fact that the Boers are highly honorable and civilized fighters, is becoming daily better known in spite of British misrepresentations.

The Senate should wake up. When important resolutions like the Allen pro-Boer resolutions can be rushed through without anyone noticing them, something is wrong. The first thing we know, Mr. Quay will be seated by a similar trick.

The National American Women's Suffrage Association has elected Mrs. Catt as president for the coming year. This will certainly give point to many of the unkind remarks that have for years been made against the suffragists.

The balloon has served a better purpose in South Africa than it did at Santiago. It is the only thing that the Boers do not seem able to hit. But then, they have got many better things to aim at.

C. J. BRONSTON, who has been in obscurity, politically and otherwise, recently, came to the front again the other day, and added another incident to Kentucky's already long record for lawlessness. Bronston and Claud Desha, Clerk of the Senate were riding on a train of cars, when they engaged in a political discussion, and in a few minutes Bronston went after his pop, and flourished it in a threatening manner, but no one was so badly frightened as to jump from the train.

KENTUCKY'S ALL RIGHT.

She has too many dead beats.
Too many statesmen out of work.
Too many men with "sheepskins" but no coonskins.
Too many saloons and not enough school houses.
Too many "contractors" and not enough laborers.
Too many fellows who live the Lord only knows how.
Too many who would rather see a killing than prevent one.
Too many men who are two-fifths mouth and three-fifths wind.
Too many men running for office that ought to be working the county roads.
Too many have-beens in search of free passes, free lunches, free drinks and free fires.
Too many fellows who would rather tote pistols than carry spades and jack planes.
Too many men holding political jobs who would be better employed clearing knob lands.
Too many fellows trying to break into office who are not capable of splitting stove wood.
Too many fellows abusing the rich who are too lazy to pick up a dollar within their reach.
Too many fellows who imagine that heaven is just next door and hell only in the story book.
Too many fellows prating about purity in politics who can be bought for a pint of whisky.
Too many youths thinking they were born to be governor who wouldn't make good constables.
Too many fellows who attend political meetings five times a week and take baths once a year.
Too many fellows who patch the seats of their pants once a week and never need new half soles.
Too many men who go in debt to their groceryman, doctor and editor and pay their bills with abuse.
Too many men absolutely so afraid of hard work that they wear themselves out dodging employment.
Too many fellows construing the constitution who can't think in a straight line ten consecutive seconds.
Too many men who spend dollars for whisky and cartridges and let the county buy bread for their children.
Too many fellows who imagine they are born orators when the more they talk the more they show their idiocy.
Too many fellows who would rather whittle all day for a chew of tobacco than to work an hour for a square meal.
Too many fellows living on the reputations of their grand-fathers instead of earning their own hog and hominy.
Too many men engrossed with public affairs that they permit their children to grow up in idleness and ignorance.
Too many fellows wanting to help make new laws who know no more about the old ones than a pig does about astronomy.
Too many fellows talking about "honah" who haven't enough self respect to clean the tobacco juice from their shirt bosoms.
Too many men willing to walk ten miles to political speakings that wouldn't ride one mile to take their children to Sunday school.
Too many "good" citizens who stay at home and let the country go to the devil and then blame the devil for off with it.
Too many men, who, when they die, leave nothing to their families but six-shooters and certificates that "they never scratched a ticket."
Too many men who spend so much time at the corner grocery that the town has to pass a curfew law to help them to take care of their children.
Two many cusses spending their time talking politics who don't know the difference between the principles of Democracy or Republicanism and the laws of the Sanhedrim.
But still, with these trifling exceptions, Kentucky's all right.—Harrigee in Danville Advocate.

THE Legislature resumed its session at Frankfort, Monday. TAKE CARE OF MOTHER.

Don't forget mother, my boy don't forget mother, just because you have other loves and many cares to fill your attention. Can you not see she is growing old? More tenderly and wistfully her eyes follow you and her old heart aches for your return of the caresses she has always given her boy. Her step is less elastic now. The roses on her cheeks have faded, chilled by the freezing breezes of old age. The snow drifts of time lie tenderly on her temples. The record of her care for you, of her troubles and sorrows are furrows upon her face. Some day, it will not be long, you will walk about the old home with husband footsteps. Into the dear old chamber you will steal to bid good-bye to the dear old face so strangely white. And while you bend over to catch your parting blessing the angel of death will glide into her heart and mother will fall asleep. Then, it may be with a heart full of remorse for your neglect, you will seek new friends, but none can ever fill the place of mother.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Much is being said on the century question, and bright minds seem to widely diverge in considering this subject. Editors, preachers, lawyers, and intelligent men in the private walks of life, together with Pope Leo, are advocating the 20th century theory. To my mind all this difference of opinion has its origin in this one thought. When, in the Christian Era, did men begin to reckon time by years? Was it in the beginning of the year one, or was it at the completion of A. D. 1? Suppose that the Christian Era began January 1st; then January 1st was the beginning of the year one, and those living at that time, in affixing the date to any document would have written it, January the 1st, A. D. 1. If not they would have written A. D.—what? Hence, at the end of the year 10 a decade was completed. At the end of the year 100 a century was completed, and at the end of the year 1900 nineteen centuries will have been completed, and the 20th century will begin January the 1st, 1901. Let me illustrate: Suppose I owe you $20, and I pay you a penny at a time. When I have paid 1899 pennies have I paid $19? Then when I have paid 1900 pennies have I begun the payment of the 20th dollar? Not until I have laid down 1901 pennies have I begun the payment of the 20th dollar. So not until the end of the year 1900, and not until time shall usher in the year 1901 does the century begin.

There was never a more brazen invitation for a Federal Court to take a hand in politics, without any justification, than this same application by these Kentucky adventurers, and Judge Taft could not well risk disgracing the courts by accepting it. Anybody of ordinary intelligence knows that there was no legal foundation for the application. If it had been granted the Federal Court would have asserted the right to interfere in any local election, State or municipal.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

JUDGE TARVIN gave his grand jury a strong instuction in regard to the law against carrying pistols. Instructions as emphatic as those given by Judge Tarvin have been given often in this State, but very little seems to have been accomplished towards wiping out the offense complained of.

The great trouble is the lax enforcement of the law after conviction. It has become the custom to enter a judgment against the party found guilty of carrying concealed weapons for the lowest penalty—10 days imprisonment and a fine of $25. In nearly every case where the $25 fine is paid the imprisonment is never enforced if the convicted psrty has influential friends. A strict enforcement of the law against earrying pistols will do more towards breaking up the practice than anything else, and that the law is not enforced is not so much the fault of grand juries as it is of those who decide upon fixing the penalty to be imposed when there is a conviction or confession of guilt. Give a few "high-rollers" the benefit of heavy fine and a considerable term or imprisonment, and note the moral effect. Making examples of the "one-gallus" fellows amounts to very little.

TAYLOR'S militaryism has cast the State over $40,000, to say nothing about the destruction of public records by the soidiers while quartered in the State buildings. At one time there were 1260 soldiers on duty in Frankfort, where their services were needed no worse than they were in Burlington.

A Modern Washington.

ONE OTHER day our teacher read
From a hist'ry book that told
'Bout George Washington and
His wuz always goodern gold.

Didn't act like boys now does,
And he never told a lie;
Never said a thing but wuz
Honest Indian, hope to die;
And we fellers wished that we
Wuz as good's he uster be.

Teacher read us 'bout that ax
That his father gave him, and How George, he skips out and hacks
Down a tree to beat the band;
And his pa wuz wild, you know,
'Cause 'twuz a expensive tree,
But George couldn't lie, and so
He just sez: "Yes, pa, 'twuz me"—
And his pa, he almos' cried,
He's so glad George hadn't lied.

Well, last night I wanted some
Marmalade down off the shelf
In the pantry—it wuz plum—
And I thought I'd help myself.
Then—'twuz just my mean, old luck—
Hit a jar I hadn't seen.
Down it went, and, ceurse, it struck
Right on top the soup tureen.
Goodness sakes! Don't say a word!
Worsest smash you ever heard.

Well, I just skipped out of that—
Heard pa comin' on the run—
Might a-laid it on the cat,
But I thought of Washington,
And I says: "Now, I won't shirk;"
So, when pa had seen the mess,
And says: "Sam, is this your work?"
Just like George, I answers: "Yes."
Golly! what fixed him all right
Never worked for me a mite.

What's the use of tellin' more!
If your ear had just been pressed
Up against our woodshed door
You'd a-found out all the rest.
George's pa, said, right away:
"To my arms, my noble boy!"
I went on pa's knee, and say:
"'Twuzn't nuthin' to enjoy.
Boys that's Washingtons, gee whiz!
Need to have a pa like his.

A WASHINGTON STORY.

Probably Is Not, But Might Have Been, True.

I HAVE just been reading a note from the diary of Gen. Washington, who will remain until the crack of doom the one great, flawless, dignified hero of the nation, if not of the world. A hero means one who is a brave gentleman all the time.

Says Gen. Washington's diary, June 30, 1785: "Dined with only Mrs. Washington, which I believe is the first instance of it since my retirement from public life." That was 18 months after coming home from his victorious wars. Think of the horror of it! For all that time the inquisitive hero worshipers had been dropping in just about dinner time to say: "How wonderful, really, Mr. Washington! It makes me quite shudder to think of; really and truly it does. Oh, I must kiss your hand!" And poor George would have to be polite and ask them to stay for dinner.

How cozy that little dinner on June 30, 1785, must have been; how homelike at last, when Gen. Washington raised his glass and said: "Martha, my love, your health. That ribbon becomes you vastly. You look too young for a battered old hulk like me."

"George," said Mrs. Washington, "don't dare talk like that! You a battered what-did-you-say! The idea! Why, not a young man in old Virginia has your figure."

Then she got up and came round the table and kissed him, the cupbearers having withdrawn, and they walked together in the gentle summer afternoon, and his excellency said, as he gathered some cherries: "Why can't people always leave us in peace, Martha? How nice this is. Let's go and look at the pigs."

There were heaps of birthday presents awaiting his excellency, and all the jolly black house servants wished him long life and happiness, and a table was weighed down with 5,000 birthday poems from the 5,000 most promising poets in the country, and there was a heap of newspapers with marked editorials in his praise, and every man who had ever invented anything, from a clockwork clambaker (a most curious and amusing contrivance) to a baseball, sent the general one, and every man, woman and child who had written a book, even if not published, sent a copy to George Washington. Yes, everybody sent him a present and wished him joy, and most of them wished something for themselves in return.

Certainly George Washington should have been happy with all these beautiful, costly things; but somehow it slipped to the attic and left all the gifts and looked at the little hatchet his father had given him years and years ago, and he said, as he put it back: "When was I happier, then or now?"

Then the visitors came, very old men, who told him he could never hope to live as long as they, for they had constitutions like iron, and he must enjoy himself before it was time to give him a state funeral; and very old ladies who had known his father and called him "Georgie," and very young misses who trembled so they could hardly utter the words of congratulation they had learned by heart. And there was one manly little rascal who rode on his pony bearing his grandfather's compliments, and pushed straight at the hero, crying:

"Ge-w'ral, grandpa's compymens, happy returns, mine, too. General, I want to know, grandpa says you're a hero, and I want to be a hero, too, when I'm growed up. Can't I, please? Grandpa says not to talk nonsense. It isn't nonsense, is it, general? Can't I be a hero when I'm growed big?"

Big Washington stooped and lifted the child—did you ever know a hero that didn't love children?—and kissed his cheek and whispered:

"None of us can be great or good without God's blessing. To be a hero you must be good as great. So pray first, and always that God will make you good."

The little enthusiast looked deep and grave into the general's eyes, suddenly kissed the kind mouth hard, said: "I will," and, sliding down, rode off with his groom—always a better man for that caressing whisper.

When it was still long from the stately festival dinner George Washington slipped away from the crowd at the house and wandered off by himself, though with great dread that some pale young man should jump out from a bush and fire a birthday ode at him.

Now he was off Mount Vernon farm, and by a lane away from the main road. In the corner of the lane, in a most deserted, newly-cleared spot, about 50 feet back in the bushes, was the newest of tiny cottages, with unpainted walls, and rough timbers, and a newly-laid-out garden at the back. George Washington looked from the wood through which he was wandering, and paused.

"That was not there when I had time before the war to run about," said he. "Who can they be? They're not Africans. Oh, no!"

For from the house came a bright voice that was certainly Virginian.

"Now, Jack," said the voice, "you must not be so lazy, because there is ever so much to do before father comes home."

"I ain't lazy, Martha," said another voice, unmistakably the birth one of a boy. "I'm doing what dad said—I'm looking after you and protecting you."

"Oh, Jack, do you call eating raisins and sitting on the table protecting me?"

"Well, it is. If anyone was to come round now to hurt you, even King George himself, wouldn't I be ready to kill him?"

"Well," said Martha, with a laugh, "I don't expect King George this morning. Our George, bless him—"

"Hooray!"

"Has boxed his ears. But there is work to be done."

"I don't see any."

"You are looking only at the raisins. How do you expect to eat if you don't work? And how am I to get supper for daddy in the evening?"

"Oh, I have thought of that. I'll go fishing, and you'll fry them."

"Oh, and who would protect me while you're fishing, please?"

"You can come, too, if you won't always call out: 'Mind you don't fall in.'"

"Be good, Jack, and fetch me some water from the well, and chop a little firewood."

The general had been listening and chuckling. Always the sound of children's voices brightened his eyes. Now he suddenly stepped up to the open door of the little new house and bowed. He was dressed very plainly for his muddy walk, and his boots were spattered, and he looked quite plain and homely. He saw a neat little woman of 12 or 13 busy in her kitchen and a pert, bright-eyed, snub-nosed young rogue of seven sitting on the table.

"I wish you good morning, ma'am," said the general.

"Good morning, sir," said the maiden, with a frightened courtesy.

"Hallo!" said Master Pert, seizing a carving knife. "Where did you come from? Are you a friend of King George?"

"I am a true—"

"You're not an Englishman?"

"I am a—"

"You're not a royalist?"

"I—"

"Because if you were I'd have to kill you, that's all."

"Be quiet, Jack; you're very rude," said his sister, reprovingly. "Please sir, he's only a little boy, and sometimes they're a little vexing, but he's a good boy. Is there anything I can do for you, sir?"

"If it were not too much trouble, a glass of water—"

"Oh, certainly," said the willing housewife, and ran off. Up came Jack and stood very erect in front of the visitor.

"I do believe," said the little boy, "you're the biggest man I ever saw. Ain't you?"

"How could I tell you that, Master Jack?"

"Are you bigger than my father? Do you know my father? My father's a big man, bigger than me a good deal. My father's just come to live here and farm. Do you live near here? Were you in the war? Did you kill any Englishmen? Did you get hurted? My father fought in the war and got a bullet through his nose. It makes him look awful funny. You've a big nose. A boy hit me on the nose once, and it bleeded awful. I guess your nose would bleed lots, wouldn't it? Oh, what a nice chain. Won't you show me your watch? Oh, what a nice watch—will you show me the inside?"

"After," said the general, with his arm gently round the child, "after we've given up thinking of going fishing, and brought the water for sister, and chopped some wood."

Jack looked quite startled and turned red. The big, kind, yet firm eyes looked into Master Pert's and Master Pert stuffed his knuckles into the corners.

"Toot, toot!" said the general, "come, I'll help you."

So the gray-eyed, pleasant-faced little girl, coming back, found the father of his country breaking up wood at a great rate, while her little brother was laughingly gathering chips.

"Oh, sir," said Martha, with amaze, "what a man you'd be around the house!"

And she was still more amazed at the effect her words had upon the stranger, who dropped the ax and threw his head back with quite a roar of laughter, until, for the pure happiness of it, little Jack and Martha laughed too.

"I like you," said Jack, grabbing the general's hand as they went into the house. "Come and see us often and I'll show you where the best fishing place is."

"My father would be glad to welcome you, sir," said the courtly maiden. "His business takes him away just now almost every day, but in the spring—"

"I thank you kindly," said the general. "And as I live near here, I hope I shall be friends with my new neighbors. But this is milk?"

"I thought you'd like it better than water, sir. And please try these cakes, which I made this morning, because—"

"'Cause it's her birthday," cried Jack. "She's 13 and I'm seven."

"Now that is a happy coincidence," said the general, "because it is also my birthday. I beg to wish you many happy returns of the day."

"WHAT A MAN YOU'D BE AROUND THE HOUSE!"

And he bowed very low, and she bobbed her very best courtesy, and Jack cried out:

"You look so you was dancing."

Time was getting on, but the general was loath to go. He was enjoying himself for the first time in a long time. He brought water; he mended the window latch; he planned out a flower bed. He was thoroughly happy in the merry company of these children, who only thought him a passing, unusually good-natured stranger. But at last he went, with a grimace at the thought of all the lived and silken crowd waiting for him.

The two children, quite brightened by his presence, worked about busily, and played about merrily, and made things pleasant for father at sundown.

But an hour before sundown came riding by two people who called themselves gentlemen, but nobody really thought them so. They had been merry-making, and one man's horse had lost a shoe, and his drunken dignity was such that he must pause at the cottage to send for a blacksmith to come to him or else have his horse led to the blacksmith's while he waited. It was evident that the dwellers at the cottage were poor folks, and these gentlemen felt assured their lordly orders would be obeyed. Now, Miss Martha was civil, if frightened, but Master Jack was sullen, and when the young, wine-heated man bade him lead the horse or fetch the smith, Jack flatly refused to do either.

"What, what! You'll be paid," shouted the owner of the horse. "Come, young mistress, have you no wine for weary travelers?"

"Indeed, no, sir," said Martha. "but further on the post road—"

"I'll go no further on the post or any other road. Haste now, Flibbertigibbet, and do as you are told."

"I'll stay here and protect my sister," said Jack, "as my father bade me."

"Ha, ha! A brave protector! But in truth a pretty sister. Come, my dear, let me also be a brother—"

He staggered up, and Jack—Jack flew at his throat like a terrier. The girl screamed, the other man raised his riding whip and struck down on the boy. Jack yelled from rage and anguish, but clung to the choking throat, never heeding the first blows rained on him. The cottage was in a dreadful uproar; when in rushed the stranger of the morning, and it is said—but you need not believe it unless you want to—he used a dreadfully bad word. Those two foolish young men never were in such trouble before. In George Washington's great right arm swung one of them, helpless, and in the left another, and bump, bump, bumpety bump, went the two empty, foolish, braggart, blackguard heads, cracking against each other like cocoanuts on a tree in a storm. When they were almost senseless the general laid them down with force and thrashed them with their own whips, and so mangled and maltreated and mashed them that, when at last they got to their knees and begged for mercy, their own loving mammas would have indignantly repudiated them as being offspring of theirs. In the meantime Jacky Pert danced about cheering on his new friend, and Martha sobbed in a corner, hiding her face and begging "Mr. George," for so the general had called himself, not to kill anybody, and not to get hurt himself. And then the general threw aside his whip and made the rascals stand up before him, but they could only face that raging, righteous eye with bowed heads and bowed knees.

"Gen. Washington," they mumbled, "please let us go. It—it was only the wine. There was no harm done."

He waved them out, but the mischief was done. At the words "Gen. Washington" little Jack's jaw dropped and he shook like a felon at the thought that he had threatened to kill the best and greatest man in that or any other country. Martha dropped to her knees, but the general made her rise and accept the birthday gift he had run to Mount Vernon and back to get for her. Still, it was not the same, and the general felt saddened as he went homeward, just as everybody has felt saddened because he could not be a boy again.

"However," said he to himself, with a smile, as he was dressing for the ball in the evening, "I have not had so much fun on a birthday since I chopped up that old cherry tree."—Edgerton Davis, in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

RELIEVED THE SENTINEL.

Washington Walked on Guard at Valley Forge While a Starving Soldier Breakfasted.

William Perrine gives a graphic picture of Washington's memorable winter of suffering at Valley Forge in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Sentinels pacing in the snow on the outposts took off their caps and stood in them to save their feet from freezing," he writes. "Here and there could be found even officers in a sort of dressing-gown made of old woolen bed-covers. The stout-hearted women of New Jersey sent their quilted clothes as Christmas presents, with the patriotic jest that as women were said sometimes to wear the trousers, so now there would be an excuse for men who might wear the petticoat. Washington, who never exaggerated, said that few men had more than one shirt, many only half a one, and some none at all. Nearly 3,000 men were barefooted, and occasionally might be seen a soldier who was all but naked! Sometimes there was nothing to eat in the camp but rotten salted herrings. Men were known to snatch at the dough of half-baked cakes in the kitchens of farmers' wives. The contractors and the commissary agents and the continental congress had brought 12,000 men to the verge of starvation, and the blood of Gen. Wayne ran hot with rage as he looked on his poor fellows weak with hunger. Indeed, there was but one horn tumbler and also but one wooden dish for everyness. Washington himself dined one day on potatoes and hickory nuts. 'My good man,' he said to the sentinel in front of his headquarters, pacing up and down in the bitterness of a cold morning, 'have you had anything to eat?' 'No, sir,' was the reply. 'Give me your musket, then, and go inside and get some breakfast,' and the tall commander gravely walked up and down as guard over his own house."

HE WAS THE MAN.

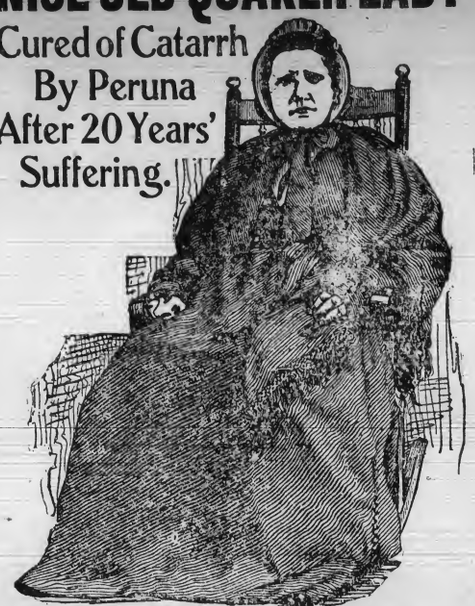
Mr. Whiteman—I say, Uncle Dan, do you—

Expressman—Yo' wrong, boss, mah name's not Dan; hit's Gawge.

"George, eh? George what?"

"Gawge Washington, suh."

"Ah! that sounds familiar; seems to me I have heard that name before."



"Spec yo' has boss; ah done ben round dese sawners evah since freedom cum."

Two Heads.

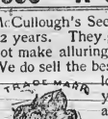
Two heads may be better than one, but one big head is usually enough.—Chicago Daily News.

NICE OLD QUAKER LADY

Cured of Catarrh By Peruna After 20 Years' Suffering.

MRS. POLLY EVANS, A LIFE-LONG FRIEND OF PERUNA.

"My wife (Polly J. Evans) says she feels entirely cured of systemic catarrh of twenty years' standing. She took nearly six bottles of thy excellent medicine, Peruna, as directed, and we feel very thankful to the for thy kindness and advice. She did not expect to be so well as she is now. Twelve years ago it cured her of la grippe. I want to tell thee there has been a great deal of Peruna used here last winter. Peruna does not need praising. It tells for itself. We can and do recommend it to anyone that is afflicted with catarrh."



As ever, thy friend, John Evans, South Wabash, Ind.

When catarrh has reached the chronic stage, of course it has gone beyond the reach of all local remedies. Nothing but a systemic remedy can reach it—Peruna is the only remedy yet devised to meet such cases. Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system. It does its work quietly, but surely. It cleanses the mucous membranes of the whole body. It produces regular functions. Peruna restores perfect health in a natural way.

No one should neglect to procure one of Dr. Hartman's free books on catarrh, sent to any address by The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio.

INTERESTING STATE NEWS.

TRAIN WOULDN'T STOP.

A Young Lady of Kentucky Recovers $195 Damages From the Cincinnati Southern Railway Co.

Williamstown, Ky., Feb. 19.—Miss Musetta Cram, daughter of Judge Cram, has just been given $195 damages against the Cincinnati Southern railway for its failure to carry her to this place on one of its fast flyers several weeks ago. Miss Cram had been to New Orleans, and was returning over the Havana Limited. When at Georgetown the conductor told her he would not stop the train at this place, and that if she went over the road further she would be compelled to pay fare for extra distance she rode.

She was left at Georgetown without a cent of money where she had to remain over night, borrowing money from strangers to pay her hotel bill. The court allowed $1,000 damages, but her attorneys got the amount changed to $195, so that the railroad company could not take it to the court of appeals.

A MONUMENT STOLEN.

It Was Erected Years Ago to the Memory of William Taylor Barry at Lexington, Ky.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 16.—The monument which was erected to the memory of William Taylor Barry, in the court house yard, by the county of Fayette, has been stolen. When the new court house was built it was taken down, and it was the intention to replace it at another point in the yard, but some one stole the stones a few nights ago, and they have just been missed.

Barry was a member of the legislature, speaker of the house, secretary of state, member of congress, United States senator, postmaster general under Jackson and minister to Spain under Jackson. He was born in Virginia in 1784, and died in Liverpool, while on his way to Spain, in 1835.

Detectives Working on a Clew.

Richmond, Ky., Feb. 16.—It is stated on good authority that detectives have been here for the past two days quietly working on a clew which, it is believed, will lead to the arrest here of one or more persons who know more about the assassination of Mr. Goebel than they care to make public. The information which Lee Jones, the Whitley county suspect arrested a few days ago at Frankfort, gave the authorities is what sent the detectives to this city, and from rumors current arrests here would ensue no surprise.

Celebrated Her 103d Birthday.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 18.—Polly Cloud Graves celebrated her 103d birthday anniversary. She was born seven miles from Lexington, on Cane Run creek. Her grandfather was Maj. Thomas Graves, of the staff of Gen. Lafayette, during the revolution. She has all her faculties, but her eyesight is slightly impaired. Of 13 children but two are living. One son, who was cashier of the City National bank here, died two years ago.

Quarreled About Craps.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 16.—Wm. Bradford, a driver for the Louisville Transfer Co., was shot through the left lung by Thos. Borson, a driver for the same company. The affray occurred at the stables. There had been a quarrel on account of a crap game, and Borson claims Bradford was advancing on him with a knife when he shot in self-defense. Bradford will die. Borson surrendered.

Investigating a Tradition.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 17.—J. M. Lowe, of Kansas City, in a letter to Attorney Wallace Muir, says there is a tradition in his family that the land on which the city of Lexington is built was granted to his grandfather, William Lowe, for his services in the war of the revolution. W. H. Polk, a local historian, has been engaged to investigate the "legend," as it is generally considered.

Miners Locked Out.

Williamsburg, Ky., Feb. 17.—Operators of the Proctors' coal mines, at Red Ash, locked out several hundred miners, members of the United Mine Workers of America, who were about to make a demand for a wage increase, in conformance with the recent Indianapolis agreement. The operators decline to employ union men. The Proctor people shipped 50 cars a day south.

Goebel's Remains Still Unburied.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 19.—Messrs. Justus and Arthur Goebel, brothers of the late democratic governor, are here and will remain here until the body of their dead brother is finally consigned to earth. The body still lies in the little chapel in the cemetery, the relations having been slow to determine the exact spot of burial.

Marking the Soldiers' Graves.

Perryville, Ky., Feb. 17.—The committee appointed by the legislature of 1898 to expend $500 for a monument to the 260 confederate soldiers buried on the Perryville battle field, one mile west of here, has arranged to have the work begun at once.

Murder Trial Delayed.

Mt. Vernon, Ky., Feb. 17.—The trial of Attorney E. K. Wilson, charged with the murder of Mary Cloyd, in Laurel county, last year, was called but was postponed because of sickness of Judge Morrow's wife.

COMMITTEE CALL.

One for Kentucky Republicans Will Be Issued in a Few Days—Some of the Candidates.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 18.—Chairman C. M. Barnett, of the republican state central committee, will in a few days call a meeting of his committee in Louisville to set a time for the state convention to elect delegates to the national republican convention. Many names are suggested by the republicans as delegates at large. Among them are W. O. Bradley, Senator Deboe, John W. Yerkes, Sam J. Roberts, W. S. Taylor, Albert S. White and W. A. Gaines.

Those mentioned as possible delegates from the Fifth Congressional district are Postmaster Baker, Charles E. Sapp, Alf Davis, Booker Reed and R. I. James.

It is extremely probable that Baker and Sapp will be the men selected, unless Dr. Baker names R. I. Jones to go in his place.

Medals for Orators.

Cynthiana, Ky., Feb. 18.—The seventh annual meeting of the Midwinter Declamatory union was held at the opera house here. Mr. P. D. Porter, of the Kentucky university, Lexington, won the first prize, his subject being "The Burgomaster's Death." The second medal was awarded to Henry Browning, Ciceronian Society college, Georgetown. Other speakers were D. K. McKinley and W. B. Reese, Winchester; B. S. Van Meter, Richmond; J. T. Gunn, A. and M. college, Lexington, and B. Letcher, Danville. The medals were awarded by Rev. F. L. Norton, pastor of the Baptist church, this city. The judges for the occasion were the Rev. Messrs. McElroy, Oney, Norton, Spears and Haley, of this place.

Senator Harrel Not Indicted.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 19.—The Jefferson county grand jury refused to indict State Senator S. B. Harrel, of Logan county, on John B. Whallen's charge of obtaining money by false pretenses. This action was a decided victory for Senator Harrel, and was shared in by the democratic members of the legislature. It is said that the indictment will be resubmitted to the March grand jury. Harrel charged that Whallen tried to bribe him, and Whallen said Harrel entered into an agreement to defeat the seating of Goebel.

Death of Judge Richard A. Buckner.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 19.—Judge Richard A. Buckner, one of the most noted lawyers of the Kentucky bar of a half century ago, died here, in his 87th year. He was an intense union man during the civil war, and did much to keep Kentucky from seceding. He was commonwealth's attorney and circuit judge for this district, and was defeated for congress in 1863 after a hot campaign. He was one of the commissioners appointed to edit the Kentucky code in 1873, and was speaker of the Kentucky house of representatives in 1851.

They Want to Go to Congress.

Greenup, Ky., Feb. 18.—Hon. W. T. Cole has announced his candidacy for congress from this (the Ninth) congressional district. He is a son of ex-Circuit Judge A. E. Cole, of Maysville, and a lawyer of some note. Hon. Frank Powers, of Grayson, Carter county, and Hon. E. B. Hager, of Ashland, are also aspiring for the nomination, all subject to democracy's call.

Breckenridge Will Speak in Canada.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 19.—Col. W. C. P. Breckenridge has accepted an invitation from the Anglo-Saxon union of Toronto to attend a banquet there on February 22, and respond to a toast "The Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes." Among the others invited to respond to toasts will be Lord Charles Beresford, of England.

Blown Into the Air.

Greenup, Ky., Feb. 18.—The boiler of Boggs & Co.'s large saw and grist mill at Warnock exploded. The entire structure was completely wrecked, causing a loss of several thousand dollars. John Braden and H. N. Ratcliff, two workmen, were blown several feet in the air and are so seriously injured that they will die.

Noted Vocalist Dead.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 17.—W. S. Belknap died at his home in this city of angina pectoris. He was widely known as a singer possessing a magnificent busso profundo voice, being able to reach low D with ease. He went to Europe with Haverly's minstrels, and was connected with a number of opera companies.

Death of George Bettis.

Lancaster, Ky., Feb. 16.—Mr. Geo. Bettis, a prominent citizen of this county, died here of pneumonia. Mr. Bettis was formerly connected with the L. & N. railroad as soliciting freight agent.

Veterans' Arrangements.

Lancaster, Ky., Feb. 16.—Department Commander Joseph H. Browning and staff, of the state G. A. R., are in the city to make preliminary arrangements for the annual encampment, which is to take place here on May 24 and 25.

Shot By a Soldier.

Olympia, Ky., Feb. 16.—John Ige was hot and killed by Garnet Armitage on Salt Lick, five miles from here. Ige has wealthy relatives, and Armitage was a members of the 3d Kentucky volunteer infantry.

LEAF AND BLOSSOM.

Tulip bulbs will not bloom a second season. If you want flowers buy fresh bulbs each spring.

Pansies in the House.—These flowers are not satisfactory when grown in the house in winter. They need a cool, moist atmosphere and an unlimited amount of fresh air.

Soil for Palms.—Palms like a soil of loam better than one of leaf-mold. If the loam has considerable clay in it use sharp, coarse sand liberally. In all cases see that the drainage is good.

The heliotrope has an enormous quantity of fine roots and requires a light, spongy soil. Because of its great number of roots it must be given much more water than such plants as the geranium.

Carnations need a good deal of sunshine. They do best in a rather heavy soil. They need about the same amount of water as geraniums. Shower frequently to prevent the red spider from injuring the plants.

Euonymus is, as a rule, grown for its foliage. It makes a fine decorative plant, with its rich, dark green leaves thickly spotted with yellow. Because of its variegation it is sometimes called the "Gold-Dust Plant."

Rex begonias should be kept rather dry. They do not require a strong light. They do best in a soil of loam and sand well drained. Their foliage should never be showered, but they like an atmosphere containing considerable moisture.

Roses need a soil containing a good deal of loam and some clay. They like to feel the earth firm about their roots. They have but few roots and these are large ones. Plants of this habit, as a general thing, like somewhat heavy soils.

The primula obconica has thousands of fine roots where the geranium has one. To grow these plants well they must never be allowed to dry out, therefore water them daily. If good drainage is provided there will be no danger from over-watering. — Ladies' Home Journal.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

Hamburg added 40 new steamers to its fleet last year; it now numbers 436.

In Michigan last year 4,759,253 barrels of salt were manufactured, an increase of 587,337 over 1898.

The shipyards of Great Britain, all working together, could turn out a big steamship every day of the year.

The output of the Missouri-Kansas mining district last year was nearly $11,000,000, being $3,000,000 greater than in 1898.

One-third of the paper made in the United States during the first six months of 1899 was consumed in newspaper plants.

Mexican capitalists are about to erect four or five large cotton factories in that country. The principal ones will be at Atotonilco, San Martin and Toreon.

The Sault Ste. Marie canal passes two and a half times as much tonnage in the eight months of the navigation season as the Suez canal passes in the entire year.

It is curious that when China is just on the eve of introducing western methods of engineering she should threaten to demolish the greatest engineering work she possesses; that is to say, the Great Wall, erected 200 years B. C. for the purpose of keeping back the Tartars.

RULES BY WHICH TO RISE.

Necessity is the priceless spur.

The world always listens to a man with a will in him.

The man with an idea has ever changed the face of the world.

The lucky man is the man who sees and grasps his opportunity.

Find a way or make one. Everything is either pusher or pushed.

What is put into the first of life is put into the whole of life. Start right.

The first thing you do, if you have not done it, is to fall in love with your work.

A great opportunity will only make you ridiculous unless you are prepared for it.

THE BOY WAS BENEFITED.

His Parents Had a Falling Out and He Came Out a Winner in Consequence.

"The other afternoon," said the man in the box office of a theater, "a boy came to me and said: 'Are these any good?' and I took from him two front row seats for that night which had been torn into a hundred pieces or so, and then cleverly pasted together again. 'Oh, yes, my child, but how did this strange accident happen to the tickets?' The boy replied: 'Why, papa came home with them last night, and showed them to mamma, and he seemed to be in such a good humor somehow that mamma thought it would be a good time then to tell him how she owed over $100 for provisions. She told him of it, but he got mad that he said that every night now he wouldn't come home till after 12 o'clock, and he told me for Heaven's sake, when I got married, to look out for a sensible woman. All the time mamma laughed, and he was getting madder, and so he said she wouldn't go to the theater with him, after that, and he tore the tickets up, and rushed out somewhere alone. He ain't back yet, either, but mamma don't care. I picked up the pieces off the carpet and pasted them together, and if you'll exchange the tickets for matinee ones I guess I'll come down on Saturday with some other fellow and take in the show.' I gave other tickets to the candid kid, and he walked away very well pleased with himself."—Philadelphia Record.

Barnacles on Ocean Cables.

The recent investigations for cable laying in the Pacific Ocean have revealed the interesting fact, that in not upon rock bottom, they gradually become encrusted with barnacles and seaweed, heavy enough to break them. This is like dyspepsia, which, if it is not checked, grows until it breaks down the health. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will prevent as well as cure indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles. It makes weak stomachs strong. All druggists sell it.

A Competent Defense.

The homeliest man in congress is Eddy, of Minnesota. He rather glories in the distinction of ugliness, especially as all his other characteristics are enviable. During his last campaign the enemies of Mr. Eddy charged him with being double faced. He met the charge in a manner that disarmed all criticism. "Great heavens," said Mr. Eddy to his audience, "do you think that if I had two faces I would wear the one I am showing you now?"—Argonaut.

A MINNESOTA FARMER WRITES OF WESTERN CANADA.

Is Now Located There, Farms in His Neighborhood Being Taken by Former U. S. Residents.

The following extracts from a letter written to Mr. Benj. Davis, Canadian Government Agent at St. Paul, Minn., give an excellent idea of what is said of Western Canada by those who have gone there during the past two or three years.

"When we first arrived here and took up our homes on the prairie near Dalesboro, Assa., for a short time we had a fit of the 'blues,' but now all hands are settled to business, hale, hearty and contented, enjoying the finest winter we have ever seen. We have got very comfortably situated, with considerable preparation for a crop, and all hopeful. I think this is a very fine country, and if the past season's crop is not an exception, which they claim not, I believe this is going to be the Wheat Field of the West. I am filing up fast. In this township last spring there were 25 quarter-sections of land vacant and to-day there is not one; I can stand at my house and count 10 houses where there was not one last spring, with six more to go up this spring. This is only a sample of what is going on all round. We intend to build a church next summer, right close to my place, so we will be strictly in line. It would have amused you to have been here last spring. There were crowds of land-seekers, and sometimes in the spring the prairie is not very inviting, and of course lots were discontented. There was one in the crowd who jumped a notion for putting a letter in the paper, only for which he never would have come here, and he was very hostile, but eventually he got a place, and to-day claims he would not take a Thousand Dollars and move out, so I am glad he is satisfied.

"Well, my dear Sir, as Arthur Finney is about to move out in March, with his family, and also one of my sons, anything you can do for them to assist them along and to make things smooth as possible, will be greatly appreciated by me. I will close for this time, and will write from time to time to let you know we are living. Drop us a few lines to let us know how things are moving in St. Paul. Yours Respectfully,

"ALEX CAMERON."

Criticising a Professor.

A professor of English literature in the Kansas university has posted this notice: "In communicating with themselves the students will whisper as often as possible." He was horrified next morning to find this written under his notice: "In order to say, talk to yourself in whispers as much as you can."—Chicago Chronicle.

FACE HUMORS

Pimples, Blackheads, Red Rough, Oily Skin

PREVENTED BY

Cuticura SOAP

MILLIONS of Women Use CUTICURA SOAP, exclusively, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston. "How to Cure Face Humors and all other Humors," free.

A friend of ours tells us that no member of the United States Supreme Court leaves Washiugtou to sit with a U. S. Circuit Judge and assist him in trying cases before said U. S. Circuit Judge. Is he right or wroug?

Thursday morning James Utz was repairing the pike below towu and on the q't. informed us that he was tired of hauliug rock and doing such hard labor at 62 years of age, and hoped soou to be retired to quiet, peaceful life on one of his farms. Mr. Utz has indeed lived an active, busiuess life for twenty years to our knowledge, and deserves a rest.

The society editor of the Union Blade attended a masquerade party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tauner near Gunpowder, and reports a grand time. The young people met at the home of Wm. Surface and proceeded to get up their toilets—some striking ones were gotten up, and among them were two in particular, that brought the house down on sight. When everything was ready they proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tauner, where bright fires and a warm, hospitable reception awaited them. Five rooms were given up to the young people and one of the most eujoyable evenings was passed by all present.

The 20th century problem has been discussed from the Supreme Court of the U. S., to the humblest cottage in California; from the halls of Parliament in England to the dance halls of Canada; from the Vatican in Rome to the Enquirer office in Cincinnati; from New York City to the four corners of our earth, and yet, we jog along doiug business on the old fashioned 19th century basis. Auto-mobile carriages go spinning at the rate of 1900 miles in 19 days; electric cars whiz and buzz through streets of towns that have 1900 iuhabitants with 1900 different kinds of ideas about the 20th century problem; telegraph lines 1900 miles long stretch over 1900 hills and valleys carrying messages of sorrow and joy to 1900 kiuds of people in 1900 different counties, towns and villages; railroads nearly twice 1900 miles long with fully 1900 trains of "fast flyers," cannon-ball expresses, mogul rushers goiug at the speed of 1900 miles in 19 hours at least; steamboats that carry 1900 tons, plow the river for 1900 miles carrying 1900 kinds of freight; steam ships go 1900 miles in 1900 directions at 1900 different rates of speed with 1900 passengers and would keep going 1900 years if a ship canal extended all around the earth; men and women ride 1900 miles on bicycles from and to 1900 different parts of the country, using 1900 kinds of notions about steering and peddling their machines, and, still some people say we are not in the 19th century. But, even if we are not in the 19th century (and we are for the Enquirer said so) what then are we to believe? that chewing tobacco will be used as an army ration instead of embalmed beef? Will it make the Boers lick the British lion less or the Phillipinos love Uncle Sam more? Will it "put any ice" with a man who has 1900 kinds of politics and no party to give him a seat in the amen corner? What odds does it make to a man with 1900 wives, so long as Uncle Sam sends him a check for $10,000 every 12 months, and protects him with a battleship? Does it keep the stars from jiugling together and making love, in sunny Italy? Will the Sistine Chapel be less beautiful or the Vatican less imposing? Wou't American girls marry many nobles and ignobles just the same? Will it keep 1900 Americans from going to the Paris Exposition? Wont money always buy votes, and wont the 1900th man who sells his vote be the same kiud of a fool that the 19th one was? Does the century have anything to do with Tom Burkett and Pete Adams fox hunting, with Owen Conner licking the tobacco business, or Mr. Manlius Garnett being the gentlest of gentlemen; with Jeff Eddius being Sheriff or Martin Weaver running a saw mill 20 years ago? Wont the world grow better as it grows wiser and learns how to eat rice with chop-sticks?

Among many other friends we were glad to meet, last Friday, was Jordon Beall, who has just recovered from that terrible accideut, and is able to be out again.

Eli Surface purchased a new wagon in Cincinnati last Saturday. Although it was one of the most disagreeable days we have had this winter he went the round trip without an overcoat.

The masquerade party given by B. C. Tanner, last Thursday night, was a success in all of its features. Everybody was invited and about 100 responded to the luvitations. Every one present enjoyed themselves and all join in thanking Mr. and Mrs. Tanner for their kind hospitality.

In response to a summons the writer, with J. C. Hankins, attended the funeral services of our esteemed friend, Ab Quick, at Hebron church, last Friday. He has for several years been a sufferer of that dreaded disease, consumption, and the final summons came Wednesday, the 14th inst., and he was called to his reward. He was a noble, christian gentleman, always ready to help the destitute, and did many other noble deeds which characterized his christian life. He was a member of Hebron church, and the funeral services were conducted by Pastor Lentz, last Friday. His many friends here extend their sympathy to his devoted wife in her sad bereavement. After the services were concluded, the remains were placed in the Hebron vault in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Our town was thrown into a state of sadness and gloom, last Saturday evening by the announcement of the killing of Frank Stucky, one of our residents. He was employed at W. D. Norton's, 6th and Carr streets, Cincinnati, general repairers of machinery. Mr. Stucky was sent out with another man to move a large steam boiler to the shop. They were raising the boiler with jack-screws so they could run the wagon under it, when one of the screws broke, the boiler falling, catching Mr. Stucky's head under it, killing him instantly. Mr. Stucky was 38 years of age, and leaves a wife and 3 children to mourn his death, and great is their loss, for he was a loving husband and father and the support of the little family; but what is their loss we hope is his gain. He had many friends here, being a hard working, upright man, and he will be missed by many. The remains were brought here, Monday, and interred in the cemetery Tuesday evening at 2 o'clock.

A party of six from this place and Flickertown visited Aurora last Saturday. While there they dallied with the cup that drives dull care away to such an extent that when they reached the Kentucky shore they felt as rich as Rockefeller and as independent as wood sawyers. Not carlig for such small articles as fellows they were thrown away or abandoned on the road: 3 pairs shoes, 2 whisky bottles (empty), 4 pairs mittens, 2 mufflers, 1 red hat, 2 sets harness, 1 road wagon loaded with coal, 1 barrel flour.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one evening," says Wesley Nelson, of Hamiltou, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith lu auy medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it accordiug to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism. Sold by W. F. Local News.

Misses Mary and Catharine Furlong came very near losing their residence by fire, Tuesday morning It was about three o'clock when Miss Mary awoke very suddenly from some unknown cause, and at once smelled smoke. Her movements awoke Miss Catharine, who also noticed the odor of smoke, when she hastened down stairs where she found the sitting room filled with smoke, while a lively blaze was getting in its work on the floor in front of the grate. A few buckets of water extinguished the flames, when it was discovered that besides a large hole in the floor several pairs of stockings and three rugs had been consumed. It is supposed that the stockings were hung to dry too close to the fire, and they caught and communicated the fire to the rugs. It was narrow escape

The public school in District No. 50, closed January 30th. Grade 4.—Stella Barker, Bertha Setters, Julia Staley, Pearl Bachelor, Blanch Garland, Cleveland Burns. Grade 3.—Bertha Mirrick, Minnie Acra, Cora McGuire, Joe Presser, The following pupils were neither absent or tardy throughout the term: Ray McMullen, Lena McMullen, Sadie Williamson, Grace Slayback, Blanch Garland, Stella Garland, Erastus Rice, Cora McGuire, Minnie Acra, Cleveland Burns, Carrie Louden.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham, of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1 Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsner, Florence.

R. S. Crisler's residence came very near being destroyed by fire, Sunday afternoon. Some paper had been thrown on the grate, and some of it went up the chimney and fell on and ignited the roof. Charles Birkle, of Bellevue, who was returning from Covington, discovered the lively blaze, and informed Mr. Crisler of the threatened distruction of his home, about which time Miss Artie Hughes, who had also discovered the fire, informed her father, who was soon on the scene. An area of shingles about a yard square was burned off. In a few minutes more the fire would have been beyond control.

James W. Terrill, a well-known attorney, of Covington, and Miss Mary E. Tagley, of Hamlet, O., were married last Thursday evening by Rev. George A. Miller, of the First Christian Church. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Terrill left for Memphis, Tennessee, to visit Dr. Smyth Terrill, a brother of the groom, himself a newly made benedict. Mrs. Terrill is a daughter of Capt. William Tagley, of the revenue service in Ohio.

A. D. Quick, 45, of the Hebron neighborhood, died of consumption, last Wednesday night, and the remains were placed in the Hebron vault on Friday. Mr. Quick had been afflicted with consumption for many years, and during all this time he bore his affliction with a christian fortitude. Mr. Quick was liked by all who knew him, and in their bereavement the family have the sympathy of a very large circle of friends.

Frank Stucky, of Florence, aud a son of Rabbi Stucky, of the Locust Grove neighborhood, was killed in Cincinnati, last Saturday. He was assisting to handle a large boiler, which slipped off of a jack-screw, mashing the life out of the unfortunate young man. He leaves a wife and children.

The fine country residence of Elijah Petit, ex-Representative of Grant Co., was destroyed by fire, last Saturday. His daughter was lying critically ill at the time, and was removed half a mile to a neighbor's house.

W. T. Grant, from over on Gunpowder, came to town, Saturday morning, and was surprised to find "below zero" weather here, while at his house the mercury was 2 above 0. He says there has been no zero weather at his house this wiuter. He ought to advertise his place as a winter resort.

Our young friend, Clinton Blankenbeker, of Florence, made us a brief call, Sunday afternoon, but to him, the call he made afew hours later, was much pleasanter. In this connection we desire to say to Messrs. W. A. Tanner and P. L. Aylor, of Gunpowder, that the business they entrusted to him was attended to promptly.

Hon J. M. Lassing, of Boone county, was in attendance at Circuit Court on Tuesday last. Mr. Lassing is the County Attorney of Boone, and is spoken of in connection with the race for Congress in this district this fall. He is a splendid good fellow, of ability and judgment and is a Democrat beyond reproach.—Williamstown Courier.

Dr. Davis, of Soochow, China, after a stay of ten days in Burlington, left Tuesday morning, the 20th, for Worster, Ohio, where his family live. He expressed warm appreciatiou of the hospitality and kindness received in Boone county. The magic lantern lecture Monday night was well attended. The collection for mission purposes amounted to $11 60.

Are We in the 20th Century?

At the end of my article on the 20th Century in last week's number I find the following remarks:

[Rev. Kolb ought to have informed the readers how historians recorded dates prior to the time they began writing Jany. 1, Anno Domini 1.—Ed.]

The answer is very simple. Evidently as soon as the Old Testament was closed by historians, the New Era Anno Domini began, and certainly the New Christian Era began at once with the very first day, and historians marked that day simply as Jan. 1st, Anno Domini. The next day was Jan. 2, Anno Domini; The next month was Feb. 1st, Anno Domini, and so on through all succeeding months of the year, till the New Era reached Dec. 31st, Anno Domini, which completed the 1st year of the 1st century Anno Domini. The very next day, Jan. 1st, Anno Domini 1, was the beginning of the 2d year Anno Domini. And so when historians recorded Jan. 1st, Anno Domini 10, it was the first day of the 11th year of the 1st century. Jan. 1st. 100, was the first day of the 2d century; and likewise Jan. 1st, 1900, was the first day of the 20th century.

Respcty, Rev. B. J. KOLB.

The indictment against the Watsons for the shooting near Erlanger on one Suuday about two years ago, was, some time since, dismissed, and resubmitted to the graud jury, at Covington, and a few days ago that body returued a new indictment charging John, Fannie, Elva and Berte Watson with murder. It will be remembered that Ben Michaels and a hired hand of Watson's were killed in the scrap.

Walton.

Walton is proud, and well it may be, of possessing a dramatic club that will compare with any of the kind anywhere. Though it was bitterly cold and a blizzard from the north was almost chilling the marrow in ones bones, yet the people of town turned out well and the Thespians were greeted with a very fair house, and those who braved the icy breeze were well paid for their hardihood.

The first piece presented was the tragedy of "Michael Erle or the Maniac Lover," with Mr. Joe Reed as Michael Erle. He was most admirably supported by a cast of characters all of whom were making their debut in the histrionic art. The acting of Mr. Reed was perfect, and his support was what might have been expected of a first class company of trained artists instead of one entirely new to the stage. Mr. Eskew, as the villain of the piece, scored an immense success; Mr. E. C. Mann and Miss Lottie Holder, made the most decided hit, but all were good—well up in their parts and doing the stage work as if they had been brought up to it. Too much credit cannot be awarded to Miss Mary Rouse, Miss Graham Roberts, Chas. Chambers, W. L. Rouse and the other members of the troupe. The second piece was "The Toodles," which was also most admirably performed and greeted with the greatest applause. Mr. Reed was as good in comedy as in the tragic role. Miss Lucy Fields was the feature that brought down the house. No amateur ever had a better conception of the part than she exhibited as Mrs. Timothy Toodles. But Walton is ringing with praises of the whole club.

Limaburg.

Everett Dixon killed hogs Monday. Bad weather is causing the farmers to lose many lambs.

All the funerals in Paris are conducted by a single syndicate, which has a licensed monopoly of the business. There is a regular tariff of rates, a first class funeral costing $2,000 and a cheap or ninth class $5.

All armies are liable to night scares which, at times, almost amount to a panic. On one occasion a British regiment in India marching over the ghauts on its return from maneuvers at Chinchwud, was thrown into temporary confusion by the bolting of a couple of pack oxen laden with cooking pots.

Tarantulas are being used in Australia for the sake of their webs, the filaments of which are made into thread for balloons. They are lighter than silk and, when woven, lighter than canvas. Each tarantula yields from 20 to 40 yards of filament, of which eight twisted together form a single thread.

With the exhaustion of the zinc mines in Wales and on the continent of Europe, and the increasing demand for zinc in the construction of electrical appliances, and in the syanide process for the reduction of gold ore, the development of areas where the zinc may be mined is watched with considerable interest by mining men and manufacturers in this country.

English technical journals, which were very sore over the award to an American firm of the Atbara bridge contract, are now bragging over the performance of a Wednesbury company, in getting the material for the new Tugela bridge ready for shipment within a month of receiving the contract. The bridge is 105 feet long, and required 750 tons of material.

Gov. Crane, of Massachusetts, is a man of much sympathy and charity. In the paper mills which he owns in Dalton, a pension system exists, practically, if not nominally. There are not a few aged men in town, former employes in the mills, whose sole duty now is to walk to the office and draw their pay—for service loyally rendered in the past. A strike in the mills has not been known in the three generations of family management.

A small contingent of Boers has realized the uselessness of merely tearing up a section of railway and throwing the rails into a stream—the usual Boer method of destroying a line. What they do now is to heat the center of a section to a white heat, and carry the rail by its two cool ends to the nearest tree or telegraph pole round which they twist it in such a way that it is absolutely impossible to use it again for railway purposes.

Although not generally known, it is nevertheless a fact that Washington, the fourteenth city of the union in point of population, contains the greatest Negro population of them all. There are more Negroes in Washington than in any other city of the union, not excepting the great cities of St. Louis, Baltimore and New Orleans, with more than double its population. There are nearly three times as many black people in Washington as St. Louis.

In the calendar year 1899 our manufacturers increased their exports over 1898 by as much as 25 per cent, making a record of $380,787,891. The importations of materials for use in manufacturing increased 33 per cent. The proportion of exports of manufacturers in 1899 to total exports increased to 30.4 per cent. The chief items of increase were copper, cotton goods, agricultural implements, leather goods, mineral oils and fertilizers.

At Ladysmith, recently, Lieut. Col. Sir Henry Rawlinson, of the headquarters staff, was aloft in a war balloon making a reconnoissance when a shrapnel shell went clean through the balloon and burst some distance beyond. Had it exploded while traversing the gas bag it would have been good by forever; as it was, the balloon sank to the earth without any exhibition of undue haste. The next time it ascended a black patch showed where the damage occurred and that was all.

A Brooklyn physician has succeeded without operation and by the use of drugs alone, in restoring sight to eyes which have been for years totally blind. Three remarkable cures have been effected. One man into whose eyes the light had not passed for 20 years is now able to see objects within a few feet. Another, afflicted for 10 years, is able to walk about the street and have the pleasure of seeing beauties in life and nature which he never even dared hope to look on again.

Now that Uncle Dick Thompson is gone, after living his four score and ten, not a few persons will be drawing conclusions as to his mode of life and its results. The man who hates to give up the fragrant weed, despite the fact that his physician tells him he smokes too much, will exclaim: "Bosh! Look at Uncle Dick." He smoked altogether a cigar which would have been a cigar 36 miles long if all he consumed had been put end to end. In later years he smoked but seven or eight cigars a day, but during 70 years he averaged 20 a day, or say a total of 500,000.

LIVING IN CHRIST.

Dr. Talmage Speaks of the Benefits of a Religious Existence.

How It Makes Its Devotees Happier —Practical Religion the Friend of Longevity — Gospel of Everyday Life.

(Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.)

This sermon of Dr. Talmage presents a gospel for this life as well as the next and shows what religion does for the prolongation of earthly existence: text, Psalm xci., 16: "With long life will I satisfy him."

Through the mistake of its friends religion has been chiefly associated with sickbeds and graveyards. The whole subject to many people is odorous with chloride of carbolic acid. There are people who cannot pronounce the word religion without hearing in it the clipping chisel of the tombstone cutter. It is high time that this thing were changed and that religion instead of being represented as a hearse to carry out the dead should be represented as a chariot in which the living are to triumph.

Religion, so far from subtracting from one's vitality, is a glorious addition. It is sanitive, curative, hygienic. It is good for the eyes, good for the ears, good for the spleen, good for the digestion, good for the nerves, good for the muscles. When David, in another part of the Psalms, prays that religion may be dominant, he does not speak of it as a mild sickness or an emaciation or an attack of moral and spiritual cramp. He speaks of it as "the saving health of all nations," while God in the text promises longevity to the pious, saying: "With long life will I satisfy him."

The fact is that men and women die too soon. It is high time that religion joined the hand of medical science in attempting to improve human longevity. Adam lived 930 years. Methuselah lived 969 years. As late in the history of the world as Vespasian there were at one time in his empire 45 people 135 years old. So far down as the sixteenth century Peter Zartan died at 185 years of age. I do not say that religion will ever take the race back to antediluvian longevity, but I do say that the length of human life will be greatly improved.

It is said in Isaiah lxv., 20: "The child shall die a hundred years old." Now, if, according to Scripture, the child is to be a hundred years old, may not the men and women reach to 300 and 400 and 500? The fact is that we are mere dwarfs and skeletons compared with some of the generations that are to come. Take the African race. They have been under bondage for centuries. Give them a chance and they develop a Toussaint l'Ouverture. And if the white race shall be brought out from the perdition of sin and hell be the body what shall be the soul? Religion has only just touched our world. Give it full power for a few centuries, and who can tell what will be the strength of man and the beauty of woman and the longevity of all?

My design is to show that practical religion is the friend of longevity; I prove it, first, from the fact that it makes the care of your health a positive Christian duty. Whether we shall keep early or late hours, whether we shall take food digestible or indigestible, whether there shall be thorough or incomplete mastication, are questions very often referred to the realm of whimsicality, but the Christian man lifts this whole problem of health into the accountable and the divine. He says: "God has given me this body, and he has called it the temple of the Holy Ghost, and to deface the altars or mar its walls or crumble its pillars is a God-defying sacrilege." He sees God's caligraphy in every page—anatomical and physiological. He says: "God has given me a wonderful body for noble purposes." That arm with 32 curious bones wielded by 46 curious muscles, and all under the brain's telegraphy—350 pounds of blood rushing through the heart every hour—the heart in 24 hours beating 100,000 times, during the same time the lungs taking in 57 hogsheads of air, and all this mechanism not more mighty than delicate and easily disturbed and demolished.

The Christian man says to himself: "If I hurt my nerves, if I hurt my brain, if I hurt any of my physical faculties, I insult God and call for dire retribution." Why did God tell the Levites not to offer to Him in sacrifice animals imperfect and diseased? He meant to tell us in all the ages that we are to offer to God our very best physical condition, and a man who through irregular or gluttonous eating ruins his health, is not offering to God such a sacrifice. Why did Paul write for his cloak at Troas? Why should such a great man as Paul be anxious about a thing so insignificant as an overcoat? It was because he knew that with pneumonia and rheumatism he would not be worth half as much to God and the church as with respiration easy and foot free.

An intelligent Christian man would consider it an absurdity to kneel down at night and pray and ask God's protection while at the same time he kept the windows of his bedroom tight shut against fresh air. He would just as soon think of going to the top of his house and leaping off and then praying to God to keep him from getting hurt. Just as long as you refer this whole subject of physical health to the realm of whimsicality, or to the pastry cook, or to the butcher, or to the baker, or to the apothecary, or to the clothier, you are not acting like a Christian. Take care of all your physical forces—nervous, muscular, bone, brain, cellular tissue—for all you must be brought to judgment.

Smoking your nervous system into flagrancy, burning out the coating of your stomach with wine logwooded and strychnined, walking with thin shoes to make your feet look delicate, pinched at the waist until you are nigh cut in two, and neither part worth anything, groaning about sick headache and palpitation of the heart, which you think came from God, when they came from your own folly.

What right has any man or woman to deface the temple of the Holy Ghost? What is the ear? Why, it is the whispering gallery of the human soul. What is the eye? It is the observatory God constructed, its telescope sweeping the heavens. So wonderful are these bodies that God names his own attributes after different parts of them. His omniscience—it is God's eye. His omnipresence—it is God's ear. His omnipotence—it is God's arm. The upholstery of the midnight heavens—it is the work of God's fingers. His life-giving power—it is the breath of the Almighty. His dominion—"the government shall be upon his shoulder." A body so divinely honored and so divinely constructed—let us be careful not to abuse it.

When it becomes a Christian duty to take care of your health, is not the whole tendency toward longevity? If I toss my watch about recklessly and drop it on the pavement and wind it up any time of day or night I happen to think of it and often let it run down while you are careful with your watch and never abuse it and wind it up just at the same hour every night and put it in a place where it will not suffer from the violent changes of atmosphere, which watch will last the longer? Common sense answers. Now, the human body is God's watch. You see the face of the watch, but the beating of the heart is the ticking of the watch. Oh, be careful and do not let it run down!

There are aged people who would have been dead 25 years ago but for the defenses and the equipoise of religion. You have no more natural resistance than hundreds of people who lie in the cemeteries to-day, slain by their own vices. The doctors made their case as kind and pleasant as they could, and it was called congestion of the brain or something else, but the snakes and the blue flies that seemed to crawl over the pillow in the sight of the delirious patient showed what was the matter with him. You, the aged Christian man, walked along by that unhappy one until you came to the golden pillar of the Christian life. You went to the right; he went to the left. That is all the difference between you. Oh, if this religion is a protest against all forms of dissipation, then it is an illustrious friend of longevity. "With long life will I satisfy him.

Suppose you had a supernatural neighbor who came in and said: "Sir, I want you to call on me in every exigency. I am your fast friend; I could fall back on $20,000,000; I can foresee a panic ten years; I hold the controlling stock in 20 of the best monetary institutions of this country; whenever you are in any trouble call on me and I will help you; you can have my money and you can have my influence; here is my hand in pledge of it." How much would you worry about business? Why, you would say: "I'll do the best I can, and then I'll depend on my friend's generosity for the rest."

Now more than that is promised to every Christian business man. God says to him: "I own New York and London and St. Petersburg and Peking and Australia and California are mine; I can foresee a panic a thousand years; I have all the resources of the universe; and I am your fast friend; when you get in business trouble or any other trouble, call on me and I will help you; here is my hand in pledge of omnipotent deliverance." How much should that man worry? Not much. What lion will dare to put his paw on that Daniel? Is there not rest in this? Is there not an eternal vacation in this?

"Oh," you say, "there is a man who asked God for a blessing in a certain enterprise, and he lost $5,000 in it. Explain that." I will. Yonder is a factory, and one wheel is going north, and the other wheel is going south, and one wheel plays laterally, and the other plays vertically. I go to the manufacturer, and I say: "O manufacturer, your machinery is a contradiction. Why do you not make all the wheels go one way?" "Well," he says, "I make them to go in opposite directions on purpose, so that they produce the right result. You go downstairs and examine the carpets we are turning out in this establishment, and you will see." I go down on the other floor, and I see the carpets, and I am obliged to confess that, though the wheels in that factory go in opposite directions, they turn out a beautiful result, and while I am standing there looking at the exquisite fabric an old Scripture passage comes into my mind: "All things work together for good to them who love God." Is there not rest in that? Is there not tonic in that?—Is there not longevity in that?

Suppose a man is all the time worried about his reputation. One man says he lies, another says he is stupid, another says he is dishonest, and half a dozen printing establishments attack him, and he is in a great state of excitement and worry and fume and cannot sleep. But religion comes to him and says: "Man, God is on your side. He will take care of your reputation. If God be with you, who can be against you?" How much should that man worry about his reputation? Not much. If that broker who some years ago in Wall street, after he had lost money, sat down and wrote a farewell letter to his wife before he blew his brains out—if, instead of taking out of his pocket a pistol, he had taken out a well-read New Testament, there would have been one less suicide. O nervous and feverish people of the world, try this Almighty sedative. You will find it 2,525 years long, under its soothing power. It is not choral that you want or morphine that you want. It is the Gospel of Jesus Christ. "With long life will I satisfy him."

Again, practical religion is a friend of longevity in the fact that it removes all corroding cure about a future existence. Every man wants to know what is to become of him. If you get on board a rail train, you want to know at what depot it is going to stop. If you get on board a ship, you want to know into what harbor it is going to run, and if you should tell me you have no interest in what is to be your future destiny I would in as polite a way as I know tell you I did not believe you. Before I had this matter settled with reference to my future existence the question almost worried me into ruined health. The anxieties men have upon this subject put together would make a martyrdom. This is a state of awful unhealthiness. There are people who fret themselves to death for fear of dying.

I want to take the strain off your nerves and the depression off your soul, and I make two or three experiments. Experiment the first: When you go out of this world, it does not make any difference whether you have been good or bad, or whether you believed truth or error, you will go straight to glory. "Impossible," you say. "My common senses as well as my religion teaches that the bad and the good cannot live together forever. You give me no comfort in that experiment." Experiment the second: When you leave this world, you will go into an intermediate state where you can get converted and prepared for Heaven. "Impossible," you say; "as the tree falleth, so it must lie, and I cannot postpone to an intermediate state that reformation which ought to have been effected in this state." Experiment the third: There is no future world. When a man dies, that is the last of him. Do not worry about what you are to do in a future state of being; you will not do anything. "Impossible," you say. "There is something that tells me that death is not the appendix, but the preface; there is something that tells me that on this side of the grave I only get started and that I shall go on forever. My power to think says forever, my affections say forever, my capacity to enjoy or suffer forever."

Well, you defeat me in my three experiments. I have only one more to make, and if you defeat me in that I am exhausted. A mighty one on a knoll back of Jerusalem one day, the skies filled with forked lightnings and the earth filled with volcanic disturbances, turned his pale and agonized face toward the Heavens and said: "I take the sins and sorrows of the ages into my own heart. I am the expiation. Witness earth and Heaven and hell, I am the expiation." And the hammer struck Him and the spears pierced him, and Heaven thundered, "The wages of sin is death!" "The soul that sinneth it shall die!" "I will by no means clear the guilty!" Then there was silence for half an hour, and the lightnings were drawn back into the scabbard of the sky and the earth ceased to quiver and all the colors of the sky began to shift themselves into a rainbow woven out of the falling tears of Jesus, and there was red as of the bloodshedding and there was blue as of the bruising and there was green as of the heavenly foliage and there was orange as of the day dawn. And along the line of the blue I saw the words, "I was bruised for their iniquities." And along the line of the red I saw the words, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." And along the line of the green I saw the words, "The leaves of the tree of life for the healing of the nations." And along the line of the orange I saw the words, "The dayspring from on high hath visited us."

And then I saw the storm was over, and the rainbow rose higher and higher until it seemed retreating to another Heaven, and planting one column of its colors on one side the eternal hill and planting the other column of its colors on the other side the eternal hill it rose upward and upward, and, behold, there was a rainbow about the throne.

Accept that sacrifice and quit worrying. Take the tonic, the inspiration, the longevity, of this truth. Religion is sunshine; that is health. Religion is fresh air and pure water; that is healthy. Religion is warmth; that is healthy. Ask all the doctors, and they will tell you that a quiet conscience and pleasant anticipations are hygienic. I offer you perfect peace now and hereafter.

What do you want in the future world? Tell me, and you shall have it. Orchards? There are the trees with 12 manner of fruits, yielding fruit every month. Water scenery? There is the river of life, from under the throne of God, clear as crystal, and the sea of glass mingled with fire. Do you want music? There are the oratorio of the "Creation," led on by Adam, and the oratorio of the "Red Sea," led on by Moses, and the oratorio of the Messiah," led on by St. Paul, while the archangel, with swinging baton, controls the 144,000 who make up the orchestra.

Do you want reunion? There are your dead children waiting to kiss you, waiting to embrace you, waiting to twist garlands in your hair. You have been accustomed to open the door on this side the sepulcher; I open the door on the other side of the sepulcher. You have been accustomed to walk in the wet grass on the top of the grave; I show you the underside of the grave. The bottom has fallen out, and the long ropes with which the pallbearers let down your dead let them clear through into Heaven. Glory be to God for this robust, healthy, religion! It will have a tendency to make you live long in this world, and in the world to come you will have eternal life. "With long life will I satisfy him."

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Senate—The following bills were passed: To encourage enlistment in the navy by providing successful applicants with an outfit valued at $50; authorizing the president to nominate Brevet Maj. Alexander Stewart Webb, on the retired list of the army, as a lieutenant colonel; to authorize Hon. A. S. Hundy, at present minister to Greece, Roumania and Servia, to accept the decoration tendered him by the shah of Persia; to authorize the following naval officers to accept orders and decorations tendered to them by the government of Venezuela: Rear Adm. W. T. Sampson, Capts. H. C. Taylor, F. A. Cook, B. Sicbee, F. E. Chadwick and C. F. Goodrich, Commanders W. W. Reed, J. H. Dayton, C. M. Symonds and C. C. Todd; granting permission for the erection of a bronze statue in Washington in honor of Gen. Francis E. Spinner, late treasurer of the United States, and appropriating $2,500 for a pedestal for the preservation of the Private Constitution, the measure providing that the ship should be restored as nearly as possible to its original condition.

House—The $5 private pension bills, favorably acted upon by the committee on the whole at last Friday night's session, were passed. A resolution to print 15,000 copies of the reports of the Philippine commission was adopted. Bills were introduced as follows: Providing for the erection in Washington of a statue of Lincoln and appropriating $500,000 for the purpose; prohibiting corporations, trusts, etc., from contributing to campaign funds or for influencing or intimidating employes; providing for a commission to adjust the indebtedness of the Central Branch of the Union Pacific railroad to the government; an amendment to the interstate commerce law so as to give the commission greater powers; prohibiting the transportation of convict-made goods.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Senate—The financial debate was continued. Two great speeches, one in favor of the pending senate substitute measure and the other in opposition to it, were delivered, and both were listened to by senators with close attention. The first was delivered by Mr. Allison (Ia.), the ranking member of the finance committee, who presented his answers to the points raised against the pending senate bill. Mr. Jones (Nev.) declared that the bill was vicious and unwarranted, conferring too great power upon national banks and fastening the country to a golden currency. He discussed the question from a historical and philosophical viewpoint.

House—The members of the New York delegation held a meeting at which they were apprised of Representative Chickering's death, and appropriate resolutions were drafted for presentation to the house. The dead member's desk was draped and wreathed in flowers when the house met at noon. Payne (N. Y.) then made the announcement of Mr. Chickering's death. As a further mark of respect the house adjourned at 12:25.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Senate—The routine business was brief. Immediately after it was concluded the financial bill was presented by the chair, and after 2 o'clock the debate proceeded under the ten minute rule and at times became spirited and interesting. A test vote, indicating approximately the majority on the passage of the bill, was taken. Mr. Chandler (New., R.) offered an amendment to authorize the president to appoint commissioners to any international bimetallic conference that might be called, and it was defeated by a vote of 45 to 21.

House—The house entered upon the consideration of the executive, legislative and judicial appropriation bill. Before Mr. Hemenway (Ind.), who was in charge of the bill, called it up, the reports on the contested election case of Aldrich vs. Robbins from the Fourth Alabama district were submitted. The majority reported in favor of the contestant, and the minority in favor of the sitting member. No action was taken.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senate—The senate passed the gold currency bill by the decisive majority of 46 to 28. Only two of the amendments were adopted, viz.: One offered by the finance committee keeping the door open to international bimetallism and one by Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, providing for national banks with $25,000 capital in town of not over 1,000. The bill as passed provides that the dollar of 25 8-10 grains of gold nine-tenths fine shall be the standard unit of value and that all forms of United States money shall be maintained at a parity with it, and that treasury notes and greenbacks shall be redeemable in gold.

House—The house completed 26 of the 34 pages of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill without amendment. Several general questions of a very wide range of topics were touched upon. Mr. Bonteli (Ill.), Mr. Miers (Ind.) and Mr. Bankhead (Ala.) discussed the Nicaragua question; Mr. Grosvenor (O.) and Mr. Gillette (Mass.), civil service reform; Mr. Hitt (Ill.), pensions, and Mr. Underwood (Ala.), his resolution to repeal the fifteenth amendment to the constitution.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Senate—Consideration of the financial measure having been concluded, discussion of the Philippine question was resumed in the senate. Mr. McEnery (dem., La.) strongly opposed the permanent occupation of the islands and believed the United States ought to relinquish them as soon as the authority of the country had been established. He read at length a protest against the ratification of the treaty of Paris, but beyond that formality nothing was done with it.

House—At the opening of the session Mr. Bennett, the secretary of the senate, announced to the house the passage of the currency bill by the senate. Mr. Overstreet (Ind.), who had charge of the house bill, asked unanimous consent that the senate amendments be disagreed to and the house agree to a conference. There being no objection, it was so ordered. The house then went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. By a vote of 75 to 67 the provision for the civil service commissioners was stricken out. The house will reverse this action as usual on an aye and no vote. After 76 pages of the 84 pages in dispute of the committee arose. The night session for pensions was postponed until Monday night.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Senate—Not in session.

House—After an all day's debate the legislative appropriation bill was passed without division. The amendment striking out the provisions for the civil service commission was defeated by a vote of 74 to 123. The following bills were introduced: Authorizing the appropriation of $525,000 for the improvement of Lorain harbor, in consonance with the original bonding act; for the relief of the widow of Lake Company H, 23d Ohio volunteers, at $20 a month; for pension Stephen J. Watts, Company C, 4th Kentucky infantry, at $50 a month.

Senator Elkins Injured.

Washington, Feb. 19.—Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, fell on the icy sidewalk near the capitol during the snow storm Saturday afternoon, sustaining bruises about the body and a general shake-up. The attending physician says his condition is not serious.

Had a Narrow Escape From Death.

Columbus, O., Feb. 19.—State Railway Commissioner Kayler and his wife were nearly asphyxiated by escaping fumes from a natural gas furnace. They were found unconscious, and Mrs. Kayler is still in dunger from the inhalation of the deadly gas.

River Steamer Sunk.

Rosedale, Miss., Feb. 19.—The steamer New Mattie, of Memphis sprung a leak and sank near the mouth of White river. Two Negro deck hands were drowned. The general merchandise portion of the cargo is a total loss. No estimate of the property loss is given.

The Highest Ever Recorded.

Whitehall, N. Y., Feb. 15.—The water in Lake Champlain is a foot above the highest mark ever recorded. There are numerous washouts on the Delaware & Hudson road.

For Those Readers Who Are Keeping Up with the War Literature.

An Afrikander, trekking from Schnin's Hoogte to Palapsie with a load of biltong halted by a fontein at the foot of a kloof. A Voortrekker suddenly appeared from behind a kopje, waving a vierkleur.

"Vorlog!" shouted the Voortrekker.

"Dop!" replied the Afrikander, who was a man of ready wit.

"Produce it," said the Voortrekker, "though I am no dopper."

The Afrikander's voorlooper, who was standing on the disselboom munching mealies, jumped off and started on a run toward a kraanz. In jumping a shirt his foot slipped on a klip and he fell into a donga. The others, after much dop, got into a heated argument in Taal over the quickest way to the nearest dorp. One said he should take the drift over the spruit, and the other that he should pont over the pan. A zarp came along and took them both around the viel and through the poort to the lager, where they should be safe from roolneks.—N. Y. Sun.

FOR MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN.

Two Letters from Women Helped Through the "Change of Life" by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I first wrote to you I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—MRS. GEO. II JUNE, 901 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Relief Came Promptly

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had been under treatment with the doctors for four years, and seemed to get no better. I thought I would try your medicine. My trouble was change of life, and I must say that I never had anything help me so much as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came almost immediately. I have better health now than I ever had. I feel like a new woman, perfectly strong. I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound all the credit, and would not do without her medicine for anything. I have recommended it to several of my friends. There is no need of women suffering so much for Mrs. Pinkham's remedies are a sure cure."—MAHALA BUTLER, Bridgewater, Ill.

POSTPONED HEARING.

Why the Kentucky Injunction Cases Were Laid Over.

The Democratic Legislature Adopted a Concurrent Resolution Adjourning the General Assembly to Meet at Frankfort on Monday.

Cincinnati, Feb. 15.—Judge Taft of the Federal court here at 2 o'clock announced his decision on the Kentucky election cases. He holds that the Federal court has no jurisdiction and refuses to grant the restraining order asked for by the republican petitioners against the Kentucky state board of election commissioners to prevent them from depriving the minor state republican officers from holding the offices to which they were clearly chosen.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 15.—Gov. Taylor took the initiative Wednesday afternoon and filed an application for an injunction against J. C. W. Beckham and John B. Castleman. He seeks to enjoin the first named defendant from attempting to exercise the duties of governor of Kentucky, and the second defendant from acting as adjutant general. Taylor sues as an individual and also as governor of Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 15.—Suit was filed Wednesday afternoon against W. S. Taylor by attorneys for J. C. W. Beckham, seeking to oust him from the governorship of Kentucky. The petition was finished Wednesday morning and the proceeding is in the nature of a quo warranto and mandatory injunction.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17.—The wife of Representative Haile, of Louisville, was Friday elected an honorary member of the house of representatives by the republicans of the lower house. Mrs. Haile never left her husband during the late stormy scenes and the compliment was paid her on that account.

Nothing was done in the case of Beckham against Taylor and Marshall before Judge Cantrill Friday morning at Georgetown. By agreement between the attorneys everything was held over until Wednesday, February 21. In the meantime proceedings in both cases are to remain at a stand while the attorneys confer and try to agree on some mode of procedure. The matter is then to be brought up before Judge Cantrill at Frankfort, February 23, if no agreement is reached in the meantime.

Attorneys for contestees and contestants have signed the following agreement as to the conduct of the contests of minor state officers:

"We, the undersigned attorneys for contestants and contestees, hereby agree that all the testimony taken in the contests for governor and lieutenant governor in the city of Frankfort, so far as the same may be competent and relevant, may be read as evidence in the contest for the minor state offices now pending before the state board of election commissioners now sitting as a contest board; and it is further agreed that the said contests shall be submitted to said board without argument; the counsel for neither side nor any other person to be present during the trial; and the contestees expressly reserving all rights to except, object or demur to the evidence or other proceedings which they may have under the law; and further that the said contestees do not by the agreement waive or relinquish any objection to the jurisdiction of the board, and this agreement is to take effect after the board shall have acted on the preliminary motions and affidavits heretofore filed before said board by the said contestees and all of them which shall be shown by the records, and in the event said motions supplemented by the said affidavits shall be overruled by the board, this agreement to be in effect and binding at once, this February 15, 1900."

Cincinnati, Feb. 17.—W. H. Mackoy, one of the republican attorneys in the Kentucky election contest case, appeared before Judge Taft armed with the proper papers for an appeal to the United States supreme court in each of the seven cases to which injunctions were refused Wednesday.

Mackoy also presented the required bond of $250 in each case, and Judge Taft certified the petition for appeal. The papers were then filed in the United States clerk's office in Covington.

The petition was made by six of the Kentucky state republican officers and one citizen. An appeal bond of $250 was filed in each case.

The committee appointed to investigate conditions at Frankfort will make no formal report.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 18.—The democratic legislature got together a quorum in each house Saturday, and adopted a concurrent resolution adjourning the general assembly to meet in Frankfort next Monday. Gov. Beckham will remain here until the case by which it is hoped to settle the title to the office of governor is decided by the court of appeals.

Gave Him the Wrong Can.

Auburn, Ind., Feb. 16.—An accident occurred at Garrett, from which Dr. Braund will probably lose his life. The doctor arose early to build the fire. Soon after his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Thomas, arose and assisted in starting the fire by furnishing him with the gasoline can instead of the kerosene. When the fluid was applied a horrible explosion occurred, the flames completely enveloping Dr. Braund. He ran into the street and was soon covered with snow and the flames checked. One-half of the fine Braund residence was consumed.

POLITICAL PARTIES UNITE.

Social Democracy and Social Labor Parties May Amalgamate at Indianapolis March 6.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 17.—It is possible and even probable that the social democracy and the socialist labor party will amalgamate at the national convention of the former here March 6, the new organization retaining the name of the social democracy.

A committee of nine, with Max Hays, editor of the Cleveland Citizen, as chairman, has sent notice that it will be here to speak for the amalgamation on the part of the social labor party, which has 15,000 members. The organizations have like aims and purposes. The Occidental hotel was selected as headquarters. Eugene Debs, Mayor Chase, of Haverhill, and Mayor McCarty, of Brocton, Mass., have engaged rooms.

ADVANCE IN COAL.

The Pittsburg Coal Combine Will Increase Prices From 25 to 50 Per Cent. on April 1.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 17.—The United Mine Workers' headquarters here are receiving many reports from coal operators in America, showing that the demand from Europe and particularly England will be enormous during 1900. The shortage in England has caused prices to advance until coal is selling for over $7 per ton in Saxony, and coal that a year ago brought 70 cents per ton on the cars in Pittsburgh and is now bringing $2.25 will bring over $3 in the London market.

The Pittsburgh coal combine is to advance prices on April 1 from 25 to 50 per cent. This combine paid $31,000,000 for the plants secured and nets about $5,000,000 annually.

PORTO RICAN BILL.

It Will Be Taken Up in the Senate Next After the Disposal of the Hawaiian Bill.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The republican caucus of the senate Friday discussed the order of business in the senate deciding to take up the bill providing a government for Porto Rico next after the disposal of the Hawaiian bill. Attention was called to the resolution for Senator Quay but no action was taken upon it, the suggestion being made that as it is a privileged question it can be taken up at any time. It was also decided to have republicans succeed democrats in a number of appointments in the senate.

Rod Mill Workers' Strike Off.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 17.—The strike of the members of the rod mill workers' association in the employ of the American Steel and Wire Co., known as the wire trust, was declared at an end by the president of the association, Edwin S. Jones. The failure of the strike was due to the action of the boss rollers in this city, who have been operating one of the Cleveland mills with the assistance of two men imported from Indiana. The rod mills affected are in Cleveland, Anderson, Ind., Newcastle, Pa., Beaver Falls, Pa., Pittsburgh, Rankin, Pa., and Braddock, Pa.

Miners in Politics.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17.—The miners of two local unions at Virden have adopted resolutions that they will not support any candidate for the legislature who does not pledge himself to vote for Gov. Tanner for United States senator. They also passed resolutions pledging themselves to support only such candidates for congress as will support the Lott bill, which provides that when a person is brought before a judge charged with contempt of court, he shall give him the constitutional right of a trial by jury.

An Acrobat Commits Suicide.

New York, Feb. 17.—Prince Mura, 35 years old, an acrobat, committed suicide in his room at the Trafalgar hotel in this city by inhaling gas through a tube. The man's wife died at St. Joseph's Hospital for Incurables of consumption early in the week, and since her death he acted strangely. She was a singer and played the vaudeville circuits under the name of Julia West.

Received Ten Days' Pay.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 17.—The republican house members were elated by the receipt of vouchers for ten days' pay. This includes the time since the return from London. State Auditor Sweeney announced that he would honor the certificates signed by Clerk Leigh, of the house, and a general rush followed. The senate has so far taken no steps to secure its per diem.

Recalling Troops From Cuba.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Secretary Root has determined to continue the policy begun by Gen. Leonard Wood of reducing the force of United States troops in Cuba and during the coming spring there will be a heavy reduction of the existing force unless there should be some untoward change in the present highly satisfactory conditions there.

The Muckross estate, which includes the famous lakes of Killarney, is annually visited by so many visitors that their fees amount to at least $8,000 a year, which is two per cent. of the price paid by Lord Ardluna for the property.

One of the oldest hostelries in England is the New inn at Gloucester, but in spite of the centuries which have rolled by since it was built its ones appropriate inscription still clings to it:

A "cupful" in all cases is half a pint.

EXCHANGING SHELLS.

The Transvaalers Occupy a Strong Position Near Dordrecht.

On the Retreat the Boers Kept Up a Good Rear Guard Action—Enemy Very Active Around Ladysmith—Latest War News.

London, Feb. 18.—With Gen. Cronje in full retreat and Gen. Kelly-Kenny harrassing his rear, hopes run high that a decisive action will occur, if it has not already been fought. The dispatches from Jacobsdal confirm this belief, saying Gen. Cronje has been obliged to "outspan," in other words, form a langer or camp, in order to rest his oxen. This explains Gen. Kelly-Kenny's latest dispatch referring to shelling the langer, which also brought long expected word of Gen. Kitchener's whereabouts. That the general who so relentlessly pursued the Khalifa to his doom is supervising the pursuit of Gen. Cronje adds greatly to the confidence of the nation so eagerly awaiting further news.

Jacobsdal, Orange Free State, Feb. 17.—Further details of the Boer retreat show that the enemy has been fighting a good rear guard action and occupying successive kopjes in order to allow the moving of the convoy which, however, has been going at a very slow pace, the animals apparently being dead beat.

The latest reports show that the Boers in the neighborhood of Klipkrands drift are undoubtedly disheartened.

Gen. French's magnificent march is still the subject of admiration, especially in view of the dust storms and thunderstorms that all experienced.

The work of shelling the Boers proceeds vigorously. Owing to the style of the action the Boers are bound to show in the open whenever they are obliged to leave the kopjes.

Jacobsdal, Feb. 17.—Gen. Kelly-Kenny is still pursuing the Boers. He has now captured more than 100 wagons. The Highland brigade reinforced him after a forced march. Gen. French has left Kimberley to join in the pursuit of the Boer army. The guards have occupied the Boer position at Magersfontein.

Birds River, Feb. 17.—The position near Dordrecht now is that the Boers occupy a strong hill north of the town and that the British hold a commanding post to the south. Both are maintaining a brisk exchange of shells over Dordrecht.

Gen. Brabant's Horse, 200 strong, commenced the march from Penhook Thursday morning over a trackless veldt and through a mountainous and difficult country. Early Friday they were fired upon and the firing continued all day and well into the night. The British clearing the Boers out of successive positions under a terrific rifle fire lasting eight hours.

Toward midnight Friday the British forced the Boers at the point of the bayonet out of their last position, an important one overlooking Dordrecht. The artillery duel was continued to-day.

Chievely, Feb. 18.—Gen. Buller has established his headquarters on Inniscar hill. Heavy artillery firing was maintained at intervals by both sides from Wednesday until Friday. The British slowly pushed the advance and their infantry occupied entrenched new positions in front of Inniscar hill with slight losses. It is believed that the lyddite shrapnel have made havoc in the Boer trenches. The Boers are supposed to have moved their big guns back over the Tugela Friday afternoon. The rifle fire has been heavy at times. The whole country is thickly wooded.

The British operations are directed to the capture of Hlangwana hill, where the Boers are strongly fortified and from which they are shelling the British with great accuracy. The British infantry are now disposed along a line extending for seven miles to the small kopjes at the base of Monte Christo hill. From 6 o'clock Friday morning the British incessantly shelled Monte Christo, with the ask of separating it from Hlanuw Krantz hill on the right.

The British infantry is making slow progress up the nek in the endeavor to occupy Monte Christo, which will enable them to enfilade the Boers on Hlangwana.

Ladysmith, Feb. 17, by Heliograph via Weenan.—The Boers have been very active here during the last few days, and are evidently making a move somewhere. The garrison, greatly delighted to learn of the relief of Kimberley, is in excellent spirits and fit for anything.

Maj. Doveton's wife, who was given a safe conduct through the Boer lines, arrived here to nurse her husband, but he died Wednesday, Feb. 14.

Dr. Jameson has the fever.

London, Feb. 18.—The queen promoted Gen. French to be major general. French heretofore has only ranked as a colonel in the army, with the local rank of lieutenant general. Lieut. Col. Kekewich has been promoted colonel for services in the defense of Kimberley.

Russell Harrison Changed.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Lieut. Col. Russell B. Harrison, U. S. V., has been relieved from further duty as inspector general of the department of Santiago and Puerto Principe. He will soon go to San Juan, Porto Rico, for duty as inspector general of the department of Porto Rico.

The fight for president is between Lynch, who is now first vice president, and Donnelly.

Locomotive Boiler Explodes.

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 17.—Two men were instantly killed and three frightfully injured by the explosion of a locomotive boiler in the Santa Fe round house here. The dead are: John Heustis, a boiler maker, and Nels Lindquff, fireman. The injured are: J. L. Beardsley, who will probably die; Arlie Saylor, bruised and badly shaken up, and Bert Shields, face cut and one arm injured. The explosion was caused by compressed air which was to be used as the motive power in the "Midget" locomotive, a small switch engine. The dead men were horribly mangled.

Ex-President Johnson's Grave.

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 17.—Through the influence of citizens of Greenville, Tenn., Congressman Brownlow will introduce a bill placing the grave of ex-President Andrew Johnson, at Greenville, under government care. Mrs. Patterson, daughter of the ex-president, proposes to donate enough land to make a park around the monument that has been erected there. As she is getting old she is anxious to be assured that the grave will be taken care of after her death. Mrs. Patterson is now critically ill, and fears are entertained that she will not recover.

Campaigning in the Mountains.

Manila, Feb. 17.—Brig. Gen. Alfred E. Bates and Brig. Gen. Bell, with the 40th and 45th infantry, Keeler's battery and many pack mules, started Thursday for the province of Camarines. The cruiser Baltimore and the transports Tartar and Ahenian compose the fleet, which, with the gunboats accompanying it, will land at Neuva Caseres and sweep the province. It is expected that there will be much campaigning in the mountains.

To Investigate Macrum's Statement.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The state department has taken steps to make sure of the position it has assumed toward ex-Consul Macrum in antiexpation of an inquiry from congress, by directing an investigation into every phase of the allegations contained in that officer's statement, including especially a thorough investigation of the conditions under which the consular mail and cable service were conducted.

The Broom Corn Trust.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—There was a quiet meeting of the members of the Union Broom Co., known as the broom corn trust, in this city, and it is said an effort was made to advance the price of brush from $300 to $320 a ton, but the wiser heads thought it best not to. The dealers outside claim this will be done at the next meeting. From all sections come reports of increased acreage this year.

A Reward Offered.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 17.—Secretary of State Stearns, as chairman of the state board of auditors Friday authorized Sheriff Porter to offer a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of ex-Quartermaster General William L. White, who is wanted on a charge of alleged embezzlement of state funds while a member of the Michigan military board and who disappared several weeks ago.

Roland Molineux Sentenced.

New York, Feb. 17.—Roland B. Molineux was Friday sentenced to die in Sing Sing prison during the week of March 26, for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams. He made a statement asserting that he had not been fairly convicted, and that "yellow journalism" had put a price on his head.

Train Robber Found Dying.

Tombstone, Ariz., Feb. 17.—One of the train robbers who held up the A. M. & A. T. train at Fairbanks was found in a dying condition at Sycamore Spring, nine miles from Tombstone. The robber's name is John Dunlap, alias "Three Fingered Jack."

Big Fire in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 17.—Fire gutted a three-story brick building at 947 Liberty avenue, occupied by Sol Cerf & Co., wholesale jewelers, causing a loss estimated at from $75,000 to $80,000, partly covered by insurance.

SMALL RIOT IN EL PASO

One Policeman and a Colored Soldier Were Killed.

A Corporal Was Locked Up for Drunkenness the Day Before—The Battle the Outcome of an Attempted Rescue.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 18.—At 5 o'clock Saturday morning a mob of Negro soldiers from Fort Bliss attacked the city police station with the object of releasing two of their comrades who had been arrested Friday.

During the fight Police Officer Newt Stewart and one Negro soldier were killed, and it is believed that another of the soldiers is wounded.

Friday afternoon the police locked up a corporal from the fort for getting drunk and threatening to chase the police force out of the city, and Friday night another drunken soldier was arrested. Comrades of the prisoners took the news to the post. A rescue party, armed with Krag-Jorgensens, was organized, and just before daylight a descent was made on the city.

Two of the soldiers, rifles in hand, entered the building and demanded of Officer Stewart, the only man on duty, the surrender of their comrades.

Stewart ordered the men out of the station, and they opened fire on him. Jailer Richard Blacker, aroused by the shots, sprang out of bed, grabbed his pistol and started into the office. One of the soldiers shot at him. Blacker fired and the Negro staggered and ran out, followed by his companion, and the entire squad left on a run.

About 20 shots in all were fired. Stewart was shot twice through the lungs and died at 7 o'clock. A trail of blood leading from the station was followed, and half a block away the dead body of a Negro, shot through the breast, was found. The dead man clutched his gun in his hands. Another rifle and traces of blood were also found, which indicates that another of the Negroes was wounded.

The company stationed at Fort Bliss is Company E, 25th infantry. Posses are looking for the marauders, though at the post it is claimed that the only missing soldiers are the dead man and the two prisoners in the police station.

New Cotton Mill.

Harriman, Tenn., Feb. 18.—The Paige plant that has stood idle since the suicide of its owner, H. L. Stiles, at Warren, O., has been bought by W. B. Crinkley, a rich North Carolina Scotchman, who will turn it into a 2,000-spindle cotton mill. Parties representing one of the largest cotton mills in the south have been here for a week, and will bring the big concern here as soon as a location can be decided upon. They say that coal here will only cost them one-half what it does where they are now located.

Death of Capt. Langworthy.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 19.—Word was received from Muskegon, Mich., of the death of Capt. A. J. Langworthy at the age of 84. Capt. Langworthy was chief of the Milwaukee fire department in 1849 and was sheriff of Milwaukee county during 1859-1860. He organized a company of the 2d Wisconsin regiment who served in the battle of Bull Run and was president of the Wisconsin association of Bull Run survivors in 1898. He was also a prominent odd fellow.

Another Advance in Paper.

New York, Feb. 18.—At the annual meeting of the Paper and Pulp association an advance in the price of paper was announced. The association held its twenty-third annual dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday night. Among the guests were Senator Joseph H. Callinger, former Gov. John S. Wise, of Virginia, and former Speaker Reed, all of whom made speeches.

Ex-Mayor Quincy Marries.

London, Feb. 18.—Josiah Quincy, former mayor of Boston, and Mrs. Tyler were married Saturday in St. George's church, Hanover square. James R. Carter, second secretary of the United States embassy, was the best man. Joseph H. Choate, the United States ambassador, Henry White, first secretary of the United States embassy, and all the members of the embassy were present.

Soldiers' Remains Buried.

San Francisco, Feb. 19.—Nearly 2,000 people were present at the National cemetery when the remains of Private Cassidy, of the 1st California, and Charles S. Stults, of the 1st South Dakota volunteer regiments, were interred with military honors. Both met their deaths while fighting in the Philippines.

Wages Again Increased.

Hazelton, Pa., Feb. 19.—The men employed by the A. S. Van Winkle Co., anthracite coal mine operators at Milnesville and Coleraine, have been granted another 2 per cent. increase in their wages, making a total of 4 per cent. advance within the last two months. Fourteen hundred hands are affected.

Elephants Ran Amuck.

London, Feb. 19.—An exciting scene took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. Two large elephants belonging to the circus, ran amuck, killed their keeper and gored another man. There was a terrible panic in the audience attending the concert in the palace.

Death of a London Editor.

London, Feb. 19.—Mr. Joseph Cowen, proprietor of the New Castle Chronicle and member of parliament for New Castle from 1873 to 1886, is dead.

PORTO RICAN TARIFF.

The Bill Now Before the House Will Be Debated All Week, and Promises to Be Memorable.

Washington, Feb. 19.—The house will enter upon the consideration of the Porto Rican tariff bill and the debate upon it promises to be memorable in the history of this congress. The vital question at issue in the bill is whether that clause of the constitution providing for equality of impost and excise taxes throughout United States territory extends over the island of Porto Rico and in this is involved perhaps the determination of the future status and government of our new accession.

The republicans in framing the bill have proceeded upon the theory that the constitution and its immunities do not extend over Porto Rico. The democrats are solidly arrayed upon the other side, and in committee they were joined by one republican, Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts. Among the other republicans who take the same view is Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, who succeeded the late Mr. Dingley. He won his spurs in the debate upon the Roberts case, and is already considered one of the most powerful debaters in the house. The support of these two prominent republicans has raised some hopes in the opposition that they may be able to defeat the bill, although this hardly seems probable at this writing.

Both sides are preparing for a royal struggle. Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority, will open in support of the bill. He will be followed by Mr. Richardson, the minority leader. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, will also close for the minority. The debate will continue throughout the week.

AN IOWA TRAGEDY.

Aged and Respected Citizen Shot By a Young Boy Who Called to Take His Daughter to Church.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 19.—Leslie Eastburn, a 21-year-old boy, shot Jasper Sutton, an aged and respected citizen of Bloomfield, at 10:30 Sunday morning, the ball penetrating the abdomen and causing almost instant death. Eastburn called at Sutton's home to take his 18-year-old daughter Alice to church. The father met him at the door and ordered him away.

An altercation ensued, and Sutton followed Eastburn to the road. Weapons were drawn by both men but Eastburn fired first, the other man falling before he could raise his weapon. Eastburn gave himself up, going into Sutton's home and consoling the daughter until an officer arrived. The shooting created intense excitement, many people who were en route to church having witnessed the duel.

PUBLIC FUNDS IN CUBA.

The Secretary of War Sends to Congress a Statement of Receipts and Expenditures.

Washington, Feb. 18.—In response to a resolution of the senate the secretary of war sent to the senate a statement showing the receipts and disbursements of public funds in the island of Cuba for the year 1899. The statement shows receipts amounting to $16,346,015, of which $13,011,089 were from customs; $244,000 from the postal service, $787,952 from internal revenue, and $303,331 from miscellaneous sources.

The expenditures amounting to $14,985,895, leaving $2,260,209 in the hands of the treasurer. The principal expenditures were as follows: Barracks and quarters, $1,269,939; sanitation, $3,052,282; rural police and administration, $1,445,467; public works, $700,125; municipalities, $1,239,403.

THE PLAGUE IN MANILA.

Thirty-Two Deaths Have Resulted So Far. Half of Them Being Chinamen.

Manila, Feb. 18.—Out of a total of 51 cases of suspected bubonic plague reported, 42 proved genuine and 32 deaths resulted, half of them being Chinamen. There were 12 cases during the past week, mostly within the walled city, and a hundred inspectors, under the superintendence of a health officer, Maj. Edie, are enforcing the sanitary regulations. Thirty of the inspectors are Chinamen who have been furnished by the Chinese merchants.

The health department census shows the population of Manila is about 190,000, including 31,000 Chinese.

Steamers Cleared From New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—The steamer Montezuma with 1,550 mules and a large cargo of feedstuffs for the British army operating in South Africa, cleared for Cape Town. The steamship Tiger, carrying a cargo of 6,000 bales of cotton and 2,800 tons of phosphate rock, cleared for Kobe, Japan.

College Destroyed By Fire.

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—The St. Charles college, at Grand Choteau, together with a large and valuable library, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $50,000.

Sea Captain Dies of Yellow Fever.

New York, Feb. 19.—When the Prince line steamer Asiatic Prince arrived at quarantine from Santos, Chief Officer Campe reported the death of Capt. Woodhouse from yellow fever on February 3. The captain was buried at sea the same day. Chief Officer Camp then took command and brought the Asiatic Prince safely to port. Capt. Woodhouse was 52 years of age, and left a family at Liverpool. He was well known at this port. The vessel will be detained at quarantine for disinfection, and will discharge her cargo into lighters in the upper bay.

The prosecution of E. K. Wilson for the murder of Mary Cloyd, of London, has been continued until May.

Congressman Gilbert has introduced a bill appropriating $75,000 for a Government building at Lawrenceburg.

Robbers tried to carry off a feather bed from the house of Mollie Abbott, in Clark county. She resisted and the robbers shot her. She will die.

At communion in the Georgetown Christian Church a near-sighted man dropped a nickel in the wine cup, thinking it the contribution box.

Wade Martin, 70, of Cromwell, Ohio County, who has been paralyzed for years, called in his friends and apparently died. He lay without the slightest signs of life all night, then awoke and declared he was well. He arose and dressed unaided, and is now strong and healthy. He intends to preach.

An important case was tried at Winchester before county Judge Evans. A number of persons holding stock in national banks refused to list this stock with the assessor, claiming it could not be taxed under existing laws. They also refused to give information to the Board of Supervisors. They were brought before the county Judge, who decided that bank stock should be taxed as other personalty. The case will be taken to the Circuit Court and probably to the Court of Appeals.

Years can not repair the damage done the State by the soldiers whom Mr. Taylor housed in the Capitol and Executive buildings. Books have been mutilated beyond recognition, court records and judicial opinions have been stolen and torn, vouchers from the Auditor's archives have been scattered over the floors of the vaults and valuable documents extracted, laying the State open to all sorts of suits which it may cost thousands of dollars to defend against.

It is a fact that vandals have made away with many valuable relics from the rooms of the State Historical Society in the Executive building at Frankfort during the stay of the troops. Historic old and rare souvenirs of pioneer days of the Commonwealth have been hawked about on the streets. There is no telling at the present to what extent this has been carried, nor can there be until the proper custodians are again in charge, and have made an examination of the collection.—Richmond Register.

A sensation was created in Trimble county, last week, when it was announced that the grand jury had unearthed a case of attempted poisoning. Pete Simpson and wife reside near Milton. A package of candy came to Mrs. Simpson through the mail. When Mrs. Pete Simpson received the package she was much delighted with the present and shared it with the family of William Snyder, for whom she was working. Shortly after eating the candy several persons became violently ill. In seeking the cause it was discovered that the candy contained poison. A portion of the candy was in evidence before the grand jury, where it was tested with chemicals, when it was discovered that it contained a sufficient quantity of arsenic to have killed at least twenty persons. An indictment has been returned by the grand jury against the wife of Barney Simpson, the brother of Pete Simpson, but as yet she has not been apprehended.

CROP AND STOCK.

Paris Court—Not a large crowd in town. About 200 head of cattle on the market and most of them sold. Sold 40 head medium feeders at $4 58 per hundred; 4 good yearling steers at 31.50 per head; 51 cattle at $30; 30 at $46; 40 at $4,50 22 1,125 pound cattle at 5 cents.

The turkey and poultry raising industry in Kentucky is growing to vast proportions, and it is confidently predicted that in a few years it will lead the van. The total number of pounds of dressed turkey shipped out of the State during the past season was 2,141,190 and the amount received for same was $255,423.46 an average price per 100 pounds of $11.92.

It seems ridiculous to value a chicken at $2,000, especially when it is a rooster that is not strikingly different from the ordinary barn yard fowl in appearance. Yet it is a fact that this amount was refused for one of the birds on exhibition in the Madison Square poultry show. White Cloud is the name of this valuable chicken. He is a pure White Plymouth Rock, three years old, and is famous the world over as a prize winner.

Tobacco dealers all agree that if it were not for the tobacco trust the tobacco crop of Grant county would have sold this year at from 10 to 20 cents per pound instead of from 5 to 10 cents. That means that the farmers of Grant county have this season paid the trust, or at least lost by the trust on tobacco manufacturing, $250,000. Trusts come high, but it seems we have "got" to have them.—Williamstown Courier.

The law in Kentucky in relation to hog stealing is peculiarly peculiar. If the hog that is stolen is worth $4 or over, the penalty for stealing the hog is one to five years confinement in the penitentiary, while a calf that is stolen must be valued at $20 or more to send the one stealing it to the penitentiary. If the stolen hog is worth $3.99 only, the thief can be tried for petit larceny only, as he can also be tried for stealing a calf worth $19.99 only.

There is a shortage of at least twenty per cent, in the Burley crop of Kentucky. Manufacturers who are holding back expecting to secure cheap tobacco later on had best think the matter over a little bit, and get their selection of tobacco before too late. The market will certainly go no lower on the present crop, and all indications point to prices getting at least three or four cents higher on the better grades before the next crop comes to market.—The Weed.

Whether there be profit in raising corn does not depend altogether on the price received, but in a large measure on the man who raises the crop. If the price of corn was made double what it now is, and kept there for the next ten years, it would not be a hard matter to find at the end of that period men raising corn at a loss; and the price has never yet been so low that there were not some farmers who made the cost of production even less and therefore made a profit. And what is true of corn in this respect is true of other crops. The character and capacity of the man behind the plow are important factors in arriving at an answer as to the whether or not it will pay to grow this or that crop.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald.]

A supposed mad dog frightened the town last Friday. He bit several dogs, which were afterwards shot.

About noon last Tuesday the wife of Bluford Thornton was badly burned. She was ironing in front of an open stove, with her back to it. Her clothing took fire and she was burned quite painfully before assistance came.

[News]

Several prominent weddings among the leading 400 are booked to take place in Owenton during the "leafy" month of April.

The Assessor's book for the year has been completed. The assessments are as follows: Land, $2,158,592; lots, $328,404; personal property, $275,014; money, etc., $226,462. Total amount subject to tax $2,988,502.00. This is an increase $69,387.00 over the year 1899.

About 1,000 dogs more or less have been killed in and about Owenton during the past two weeks. We have perhaps 1,500 more that will never be in better condition for the guillotine than now and since the demand is growing owners should put their dogs on the market at once. The reason for such an unusual butchering of dogs is caused by the presence in town of several mad dogs. Let the good work go on, there is plenty to do.

By his decision Judge Taft removes all possibility of resort to Federal tribunals and throws the question back within State jurisdiction where it is far better that it be determined.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

Every man at times gets a sore spot in his heart that needs one woman to kiss it and make it well.

How Wounded Soldiers Act.

If you take a dozen soldiers as like as each other as peas so far as height, weight, strength, age, courage and general appearance, and wound them all in precisely the same way, you will find that scarcely any two of them are affected alike.

One man on receiving a bullet in his leg will go on fighting as if nothing has happened. He does not know, in fact, that he now contains a bullet. But perhaps in two or three minutes he will grow faint and fall.

Another man, without feeling the slightest pain, will tremble all over, totter and fall at once, even though the wound is real slight.

A third will cry out in a way to frighten his comrades, and will forget everything in his agony. A fourth will grow stupid and look like an idiot.

Some soldiers wounded in the slightest manner will have to be carried off the field. Others, although perhaps fatally injured, can easily walk to the ambulance. Many die quickly from the shock to the nervous system, says London Answers.

A very curious case is recorded in the surgical history of the American Civil War, in which three officers were hit just at the same time. One had his leg from the knee down carried away, but he rode 10 miles to the hospital. Another lost his little finger and he became a raving lunatic. While a third was shot through the body, and, though he did not shed a drop of blood externally, dropped dead from the shock.

A Dutch auction at Cape Town is frequently exciting. If house is to be sold the auctioneer offers "Fifty golden sovereigns for the man who first bids $5,000." Nobody bids A pause, and then "Fifty golden sovereigns for the man who first bids $4900." This is kept up until a bid is secured. But it by no means follows that the house is sold to this bidder. No, the auctioneer is then at it again. Say that $4,400 is the first bid. The auctioneer cries: "There are twenty-five golden sovereigns for the first man who has the courage to bid $4,600." Perhaps no one has it. Then $25 is offered for a $4,500 bid. It there is eventually no bid above $4,400 the man who made that bid is saddled with the house. Otherwise he pockets his bonus and gets off free of it all.—N. Y. Tribune.

The authorities of Algeria gave $40,500 toward fighting the grasshoppers. In one section 3,200 camels were employed to carry the material for burning over the places where eggs had been deposited.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61-64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.

Watch carefully the Cincinnati Enquirer.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1900. NO. 19

THE Democratic national convention will meet in Kansas city, July 4th.

IN Owen county thirteen candidates for jailer have lined up and the number increases every week.

The Republicans in Congress are not agreed, by any means, as to the kind of tariff regulations to give Porto Rico.

L. E. Creasy, owner of the Covington Commonwealth, is the Republican nominee for the office of State Senator in Kenton co.

THE date for the national convention of each of the leading political parties has now been set, and the indications are that the head of each ticket will be named by acclamation.

IT is claimed that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has a lobby at Frankfort, fighting the passage of the bill appropriating $100,000 for the apprehension and conviction of the assassin or assassins of Senator Goebel.

THERE is no way to compel Roosevelt to accept the second place on the Republican national ticket, but he can be prevented from taking the first place thereon, and it is now written that another is to be nominated for President.

THE tide of battle turned against the Boers last week, and the republican form of government so dear to them received a severe blow. While the sympathy in high official circles in this country is with English, that of the common people is with the Boers.

UNCLE SAM is threatening to send some of his warships into Chinese waters in order to make China heed the demand of this and other countries that measures be taken to insure the safety of missionaries. Germany threatens to send warships there for the same purpose.

FROM present indications the Burlington and Petersburg precincts will each have one or more candidates for every county office to be filled by the primary in 1901. With candidates from numerous other localities in the county the several races for the nominations are likely to be very complicated. Quite a number of the candidates are looking after their fences on every occasion that offers.

THE State Board of Election Commissioners reported, Monday giving all the Democratic candidates below Governor and Lieutenant Governor, the offices for which they were candidates. They were sworn in immediately and demanded the offices of the Republicans, who refused to surrender them. The State now has a dual government, and the court will have to decide who are the State officials.

JUDGE TARVIN, of Covington, will soon be out of politics. He is now spoken of as a candidate for Vice-President, for Congress and for Governor, if the Democrats win out in the contest now on, in which event a Governor will have to be elected this fall. The Judge's friends are killing him off scoring, and he will make a poor showing in either race if he is not very careful.

SOME most improbable stories are sent out from Frankfort nearly every day. The best way to regard these is as utterly false until they are thoroughly corroborated; but each political party believes that which suits it and rejects all other statements. The belief by many of the tons of printed falsehoods shipped all over Kentucky last fall, has caused the present political conditions in Kentucky.

THE contest for the Democratic nomination for Congress is coming to the front now, and quite a number of aspirants will be on the firing line in a few weeks, and the county that can not send one or more candidates to the front will not be considered up-to-date politically. While some heretofore considered Congressional timber have been eliminated, for each of those about three new aspirants will be entered. Look out for a lively time all along the line.

Editorial Paragraphs.

It is a great pity that Oom Paul hasn't a good reliable corps of censors at his disposal.

Frankfort advices state that Governor Taylor is again on the south bank of the Tugela.

Mr. Bynum is still waiting for the Senate to act on his confirmation. The country will not worry if he keeps on waiting.

Porto Rico is outside the Constitution but it is inside the Dingley tariff, and the Dingley tariff is worse than the Spanish one.

"Joe" Blackburn, of Kentucky, is now being abused by the enemies of Governor Goebel, who cannot forgive him for doing justice to the good points of that brave man.

Philadelphia has raised one-fourth of that $100,000. Now Mark Hanna, who has been really hard up, can begin the campaign work which was deferred for the lack of funds.

The torrent of abuse that is being poured out on Senator Pettigrew's devoted head is due to his insistence in dragging to the light things that the administration wishes to keep hidden.

Prof. Sumner, of Yale, says that 90 per cent. of the marriages of the country turn out unhappily. Now will the professor tell us what proportion of the old maidhoods and bachelorhoods turn out happily.

If Congress will not give Porto Rico free trade with this country, it should at least give it free necessaries of life. It is all right to make a precedent, perhaps, but it seems hard to starve women and children to do so.

The fact that Queen Victoria, has found it necessary to call out all of her old soldiers for defense shows that there is something behind the scenes. Nothing of the sort is necessary if the Boers only are to be considered.

Porto Rican merchants announce that the island is worse off now than under Spanish rule. There is no reason to doubt their statements. The annexation has cut off the few resources that the island had under Spanish rule and has given nothing in return.

Possibly there are many Republicans who are opposed to trusts. But the party as a whole sits supine and lets them work their will on the country, without even making an effort to curb their destructive powers. If the party is wise, it will try to do something before the next election.

William of Germany is having much trouble in getting his navy increased. Why doesn't he follow up his declaration that 99 years make a century by announcing that his present navy is twice as big as it seems to be. This would settle the question with satisfaction to all.

Senator Gorman has declared himself as standing for the nominee of the Democratic party. He does not profess to be in favor of Bryan, but he will stand for him if nominated. So other men who held aloof or were cold in 1896, can now afford to return to the old mother party and aid to save the country from the consequences of Republican misrule.

Molineux's conviction cost the state $200,000 and now it is claimed that he ought to be tried over again on account of technical errors which did not affect the result one way or the other. The secret prisoner is the most fiendish and cowardly of all murderers and the most difficult to convict. Molineux's trial was fair and he should be executed.

A LARGE delegation of Owen county people have petitioned the Legislature to repeal the fish law. The petitioners claim there are enough fish to last as food for the next four centuries. Owen county, according to that statement, has more fish than anything else.

With the billion-dollar trusts behind him, the shipping subsidy scheme before him, the banks using their financial thumbscrews in his interest and the censor doing business at the old stand, McKinley feels reasonably secure from the general public.—Salt Lake Herald.

FROM GALLATIN COUNTY.

Independent

Quite a number of candidates are mentioned for the office of Sheriff of Gallatin county, subject to the action of the Democrat party, to be voted for in the primary election to be called in 1900.

Johnson Rogers, of near Burlington, Boone county, has bought from R. B. Brown, a farm of 87 acres, situated an the Warsaw and Glencoe turnpike, for $1,650, and will take possession at once. The sale was made through the real estate agency of D. B. Wallace. Mr. Rogers is a son-in-law of Cyrus Bethel of the Carson neighborhood.

Frank Hammond and Miss Caddie Bethel were united in the bonds of holy wedlock, Washington's birthday by county Judge Jas. S. Brown in his office in the Court House. The bride is the popular and pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Bethel, of near Carson, and the groom is a sterling young farmer of Boone county. They left for the home of the bride's parents, where they received the perental blessing and the congratulations of many friends. The best wishes of a large circle of friends is extended the happy young couple for a long, happy and prosperous future.

The claim that other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Bartlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy, and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & Mc-Wethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

Congressman J. W. Bailey, the long-haired Texan, through his agent, Harry Benedict, paid the top price at Woodard & Shanklin sales when he purchased the bay filly Memento for $1,200. The filly run up to $1,350, but the bidder could not be found, and the daughter of Electric Bell had to be sold again, the second time bringing $1,200. Bailey was evidently sweet on the filly, as she is by the sire which heads the Congressman's Kentucky stud. Memento is entered in the $20,000 Kentucky Futurity and the Horses Review Stake of $6,000.

COMPLAINT has been lodged with the Postoffice Departmeut at Washington, by Justus Goebel, and Robert Franklin, Commonwealth's Attorney at Frankfort, that their mail has been frequently tampered with in the last few weeks, and an inspector has been sent to Frankfort to ferret out the guilty parties.

They Want to Come Back.

[Foulton Leader.]

G. A. Elliott and wife, who were converted to the Mormon faith last spring, and left Fulton for Utah, now write for money to come back here. They are disgusted most heartily with the miserable farce into which they had been inveigled by some smooth-tongued Mormon elders, and although they have been in Utah nearly a year, Mr. Elliott clings to his first wife and refuses to wed any more. The Mormon authorities sent them $200 to pay their expenses out there, but will not help them to get back to Fulton. Hence their appeal here.

First Mistake in Fifteen Years.

[Stanford Interior Journal.]

A colored man tells us that he asked another if he had any chickens for sale. He answered "no" but he would bring him some that night. Sure enough at 1 o'clock he came with a sack and said there were two in it. He got his money and the next morning the purchaser discovered that one was a nice fat hen and the other an owl. On being sent for and being told of the imposition, he said they were both on the same roost and that it was the first mistake he had made in fifteen years at the business, and he had rather be caught for stealing than that it should get out that he made such a mistake. If anybody has missed a fat hen this may lead to the arrest of the thief.

The Scarcity of Mules.

[Owensboro Messenger.]

The scarcity of mules and the increased demand for them at increased prices is bringing about a revival in the mule industry, and the promise is that this is going to be a prosperous year with the owners of jacks since the time ten years ago when every mule was ready cash and a good one would bring $175 as soon as it was for sale. Young mules are scarce everywhere, so the probability is that five or six years will intervene before the supply is nearly equal to the demand. A local stock dealer was asked what had caused the shortage in the supply of mules now on the market, and he said there were two causes. The chief cause was the fact that mules became so cheap that it ceased to be profitable to raise them, and the result was that where ten years and more ago nearly every farmer was raising mules, for the past few years there had been less than 25 per cent. of the farmers that had paid any attention at all to mule raising. It had lessened the supply until mules had begun to advance, when along came the Spanish war, followed by the Boer war, and the demand by the United States and England for mules had so far exceeded the supply that it had left the agricultural districts with fewer mules than actually needed, and there was no other natural result but for mules to gradually advance from $25 to $75 three years ago to $60 to $125 at present, according to age and condition.

Affidavits in Order.

[Harrodsburg Democrat.]

One of the most remarkable things that ever occurred in the history of Harrodsburg, we are informed, on the authority of Mr. Fountain Smedley, H. C. Wood and others, took place during the summer of 1858, and is well remembered by the inhabitants of the town of that day. What is now Mr. John Lafon's lumber and coal yard was then a hemp factory. One morning, after a terrific rain had fallen the night before, the lot which at that time included the land where Thompson's distillery now stands, was discovered to be litterally covered with ordinary knitting needles, all sticking in the ground, as though they had been placed there by hand. People that were inclined to superstition were greatly frightened and thought that the end of the world was near at hand. At that time most of the knitting was done by hand and the phenomenal shower was gladly received by the good women of the time. Mr. Fount Smedley, as well as many others of our older citizens, claims to have seen the needles. Mr. Smedley said the colored people, and the white people as well, carried away basket loads. No one has ever been able in any way to account for the phenomenal occurrence, and it has been a matter of continual speculation for over forty years. Mr. Smedley, who is our chief authority for the incident related above, states that some of the needles could doubtless be found in use here now.

Are We In the 20th Century?

The difference of opinion about the 19th and the 20th century problem will never be settled, unless the antagonizing parties agree to start the Christian Era pari passu.

The 19th century advocates begin the Christian Era by recording the first day as January 1st, A. D. 1. The following January they necessarily record as January 1st, A. D. 2, although the New Era was then only 1 year old. And hence according to their calculation, on January 1st, 1900 only 1899 years of the Christian Era have elapsed, and the New Era will not be 1900 years old till January 1st, 1901. They are still in the 19th century.

This way of reckoning seems like calling a child one year old, when it is but a day old, and calling it 2 years old, when it is actually but a year old. It is like boasting of a dollar when you have but the first cent saved, and trying to display the 2d dollar, while you have but 101 cents, etc.

Advocates of the 20th century begin the Christian Era by recording the first day simply as "January 1st, A. D.," and then "February 1st, A. D." till "Dec. 31st, A. D." and scout the idea of recording "Jany. 1st, A. D. 1," until a full year, or 365 days of the Christian Era had elapsed. On Jany. 1st, A. D. 2, two full years had elapsed, and the 3d year commenced. Hence, according to their calculations, last Jan. 1st, 1900, fully nineteen hundred years of the Christian Era were completed, and it was for them the first day of the 20th century.

They insist, as an argument, that when a child is born, although it is then in its first year, no one ever thinks of ever recording the first day of its birth as Anno 1 of the child. And when it has completed the first year, it is not considered Anno 2, but Anno 1 of its life until it has actually completed the 2d year and begins its 3d year. And so if a man could have lived to be 1900 years old last Jany. although he would give his age as 1900 years for the next 12 months, still he would have begun his 20th hundred on Jany. 1st, 1900.

Let 100 cents which make a dollar, represent the 365 days which make a year. I could not boast of a dollar as soon as I have saved my first cent! I must place fully 100 cents in the bank, before I can give a check for $1. Just so, 365 days had to pass after the opening of the Christian Era, before historians could record A. D., 1. Nor could I write out a check for 1900 dollars, if I have only 1899 dollars and 99 cts. in bank; but after placing my next cent in the bank, I can check off 1900 dollars. If I add one cent to the 1900 dollars, it is my first saving for the 20th hundred. My 20th hundred does not begin when I have saved 1901 dollars, but as soon as I have 1900 dollars and one cent in the bank. In like manner at midnight of Dec. 31st, 1899 and Jan. 1st, 1900, nineteen hundred times 365 days of the Christian Era had elapsed, were complete, and Jany. 1st, 1900 was the first day of the 20th century. And when we shall write Jany. 1st, 1901, the first year of the 20th century has passed into eternity, and the 2d year of the 20th century has begun. The solution of the 19th and 20th century problem therefore depends altogether upon the way you record the first day and the first year of the Christian Era. "Sapienti sat." Respty, B. J. KOLB.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowls, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous disease, kidney trouble, female complaints; gives perfect health. A new iconoclast in Philadelphia has opened a crusade against the frequent use of the word "the" in literary compositions. He counted its repetitions on the editorial page of a Philadelphia paper, and found 157 in 1,628 words. In the news column the proportion was 73 to 707.

Writing on the decline of the French language, M. Jean Finot points out that at the end of the last century French was the language spoken by the largest number of civilized people, whereas it now stands fourth. English is spoken by 116,000,000, Russian by 85,000,000, German by 80,000,000, and French by 58,000,000.

There is a peculiar sect known as Zionists in Ontario, Canada. The cardinal doctrine of their creed is that hogs are possessed by devils and should be killed. The Zionist farmers, in some instances, have joined together, driven all their hogs into one place and there killed them, in no instance allowing any of the meat to be used as food.

A mining company at Marquette, Mich., has discovered that rats are the best and cheapest underground scavengers. Before the men go to work in its new shaft, it wants to have at least the nucleus of a colony of rats in the pit, so that the scraps and fragments of the miners' dinners, which are thown about underground, may be disposed of.

The editorial law of Belgium provides that every man between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-five years who shall pay $1 per year in taxes will be entitled to vote one ballot; married men over twenty-five years of age will have two ballots each, and if such married men shall own real estate or government bonds or savings bank deposits producing an income of $20 a year they will have three ballots each.

The members of the United States senate last summer got away with 46 boxes of lemons a month. A half box of lemons, 200 lemons a month, for each senator averages about 6 lemons a day. Six lemons will make 12 glasses of lemonade or 6 rickeys. The amount of ice used by the senators in one winter was 120,685 pounds. They used last year 106 cases of lithia water and 2,510 pounds of sugar were required to sweeten the beverage.

There is little danger, says the Street Railway Review, of Chicago, of the automobile becoming a dangerous competitor of electric railways. To transport any considerable number of people the carriage must be of a large size, and with the necessary storage batteries, of considerable weight. The heavier these become the greater the disparity between the auto with its wheels resting on pavement and the street car which runs upon rails.

The statistics of smallpox show that this ailment is more prevalent from January to June than in the later half of the year. Measles show a descending curve in January, a rise in May and June, a fall from August to October and then a rise in November and December, carrying us on to the January fall. Scarlet fever is low from January to July; it rises in August, and is high till the end of December. Typhoid fever is typically an ailment of the autumn.

In India there are a number of railways having but one rail, and a road of this type known as the Ewing is described in the Street Railway Review. The cars or trucks used have two or three small wheels placed one behind the other along the central line of the car, which run on the single rail and support the greater part of the load. The loads are placed so as to make the two sides balance as near as may be, and the car is prevented from tipping by a lightly built wheel.

The immigration of laborers to the Hawaiian islands during the year 1899 was 21,571 men, 5,077 women and 794 children, making a total of 27,442. Of these 20,561 were under contract and 6,881 were not. Of Japanese there were 20,536 men, 4,926 women and 631 children, a total of 26,093; of Chinese, 808 men, 84 women and 91 children, a total of 983; of Koreans, 4 men; of Portugese, 215 men, 56 women and 77 children, a total of 343; of Italians, 8 men and 11 women, a total of 19.

In the Coblentz woods, Germany, whole villas have been discovered, the ruins dating back to before the time of the Romans. Near the villas the graves of the owners and of their families have been found. The oldest of these have the form of mounds, many of them round, while those of the beginning of the century are usually from thirteen to eighteen meters square. Near the middle of the settlement at Coblentz on the Rhine has been found a temple which has been dedicated to Mercury.

The longest time that is known to have elapsed between the firing of a shell and its explosion is 44 years. Recently a shell which had been fired into the Russian harbor oft Sebastopol during the Crimean war at least 44 years ago was hauled up by some fishermen, and it exploded on being taken from the water killing one of the men and wounding several of the others, notwithstanding the long period which had elapsed since it had left the British gun which fired it. Finds of shells are exceedingly dangerous. Finds of unexploded shells are exceedingly dangerous.

RELIGION OF GHOSTS.

Dr. Talmage Warns People Against Modern Spiritualism.

The Witch of Endor a Type of the Fallacies of the Present Day—Denounces It as Witchcraft and Sorcery.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage discusses a theme never more under exploration than at this time and warns people against what he calls a religion of ghosts; text, 1 Samuel 28:7: "Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at Endor. And Saul disguised himself and put on other raiment, and he went; and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night."

Trouble to the right of him and trouble to the left of him, Saul knew not what to do. As a last resort he concluded to seek out a spiritual medium or a witch or anything that you please to call her—a woman who had communication with the spirits of the eternal world. It was a very difficult thing to do, for Saul had either slain all the witches or compelled them to stop business. A servant one day said to King Saul: "I know of a spiritual medium down at the village of Endor." "Do you?" said the king. Night falls. Saul, putting off his kingly robes and putting on the dress of a plain citizen, with two servants, goes out to hunt up this medium.

Saul and his servants after awhile reached the village, and they say: "I wonder if this is the house," and they look in, and they see the haggard, weird and shriveled up spiritual medium sitting by the light and on the table sculptured images and divining rods and poisonous herbs and bottles and vases. They say: "Yes, this must be the place." One loud rap brings the woman to the door, and as she stands there, holding the candle or lamp above her head and peering out into the darkness, she says: "Who is here?" The tall king informs her that he has come to have his fortune told. When she hears that she trembles and almost drops the light, for she knows there is no chance for a fortune teller or spiritual medium in all the land. But Saul having sworn that no harm shall come to her, she says: "Well, who shall I bring up from the dead?" Saul says: "Bring up Samuel." That was the prophet who had died a little while before.

I see her waving a wand, or stirring up some poisonous herbs in a caldron, or hear her muttering over some incantations, or stamping with her foot as she cries out to the realm of the dead: "Samuel, Samuel!" Lo, the freezing horror! The floor of the tenement opens, and the gray hairs flout up and the forehead, the eyes, the lips, the shoulders, the arms, the feet—the entire body of the dead Samuel—wrapped in sepulchral robe, appearing to the astonished group, who stagger back and hold fast and catch their breath and shiver with terror.

The dead prophet, white and awful from the tomb, begins to move his ashen lips, and he glares upon King Saul and cries out: "What did you bring me up for? What do you mean, King Saul?" Saul, trying to compose and control himself, makes this stammering and affrighted utterance as he says to the dead prophet: "The Lord is against me, and I have come to you for help. What shall I do?" The dead prophet stretched forth his finger to King Saul and said: "Die to-morrow! Come with me into the sepulcher. I am going now. Come, come with me!" And, lo, the floor again opens, and the feet of the dead prophet disappear and the arms and the shoulders and the forehead? The floor closes. Oh, that was an awful seance!

We are surrounded by mystery—before us, behind us, to the right of us, to the left of us, mystery. There is a vast realm unexplored that science, I have no doubt, will yet map out. He who explores that realm will do the world more service than ever did a Columbus or an Amerigo Vespucci. There are so many things that cannot be accounted for, so many sounds and appearances which defy acoustics and investigation, so many things approximating to the spectral, so many effects which do not seem to have a sufficient cause.

To unlatch the door between the present state and the future state all the fingers of superstition have been busy. We have books entitled "Footfalls on the Boundaries of Other Worlds," "The Debatable Land Between This World and the Next," "Researches Into the Phenomena of Spiritualism" and whole libraries of hocus pocus, enough to deceive the very elect. I shall not take time to rehearse the history of divination, Delphic oracle, sibyl or palmistry or the whole centuries of imposture.

Modern spiritualism proposes to open the door between this world and the next and put us into communication with the dead. It has never yet offered one reasonable credential.

When I find Saul in my text consulting a familiar spirit, I learn that spiritualism is a very old religion.

Spiritualism in America was born in the year 1847, in Hydesville, Wayne county, N. Y., when one night there was a loud rap heard against the door of Michael Weekman; a rap a second time, a rap a third time, and all three times, when the door was opened, there was nothing found there, the knocking having been made seemingly by invisible knuckles. In that same house there was a young woman who had a cold hand passed over her face, and there being seemingly no earthly attached to it, ghostly suspicions were excited.

After awhile Mr. Fox with his family moved into that house, and then they had bangings at the door every night. One night Mr. Fox cried out: "Are you a spirit?" Two raps—answer in the affirmative. "Are you an injured spirit?" Two raps—answer in the affirmative. Then they knew right away that it was the spirit of a peddler who had been murdered in that house years before and who had been robbed of his $500. Whether the spirit of the peddler came back to collect his $500 or his bones I do not know.

The excitement spread. There was a universal rumpus. Hon. Judge Edmonds declared in a book that he had actually seen a bell start from the top shelf of a closet, heard it ring over the people that were standing in the closet; then, swung by invisible hands, it rang over the people in the back parlor and floated through the folding doors to the front parlor, rang over the people there and then dropped on the floor. A senator of the United States, afterward governor of Wisconsin, had his head quite turned with spiritualistic demonstrations. Tea tables tipped, and the stools tilted, and the bedsteads raised, and the chairs upset, and it seemed as if the spirits everywhere had gone into the furniture business! Well, the people said: "We have got something new in this country. It is a new religion!" Oh, no, my friend, thousands of years ago, we find in our text, a spiritualistic seance!

Nothing in the spiritualistic circles of our day has been more strange, mysterious and wonderful than things which have been seen in past centuries of the world. In all ages there have been necromancers, those who consult with the spirits of the departed; charmers, those who put their subjects in a mesmeric state; sorcerers, those who by taking poisonous drugs see everything and hear everything and tell everything; dreamers, people who in their sleeping moments can see the future world and hold consultation with spirits. Yea, before the time of Christ, the Brahmans went through all the table moving, all the furniture excitement, which the spirits have exploited in our day, precisely the same thing over and over again, under the manipulation of the Brahmans. Now, do you say that spiritualism is different from these? I answer, all these delusions I have mentioned belong to the same family. They are exhumations from the unseen world.

What does God think of all these delusions? He thinks so severely of them that He never speaks of them but with livid thunders of indignation. He says: "I will be a swift witness against the sorcerer." He says: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." And, lest you might take some important distinction between spiritualism and witchcraft, God says, in so many words: "There shall not be among you a consulter of familiar spirits, or wizard, or necromancer, for they that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." The Lord God Almighty in a score of passages which I have not now time to quote utters His indignation against all this great family of delusions. After that be a spiritualist if you dare!

Still further, we learn from this text how it is that people come to fall into spiritualism. Saul had enough trouble to kill ten men. He did not know where to go for relief. After awhile he resolved to go and see the witch of Endor. He expected that somehow she would afford him relief. It was his trouble drove him there. And I have to tell you now that spiritualism finds its victims in the troubled, the bankrupt, the sick, the bereft. You lose your watch, and you go to the fortune teller to find where it is.

You lose a friend; you want the spiritual world opened, so that you may have communication with him. In a highly wrought, nervous and diseased state of mind you go and put yourself in that communication. That is why I hate spiritualism. It takes advantage of one in a moment of weakness, which may come upon us at any time. We lose a friend. The trial is keen, sharp, suffocating, almost maddening. If we could marshal a host and storm the eternal world and recapture our loved one, the host would soon be marshaled. The house is so lonely. The world is so dark. The separation is so insufferable. But spiritualism says: "We will open the future world, and your loved one can come back and talk to you." Though we may not hear his voice, we may hear the rap of his hand. So, clear the table. Sit down. Put your hands on the table. Be very quiet. Five minutes gone. Ten minutes. No motion of the table. No response from the future world. Twenty minutes. Thirty minutes. Nervous excitement all the time increasing. Forty minutes. The table shivers. Two raps from the future world. The letters of the alphabet are called over. The departed friend's name is John. At the pronunciation of the letter J, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter O, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter H, two raps. At the pronunciation of the letter N, two raps. There you have the whole name spelled out—J-o-h-n, John. Now, the spirit being present, you say: "John, are you happy?" Two raps give an affirmative answer.

Pretty soon the hand of the medium begins to twitch and toss and begins to write out, after paper and ink are furnished, a message from the eternal world. What is remarkable, the departed spirit, although it has been amid the illuminations of the Heaven, cannot spell as well as it used to. It has lost all grammatical accuracy, and cannot write as distinctly. I received a letter through a medium once. I sent it back. I said: "Just please to tell those ghosts they had better go to school and get improved in their orthography." Now, just think of spirits, that the Bible represents as enthroned in glory, coming down to crawl under the table and break crockery and ring tea bells before supper is ready and rap the window shutter on a gusty night! What consolation in such miserable stuff as compared with the consolation that our departed friends free from toil and sin and pain are forever happy, and that we will join them, not in mysterious and half utterance which makes the hair stand on end and makes cold chills creep the back, but in a reunion most blessed and happy and glorious!

"And none shall murmur or misdoubt
When God's great sunrise ends us out."

I learn still further from this subject that spiritualism and necromancy are affairs of darkness. Why did not Saul go in the day? He was ashamed to go. Besides that, he knew that this spiritual medium, like all her successors, performed her exploits in the night. The Davenports, the Fowlers, the Foxes, the spiritual mediums of all ages, have chosen the night or a darkened room. Why? The majority of their wonders have been swindles, and deception prospers best in the night.

I indict spiritualism also because it is a social and marital curse. The worst deeds of licentiousness and the worst orgies of uncleanliness have been enacted under its patronage. The story is too vile for me to tell. I will not pollute my tongue or your ears with the recital. Sometimes the civil law has been invoked to stop the outrage. Families innumerable have been broken up by it. It has pushed off hundreds of young women into a life of profligacy. It talks about "elective affinities" and "affinital relations" and "spiritual matches" and adopts the whole vocabulary of free loveism. In one of its journals it declares "marriage is the monster curse of civilization." It is a source of debauchery and intemperance." If spiritualism could have its full swing, it would turn this world into a pendemonium of carnality. It is an unclean, adulterous, damnable religion, and the sooner it drops into hell from which it rose the better both for earth and Heaven. For the sake of man's honor and woman's purity I say let the last vestige of it perish forever. I wish I could gather up all the raps it has ever heard from spirits blest or damned and gather them all on its own head in thundering raps of annihilation!

If God is ever slapped in the face it is when a spiritual medium puts down her hand on the table, invoking spirits departed to make a revelation. God has told you all you ought to know, and how dare you be prying into that which is none of your business. You cannot keep the Bible in one hand and spiritualism in the other. One or the other will slip out of your grasp, depend upon it. Spiritualism is adverse to the Bible, in the fact that it has in these last days called from the future world Christian men to testify against Christianity. Its mediums call back Lorenzo Dow, the celebrated evangelist, and Lorenzo Dow testifies that Christians are idolators. Spiritualism calls back Tom Paine, and he testifies that he is stopping in the some house in Heaven with John Bunyan. They call back John Wesley, and he testifies against the Christian religion, which he all his life gloriously preached. Andrew Jackson Davis, the greatest of all the spiritualists, comes to the front and declares that the New Testament is but the dismal echo of a barbaric age! And the Bible only "one of the pen and ink relics of Christianity."

I have in my house n book used in spiritualistic service. It contains a catechism and a hymn book. The catechism has these questions and answers:

Q. What is our chief baptism? A. Frequent ablution in water.

Q. What is our inspiration? A. Fresh air and sunshine.

Q. What is our love feast? A. Clear conscience and sound sleep.

Q. What is our prayer? A. Physical exercise.

And then it goes on to show that a great proportion of their religious service is a system of calisthenics. Then when they want to arouse the devotion of the people to the highest pitch, they give out the hymn on the sixty-fifth page:

The night hath gathered up her silken fringes.

Or, on the fifteenth page:

Come to the woods, heigh ho!

"But," says some one, "wouldn't it be of advantage to hear from the future world? Don't you think it would strengthen Christians? There are a great many materialists who do not believe there are souls, but if spirits from the future world should knock and talk over to us they would be persuaded." To that I answer in the ringing words of the Son of God: "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

Teach your children there are no ghosts to be seen or heard in this world save those which walk on two feet or four—human or bestial. Remember that spiritualism at the best is a useless thing, for if it tells what the Bible reveals it is a superfluity, and if it tells what the Bible does not reveal it is a lie. Instead of going out to get other people to tell your fortune, tell your own fortune by putting your trust in God and doing the best you can. I will tell your fortune: "All things work together for good to them that love God." Insult not your departed friends by asking them to come down and rerabble under an extension table. Remember that there is only one spirit whose dictation you have a right to invoke, and that is the holy, blessed and omnipotent spirit of God. Hark! He is rapping now, not on a table or the floor, but rapping on the door of your heart, and every rap is an invitation to Christ and a warning of judgment to come. Oh, grieve Him not away! Quench Him not. He has been all around you this morning. He was all around you last night. He has been around you all your lives. Hark! There comes a voice with tender, overmastering intonation, saying: "My spirit shall not always strive."

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Senate—Mr. Perkins presented the credentials of Thos. R. Bard as senator from California, for the term of six years beginning on March 4, 1899. He was admitted to the floor. A resolution was adopted authorizing the printing of a special edition of 5,000 copies of the year book of the department of agriculture for distribution at the Paris exposition. Discussion of the Philippine question was then resumed. Mr. Kennedy spoke against the retention by the United States of the islands and urging that the Filipinos be accorded the right to govern themselves. After the passage of 52 pension bills and a number of bills on the general calendar, consideration was resumed of the Hawaiian government bill. Some amendments were agreed to, but consideration of the measure was not concluded.

House—Before the debates upon the Porto Rican tariff bill was resumed Mr. Hepburn attempted to secure an agreement to take up the Nicaraguan canal bill. He asked unanimous consent that it be taken up in two weeks, but Mr. Cannon objected. The house then went into committee of the whole on the Porto Rican tariff bill. Three speeches were delivered which consumed five hours' time. Mr. Hopkins spoke in support of the bill, and Mr. Newlands and Mr. Swanson in opposition to it. The speakers devoted themselves almost exclusively to the constitutional question involved, and were listened to with attention.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Senate—The following bills were passed: Authorizing the Cape Nome Transportation, Bridge and Development Co. to construct a bridge across the Snake river at Nome City, Alaska; to provide for the erection of a bridge in Minnesota, between Rainy Lake and the mouth of Rainy river; granting additional rights of way to the Allegheny Valley Railway Co. through the arsenal grounds at Pittsburgh, Pa.; to incorporate the American national Red Cross; to pay James and William Crooks, of Canada, $5,000 damages on account of the seizure of the vessel Lord Nelson in 1812. The bill as reported carried 4 per cent. interest amounting to $12,800, but as the payment of interest was strongly antagonized that part of the bill was stricken out. Consideration of the Hawaiian government bill was then resumed.

House—The house adopted the senate resolution authorizing the president to appoint one woman commissioner to represent the United States and the National Society of the D. A. R. at the unveiling of the statue of Lafayette at the Paris exposition. Before the debate upon the Porto Rican tariff bill was resumed, it was agreed that the debate hereafter should begin at 11 o'clock in the morning, and that there should be night sessions.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Senate—According to an annual custom in the senate on Washington's birthday Washington's farewell address was read in the senate by Senator Foraker. A number of senators being absent Mr. Penrose did not call up the resolution involving the right of Senator Quay to a seat in the senate as a member from Pennsylvania. The senate then adjourned.

House—The house began holding early sessions, meeting at 11 a. m., owing to pressure for time in the Porto Rican debate. The debate brought out several notable speeches, including one by Representative Gronvenor, of Ohio, who answered a number of questions as to the attitude of the president; another by Representative McCall, of Massachusetts, the republican member of the ways and means committee who dissented from the majority report, and Mr. Moody, another Massachusetts republican, who sharply criticised the position of his colleague. The debate was continued at a night session.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Senate—The session was unusually interesting from the very beginning. In spite of vigorous and intimated opposition Mr. Penrose, of Pennsylvania, succeeded in getting the Quay case before the senate and three notable speeches were delivered. The vote to take up the case was 31 to 28, but it is not considered a test vote on seating Quay.

House—The entire session o the house was taken up by speeches on the Porto Rican tariff bill. A night session was held devoted to the same subject. An agreement was reached that a vote on the measure will be taken at 3 p. m. Tuesday next, general debate to close Saturday.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Senate—Throughout the session the senate had under consideration the Hawaiian government bill. The discussion took a wide range, but the issue of it was an amendment offered by Mr. Platt (Ct.) as to the appointment and tenure of office of the judges of the Hawaiian courts. Mr. Hale reported the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill and gave notice that at an early day he would call it up for consideration. Mr. Penrose gave notice that on Monday he would call up the resolution relative to seating M. S. Quay in the senate as a representative from Pennsylvania.

House—The following four pensions were favorably introduced: To pension Henry Guckes, sergeant Company A, 31st Ohio volunteers at $20 per month; to pension William Rhewby, Company A, 31st Indiana volunteers, at $30 a month; to pension Arthur G. Kibby, Company D, Home Guards, 123d Virginia volunteers, at $12 a month; to pension Sarah Miley, widow of Col. Miley, at $50 a month. Col. Miley saw duty with Gen. Shafter at Santiago and subsequently took his life in the Philippine campaign. The rest of the time was taken up in discussing the Porto Rican tariff bill.

SUITS CONSOLIDATED.

The Frankfort Agreement Is Being Carried Out, and Judge Field Will Hear the Contest Cases.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 26.—The suit of J. C. W. Beckham against W. S. Taylor was filed in the circuit court here. This action was originally brought at Georgetown. The filing of the suit here was in accordance with the agreement made by both sides for a consolidation of suits involving the governorship of Kentucky. The action is for an injunction. W. S. Taylor is the plaintiff in a similar suit against Beckham and others. By the agreement Judge Field will try the consolidated cases.

The answer and counter-claim of Beckham, Castleman and Carter in the injunction suits by W. S. Taylor, John Marshall and Daniel Collier were filed. The answer denies all the allegations of plaintiff's petition and sets up a counter-claim that the offices of governor, lieutenant governor and adjutant general have been usurped by plaintiffs, and defendants pray that they be adjudged the holders of said offices.

Quarter Million Fire Loss.

London, Ont., Feb. 24.—London's finest business block the Masonic temple, was destroyed by fire. The total loss will reach $250,000, against which there is insurance of about $100,000.

A Preacher Dismissed.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 25.—Rev. W. H. Harper, a prominent divine, who has been in charge of the "Wheel Circuit," at Shelbyville, Tenn., has been dismissed by the presiding elder on the charge of sending his wife away and then living with a young lady at that place.

Skater Did Not Return.

Findlay, O., Feb. 26.—Friday David Walters went skating on the Blanchard river, and has not since been seen. He was probably drowned, as his muffler was found on the ice.

THE GOLD STANDARD.

Republican Members of House and Senate Reach an Agreement.

The Dollar Shall Be Twenty-Five and Five-Tenths Grains of Gold, Nine-Tenths Fine—Other Money On a Parity.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The republican members of the conference committee on the financial bill reached an agreement. The democratic conferees were called in, and stated their opposition to the bill, and without further tornality the bill was ordered reported. The text of the bill as agreed upon and as it will be reported by the conferees and as it will probably become a law is as follows:

That the dollar, consisting of 25.8 grains of gold, nine-tenths fine, as established by section 3511 of the revised statutes of the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States shall be maintained at a parity of value with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to maintain such parity.

That United States notes and treasury notes issued under the act of July 14, 1890, when presented to the treasury for redemption, shall be redeemed in gold coin of the standard fixed in the first section of this act; and, in order to secure the prompt and certain redemption of such notes as herein provided, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to set apart in the treasury a reserve fund of $150,000,000 in gold coin and bullion, which fund shall be used for such redemption purposes only, and whenever and as often as any of said notes shall be redeemed from said fund, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to use said notes so redeemed to restore and maintain such reserve fund in the manner following to-wit: First, by exchanging the notes so redeemed for any gold coin in the general fund of the treasury; second, by accepting deposits of gold coin at the treasury or at any sub-treasury in exchange for the United States notes so redeemed; third, by procuring gold coin by the use of said notes, in accordance with the provisions of section 3700 of the revised statutes of the United States.

If the secretary of the treasury is unable to restore and maintain the gold coin in the reserve fund by the foregoing methods, and the amount of such gold coin and bullion in said fund shall at any time fall below $100,000,000, then it shall be his duty to restore the same to the maximum sum of $150,000,000 by borrowing money on the credit of the United States, and, for the debt thus incurred, to issue and sell coupon or registered bonds of the United States in such form as he may prescribe, in denominations of $50 or any multiple thereof, bearing interest at the rate of not exceeding 3 per centum per annum, payable quarterly, such bonds to be payable at the pleasure of the United States after one year from the date of their issue, and to be payable, principal and interest, in gold coin of the present standard value and to be exempt from the payment of all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under state, municipal or local authority; and the gold coin received from the sale of said bonds shall first be covered into the general fund of the treasury and then exchanged in the manner hereinbefore provided for an equal amount of the notes redeemed and held for exchange, and the secretary of the treasury may, in his discretion, use said notes in exchange for gold or to purchase or redeem any bonds of the United States or for any other lawful purpose the public interests may require, except that they shall not be used to meet deficiencies in the current revenues. That United States notes, when redeemed in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall be reissued, but shall be held in the reserve fund until exchanged for gold, as herein provided; and the gold coin and bullion in the reserve fund, together with the redeemed notes held or use as provided in this section shall at no time exceed the maximum sum of $150,000,000.

That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to affect the legal tender quality as now provided by law of the silver dollar, or of any other money coined or issued by the United States.

That it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury, as fast as standard silver dollars are coined under the provisions of the acts of July 14, 1890, and June 12, 1898, from bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, to retire and cancel an equal amount of treasury notes whenever received into the treasury, either by exchange in accordance with the provisions of this act, or in the ordinary course of business, and upon the cancellation of treasury notes silver certificates shall be issued against the silver dollar so coined.

New Statue of Gen. Grant.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The house committee on library favorably reported a bill making an appropriation of $5,000 for the preparation of plans or designs for a memorial statue of Gen. Grant to be erected in Washington.

To Meet in Indianapolis.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The executive committee of the National Association of Democratic clubs Friday decided to hold the next annual meeting of democratic clubs at Indianapolis, September 5.

WE WILL HOLD THEM.

The American Flag Will Not Be Taken Down on Sabitu and Cagayan Islands.

Washington, Feb. 25.—The American flag will not come down on Sibutu island or on Cagayan island. Spain has been demanding that these islands be returned to it. The war department was ready to make the return and so was the state department up to Saturday. The navy department, however, was unwilling to surrender anything it had taken, and has made its title good to the islands. The state department will inform Spain that the islands are the property of the United States, and will hold them.

Sibitu is east of Borneo and Cagayan is west of Mindaro, about 200 miles. Sibitu was saved to the United States by the discovery Saturday of an old treaty between Spain, Great Britain and Germany, which specifically says that Borneo's holding shall not extend further than three miles from the coast of Borneo. Sibitu is on the opposite side of the channel separating Borneo from the Sulu archipelago.

As to Cagayan Island the records show that it was at on time used as a penal colony by Spain, and the latter is therefore stopped from denying that it was used as a part of the Philippine group.

EMBALMED BLOOD.

It is Being Sold in Toledo by the Chicago Packing Houses Says the Inspector.

Toledo, O., Feb. 25.—City Meat Inspector Schartz reported to the health department that he had found another new meat product here in the shape of "embalmed" blood, lungs, livers and brains of hogs, sheep and cattle. He says the articles are shipped here and sold by the Chicago packing houses. He says the chief buyers of the "embalmed" blood and lungs are the Poles and Hungarians, who use the articles for sausage, soup and broths, and some claim they drink the mixture. The products are being submitted to a chemical analysis. The meat inspector says that the embalming fluids used are even stronger than those resorted to to preserve meat.

MANY PEOPLE HURT.

A Disastrous Fire Followed By a Series of Explosions in a Suburb of the City of Paris.

Paris, Feb. 26.—As the result of a fire that broke out at Saint Ouen, a suburb of Paris, in a collection of alcohol and oil stores, a series of explosions occurred spreading the flames until a block of six immense warehouses was involved in a huge conflagration.

A great concourse of spectators had assembled and had approached too near when, suddenly and unexpectedly, the explosion occurred. The official computation shows that 150 were hurt and quite a number seriously. The loss is estimated at 2,000,000 francs.

Influenza Still Raging in Berlin.

Berlin, Feb. 26.—The influenza is still raging. Princess Frederick Charles has been attacked. The Italian ambassador here, Count Lanza di Busca, had invited Emperor William and the elite of Berlin, among them United States Ambassador White and Mrs. White to a dinner, but he was seized with influenza and the dinner was postponed.

Work of Assassins.

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 25.—A special from Bucktown says Miles Woods was called from his mountain home and shot down in cold blood. He died in ten minutes. His father ran out to ascertain the trouble, and was shot twice by the assassin. It is claimed that before the latter died he charged a deputy United States marshal with having committed the deed.

Locomotives on Runners.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—Lumbermen have introduced a successful locomotive on runners to haul trains of log-laden sleds from lumber camps. Another machine chips ice from the lake to make roads in the snowless season. The two inventions will revolutionize the methods in the lumber camps.

Prize for Debaters.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 25.—Announcement has been made by the judges of the sophomore prize debate held in Whig hall, recently, that the first prize was awarded to John Green Sims, of Wartrace, Tenn., and the second to Paul IrwinMcClory, of Winchester, Ky. Upwards of twenty contestants entered the debate.

Death of Mrs. Amos J. Snell.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Mrs. Henrietta Snell, widow of Amos J. Snell, the millionaire whose murder has been a mystery for 12 years, died Saturday. She was stricken three days ago with heart disease. Mrs. Snell was nearly 70 years old, and had lived since her husband's tragic death in the house in which he was murdered.

Chicago Man Dies Away From Home.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 26.—Lycurgus F. Laflin, of Chicago, the wealthy gunpowder manufacturer, died unexpectedly at the Chamberlain hotel, Old Point Comfort. He arrived here from Chicago several days ago.

Order for Whitehead Torpedoes.

New York, Feb 25.—Lieut. Adm. O'Neil, chief of the ordnance bureau, has placed a contract with E. W. Bliss & Co., of Brooklyn, for 30 Whitehead torpedoes, for which the government will pay $126,000.

CRONJE SURROUNDED.

He is Willing to Surrender But His Men Will Not Permit Him.

The Boers Reported to Have Plenty of Provisions, but to Be Running Short of Ammunition—Latest News From the Front.

London Feb. 24.—Every hour is expected to bring news of General Cronje's surrender. On all sides wonder is expressed that the gallant yet ghastly battle at Paardeberg drift has not yet ended in what is considered to be the inevitable. With fifty guns bearing upon the devoted band within the terribly short range of 2,000 yards, surrender or utter annihilation can be the only result, unless all reports of the strength of the Boer reinforcements are wrong. The critics canvass every untoward contingency that can affect Field Marshal Roberts and see nothing that can save Gen. Cronje from the terrible vise in which he has been caught.

Even if an unexpectedly strong attack on Lord Roberts' lines of communication could scarcely, according to these experts materially alter the result.

Paardeberg, Orange Free State, Feb. 24.—Gen. Cronje's position is more hopeless than ever. The British forces are closing in on all sides. Our guns dominate the sloping ascents from the river on all sides, and by the rush of the Shropshires on Wednesday night up the river bed the Boers lost 200 yards space in their cover.

Deserters say the British fire has been very deadly, and affirm that Gen. Cronje himself is willing to surrender, but is overborne by the young Boers from the Transvaal.

There are women and children with the Boer forces. On Wednesday Lord Roberts sent Gen. Cronje an offer of a safe couduct for the women and children, together with a free pass to any point for them, and also an offer of doctors and medicine. Cronje's reply was a curt refusal, and desultory shelling was resumed.

The kopje captured by the British last Wednesday, when 50 prisoners were taken, is a most important strategical position. Its possession should enable us to repulse any Boer reinforcements from the eastward.

The British took 80 prisoners as the result of Friday's engagement.

A balloon ascended and discovered several new works, which the British guns shelled.

The scene of the last seven days' fighting is one of the prettiest spots in South Africa. The river at the point where Gen. Cronje is ensconced and fighting for life resembles some parts of the Hudson river, the ground all around sloping toward the stream. All the highlands are covered by British artillery. Cronje is faced in the front and rear from both banks by the British, while Gen. French's horse, far away on the flanks, prevents a sudden inrush of Boers.

London, Feb. 26.—The war office publishes the following dispatch from Lord Roberts, dated at Paardeberg, February 24, at 12:30 p. m.:

"Parties of Boers recently arrived from Natal attacked our outposts in force again yesterday. They lost a good many killed and wounded and nearly 100 prisoners, including a commandant and three field cornets. Our casualties were four officers wounded, nine men killed, 23 men wounded and two men missing. On the 21st and 22d one officer and 12 men were wounded.

"During the advance to and at Kimberley the casualties were: Officers, 2 killed, 13 wounded; men, 4 killed, 73 wounded."

London, Feb. 26.—A dispatch to the Morning Post from Kimberley, dated Friday, says: "Gen. Cronje is reported to have plenty of provisions, but to be running short of ammunition. Mr. Rhodes is extremely hopeful that the war has reached its concluding stage."

London, Feb. 26.—The Lourenzo Marques correspondent of the Times says: "The feeling in official circles at Pretoria borders on consternation. Gen. Louis Botha and President Steyn are both urging President Kruger to sue for peace. At Bloemfontein Gen. Cronje's position is regarded as hopeless."

London, Feb. 26.—The Times publishes the following dispatch from Colenso, dated Saturday: "The British are now within two miles of being in touch with Ladysmith, but the ground still to be covered is the hardest part, and very severe fighting must be expected."

Electric Lines Consolidate.

Cincinnati, Feb. 25.—The consolidation of the Cincinnati & Hamilton and the Cincinnati & Miami Valley electric lines has been consummated under the title of the Southern Ohio Traction Co. The new line extends from Cincinnati to Dayton, and through cars will be started Monday. William Christy, of Akron, was elected president of the new company, and F. T. Pomeroy, of Cleveland, secretary and treasurer.

Nellie Grant Sartoris Improving.

New York, Feb. 26.—Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris is now convalescing from an operation, and will be about in a few days. On account of public statements that her malady was cancer, her physician states that after the operation an examination has proved that there is no evidence that cancer has ever existed.

Frozen on a Highway.

Warsaw, N. Y., Feb. 26.—The body of John Carmody was found frozen on a highway near this town. He was out in Saturday's gale and perished.

STEAMER ASHORE.

Passengers and Crew Will Be Saved, but It Is Likely That the Vessel Will Be a Total Loss.

Portland, Me., Feb. 26.—The big Allan line steamship Californian, which left her dock at midnight Saturday, went ashore on Ram island ledge, just outside of the harbor, a few minutes after her pilot left her Sunday morning. All the passengers are safe although still aboard.

Most of the local seafaring men are of the opinion that the rocks have penetrated the bottom of the vessel in several places and they doubt very much if she can be saved. The vessel is valued at $3,000,000. The cargo is valued at $500,000. There are six cabin, five intermediate and ten steerage passengers beside a crew of 75 men.

CALL TO BIMETALISTS.

A National Convention Will Be Held in Kansas City, July 4—Same Date as Democratic Convention.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Judge J. W. Rucker, of Colorado, professor of the United States Monetary league, has been in Washington for several days conferring with the leading bimetalists throughout the country, with the view of getting their opinions concerning the propriety of holding a national convention of bimetalists at some time in the future.

It is now definitely determined that such convention will be held in Kansas City on July 4. It is expected that some 600 or 800 delegates will be in attendance from all the states and territories. A committee has been chosen to confer with the local committee at Kansas City for the purpose of securing accommodations for the guests.

A NOVEL TAKING OFF.

Pennsylvania Man Lies Down on a Pile of Ice in a Refrigerator Car and Dies.

Denver, Col., Feb. 26.—The body of a man, which was found in a refrigerator car at Eaton, Col., on February 4, has been identified as that of Stuart St. Clair, of Williamsport, Pa. Instead of accident, his death is suicide.

St. Clair, who had been traveling under the name of James Hamlyn, as agent for a refrigerator car company, wrote to his wife from Ft. Worth last January that he intended to commit suicide.

January 27 he lay down on a pile of ice in a sealed refrigerator car and froze to death. His body was found when the Colorado & Southern train reached Eaton a fortnight later. His wife, hearing of this incident, sent for a photograph of the dead man, and has positively identified him as her husband.

Harry M. Weldon Stricken.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 26.—Harry M. Weldon, who for the past 20 years has been sporting editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, was stricken with paralysis early Sunday morning as he was entering his home on Seventh street. His right side is completely paralyzed and he is unable to speak, although he is conscious. His physicians have some hopes that the stroke will not prove fatal. Mr. Weldon is 44 years old, and is well known to the sporting fraternity throughout the United States.

British Steamship Sinks.

London, Feb. 25.—The British steamship Bath City, Capt. Jones, from New York, February 9, for Bristol, struck the north end of Lundy isle, in the British channel, Saturday. She backed off, and immediately sank in deep water. The master, three officers and ten of the crew reached Lundy Roads in life boats. The other life boat, with the remainder of the crew, is also believed to be safe.

Conference of Boer Sympathizers.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 26.—Leaders in this state of the pro-Boer movement are arranging to call a conference in Detroit of those active in the cause in the various states for the purpose of consolidating the movement in the hope that such united effort may be influential in preparing the way for mediation and arbitration of the British-Boer differences.

Street Car Wrecked.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 26.—A street car on the Decatur Blue Line was wrecked near Oakland cemetery by striking an obstruction, which had evidently been placed across the track. The car rolled 15 feet down an embankment. The 12 passengers on the car were more or less injured, Herschel Dellaperry and Policeman Eugene Coker probably fatally.

Detroit Fireman Killed.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 26.—Fire in the plant of the Detroit Steel and Spring Co.'s works destroyed both the company's rolling mills and caused the death of Fireman Timothy Kane, besides indirectly resulting in injuries to a physician and an ambulance driver. The property loss is about $100,000, fully insured.

Bill Against Trusts.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Representative Richardson, of Tennessee, introduced joint resolutions against the steel trust and against trusts in barbed wire, wire nails, etc., in the form similar to those introduced by him against the sugar and paper trusts.

Well-Known Sporting Man Dead.

New York, Feb. 26.—Edward Kearney, a well known sportsman and Tammany politician, is dead at Palm Beach, Fla., aged 69 years. He was prominent in the horse and carriage trade.

STATE ODDS AND ENDS.

ARM OPERATED UPON.

Col. David G. Colson, Victim of the Colson-Scott Duel, Not Recovering So Very Rapidly.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 22.—Dr. A. Morgan Vance, of Louisville, came to Frankfort and performed a heroic operation on Col. David G. Colson's left arm, splintered at the elbow in the Colson-Scott duel. During the past five days Colson suffered much. Morphine was administered in heavy doses. He could neither eat nor sleep, and his arm at the elbow swelled to double its natural size, and it took on an inflamed coloring almost to the elbow. Dr. Vance removed several pockets of bad blood. Colson said he felt relieved.

Representatives Alexander, Sharp and Conrad and House Sergeant-at-Arms Lyons, all democrats, called at the hospital to pay their respects.

PASSING BILLS.

Action Taken Upon Two Important Measures By the Democratic Members of the Senate.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 24.—The democratic senate passed Senator Utley's bill making it unlawful for corporations to subscribe to or contribute money to political campaign funds. The amount imposed for violation of the law is a fine of from $500 to $5,000 and revocation of charter.

The senate also passed the Coleman anti-trust bill. It prohibits the operation of pools, trusts and combinations of either persons, firms or corporations which seek to raise or lower market values, and imposes heavy fines in addition to forfeiture of the right to do business in this state after conviction.

Clearing the City of Armed Men.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 24.—The Frankfort city council passed a resolution authorizing the mayor to appoint a committee to investigate the alleged presence in the city of armed mountaineers charged with having threatened the lives of judges of the court of appeals. The resolution directs the committee to call on Taylor and demand of him the names of all persons either citizens or soldiers who are quartered in the state buildings and the reasons therefor, also to investigate all suspicious characters found in any part of the city.

Gates Will Be Erected.

Lebanon, Ky., Feb. 24.—Three turnpike companies owning pikes in the county, which have heretofore been under lease of the fiscal court, refused to lease them for the ensuing year, as the court would not buy the property. Tollgates will again be erected and a sufficient guard demanded of the proper authorities to protect the gates from being torn away. The Lebanon and Danville, the Bradfordsville and Houstonville and the Cissell's river turnpikes are the roads which refused to lease to the county.

Searching for Goebel's Assassin.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 23.—Detectives have been sent to two counties in Southeastern Kentucky and also to several counties in Southern Kentucky to run down clews in regard to the Goebel assassination. A fund of $5,000 has been raised by Goebel's friends. Justus Goebel is said to have told the legislature that the Goebel family will duplicate any appropriation made by the legislature if this be necessary to run down the murderers.

Taylor's Children Taken From School

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 22.—Because of the taunts of the public school pupils, the children of Republican Gov. Taylor have been taken from school. The Taylor children were teased and hooted at by the children from democratic families. Local democratic leaders started referring to Taylor as "hog-jaw." Young men took it up, and then the school children.

Horse Paper Changes Hands.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 22.—The stock of the Kentucky Stock Farm Publishing Co., capitalized at $25,000, which publishes the American Stock Farm, the oldest trotting horse paper in the country, was purchased by Desha Breckenridge. He will continue the publication of the American Stock Farm here. Price private.

Will Help Editor Moore.

Lexington, Feb. 24.—The Liberal societies of Ohio and Kentucky have inaugurated a movement to raise funds to defend Editor Charles Chilton Moore in the federal courts on charges of sending obscene matter through the mail.

Valuable Horse Dead.

Paris, Ky., Feb. 24.—Annie, 2:11¾, the property of J. Sim Wilson, was found dead in her paddock. Wilson had just refused an offer of $4,000 for her.

Ellis Graham Acquitted.

Mayfield, Ky., Feb. 24.—Ellis Graham, who was arrested several weeks ago on the charge of poisoning his wife, was acquitted at his examining trial before the county judge. The trial had been continued the fourth time, and had created much interest.

Charged With Assassination.

Middlesboro, Ky., Feb. 24.—Noah and John Reynolds are on trial at Whitesburg, charged with the assassination of Hon. W. S. Wright. He was an ex-member of the legislature and a prominent democratic leader.

KENTUCKY POPULISTS.

They Will Pursue a Middle-of-the-Road Policy and Will Not Affiliate With Either Party.

Litchfield, Ky., Feb. 24.—The populist state convention to select delegates to the national convention met here with a small attendance. The convention decided to pursue a middle-of-the-road policy and will not affiliate with either the democrats or republicans in the national nominations.

A committee was appointed to ascertain who could attend the national convention at Cincinnati on May 9, and lengthy resolutions were passed indorsing, among other things, "the action of the people's party national committee at Lincoln, Neb., and the call for a national convention at Cincinnati, when the true populists of the nation may be allowed to express their will without the dictation of bosses."

Ignored Beckham's Order.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 23.—An interesting case involving the recognition of the governor of Kentucky occurred here. A Franklin county jury ordered G. G. Heith, a Negro confined in the state prison, sent to the state asylum here. The Negro was accompanied by an order from Beckham to return him to the penitentiary when cured. The officials of the asylum, acting in Superintendent E. M. Wiley's absence, received the patient but ignored Beckham's orders. The asylum is under a superintendent appointed by Gov. Bradley during his term. Whether Beckham will act on the matter is not known.

Kuttawa, Ky., Feb. 24.—J. P. Alexander, of Dawson Springs, arrived here, having in his possession a pardon issued by Taylor Monday afternoon for the release of Gold Trotter, received at the Eddyville penitentiary from Hopkins county in September. The pardon was presented to Warden Smith, who refused to recognize it.

How Goebel Was Shot.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 24.—Little by little the result of the autopsy upon Goebel's remains is getting to the public. The official statement of the physicians holding the autopsy will prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that Goebel was shot in the right side, the ball passing out at the back. As evidence of this, it will be shown that a piece of one rib was pressed inward, penetrating the right lung. Had the ball entered the back and come out at the side, it would have pushed this piece of rib outward.

Federal Prisoners Sentenced.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 23.—A number of prisoners pleaded guilty in the United States court to selling liquor without license, and were given $100 fines and a jail sentence of 30 days. They were Buford Gilbert, Larkin Mullins, Robert Hay, Sy Durham, Millard Phillpot, James Ingland, Lemuel Delk and Taylor Mickels. Miles Coleman, charged with illicit distilling and retailing, was given a $200 fine and six months in the county jail.

Child Killed Herself.

Mayfield, Ky., Feb. 23.—Dommie May, the 12-year-old daughter of P. M. Coplen, a prominent tobacconist, while playing with a 42-caliber pistol, accidentally shot herself through the head, dying a half hour later from the wound. The bullet was found on the floor. Mr. Coplen is an ex-deputy sheriff of this county, and lately moved here from Wingo.

Cars Left the Track.

Paris, Ky., Feb. 24.—The L. & N. train from Maysville was derailed near Miller Station, five miles from Carlisle. The engine, baggage car and smoking car were thrown from the track, but no one was injured. The passengers were transferred.

Racing Firm Dissolved.

Paris, Ky., Feb. 24.—The noted firm of Clay & Woodford, horsemen, has been dissolved by mutual consent. Col. E. F. Clay retains Runnymede stock farm. Col. Woodford will devote his time to Racemeade stock farm.

Acquitted of Murder.

Columbia, Ky., Feb. 24.—In the circuit court at Jamestown the jury returned a verdict of acquittal of Merrell Carter, charged with the murder of William Redman, in Russell county, over a year ago.

Ex-Gov. Bradley's Sister Ill.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 22.—Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley received a telegram that his sister, the wife of Judge T. Z. Morrow, is dying at Somerset. He left for Somerset on an evening train.

Hunter Kills Himself.

Tompkinsville, Ky., Feb. 24.—Porter Rose, of Echo, Macon county, Tenn., accidentally shot and killed himself while hunting.

Retired Steamboat Captain Dead.

Owensboro, Ky., Feb. 23.—Capt. James Mathews, a prominent retired steamboatman, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home here. He was a union soldier and since the war served on boats between Cincinnati and New Orleans.

Stomach to Be Analyzed.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 23.—The stomach of Newton Kelly, of Eminence, who died under suspicious circumstances while out on bond, was received here by Chemist Harris Kelly, who will make an analysis.

Uncle Noah Barlow has made 8 gallons of maple syrup, which we sampled last Saturday, and pronounced it not only first class, but simply out of sight. He knows how to made it.

Some worthless curs made a raid on B. C. Tanner's flock of sheep, one day last week, but fortunately they were frightened away before they did much damage. They crippled one pretty badly, was about the extent of the damage did.

The regular meeting of the Boone county charge, was to have been at Hopeful, last Saturday, but on account of the very inclement weather, there were but few of the members present, and the meeting was postponed for two weeks, which will be March 10th, at 10 o'clock a. m. A full attendance of the members is desired.

Bellevue.

B. E. Drake's sister, of Patriot, is with him for a few days.

Willie Huey's wound is doing as well as could be expected.

Farmers are busy looking after the protection of young lambs.

W. B. Arnold was on the Louisville tobacco market again last week.

T. C. Roberts has resumed work on his residence since his school closed.

O. N. Grant and wife were visiting Mrs. Grant's parents, last Sunday.

Mrs. Chas. Kelly, of Huntsville, was visiting her sister, Mrs. Pearl Huey, here Saturday.

Saturday was the wildest day we have experienced this winter. It blowed and snowed all day.

We listened to an able and interesting sermon preached at the Christian church by Elder Grubbs, last Sunday.

J. H. Lawell entertained his friends, D. M. Snyder and wife and Mrs. Mary Corbin and daughter, Miss Permelia, last Saturday.

R. A. Brady owns an ewe that dropped a lamb on January 20th, and on the 22d inst. she dropped another. Both lambs are living and doing well. The second lamb Mr. Brady calls May Washington.

J. J. Huey has been with us for several days, and it is reported that he has purchased J. J. Walton's interest in the store at this place, and will be again seen at his old place, behind the counter, after March 1.

Duly Beall and W. L. Riddell, of Burlington, were among friends here last Friday. We did not learn the cause of their exit from Burlington—whether it was the appearance of a band of mountaineers or a pestilence.

Last Thursday G. T. Rue moved to the Mack Neal farm near Big Bone church. We were sorry to see Tony leave us, and are sure he will be welcomed by his new neighbors, as he and his family are the cleverest of people.

Rabbit Hash.

T. C. S. Ryle has 100 young lambs.

Miss Virgie Neison is visiting her sister in Ohio.

Born, to Wm. Aylor and wife, on the 21st inst., a boy.

It begins to look like we are never going to have spring.

Lagrippe has been raging in this vicinity for two weeks.

Willie and W. B. Ryle made a flying trip to the city, last week.

Several from here attended church in Rising Sun, last Sunday night.

Everett Ryle and wife will go to housekeeping on her father's place.

Jack Wingate, who is at work in Illinois, is well pleased with his job.

Col. A. B. Whitlock is visiting his sister, Mrs. Heury Gordon, at Muncie, Indiana.

Miss Anuabel Riley and Mr. Charles Wayman, of Dayton, Ohio, spent Sunday with Miss Riley's parents, here.

Crows have grown very troublesome in this locality. Their chief business here seems to be devouring wheat and corn and stealing eggs.

Schoolfield and Ryan, of Hamilton, Ohio, have been traveling through here with cream separators for sale. Several were left in this neighborhood on trial and it seems likely that they will be bought, as all who have used them are delighted with the results.

Tuesday of last week Mrs. W. P. Cropper and Miss Bessie Cropper, Mrs. Esther Kirtley, Mrs. Lou Morris, Mrs G. M Riley and Miss Mary Riley were invited to a carpet-rag sewiug at Mrs H G. Cropper's. All spent a pleasant day, occupied with the work their grandmothers engaged in years ago. Needless few balls were wound and all were rewarded with a good, old fashioned turkey dinner. Wednesday, Mrs. W. P. Cropper entertained her neighbors, with a lovely dinner of which turkey was the chief attractiou.

Hathaway.

Tony Rue has moved to M. W. Neal place.

Clay White went to Cincinnati, one day last week.

W 8. White made business trip to Rising Sun, last Friday.

Work hands are in demand in this neighborhood for the spring work.

Some ground-hog weather put in its appearance in grand style last Saturday.

Mrs. Avie Adams and Mrs. Lena Presser, went to Grant county last week to be present at the tin wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Adams.

Rumor has it that a large political bee is buzzing in the hat of one of Hathaway's politicians. He wants to make the race for assessor.

Miss Margaret Marbel's school at Beech Grove, closed last Thursday with an entertainment that was attended by a large crowd of friends and patrons. The following program was rendered and greatly enjoyed by the spectators: Music, Waterloo String Band; essay—Education, Miss Margaret Marbel; reading—Washington's Life, Percy Ryle; recitation—Entertaining Sister's Beaux, Sallie Ryle; declamation—When Papa was a Little Boy, Robt. McNeely; declamation—Not so Easy—Lee McNeely; declamation—A Tramp, Charles Smith; dialogue—Scene in a Schoolroom Forty Years Ago; recitation—On the Banks of the Tennessee, Margaret Marbel song—Falling Leaf; recitation—Curfew Shall not Ring To-night, Etna McAtee; essay—Independence and Liberty, Etna McAtee; dialogue—What's in a Name? declamation—A Train of Circumstantes, Roy Ryle; declamation—A Bachelor's Woes, Geo. Smith; song—Just as the Sun Went Down; recitation—The Station Agent, Etna McAtee; dialogue—Graduation Day—the school; declamation—Tale of a Bad Boy, Willie Smith; recitation—Neighbors, Margaret Marbel; reading—In the Corner, Louis Williamson; stump speech—Dead Beat in Politics, Jimmie McAtee; dialogue—The Train To-morrow; recitation—A Step Toward Womankind, Lutie Ryle; declamation—A Kiss in School, Robert McNeely; declamation—Lines on Fools, Jas. McAtee; dialogue—Second Topsy; declamation—Grumbler, Chas. Smith; dialogue—Morning Call; recitation—Romeo and Juliet, Etna McAtee; negro lecture—Keep Your Tongue from the Cider and Your Lips from the Gals, G. N. Smith; song—Georgia Camp Meeting; recitation—Farewell, Margaret Marbel; Music. Each and every pupil is entitled to praise for the manner in which he or she performed his or her respective part, while careful and earnest drilling on the part of the teacher was very manifest in each and every feature of the program.

Union.

Rev. Davis preached Sunday morning and eveniug at the Presbyterian Church.

Col. Tra Aylor, of Erlauger, was a guest of the Blade Club, several hours, one evening recently.

The storm king swept the country from New York to New Mexico, Saturday, if reports are correct. We became conscious about 5 a. m., that something unusual was going on and after shaking the snow out of our ears and eyes, heard and saw that it was snowing in regular N. W. O. F. style.

For two months we have industriously worked to get spriug contracts for painting and paper hanging. We have made contracts for something like $200 worth of work, so parties to these contracts may depend upon it I will be on hand in the spring to carry out my part notwithstanding reports are being circulated that I will move away.

Benjamin L. Norman is the guest of relatives in Mason county at this writing, and before leaving requested us to find out from James L. Huey the exact dimensions of a "strong box" Solomon Long built. Ben intimated that the said "strong box" was too small for a corn crib and too large and too heavy for hauling two horses in, but from most reliable information he had it was intended for a pig and sheep box by Mr. Huey.

The agricultural editor of the Union Blade attended an all day meeting of Blade Club, Saturday, and talked for some time on sheep raising. He said sheep were profitable to the farmer, and if Boone county had a regular insurance company conducted like the Boone County Ins. Co., for the protection of sheep, every farmer would raise them. He went so far as to explain how farmers could go into the Mutual Insurance Co., accept the 70 per cent. more or less paid by the county and then make up the balance among themselves. To this way all sheep killed by dogs would be paid for in full, and people could better afford to risk money in sheep

A gentleman of this vicinity that we had reason to call a "champion crokinole player" recently, and also the same identical fellow citizen that we found in and rescued from a most perilous predicament he got into by crossing "Fiber" at Marshall's ford at midnight by star-light, with lack of foresight, went up to Mr. ——'s one evening last week, and played crokinole again, and they do say he came home a total wreck, shield battered, lance shivered, armor pierced, sword broken, helmet knocked off, &c. Natural curiosity will lead a man to cross creeks at midnight with only a necktie and shoes on for dress suit to see "what the dog treed," but misfortune alone could lead him to stay out until daylight waiting to see the creek go down.

Supt. Voshell entered into a contract with Deunis Goforth and Louis Taggart to cut a tree on his place for so much "cold cash" and the perquisites. The "perks" were to consist of all the live stock and therein or thereabouts. The tree was cut with following results: 12 cords wood, 1 fat coon, 1 fat squirrel, 1 very dry rabbit (they failed to get him), and 1 mouse. The boys barbecued "Mr. Coon," and had a great feast off his fatness. We know from recollections that chase up and down the bypaths of our memory and date back to the time when we used to go coon-hunting, walk 13½ miles without changing cars and finally land at a favorable spot for holding a cooking skule convention, go to work, build big fire, skin a coon, season him to a queen's taste, barbecued him to a boy's taste and eat him right then and there, that barbecued coou is good. So if the boys failed to enjoy their coon it was simply from lack of appetite aud no fault of the coon.

Walton.

Lee Dixon died Friday night at 7 o'clock.

Some new plays will be produced in a short time.

Kirtley Roberts has sold his farm of 76 acres southwest of the town.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Houston, of Covington, were visiting friends and relatives here, one day last week.

Mrs. Fannie Harris purchased the Perry House house and lot on High st., opposite the Christian church.

Herbert Gilum, who for several years past has been living in Illinois, has come back to his old home for good.

C. H. Lermoud arrived home Saturday morning. He left Paris, Tenn., the night before, and is suffering from inflamed eyes.

H. C. Diers paid a visit to Georgetown, last week, and established an agency for the Stoddard Manufacturing Co., of Daytou, Ohio.

The cake walk by E. C. Mann and H. L. Eskew was a charmer. They must have avoided the grotesque and imitative peculiarity of the African race with very close attention.

Miss Allie Wilson, of Nicholson, visited her sister, Mrs. Judge Botts, last Friday. Mrs. Botts left on Sunday morning for a brief visit to her sister, Mrs. Robt. Ricketts, in Henry county.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Morris, who were married in the Christmas week, have moved into the new house of Mrs. Fred Shafer. The two upper rooms of the building being reserved for Dr. Jacob Cleek's office.

Edward Harris, of Danville, Ill., was back on our streets again on Saturday. The contractors with whom he has been engaged having taken a large amount of work in Cincinnati, he will forthwith remove to the latter place.

J. Fletcher, of Bank Lick, sold 13,360 pounds of tobacco raised on 8 acres of ground to J. G. Kennedy, of Verona, and delivered the same before most of the growers had begun stripping. Fletcher is always on time or a "leetle ahead."

Mrs. Melinda Jones, in her 90th year, notified a few weeks ago to the RECORDER as the only pensioner of the war of 1812, died at the residence of her son-in-law, J. A. Sanders, Thursday, the 22d inst. She leaves four sons and three daughters: Boone, Richard, James, John, Mrs. J. A. Sanders, Mrs. W. A. Fishback, of Carrollton, and Miss Roxana Jones. She was buried in the Baptist cemetery at this place.

From Supt. Metcalfe it is learned that the T. A. Snider Preserves Co., has completed taking contracts for tomatoes at the Walton plant; 450 acres having been contracted for at 20 cents per bushel. Mr. Metcalfe returned from Tipton, Ind., on Tuesday, where the Snider Co., have established a branch for the manufacture of catsup. He was anxious to have the plant located here, but a lack of cooperation on the part of the citizens and farmers defeated his efforts. Our citizens did not seem to take luterest in the enterprise.

The many friends of Mrs. Lora Wills (nee Diers) are glad that her parents have forgiven and taken her to their hearts again, (she was never out of them, only the old folks were augry.) Mrs. Wills was very popular—quite a favorite: and everybody was pleased to see her at the entertainments sitting between her parents as had been their manner in the days of her early girlhood. It has been a matter of remark that Mr. Diers has been more in his usually pleasant way since her visit, and has resumed his luveterate habit of pumping all the news out of everybody that frequeuts his place of business, and theu to help he has ordered from Johnson & Bros., Cincinnati, a large line of all kinds of pumps.

Prof J. M. Craven was in town, last Friday, and drew $150 from Walton Deposit Bank for Mr. Callahan, of Verona. Putting the money in an envelope, he wended his way to the hutcher's, of which he is a member of the firm. Leaving there, he visited several other haunts and finally discovered his loss, without a remote idea of where it occurred. Taylor Gruhbs, who waited on him at the shop, after Mr. Craven left, saw au envelope on the counter as he was cleaning it off, stuffed it in his overcoat pocket and thought no more of it. Hearing of the Professor's loss, he looked at the envelope it and once started to find Mr. Craven, which he soon did. It is hard to tell which one was most pleased the Professor or Taylor Grubbs.

The Parmelee Traveling Library Co., of Chicago, established a plaut here a month or so ago. The ageut secured 20 or 21 subscribers at $5 each, saying that unless he got 30 they would not locate it here. Having secured his $5 each, (except in one instance where the subscriber had not the money and gave his note which he discounted for $3,) the Library was ordered here. The subscriber also agreed to pay 25 cents per quarter of three months. The Library Co., then allowed others not subscribers to take out books at 25 cents per quarter, while the subscribers are making some vigorous kicking, many of them protesting that they will not pay the quarterage; as the good books are always out and douht exists whether they have been here at all. The bulk of what is left is a very inferior and trashy lot of French novels.

In the days of yore were many pleasant customes almost unknown to the people of these times and now with only an occasional observance. One of the most pleasant of these was that of a newly wedded couple making a tour among their relatives and new connections. They were always welcomed and most hospitably entertained. Nowadays, it is the mode to make a bridal trip to Frogtown or some other fashionable metropolis where they are only objects of curiosity or the subject of flippant remarks. It is refreshing to record that one coupie has recently followed the old custom, taking us back more than three score years—Myron Stephens and Almeda Durr, of Goshen, Kenton county, nearby, were married on last St. Valeutine's day by the Rev. Mr. Summie on the Taylor Mill Turnpike Road. Last week they were visiting relatives of the bride in Walton, who were all delighted that their merry and vivacious little cousin had married such a stalwart, thoughtful looking young man. The bride is well known here. Some three years ago the writer was invited to a "Thanksgiving Dinner" prepared by the little lady—then in her 15th year. He remembers distinctly of having no appetite for a week afterward—the excellent cooklug having tempted him to overeat himself, and, yet he was not sick.

The entertainment at the Opera House, Friday and Saturday evenings, went off in good style and with great applause; the members of the club showing much better than they did a week previously. No mention was made in last week's issue of the acting of Dr. B. E. Metcalfe, who demonstrated that his conception of the character was good and well presented.

"Handy Andy" appeared to take well with the audience as it produced almost boisterous applause. Mr. Reed made an excellent Irishman, Messrs. H. L. Eskew and Dr. B. E. Metcalfe sustained their parts very satisfactorily; E. E. Mann, is always "au fait" in his part, and with study should make an exceptional low comedian. Miss Lottie Holder and Miss Jessie Field were favorites in the performances of last week and hold their own most success fully. With hard study they would be ornaments in the histrouic art. Miss Hattie, the queenly looking daughter of S. L. Edwards, was very successful in this her first appearance, and performed her part in the most approved style. But to cut this long account short all did well and our citizens are delighted to know that we have so much talent in the burg. Mr. Reed has trained them well and deserves great credit for the sagacity with which he has cast the characters chimlug so harmoniously with natural tendency.

Hume Store.

Sunday was the coldest day of the year.

Chas. Craven and wife and little son are visiting Mrs. Julia Craven.

Miss Mary Gaines returned to her home near Bullittsville, Mouday.

James Houston and Ed Lawler contemplate going west in a short time.

Chas. Macrander and Paddy Dempsey delivered their tobacco to Aliphin & Co., Friday, for 7 cents all round.

Quite a number of young people gathered at the home of Mr. Madden, Saturday evening, and everyone had a delightful time.

School closed Friday afternoon with an entertainment, each pupil doing his or her part admirably. Miss Mary Dempsey recited, "Finding Faults," in excellant style. The music was furnished by the Mudlick string band, and was very fine.

Thursday evening the crowd met at Mr. Dave Houston's, where parlor games and music were enjoyed by all. Friday night Mr. Chas. Macrander entertained them until the "wee sma' hours, when the fair hostess was bid adieu. Miss Ethel is a charming hostess.

Wednesday evening several young people were handsomely entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dempsey, and music and games were enjoyed by all. About 10 o'clock the guests were invited to the dining room, where an elegant repast was in waiting, and it, too, was enjoyed by all.

Most of the tobacco in this neighborhood has been sold.

Uncle John Hughes has been very sick for several days.

Everett Willeford made a business trip to Warsaw, Friday.

The Hume Dramatic Club met Monday night at the school house to rehearse, preparatory to an entertainment in the near future.

The school building in district No. 42, known as the Craven school house, has been condemned by the county Superiutendent, and will be sold to the highest bidder on Saturday, March 17, at 2 o'clock p. m. Terms made known on day of sale. At the same time and place the District Treasurer will be ready to receive the first years taxes, 25 cents on each $100 worth of property, and $1 poll tax, for the construction of a new building. The limit fixed for payment of this tax is April 2nd, after which a penalty of 5 per cent. will be added on all delinquents.

Florence

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Myers, on the 20th inst., a fine boy.

Mr. Jacob Rice, one of our prominent citizens, who has been very sick, is improving.

L. C. Yager and family, of Covington, spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. T. B. Castleman.

Owen Brassfield has moved back to our town from near Union, and Geo. Crouch intends moving to Mr. Huey's in the near future.

Mrs. Rebecca Fulton, mother of J. L. Fulton, met with a very painful accident, Monday morning, returning from church. She slipped and fell on the street, breaking one bone in her arm and cut her face with her glasses.

Sunday morning the mercury registered 10° below zero. Your correspondent will not say a word about groundhog weather, as he cannot do the subject justice, but he did all in his power to keep Dad Clore and Doc Whitson in the house on the 2d but failed.

Our high sheriff, Elmer Beall and Jeff Eddius were here Monday evening. We suppose Elmer was attending to legal business, and Jeff was instructing the boys how to work puzzles. Elmer claims that Jeff had worked on the same puzzle for two days and nights before he succeeded in working it, and from our observation Jeff will have to make another trip over here before any of the boys will be able to work it.

Hebron.

Uncle Johnny Beall is very poorly.

Ben Hewitt has rented the Dinn farm.

T. Dinn left Monday morning for Illinois.

Sunday morning the thermometer registered 6 below zero.

Louis Harding has been confined to his room several days with a severe sore throat.

A large crowd attended T. J. Dinn's sale on the 20th. Everything brought good prices.

Harrison Clore and wife returned home from Florida, Thursday, where they have spent the winter.

The boys of this place gave another ball at Charles Clore's new hall, Thursday night. A large crowd was present and tripped the light fantastic.

Mr. James Clayton, sr., died Sunday afternoon, after a short illness of pneumonia. He leaves seven children and a host of grandchildren to mourn his death.

Francesville.

Mr. Tom Watts lost a good horse, last week.

Holland Goodridge has lost some of his fine lambs.

You ought to hear Joe Graves talk about raising tobacco this year.

We expect to hear the merry chimes of wedding bells in the near future.

Miss Clara Arnold went, Saturday, to see his mother, who lives in New Richmond, Ohio.

Willie Graves celebrated the second anniversary of his marriage, Friday the 23d of this month. Some of his numerous friends helped him enjoy an elegant dinner and his otherwise most excellent hospitality.

Erlanger.

The K. of P.'s will have Knight Rank on March 6th.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune and Harsh."

Shakespeare's description fits thousands of women. They are cross, despondent, sickly, nervous—a burden to themselves and their families. Their sweet dispositions are gone, and they, like the bells, seem sadly out of tune. But there is a remedy. They can use

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

It brings health to the womanly organism, and health there means well poised nerves, calmness, strength. It restores womanly vigor and power. It tones up the nerves which suffering and disease have shattered. It is the most perfect remedy ever devised to restore weak women to perfect health, and to make them attractive and happy. $1.00 at all druggists.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

REV. J. W. SMITH, Camden, S. C., says—"My wife used Wine of Cardui at home for falling of the womb and it entirely cured her."

Local News.

Next Monday is County Court day.

Two weeks more of ground hog weather.

Of recent years February has furnished the coldest weather of the winter.

Very little business for the approaching term of Circuit Court is accumulating.

The darkey now in jail is about the best behaved prisoner of which Jailer Adams has ever had charge.

Mr. Neal, who has been moving from Grant county to this neighborhood, has had quite a rough experience.

For sale or trade—Light sulky—high and low wheels with pneumatic tires. G. C. GRADDY, Bullittsville.

Miss Jennie Blyth entertained most handsomely, last Saturday night, several of her young friends and associates.

There was weather enough in last Saturday, had it been properly distributed, to have made one month's good winter.

Hogan & Conner are prizing and shipping tobacco as rapidly as they can. They send off several hogsheads every week.

The telephone system in this county will be completed as soon as the weather will permit the setting of poles and the stringing of wires.

NOTICE.—If you have not paid your taxes it will be to your interest to pay them immediately.
ELMER BEALL, S. B. C.

For Sale—Thoroughbred Shorthorn bull, 1 year old, color red. He is good one. Price liberal. Address J. H. Aylor, Gunpowder, Boone co. Ky.

Ground hog winter has put in the time well since its advent, and it is hoped it will exhaust, completely, the supply of bad weather for this spring.

James M. Craven, of Limaburg, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States Clerk's office at Covington, last Friday. Liabilities, $2,400; assets, $400.

Geo. Blyth has made several gallons of molasses from the water from the shade trees around his residence. He says the molasses is as good as that made from hill maples.

The Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company has several culverts in bad condition, and stone is being hauled for necessary repairs as soon as the weather will permit.

Saturday morning was decidedly the worse specimen of bad weather we have had this winter. The weather clerk threw open the throttle of his weather machine that morning.

Several of the local devotees of Terpsichore attended the ball at Erlanger, last Friday night, and they report a delightful time, and pronounce it the best ball they ever attended there.

Two or three reports as to what the firm for which Frank Stucky was working has promised for his widow and child, have been put in circulation. It may be that neither of them is true.

Dr. Smith has broken the record as a coal consumer. He has burnt 100 bushels during the last month, and declares he has had no assistance, as he has kept his coal house locked all the time.

The agricultural machine men are putting up their advertising matter. Plant an advertisement in the RECORDER boys, and it will be delivered every week to the purchasers of such implements.

All the trees are being cut down and taken out of the old cemetery. The shade had become so dense as to be injuring the gravestones, and the trustees decided that the proper thing to do was to cut the trees down.

The soldier's badge which will be worn by veterans only, at the Louisville Reunion, May 30-June 3, will be a shield with the head of Gen. Robert E. Lee on one side and battle and union flags crossed on the reverse.

If a young lady desired to test the amount of love felt for her by her friends, male or female, she may place some onions on a table in an unused room, naming each one after a friend. That one that sprouts first stands for the one who loves her best.

Sunday morning marked 10 degrees below zero, the coldest of the season. A strong wind blew all night, driving the cold clear through everything. If the fruit buds are alive now they will surely come through the winter, and a crop of fruit for this year is a certainty.

Thieves entered the meat house of Jameson Aylor, of the Hebron neighborhood, last Friday night, and stole eleven pieces of meat and seven gallons of lard. The thief or thieves had a key that fit the lock on the door. Mr. Aylor's meat house is robbed every winter, regularly.

The greatest dangers from colds and lagrippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. It will cure a cold or an attack of lagrippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

We visited Bellevue, last Friday afternoon, and found the town practically a slough, the water being held on the surface by the freeze below, while the land is so level as to prevent natural drainage. Some of the citizens we noticed were using stilts to keep themselves above the mud. While in the burg Perry Clore and Joe Birkle showed us through the new building belonging to the Odd Fellows. It is a good, substantial structure, in which the lodge has a commodious hall. This building is a credit to that young lodge.

PERSONAL MENTION.

S. J. Rouse, the Limaburg merchant, was in town yesterday.

W. E. Vest arrived at home Monday evening, looking hearty.

E. S. McKim. U. S. Storekeeper, is spending a few days at home.

Mrs. Coffman, of Walton, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. E. Vest.

Atty. J. M. Lassing made an official visit to Walton, last Saturday.

H. W. Smith and wife are now thoroughly installed as citizens of Bullingtou.

L. P. Aylor and little son, of Gunpowder, were guests of Mrs. Julia Clore, yesterday.

Miss Sheba Roberts been visiting for several days in the Walton and Verona neighborhoods.

The weather prognosticators are placing considerable bad weather for the month of March.

William Surface, the prosperous Gunpowder merchant, was in town a few hours, last Thursday.

Miss Nannie Lucas, of Cincinnati, was visiting her parents at this place, last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. A. L. Williams, of Muncie, Indiana, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. W. Ryle, of Erlanger, last week.

Thomas Adams is moving from the Big Bone neighborhood to Mr. B. R. Gaines' farm in the Utzinger neighborhood.

B. B. Hume and wife, of the Mudlick neighborhood, were guests of B. B. Allphin and wife, Saturday night and Sunday.

J. B. Berkshire, of Florence, passed through town, one day last week en route to Petersburg to visit his relatives down there.

Richard Bruce, son of R. S. Bruce, of Osborn, Missouri, left for home, Monday morning, after a few days' visit with friends here.

J. S. Clutterbuck and wife, were visiting Mrs. Clutterbuck's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ryle, of Florence, from Friday to Sunday.

One of the most popular gallants in this vicinity is said to have made numerous trips over on the icy kops of Woolper, this winter.

Our young farmer friend, Owen Blankenbeker, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, last Thursday.

S. K. Dempsey came in Monday and was gladly received by his many friends here. Steve looks like he is faring well, and is in fine spirits.

Eld. E. Stephens, of Erlanger, was in town, Friday, and placed in these columns an advertisement of his sale of personal property, for March 10th.

Geo. B. Winslow, of Carrollton, Referee in Bankruptcy, was in town yesterday attending to official business which is on the increase in this county.

Joe Weaver, of Union, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday. He has recovered from the effects of his recent severe attack of typhoid fever.

The wound received by Willie Huey of Bellevue, a few days since, took a turn for the worse Monday, and created considerable uneasiness on the part of his friends.

Felix Gaines, of Utzinger, has several friends in the Burlington precinct, who are booming him for Coroner, and it now looks like his boom will sweep the outlying "deestricts."

We found our old friend, C. H. Acra, at his place of business, as we went to Bellevue, last Friday. As usual he was in good spirits—apparently living on the bright side of life.

Dr. Furnish came home from Frankfort, Saturday, and returned Monday afternoon. He does not think the legislature will adjourn before the expiration of the sixty days' session.

S. L. Edwards, one of the leading business men of Walton, and T. E. Curley, a prominent young attorney of the same town, were transacting business with County Judge Roberts, Friday.

W. C. Goodridge was in town Monday morning, and reported the temperature six below zero at his house, Sunday morning. He fears that the peach crop has been destroyed again.

Leslie Wingate, from down on Gunpowder, and Miss Myrtle O'Neal, of Rabbit Hash, were united in marriage by Rev. M. J. Hoover, at the residence of J. S. Clutterbuck, Tuesday afternoon.

W. A. Crigler, of Bromley, Kenton county, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Gordon, out on the Union road. He was in town yesterday, and looked as though the cold winter has been to his liking.

J. H. Rogers, of Walton, came down Friday, in charge of a train of supplies for Judge Robberts. He says there is a poor prospect for wheat in his part of the county, the plant being badly winter-killed.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Blyth entertained quite a number of their friends with a card party, Saturday night, at their house here in Burlington. Elegant refreshments were served during the evening, and the guests had a delightful time.

R. J. Underbill was in from the breezy heights of Gunpowder, Saturday. He opened his sugar camp the day before, and the water ran nicely that day, and he said he had on hand a large quantity waiting to be converted into molasses.

E. J. Green, of Covington, and one of the firm of Clore & Green, attorneys at law, was in town, Thursday, looking after legal business. Mr. Green placed the firm's card with the Recorder, and will be glad to have Boone county people consult him when desiring legal advice.

Jeptha Tanner's unusally healthy appearance, at this time, is attributed to his eating of apples which he has been keeping in a barrel of kraut. The secret was given away by Chas. West bay after being allowed to sample some of the appies. This plan of preserving apples for winter use is purely original with Mr. Tanuer.

A postal received from Dr. J. W. Davis a day or two after his arrival at the home of his family, Wooster, O., said: "I found all well and glad to get back safe from Old Kentucky. They all smile when I tell them what fine people the Keutuckians are, and how well I have been treated, and are glad to know how things really are."

J. B. Crigler, of Hebron, made us a call Monday. He has sold his house and land to Hubert Conner, and now has not where to lay his head. He says he would like to find some good woman who wants to take a sprightly boy about his age to raise. If you have a nice little place—a house and a few acres of land—for sale, you may find a purchaser in Mr. Crigler.

James A. Smith, of Gunpowder, was in town, Friday. Mr. Smith is an interesting contributor to the Union Blade, but his most valuable contribution is now being prepared, and is entitled, "How to Tell Which Calves to Veal." This article was prompted by experiences of his own, Noah Tanner and Joe Weaver, and he says there will be no exceptions to the rule laid down, and three or four weeks unnecessary care of a calf that should be vealed may be avoided.

Orin Phipps tells the following good joke that he unconsciously played on John Allison, the Covington undertaker, one night last week. He left his wagon load of goods at Allison's stable for the night. It was about 8 o'clock that Allison, who was engaged in the rear part of his establishment, heard, as he supposed, the telephone bell ring in the office at the front. He rushed to the 'phone and answered the call, but no response came. Again and again he repeated the, "hello," but no response. He replaced the trumpet and returned to his work in the rear part of the building, to hear the bell ring again in a few seconds. A second trip was made to the 'phone, and the "hello" greeting announced with considerable more emphasis than at first, but no answer came. Allison began to get out of humor, hung up the trumpet and returned to his work, determined not to answer the call if it came again soon. In a short time away went the bell again, but Allison gave it the deaf ear, but at this time one of the stable men happened to be passing Phipps' wagon and discovered that the ringing sound came from somewhere therein. A search was at once instituted among the goods in the wagon, and it was soon ascertained that an alarm clock had been imposing on the good natured proprietor, it being one that Phipps had purchased for one of his patrons, which when the time for which it is set arrives gives an alarm and repeats the performance every minute or two until the alarm is shut off, and it happened that this clock had been set for 8 o'clock that evening. As soon as this discovery was made Allison took for home the first car that passed his place

If we are willing to condemn any one for a supposed wrong, we should be willing to seek evidence on both sides.
J. E. HALL.

Last week J. H. Aylor, of Gunpowder, had a valuable mule to get tangled in its halter and kill itself in the stable. In a few days after losing the mule, dogs killed two of his registered sheep, one of them an imported Southdown for which he paid $100.

Drs. Furnish, Rouse, of Limaburg; Sayre, of Hebron; Clore and Hays, of Bullittsville, amputated one of the feet of Mrs. Sam Kirtley, colored, Monday morning. The operation was very successful, and the patient rallied nicely. She has been a great sufferer with her foot for some time, and the doctors decided that amputation was necessary to save her life.

A friend hands us the following:—"Mr. Enterprise, of Boone county, made a contract with Mr. Hardsense, of Cincinnati, to furnish him with 1900 hogs, then went to a butcher and secured the head of a slaughtered hog, put it in with the 1899, and then presented the consignment for acceptance. The old packer counted the 1899 hogs, carefully inspected the extra head, and said: 'Neighbor, that game may do very well in small matters like estimating centuries, but, in 40 years experience in pork packing, I have always followed one rule—a whole hog or none.'"

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham, of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at W. F. McKim, Burlington, M. J. Crouch, Union, and J. G. Oelsner, Florence.

It now looks like there is to be another spell of flue weather for handling tobacco.

The Executive Board of the North Bend Association of Baptists met with the Baptist Church at Union, February 22d and 23d. The following churches were represented: Big Bone, Bullittsburg, Beaver Lick, Burlington, Erlanger, Union and the Covington churches. Bro. Elmer Atwood preached the Introductory Sermon from John 3:3 Bro. J. A. Lee of the Third Covington Church, delivered an address on the Special Missionary Effort for the year 1900. He was followed by Bro. C. G. Jones, who spoke on the subject, "Why Missionary and not anti-Missionary?" Both addresses were well received and will, no doubt, help the Missionary work. On account of the bad weather there was no meeting at night.

Friday the Board met to transact business. A list of the churches were read, several churches responding with good contributions. $25 was voted to Erlanger church and the same to Ludlow. Bro. M. J. Hoover was appointed a committee of one to act with a committee from the Erlanger church in securing the amount necessary to pay off the Erlanger indebtedness—$352. The work will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible until the debt is paid. Every church in the Association will be called upon to help in this worthy cause. We are all tired of the "Erlanger debt," let us extinguish it at once.

The good people of Union were unstinted in their hospitality. Thursday's dinner, which was an immense thing, was served in the hall over the old reliable grocery of Bro. R. T. Clements. Friday the visiting brethren partook of a sumptuous dinner at the home of Bro. James A. Huey.

The next meeting of the Board will be a jubilee meeting held in honor of the liquidation of the "Erlanger debt" at Erlanger, Friday, May 25th, 1900.

When the Board adjourned Brother Swindler, of Covington, gave a very able discussion of the subject of Church Discipline.
M. J. H.

The Kooking Klub was most handsomely entertained, last Friday evening, by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Smith at their pleasant home out on the Petersburg pike. An elaborate supper was discussed at 6 o'clock, after which the guests were given possession of the house, when dull care was dismissed and enjoyment reigned supreme until ten o'clock, when the klub adjourned to meet again in three weeks with Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Castleman. The following was the menu Friday night: Mrs. J. E. Smith, turkey, ham, rolls, potato chips; Mrs. J. C. Revill, chicken, salmon croquets; Miss Louvenia Runyan, scallopped oysters; Mrs. Belle Brady, pickles and cheese; Miss Sadie Kirtley, oysters; Miss Ella Duncan, cranberries; Mrs. Dudley Rouse, coffee; Mrs. Castleman, saimon croquettes; Mrs. B. B. Allphin, two kinds of cake; Mrs. Geo. Blyth, whipped cream; Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck, chocolate waifers; Mrs. Cy and Mrs. M. L. Riddell, jellatine; Mrs. B. W. Adams, jellatine; Mrs. C. C. Hughes, whipped cream and jellatine; Mrs. W. L. Riddell, cake; Mrs. J. G. Furnish, olives; Mrs. Elmer Beall, chicken.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

When Charles Scott and myself agreed to live apart, until our difficulties known only to Charles and myself, could be amicably adjusted, I left my home where I had dispensed hospitality to all freely, and where I was apparently respected, but on a business trip back to my home later on, I was horrified to find my name bandied from lip to lip. Now, as to another party being with me, that was Charles' doings, sending him to see if I reached my destination all right.

There is a time and place to right our wrongs, and when that comes, I respectfully request all gossips to have their proof ready. I will be there fully prepared to place the blame where it belongs. Until that time I would ask to be given the benefit of the doubt.

Respectfully,
MRS. BETTIE M. SCOTT.

A Convincing Answer.

"I hobbled into Mr. Blackmon's drug store one eveuing," says Wesley Nelson, of Hamilton, Ga., "and he asked me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism with which I had suffered for a long time. I told him I had no faith in any medicine as they all failed. He said: 'Well if Chamberlain's Pain Balm does not help you, you need not pay for it.' I took a bottle of it home and used it according to the directions and in one week I was cured, and have not since been troubled with rheumatism. Sold by W. F. McKim, Burlington, Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, O. N. Grant, Bellevue, C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

ROCKING THE BOYS TO SLEEP.

I sit me down in the twilight cool
Of a busy summer's day,
And close my eyes, and live again
The time so far away,
When Eddie and James and John were here;
And the tears to my eyes will creep,
For I seem to sit in the old brown chair,
A-rockin' the boys to sleep.

I bring John back from a home of wealth,
Where fame and honor dwell,
And sing and rock him to sleep once more,
More happy than tongue can tell.
I brave the storms on a shoreless sea
Where tempest and surges sweep,
And James is here and I rock again
"My wandering boy" to sleep.

I build a stair to the heavens tall,
And reach in its sweet domain,
For little Eddie and bring him back
To my lonely home again;
My throbbing heart is heavy now
With a yearning strong and deep,
As I smooth the curls of my only babe
And rock him once more to sleep.

They say the old chair is useless now,
'Tis creaking, and dull with age,
And must be forever put aside,
Like a well-learned, worn-out page.
But the old brown chair sings a song to me,
As it whispers of other years,
And it tells of the roughened places smoothed,
And murmurs of childish tears.

Yes, the old chair tells in an undertone,
In a voice so creaking and old,
Of the comfort it gave through summer's heat,
As well as in winter's cold;
How these little dependent lives were soothed
Through their childish sorrows deep,
As it did its best to ease each pain,
While rocking the boys to sleep.
—Gertrude M. Hoag, in the Telescope.

Aren't Men Ungrateful

AT ONE o'clock on Monday afternoon last Mr. Jobson brought an old schoolmate of his, whom he hadn't seen or heard of for years, up to his house for lunch.

Monday, it is not necessary to remind our gentle readers, is wash day in all well-regulated households.

Mr. Jobson hadn't been home for lunch, except on Sundays and holidays, for years. Of course, it just happened that out of the seven days in the week Mr. Jobson could have lighted on none other so suitable for bringing an old boyhood chum up to his home for luncheon as on Monday—wash day. Men don't know anything about the dreariness of wash day, anyhow. They see the ironed linen stacked up on the bed on Thursday evening, say, and they vaguely wonder how it was done and where it came from and who did it, and so on. If rainy weather or some other interposition of providence prevents its being stacked up on the bed on Thursday evening, and the boss of the house happens to be out of handkerchiefs, he gazes witheringly at the wife of his bosom, accuses her of spending all her time at the bargain counters to the total neglect of her household duties, and in general gives vent to a torrid flow of masculine unreason. That's the extent of the male knowledge of linen cleansing.

Mr. Jobson happened to have forgotten his latch key when he went to the office on Monday morning, and so when he brought along his old school pal to his house he rang the door bell. The servant being busy in the basement handling the washing, Mrs. Jobson, thinking that the bell ringer was probably a rug peddler or book agent or some such personage, answered the ring herself. Mrs. Jobson had been assisting the servant with the linen. She was in an out-at-elbows red elderdown wrapper, with the sleeves rolled 'way up, and her hair was done up tightly in kids. Her nose was shiny from the steam of wash day. When she saw Mr. Jobson and his well-looking companion, she simply bolted up the front stairs for it, Mr. Jobson exuding a merry, if somewhat hard sounding, laugh as she went.

"Ah, caught you in house neglige, did we, my dear?" he called up the stairs after her in a rollicking, oh-how-naughty-naughty tone voice, that yet had a certain metallic ring in Mrs. Jobson's ears.

"I'll be down in just a minute," called Mrs. Jobson over the banisters, and then Mr. Jobson and his old school chum went into the parlor. Mrs. Jobson hastily dug out the powder chamois and touched up her face, put on presentable garments, removed the kids from her hair and set it right, and then she made her appearance in the parlor.

"My dear, you've often heard me speak of Tommy Swiftboy, my old schoolmate, haven't you?" said Mr. Jobson, formally presenting his friend to his wife. "Remember my telling you how we played hooky once for three weeks at a stretch and hid our books under a sidewalk every day? Well, here's the self-same hooky player—blew in on me at my office this morning, and, although I wouldn't say it to his face, I'm just tickled to death to see him. Brought him up to see what a nice little plant I've got—his dad used to say that we'd both of us land in state's prison before we came of age. And here I am, a settled-down old fogy, and he's got a wife and three children—got their pictures in his watch—at his home in New York. I wanted to drag him off to a restaurant for a bite to eat, but he wouldn't hear of it—wanted to look me over under my own vine and fig tree, he said, and he hates restaurant or hotel cookery. Can't we have just a little bite of luncheon, my dear?"

Mr. Jobson gazed at Mrs. Jobson amiably, but with a meeting of the eyebrows that said, as plain as day: "And it wants to be an almighty neat luncheon, at that!"

Mrs. Jobson's heart sank as she thought of the remains of Sunday's turkey in the refrigerator, and nothing else. The steamy fragrance of the wash-day suds that permeated the house caught Mr. Jobson's nostrils and he sniffed wonderingly and with as manifestations of enthusiasm over it.

"Nothing elaborate, my dear, you know," said Mr. Jobson, with a searching look at Mrs. Jobson. "Just what you've got in the ice chest, you know. Mr. Swiftboy is a domestic man, and he understands that we may have taken you unprepared."

Mr. Jobson's glances at Mrs. Jobson said as plainly as if the words were written on a placard hanging around his neck: "You just want to see to it that there's a top-notch lunch on the table in just 15 minutes, or there'll be some echoes around here later on."

Mrs. Jobson, after a moment's desultory conversation, excused herself, ran down the basement steps, placed a hat on the colored woman's head and sent her out by the alley gate after luncheon food. It was mostly of the delicatessen and canned variety. There was some sliced tongue and ham, potted ham, canned salmon, hurriedly-constructed potato salad, the remains of Sunday's turkey, raspberry jam and coffee and tea on the table when, after a frenzied scurrying around, Mrs. Jobson got the table set with fresh napery and the best silver and called the men to luncheon. Mr. Jobson surveyed the table approvingly, as did his old school chum, who was a well-groomed looking man, who looked as if he might be no stranger to lobsters and grilled bones.

"Well, my dear, you've certainly done very well, considering how little you expected us," said Mr. Jobson, beamingly, and then they went at the lunch.

"Oh, by the way, have you any bottled beer on ice?" asked Mr. Jobson, after a moment.

"No," replied Mrs. Jobson, "the last was used on Saturday, and the beer man hasn't been around yet, but I can send—"

"Oh, never mind, my dear—never mind at all," said Mr. Jobson, amiably. "Get along fully without it, can't we, Swiftboy? Guess we'd be a heap better off without the stuff, anyhow."

Then Mr. Jobson, while his friend was bending over his plate, gave Mrs. Jobson a glance that contained a world of meaning.

"Swiftboy," said Mr. Jobson, "you'll have to overlook this hasty affair, but you know—"

"Overlook it?" interrupted his friend, helping himself liberally to the salad. "Overlook it? I guess not. I'm going to do just the best I know how by it. It's immense—haven't enjoyed things to eat so much since I left home, Mrs. Jobson. I congratulate you upon your skill in formulating a luncheon in a case of emergency."

Thus the luncheon passed off, and awhile after it was over the two men went downtown. There was a steely glitter in Mr. Jobson's eye when he returned home that evening.

"Madam," he inquired of Mrs. Jobson, as soon as he had taken off his hat, "what do you think this establishment is—a New York sanbretle's flat?"

"Why, what are you—" Mrs. Jobson started to answer.

"When I invite a friend, a substantial business man, up to my home for luncheon," continued Mr. Jobson, sternly, "can't you do any better than to regale him and load him up with stuff such as a Miss Tottle Coughdrop sets before her chorus girl friends when she asks them to a one a. m. feed?"

"But you brought him so unexpectedly, and—"

"What kind of stuff do you think grocery store sliced ham is to set before one of your husband's guests? Couldn't you have rung in some cold boiled onions? What kind of a way is it, anyhow, to send a black servant somersaulting and handspringing out the alley gate after zinc-inclosed eatables when guests are sitting in the parlor waiting for something wherewith to appease their hunger? Why couldn't you have had some nice homemade oyster patties, for instance? How about a couple of fried chickens? Wouldn't they have been about the thing? Do you ever cook anything around here, anyhow, except the stuff that you dole out to me at dinner? Have you ever got anything fit to eat stowed away in the ice box, like other civilized people? Do you—"

"But to-day is wash day, and—"

"It wouldn't make any difference if it was Decoration day, or Independence day, or labor day, or any other old day; you'd have to kite that servant out the alley, and —oh, and by the way, it's mighty funny what becomes of all the beer—not even a bottle of beer to give the man. I'd like—"

"Now, you know that nobody in the house touches it but yourself, and—"

"Mighty queer where it goes; mysterious, to say the least. Whole thing was the worst frost, the dismalest make-believe for a luncheon that I ever saw, and that's no—"

"But Mr. Swiftboy said that he really enjoyed it, and he said—"

"Yes; I know what he said. That was sarcasm, Mrs. Jobson—plain, everyday sarcasm. I'll bet he said to himself while he was getting off those remarks that the next time any friend of his hailed him for a home luncheon there'd be blue apples on peach trees! And that's what there'll be the next time I invite a friend up here for a bunco luncheon, Mrs. Jobson—just remember that!"—Washington Star.

His Character.

The old hiring fairs are still in some rural districts of England. There is a story of an old Gloucestershire farmer who, seeing a likely lad at such a place, opened negotiations with a view to engaging him. "Hast got a character from thy last place?" the farmer asked. "No," replied the boy; "but my old gaffer be about somewhere, and I can get he to write one." "Very well," was the reply. "Then get it and meet I here again at four o'clock." The farmer and the boy met at the appointed hour. "Hast got thy character?" was the query. The answer was short and sharp: "No, but I ha' got thine, and I beant a-coming."—Youth's Companion.

RUSSIAN MERCHANTMEN.

Number and Size of the Ships Employed in the Ocean Traffic.

Twenty years ago Russian merchant ships were so few that they were insufficient even for the coasting trade, and participation in the carrying trade abroad was out of the question. In 1872 the volunteer fleet was commenced by voluntary subscriptions, and four German vessels were purchased and used first as transports in the war with Turkey, and afterwards in maintaining a service between the Black sea and the Russian ports of the Pacific, calling at various far eastern ports on the way.

A little more than ten years ago the fleet consisted of seven ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 21,152, the largest vessel being 3,500 and the highest speed 13½ knots. Now, however, the fleet numbers 14 vessels of 127,895 tons, while a new vessel is in course of construction. The passenger accommodation is said to be equal to that of the best liners. The fare from Odessa to Vladivostok has been reduced from 50 to 33 guineas. There is steerage accommodation for about 2,000. The ports of destination are Vladivostok and Port Arthur, the first-class passengers consisting largely of army officers and business men enticed by prospects of commercial activity. Emigrants are carried in considerable numbers. They mostly belong to the agricultural class, and settle in eastern Siberia, the resources of which are being developed with great rapidity.

An exodus from European Russia has also recently commenced of artisans and trained factory hands, who are attracted to the east by a considerably higher wage, in consequence of a scarcity of skilled labor there. Of the outward cargoes last year 30,400 tons consisted of government stores, railway material, and munitions of war, and 26,048 tons of ordinary merchandise. On the return voyage these vessels brought about 28,200 tons of merchandise, consisting of tea, copra, etc. In the last eight years the annual cargoes have increased from 16,000 to about 100,000 tons, and the passengers from 6,000 to 26,500. The occupation of Port Arthur and Ta-lien-wan by Russia has already produced an effect on Russian trade with the far east, and it is believed that the enforcement of the decree restricting the carrying trade between all Russian ports to vessels under the Russian flag will give a great additional impetus to this exchange of commodities between European Russia and eastern Siberia. The most important Russian shipping enterprise in the Black sea is the Russian Steam Navigation and Trade company, whose fleet numbers 69 steamers with a displacement of 151,758 tons, exclusive of small craft. The activity of this company, which is likewise subsidized by the government, increases annually.—London Times.

BIBLE WITH A HISTORY.

It Was Found on the Plains Long Ago and Used on Many Ceremonial Occasions.

The Bible which was used in the ceremonies beginning the celebration in this city of the fiftieth anniversary of the state of California has a history that is very interesting. In 1849 a young man in coming across the plains found a pile of books by the side of the road with a stick stuck among them bearing a note telling travelers to help themselves. The young man in searching through the old volumes found a handsome Bible, which he considered a shame to be left upon the dreary desert. He placed it in his pack and carried it to Sacramento. He presented it to Dr. R. H. McDonald, who at that time conducted a drug store in that city.

Some time after the advent of the Bible into Sacramento a meeting was called in that city for the purpose of founding a lodge of Masons. That was on January 8, 1850, and the lodge was to be known as Connecticut lodge, No. 75. It chanced that the meeting place was adjoining the premises occupied by Dr. McDonald. When it was convened it was found that there was no Bible at hand with which to conduct the ceremonies, and Dr. McDonald presented the book that had been given to him by the young man for the lodge's use.

On the 19th of the following April the grand lodge of Masons was formed and the Bible again played an important part in the ceremonies. After the formation of the grand lodge the name of Connecticut lodge was changed to Tehama Lodge, No. 3, but ever since its establishment on January 8, 1850, the Bible has remained in the possession of the lodge.—San Jose (Cal.) Mercury.

Divorced Thirty-Five Times.

The case is mentioned in a Chinese paper of a native, aged 49, who has married and divorced 35 wives, and is now married to the thirty-sixth. He was first married at 16, and the reason assigned for this extraordinary example of inconstancy is that he has a younger sister of extremely jealous and rancorous disposition, who, from the moment that a bride enters the house, institutes a system of persecution, which soon drives the unhappy woman to ask her husband for a divorce. — N. Y. World.

Chinese Cooks Next to the French.

Second only to the French are the Chinese when it comes to culinary skill, and with simple materials they will contrive to put together a meal which would shame an ordinary American cook. In peasant families the wife or daughter does the cooking, but in the larger establishments the cooks are invariably men.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE OCEAN GRAVEYARD.

Just What Sable Island Is—Where It Lies—Its Fight Against the Sea.

Sable island belongs to Nova Scotia, is 143 miles from Halifax and 83 miles east of Cape Canso. It is a treeless, shrubless waste, seamed by wind and wave and of ever-changing aspect. A cone-shaped hill near the east end, once a mere undulation of sand, is now over a hundred feet high, and is still growing. Other hillocks are gradually being mowed away by storms. The hillocks are liable to be undermined so swiftly and swept out of existence that they are carefully watched from the various stations on the island, and, there being no certainty how far an inroad of the sea will extend after each successful attack. Even the coarse grass of the island grows in a different manner from that of the mainland. It does not bear seed, but shoots up from roots which run along under the sand. During the winter the sand is blown over the grass, and buries it sometimes three or four feet deep. But the lanky blades grow up next season, as if the island sands had protected them from the cold of winter in order to make them all the stronger. The island itself is fighting for self-preservation. It seems as if it drew ships into its fatal embrace as rallying points for its loose and shifting sand, and thus to protect itself by a bulwark of wrecks against annihilation by the sea. Tradition says that when Sable island was discovered by Cabot in 1417, it was 80 miles long and 10 miles wide. In 1802, when a rescue station was established there, it was only 40 miles long. Since then it has shrunk to but little more than 20 miles in length, and in width it is only a mile at its widest. Within 28 years the western end lost seven miles. Shoals over which the ocean now surges are pointed out as former sites of lighthouses. One of these was so swiftly undermined by the sea that it had to be abandoned with the greatest precipitation. The spot where once stood the superintendent's house is now under two fathoms of water.

The island, rapidly diminishing at its western end, is slightly gaining at its eastern. Slowly, like a ship dragging its anchor, it is moving eastward. Will it ever reach the edge of the shoals, stand tottering on the brink of the abyss till it receives its coup de grace and plunge over the submarine bank forever into the depths? Unfortunately, its end will probably be less dramatic. There is good ground for believing that this gray sand bar will slowly wear away until it becomes another submerged shoal added to an ambuscade already some 60 miles in length—for a line of breakers extends 16 miles from one end of the island and 28 miles from the other.—Gustav Kobbe, in Ainslee's.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Every Land Now Has Its Daily Reports by Telegraph and Cable.

A century has passed by since the first meteorological society of Europe published the "Ephemerides Mannheimenis," containing weather observations at many stations. From these records Brandes subsequently made and studied the first weather maps. Now every civilized land has its daily reports by telegraph and cable.

The United States weather bureau bases its forecasts on 200 stations, and last summer Prof. Moore added 16 kite stations for determining the condition of the air high above the ground. The country has extended its lines to the West Indies, and is hoping to reach Hawaii and Alaska; Canada has added he Bermudas, and is stretching toward the Klondike. European bureaus are moving toward a special cable to Iceland.

Such outlying stations are very important for the protection of the nearer regions, but no more increase in observers will enable us to predict accurately farther ahead or in greater detail than we now do.

What is first needed is a more profound study of the forces that affect the weather. The crying need of meteorology is not more stations, but more study. The highest talent for scientific investigation is called for. There are no problems more difficult than those that concern the weather, and none more important. He who solves one of these will benefit the whole world and merit a great reward.

The endowment at any university of a special school for meteorological research will mark the beginning of a bright era in the history of this science, and will benefit humanity.—Youth's Companion.

Reassuring.

Monsieur Calino, the simple-hearted and ingenious Frenchman, happened to be riding in a train in the same compartment with a lady who was in a constant fear of a smash-up.

At every sudden stop, every jar, every sound of the bell or whistle, she cried out:

"Oh, oh! Have we run off the track? Is it a collision? Are we going to be killed?"

Calino paid no attention, but remained wrapt in solemn silence. Presently the lady said to him:

"And you, sir, aren't you afraid of railroad accidents?"

"Not I, madame," answered Calino, reassuringly. "It has been foretold that I am to die on the guillotine!"

The nervous woman went into hysterics and had to be removed from the train at the next station.—Youth's Companion.

YIELDS FAIR FORAGE.

German Millet Has Found Considerable Favor with Southern and Western Farmers.

This millet is called, also, southern millet, American millet, golden millet, mammoth millet, Bengal grass, Dakota millet. It grows to a height of four or five feet, and has heads that are six to eight inches long and an inch wide. This variety has been in general cultivation in the south since the early seventies, but was introduced into the United States many years earlier. Prof. Crozier regards the East Indies as the most probable source of its introduction into the United States, and remarks that the name "Bengal grass," by which it was first known in this country, suggests such an origin. Flint, on the contrary, makes the statement that it was first brought to the United States from Europe. However this may be, it seems that the seed used in Tennessee, where this variety first came into real prominence, was brought from France in the early sixties, and since that time has been the leading millet sown in the south. German millet makes a heavy yield of forage under favorable conditions, but does not stand drought as well as the smaller varieties, such as common millet and Hungarian. The hay is coarser and less highly valued than that from the smaller millets, but when the forage can be fed in the green state this will be found to be an excellent variety to grow, on account of the heavy yield.

German millet is the latest of the varieties commonly grown here, and his exceedingly variable in its appearance and habit of growth. It is very seldom that one sees a field that is uniform in character. Many, perhaps most, of the heads may be typical of the variety, but usually there will be many others scarcely to be distinguished from common millet or other standard varieties.

PREPARING SOD GROUND.

Why It Should Be Plowed at the First Favorable Opportunity During the Winter.

In most cases when a piece of sod ground is to be prepared for planting to corn in the spring, it will be a good plan to plow at the first favorable opportunity during the winter.

The thawing and freezing to which it will usually be subjected will aid in loosening and disintegrating the sod, and making it an easier task to work into a proper tilth for planting. It is important in plowing sod to turn the top sod completely over. It is best for corn especially to plow reasonably deep. Deep plowing and shallow cultivation will give the best results. It will also make it easier work to prepare the soil in a good tilth if care is taken to plow thoroughly at the start.

Freshly plowed old sod requires considerable work to prepare it in good tilth, and if the plowing is delayed until spring, after grass has made a start to grow, even more work is required.

Sod ground can be plowed in many cases when old ground would be entirely too wet. After plowing, it is usually not advisable to disturb it again until ready to prepare for planting. At this time there is no better implement to use than a good disc harrow. Unless the sod is old and tough one good going over with the harrow, lapping well, will be sufficient, but with old sod it may be necessary to go over twice, the first time the way the land was plowed, and the second time crosswise. It is best to lap well, and to cut reasonably deep. The disc harrow will cut thoroughly, and then the smoothing harrow will fine and level down and put the soil in good condition for the seed. It pays with all crops, and especially one like corn, that is to be cultivated, to prepare the soil thoroughly before the seed is planted, and it will be best to go over with the disc and smoothing harrows several times in order to secure this condition, rather than to plant with the soil in rough condition.

In a system of rotation corn after grass is one of the best places, but in securing a good growth and yield, it is essential that the soil be well prepared. —St. Louis Republic.

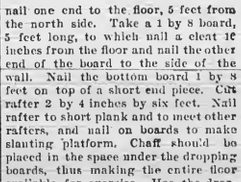
GOOD FARM MACHINERY.



In These Days of Competition Field Work Cannot Be Carried On Successfully Without It.

Every good farmer recognizes the importance of having a full equipment of farm implements and machinery, and in fact the difference between a first-rate and second-rate farmer is very strikingly marked in the quality of machines and implements found upon their farms. It looks like a waste of time and labor to spend many weeks or months' time in preparing for a crop and then lessen its chances of growth by imperfect implements in working and harvesting it. The thrifty and well-posted farmer sees to it that every implement, or machine, or tool, upon the place is in first-class order, and he also sees that these things are of the latest pattern and with all improvements such as are calculated to do the work perfectly, with the minimum expense of labor; and then besides there is a great deal of satisfaction in having things about the farm that work nicely. There is nothing more discouraging to a farm hand than to send him out to the field to work with an imperfect plow or any sort of implement. He is more than likely to shirk his work, and the chances of a matured crop are lessened by every day that he spends in the field with this sort of machinery. We wish to impress upon readers the importance of looking after these things right now. It will not be very long until all sorts of farm machinery will be called to use, and it will be good policy to prepare everything in use beforehand. We know that every year some of the old things about the farm have to be replaced. Now is the time to investigate the merits of new implements and machinery which you will have to buy a little later on. We advise looking over catalogues of the things that you may want to buy and learn for yourself the merits of the things advertised. Then when you get ready to make your purchases your mind will be made up as to just what you want and the selection will be very easy to make. Look over these things right now, and it will save you many dollars a little later on. —Prairie Farmer.

NEAT ROOSTING DEVICE.

The Invention of a California Woman Who Claims That It Saves Space and Labor.

This convenient roosting device was invented by Mrs. Jennie Fairbank, a successful Pacific coast poultry woman, who writes: "To arrange this plan of roosting and dropping boards, first take a 2 by 8 plank, 16 inches long, nail one end to the floor, 5 feet from the north side. Take a 1 by 8 board, 5 feet long, to which nail a cleat 16 inches from the floor and nail the other end of the board to the side of the wall. Nail the bottom board 1 by 8 feet on top of a short end piece. Cut rafter 2 by 4 inches by six feet. Nail rafter to short plank and to meet other rafters, and nail on boards to make slanting platform. Chaff should be placed in the space under the dropping boards, thus making the entire floor available for exercise. Hoe the droppings from the bottom board into a box."—American Agriculturist.

ROOSTS AND DROPPING BOARDS.

DO NOT SPARE THEM.

Use the Ax on the Hen That Lays Her Eggs on the Floor of the Poultry House.

The hen which habitually lays her eggs on the floor of the poultry house or in the scratching pen should be killed. If she is not made away with the owner will find a flock of egg-eaters on his hands before the winter is over. And after having had one experience of that kind he will not risk another for the sake of saving the head of any hen on the place.

A certain proportion of the pullets when they first begin to lay will refuse to use the nesting boxes. If caught when discovered making a nest on the floor and penned in one of the boxes it will usually break up the habit of depositing the egg on the floor. But one will be found now and then which will obstinately refuse to lay anywhere but on the floor. When all other persuasion and argument fails, that of the hatchet will be effective.

Don't be chicken-hearted about applying this remedy. You can't afford to take the chances of losing all the profits of your winter's work merely for the sake of sparing a pig-headed hen or two.—Farmer's Voice.

Enterprise Usually Wins.

There is no enterprise upon which a man can embark his capital without an element of uncertainty attaching thereto. It is said that 80 per cent. of the people who undertake merchandising fail sooner or later. We have made note of the fact that farmers who put seed in the ground early at the risk of a nipping by frost now and then are the men whose cribs are full of corn, whose granaries are bursting with grain, who drive fat horses and wear good clothes. The Scriptures tell us that "He that guardeth the clouds shall not reap." We may add as a commentary that the man who idly waits for spring is always at the tail end of the procession.—Texas Farm and Ranch.

ANTS AS STRATEGISTS.

Armies of the Insects Are Maneuvered with Military Precision and Effect.

From a military standpoint, the methods employed by ants to provide food for an ant colony are almost perfect. Their foraging parties are faultless, both in planning and execution, and are almost uniformly successful. A resident of this city who is at present in business in South Africa, has sent home a description of a foray of an army of ants.

The army, which he estimates to have numbered about 15,000 ants, started from their home in the mud walls of a hut and marched in the direction of a small mound of fresh earth but a few yards distant. The head of the column halted on reaching the foot of the mound and waited for the rest of the force to arrive at the place of operations, which evidently was to be the mound of fresh earth. When the remainder had arrived and halted, so that the entire army was assembled, a number of ants detached themselves from the main body and began to ascend to the top of the mound, while the others began maying so as to encircle the base of the mound.

Very soon a number from the detachment which had ascended the mound, evidently the attacking party, entered the loose earth and speedily returned, each bearing a cricket or a young grasshopper, dead, which he deposited upon the ground and then returned for a fresh load. Those who had remained on the outside of the mound took up the crickets and grasshoppers as they were brought out, and bore them down to the base of the hill, returning for a fresh load. Soon the contents of the mound seemed to be exhausted, and then the whole force returned home, each carrying his burden of food for the community.

Here, then, was a regular foray, planned and executed with military precision, the country surveyed, the depot of provisions known accurately before the march was made, and at the mound prudential division of labor and care taken that none of the victims should escape.—N. Y. Herald.

CHINESE INQUESTS.

Their Established Code Embraces Some Peculiar and Absurd Practices.

Coroners' inquests are well known among the Chinese. One of the chief differences between their system and ours is that the Chinese doctors never dissect. In fact, Chinamen have a perfect horror of dissection.

There are few things more absurd than the code of rules laid down for the Chinese coroner. In the first place he is bidden to make sure that he has a dead body before he begins his inquest. That however is less ridiculous than it sounds, for the heathen Chinee is tricky and may demand an inquest on a sham deceased with a view to extorting money from some person who may be denounced as having caused the death.

The preposterous part of the code comes in with the alleged signs which show the cause of death. If the deceased is supposed to have been poisoned rice is put into his mouth and then taken out and given to a chicken. Its effect on the fowl decides the question. Most of the other methods adopted are even more absurd and fanciful, and as a result inquests in China do very little to prevent crime.—Chicago Evening News.

IT WAS CRUEL.

A Smart Young Man, a Timid Maiden and a Cute Little Boy.

She was really very timid.

And was he quite sure it would not hurt her?

It was so annoying to be suddenly frightened.

A dead open and shut brace game of security from harm?

How nice! No, she did not understand exactly, but as she had never, never seen a real live, red bat, she might take just one peep, just a peep, into the cute little box he had in his hand.

Would the bat really wink its twinkling, batty, beady bugles at her, and squeak a little squeak squirt of a squeak! How funny he was.

Mercy! Don't open the box yet.

Give her time to prepare herself.

Yes, he would hold her hand as an assurance of his presence, and support, if necessary.

No squeezing, though.

Now, open the lid so carefully that the little bat cannot fly out, and tear her fluffy fluffets.

CELESTIAL CHAFF.

The Pointed Retort of a Small But Smart Mongolian to an American Schoolmate.

The young daughter of a former Philadelphian is a schoolmate of little Wu, the son of the Chinese ambassador at Washington. During a recent visit here she often talked about the little celestial, and told tales about him that seemed to indicate that little Wu at times gently guys his Christian schoolmates. "He is awfully cute," she said, "and speaks very correct English. He's just my age, yet he's ahead of me. What he likes best to eat, he says, is mihi. That is young mice, dipped in honey and swallowed raw. A horrible thing, isn't it? But Wu says that mihi aren't half so squeaky and slimy as new oysters. His mother's feet are so tiny that she can hardly walk at all. She is pushed about in a wheeled chair. I asked Wu once if he didn't think it was cruel to torture the Chinese ladies' feet like that. He said: 'Virginia, my papa says that whenever any person asks me that question I must make the following reply: "It is not more cruel than for American ladies to torture their waists in steel corsets until their noses are beet red and their shapes like an hour glass." Then he gave a loud laugh and walked away with his little hands in the pockets of his baggy brocade trousers. He looks awfully grave and funny."—Philadelphia Press.

TO MEET STEAMSHIPS.

A New Service by the New York Central Railroad.

George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, has established a steamship bureau to the equipment of the passenger service of the road. He has engaged Captains Louis Ingwersen and F. A. G. Schultze to superintend the bureau, and one of their duties will be to meet all incoming trans-Atlantic and the principal coastwise steamships to assist passengers who wish to leave the city via the Vanderbilt system. Capt. Ingwersen will have charge of the American, Cunard, White Star, Atlantic Transport, Wilson, Anchor and Allan-State lines, and Capt. Schultze has been assigned to the North-German Lloyd, Hamburg-American, French, Rotterdam, Red Star and Thingvalla lines.

They will meet all incoming steamships, and will be prepared to furnish railway tickets, parlor and sleeping car accommodations and to assist passengers with their baggage and check it to points on the line of the railroad, after it has been passed by the customs inspectors. They will also furnish passengers with documents of the railroad company, and furnish time tables and general information to passengers. The two men have also been directed to assist passengers who come to this city with a view of going abroad, and such passengers will be met at the Grand Central Station on incoming trains and conducted to the steamship. Their baggage will be attended to, and steamship tickets can be procured in advance by communicating with Mr. Daniels.—From the New York Commercial Advertiser.

Hard on the Doorkeeper.

On the opening day of the session of the Fifty-sixth congress, a tall, gaunt man, shambling of gait, with "high-water" trousers, a slouched hat mashed in any old way, and an overcoat that needed brushing, presented himself at the center door of the house of representatives. He started to walk right in, but was stopped by one of the doorkeepers, who said to him, testily: "Say, don't you know you can't go in there?" "No, I didn't know it, my friend; I thought I could," he said, mildly. "Nobody but members allowed in to-day." "Well, I'm a member; Congressman Cushman, of Washington." "Oh! I beg your pardon; walk right in." As Mr. Cushman strode into the hall the astonished doorkeeper looked after him for a moment, and then, turning to his assistant on the door, said: "Say, Bill, did you see that? Well, after that I ain't got the nerve to stop anything."—Criterion.

"Yes, he brought out his history of the regiment for private circulation," "Indeed. That's strange." "I don't think so. Every private in the regiment bought a copy."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

For Wireless Steering.

An English invention for steering any craft, whether submerged or otherwise, by means of an ether wave on the wireless telegraph principle has been perfected. In naval warfare it is expected to make the torpedo boat almost infallible. In the respect it will equal the great American dyspepsia cure—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—which never fails to cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, malaria fever and ague. Everyone needs it and all druggists sell it.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

ALABASTINE

LABASTINE is the original and only durable wall coating, entirely different from all kalsomines. Ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by adding cold water.

ADIES naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powder form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

LL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

EWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you the "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

ND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realize the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

ENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

HE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

N BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting stuff kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

UISANCE of wall paper is obviated by ALABASTINE. It can be used on plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. A child can brush it on. It does not rub or scale off.

AN APPEAL TO HUMANITY

We need your assistance in announcing to the world the GREATEST REMEDY that Science has ever produced, and you need our assistance to secure relief for yourself and friends through SWANSON'S "5 DROPS."

A REMEDY SUPREME

5 DROPS

[TRADE MARK]

As surely as the American Navy has conquered and will conquer all that opposes it, so will "5 DROPS" unfailingly conquer all diseases like Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Catarrh of all kinds, ASTHMA, Dyspepsia, Backache, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Heart Weakness, Toothache, Earache, Creeping Numbness, Bronchitis, Liver and Kidney Troubles, etc., etc., or any disease for which we recommend it. "5 DROPS" is the name and the dose. "5 DROPS" is perfectly harmless. It does not contain Salicylate of Soda nor Opiates in any form. The Child can use it as well as the Adult.

Read carefully what Mr. L. R. Smith, of El Dorado Springs, Mo., writes us under date of Nov. 27, 1899, also Marian Bowers, of Carraghar, Ohio, under date of Dec. 14th, 1899:

NEURALCIA

I do not know how to express how wonderful I think your "5 DROPS" medicine is. I was suffering intensely with NEURALGIA and thought for a month that I would have to die. One day a lady called to see me and brought me an advertisement of your "5 DROPS." I resolved to try it and sent for a sample bottle. Have been taking it for three weeks and have not had an attack of suffering since I took the first dose. I believe it has saved my life. This statement is positively true. I shall also take pleasure in recommending your "5 DROPS" for the cure of NEURALGIA. L. R. SMITH.

El Dorado Springs, Mo., Nov. 27, 1899.

RHEUMATISM Your "5 DROPS" came to hand on the 11th of last month and was glad to receive it for I was suffering at the time with untold agonies. The first dose helped me most out of my pain on short notice. Bless the name of God for it. It will do all you say it will, and more too. I had severe pains all over my body when night came I could not sleep. The worst pain was in my left leg. I could not put my foot to the floor without suffering great pain. Have used four different kinds of medicine for RHEUMATISM and got no relief until I got your "5 DROPS," which gave me almost immediate relief as a few doses used. MARIAN BOWERS, Box 53, Carraghar, Ohio. Dec. 16, 1899.

30 DAYS to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a sample bottle, prepaid by mail for 25c. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottle (300 doses) $1.00, 6 bottles for $5. Sold by druggists and agents. AGENTS WANTED in Every Territory. Don't wait. Write now!

S. T. Stewart, of Stewart, has purchased over a thousand lambs of farmers in West Mercer to be delivered in June and July at 5c and 5½c. a pound. He says there are a great many lambs this season, and that so far as he has learned farmers are having good luck in saving them.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

For three weeks the tobacco shippers have crowded the Louisville market with inferior tobacco until the buyers are tired of it and are taking but little interest. Many of the hogsheads are damp and unsalable and it is certain that the market is at least a dollar a hundred lower than ten days ago.—Larue Herald.

In spite of the cold weather and the snow-covered ground there was a good crowd in town Monday. Auctioneer Ben B. Peak reports 400 to 425 cattle on the market and about 300 sold. Feeders sold at 4½ to 5 cents per pound, yearlings at 4½ cents; calves, $17.50 to $21.50 per head. Plug horses $35 to $65. No sheep or hogs on the market.—Georgetown Times.

On Robert Bonner's farm at Tarrytown a sunny corner on the hillside is the burial ground of some of the most famous horses in the world. There sleeps the mighty Dexter, who cost over $33,000 and held a record of 2:17¼; near him lies young Pocahontas, from whom Mr. Bonner paid $40,000, and the champion Rarus, who succeeded Goldsmith Maid, and who cost Mr. Bonner $36,000 according to reliable reports; Edwin Forrest costing well toward $25,000; Nutbourne, the brother of Nutwood; the $10,000 filly Reverie, and many others.

Whether a man is or is not a good farmer depends on the condition of his corn crib in late spring and summer. The careful, provident farmer always manages to keep some of the last year's corn until new corn comes again. The old corn is not only more nutritious than new, which is full of moisture, but it is less likely to injure stock. Even animals which chew the cud find that the soft corn which they have eaten will often heat in their stomach so that the paunch will fill with gas and the animal will die if some means are not taken to get it out. With horses and other non-ruminant animals the effects are worse, inducing severe colics which are hard to relieve. Corn is not dried out fit for horse feeding when it seems hard and glazed in the field where grown. Not much of this is fed on the ear. But we believe that much of the soft corn and nubbins should be kept over winter. They will shrink in bulk, but after drying out through the winter, the corn is then at the hardest can be ground. It it will then be safest to feed it to ruminant animals on cut hay or straw. In this way all the meal will be digested, and will do more good than corn will fed while yet full of moisture and too damp to be ground. —American Agriculturist.

A Child's Composition.

In a little country school not far from Princeton, literary exercises are regularly indulged in every Friday afternoon during the term. A twelve year old boy read an original essay on "The Newspaper." This latter day youthful Solomon treats his subject thusly:

"Newspapers are sheets of paper on which stuff to read is printed. The men look over the paper to see if their names is in it and the women use it to put on shelves and sich. I don't know how newspapers came into the world. I don't think God does. The Bible says nothing about editors and I never heard of one being in heaven. I guess the editor is the missing link them fellows talk about. The first editor I ever heard of was the fellow who wrote up the flood. He has been here ever since.

"Some editors belong to church and some try to raise whiskers. All of them raise hell in their neighborhood and all of them are liars, at least all I know and I only know one. Editors never die. At least I never saw a dead one. Sometimes the paper dies and then people feel glad, but some one starts it up again. Editors never went to school because editors never got licked. Our paper is a mighty poor one but we take it so ma can use it on our pantry shelves. Our editor don't amount to much, but paw says he had a poor chance when he was a boy. He goes without underclothes in winter, wears no socksand has a wife to support him. Paw hasn't paid his subscription in five years, and don't intend to."—Princeton Record.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, is evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one if not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61–64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood. A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest good to greatest number.

Watch carefully the Cincinnati Enquirer.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1900. NO. 20

FEBRUARY use to be the month of floods, but is now the month of zero weather.

THE victories the British have achieved so far over the Boers have been bought dearly bought.

THE Democrats will celebrate July 4, 1900, by naming the next President of the United States.

THERE was some pretty warm arguments in the Lower House of the General Assembly, last week.

THE opinion of Gov. Tanner, of Illinois, of the Republican members of the Kentucky Legislature is not a little bit complimentary.

WHEN a man accepts the nomination of the Republican party, and runs for office under the log cabin he forfeits all claims of being a Democrat.

THE highest price reached by new tobacco on the Cincinnati market, this year, was when a hogshead from the Blue Grass brought 20½ cents a hundred, last week.

THE farmers are growing impatient for weather suitable for them to engage in the work of preparing for another crop. They do not take much stock in goose bone weather predictions any more, some.

THE Kansas City hotel people are indignant at the report put in circulation that they would demand exorbitant prices for meals and lodging during the sitting of the Democratic convention. Some designing person started the lie.

BOYS, don't begin to push the canvass for the nomination for county offices too strong. You have plenty of time in which to look after the canvas for your plant beds at least twice, yet, before turning your attention to the canvass for office.

THERE are two or three fellows in adjoining counties who are candidates for district offices and posing as Democrats. They will be called upon to show where they were, politically, in '97 and again in 1900, and the indications are they are going to find themselves in the middle of a bad fix when explanations are demanded and are in order. "You can fool all the people part of the time, and part of the people all the time, but you can not fool all the people all the time."

WHEN a Democrat deserts his party and goes over to the Republicans he is soon rewarded with an office if he was a seeker in that direction prior to his desertion, and Democratic deserters have well nigh got control of the g. o. p. in Kentucky, and some of the old line Republicans are not pleased with the way things are shaping up along that line, and think the new comers should not be placed in front to the exclusion of those who have stood the brunt of the battle, opposing these same fellows.

OF the five full Generals of the Confederate Army none survive. There were twenty-one Lieutenant Generals in the Confederate Army from first to last, and of these all were from the United States Army but four, namely, Richard Taylor, who was born in Louisville, Ky.; N. B. Forrest. Wade Hampton and John B. Gordon. Of them the following are living: James Longstreet, Stephen Lee, Early, S. B. Buckner, Joe Wheeler, and A. P. Stewart, besides two of those not from the old United States Army mentioned above. All of these are expected at the Louisville Reunion May 30-June 3.

THE RECORDER is deluged with communications on the 20th century problem, and it would be pleased to publish each and every one of the articles now on hand, but to do that would be to exclude everything else from these columns, consequently it has become absolutely necessary to decline to publish any more articles on the century problem. Rev. B. J. Kolb stated all there is in the problem, in his article last week, when he said, "the solution of the 19th and 20th century problem therefore depends altogether upon the way you record the first day and the first year of the Christian Era."

Editorial Paragraphs.

It is said that General Cronje had to inquire as to the forms of surrender before he could act under them. Heretofore, the Boers have been familiar only with the etiquette for receiving surrenders.

Just think of it! Four thousand Boers, without artillery, stand off 45,000 British for ten days! Was there ever a more gallant fight? Do not men who can battle and die like this, deserve to retain freedom?

Captain Carter's case has been settled by the United States Supreme Court, but his accomplices still flourish like green bay trees. What is the matter with Griggs? Is he waiting for the statue of limitations to bar proceedings?

Mr. Bynum has been nominated as a member of the Board of Appraisers "as a Democrat," and his confirmation is delayed by some perverse democratic senators who insist that he is a republican. Why not ask him for whom he intends te vote this fall? His answer might throw some light on his politics.

Governor Leary, of Guam sends word by every ship which touches at his far away isle that he wants ice and wants it badly. He should have it by all means, but at the same time, such plants would come from no other people under the sun except Americans. We are the only nation in the world who consider ice a necessity rather than a luxury.

Why is it that great Britain seems more willing to make concessions to the United States in regard to the Nicarauguan canal than our own executive seems willing to accept? It is stated on good authority that Lord Saulisbury is willing to agree to fortifications if he is asked. Why will Hay not ask him?

The Republicans have been forced to hold up the Hay-Pauncefort treaty surrender, to modify the ship subsidy bill, compromise their platform pledges on the currency bill by inserting a clause looking to bimetallism, and to modify the Porto Rican tariff in order to pass it. Altogether, the G. O. P. is in a tolerably bad condition for a presidential year.

The statement of Capt. Concas, of the Maria Theresa, one of the Spanish vessels in the Santiago fight, just published, says that his vessel was under orders to ram the Brooklyn, supposed to be the fastest vessel in the American fleet, and that he would have done so had it not been for the outward loop of the Brooklyn ordered by Commodore Schley, of which so much has been said. This should certainly settle the question.

On the last county court day at Owenton the Democrats of Owen county held an enthusiastic mass meeting to take steps in regard to the assassination of Gov. Goebel and other matters incident thereto, at which a ringing preamble and resolutions were adopted. Among the resolutions was the following:

"We heartily approve of the course of our State Senator, Dr. J. G. Furnish, in all his acts as State Senator and in his acts toward our mortally wounded Governor, William Goebel. He has proven himself a wise legislator, an honest man, a staunch Democrat, and worthy in every way of the respect, confidence and trust reposed in him by the Democrats of this Senatorial district."

Representative Orr's name was mentioned nowhere in the resolutions.

AMERICAN coal is sold cheaper in Paris, France, than in Philadelphia. American agricultural implements are lower in price in St. Petersburg, than in St. Paul, Minn. American sewing machine cost less in London, England, than in Leavenworth, Kan., and American boots and shoes are cheaper in Birmingham, England, than in Boston, Mass. Flour made from American wheat in Europe is cheaper than in the United States, and meat shipped to the old world can be bought in the butcher shops there for less than in our own.

THE Roberts local option law was defeated in the Senate, Monday, by a vote of 12 for to 8 against, the Republicans not voting. They made this bill a campaign issue.

THE examining trial of Whittaker, who immediately after the assassination of Goebel, was arrested, charged with the infamous crime, was held in Frankfort yesterday, and resulted in his being committed without bail.

THE Indiana Republicans are making life a burden for President McKinley at present, because of his sudden and unexpected change of front on the Porto Rico tariff question. Even ex-President Harrison can find nothing to say in support of the President's present attitude.

AN Indiana school teacher and the father of one of his pupils met on the street and shot each other to death, one day last week. The account of this terrible tragedy occupied six lines space in a daily paper that would have given it one and probably two columns, had the killing occurred in Kentucky.

MR. ERNST, who, until recently, was the Republican party's pilot in this district, is not in favor of giving over to the Democratic deserters who have recently lined up with his party, all the good things, and he so went on the record the other day in the matter of nominating a candidate for State Senator. He evidently believes that the new comers should not be preferred to the time-tried Republicans.

THE State Senate, by a vote of 16 to 3, passed the Johnson Bill amending the Goebel election law. The bill abolishes the party device on the ballot, requiring that all ballots shall be printed on paper to be furnished by the State Librarian, requires that at least one member of each County Board of Election Commissioners shall be a Republican and provides that two election officers in each voting precinct shall be chosen from the two leading parties, from lists to be furnished by the party authorities.

"The rapidity with which the trusts are strengthening themselves and absorbing the wealth of the country will soon place them beyond the reach of the people. They now add hundreds of millions to their wealth every day, and make presidents, for none can doubt, in spite of McKinley's mild disapproval of the trusts in his message, that Mr. Hanna, who made him president is the agent of the trusts and put McKinley in the White House because he thinks he can use him there. The trusts are rapidly strengthening their grip on the money power of the government, and, as they very recently have shown, can now cause panics that will crush their enemies and sweep out of existence all who dare oppose them. They are a hundredfold more grasping, arbitrary and tyrannical. It will be no easy matter for the people to crush them now. It will be well nigh impossible to do so by the ordinary process of law two or three years hence,"—New Orleans Times Democrat.

"It must be borne in mind that since the cession of Puerto Rico she has been denied the principal markets she had long enjoyed, and our tariff has been continued against her products as when she was under Spanish sovereignty.

"The markets of Spain are closed to her products except upon terms to which the commerce of all nations is subjected. The Island of Cuba, which used to buy her cattle and tobacco without customs duties, now imposes the same duties on these products as from any other country entering her ports.

"She has, therefore, lost her free intercourse with Spain and Cuba without any compensating benefits in this market. The markets of the United States should be opened up to her products.

"Our plain duty is to abolish all customs tariffs between the United States and Puerto Rico and give her products free access to our markets.—President McKinley in his message to Congress, December. 5, 1899.

It looks as though the President has another case of the "wabbles."

CHINA WEDDING.

On the 26th of January just passed, Mr. and Mrs. Menter Graves turned back the dial of time twenty years and celebrated the event of their marriage. A royal feast was prepared and an hundred and twenty-five invitations issued. They very wisely decided to have a day and night entertainment. The older and married guests were invited to spend the day and the younger and single guests the evening. Your correspondent being eligible to either class, was accorded the privilege of deciding between the two—not wishing to show partiality he availed himself of both.

Every one seemed to be in their most felicitous mood and a more enjoyable day and evening was never spent by the honored guests. The groom, with his face beaming with happiness, clothed in his close fitting Prince Albert, St. Maxim collar and white tie, was as chippy and as spry as a 20 year old; noting the loving veneration of his face indicated at the approach of his admired princess, we came to the conclusion that she was as dear to him as were the ruddy drops that visited his overflowing heart.

The bride, who is near twenty years his junior, looked handsome as a Queen in her blue silk French Poplin skirt, with polonais embroidered in contrasting colors, neck and sleeves ornamented with handsome lace. This slightly altered was her wedding dress twenty years ago. During the entertainment her face was radiant with the flush of the perfect happiness that permeates every fiber of her being. She is a lady that never stops to look back, but pushes forward to the accomplishment of everything she undertakes, hence the grand success of the entertainment in commemoration of the happiest event of her life.

Two tables with 22 plates were artistically dressed with calla lillies surrounded by wreaths of smilax, which gave a refreshing effect to the appetites of the guests who sat down to the feast—several courses were served consisting of all the delicacies of the season. It required three sittings to accommodate the fifty-five guests who enjoyed the day's entertainment. As the day drew to a close the happy gathering very reluctantly dispersed to their several homes that their children might come and respond to their invitations to the evening entertainment.

Early in the evening forty-five of the beauties and gallants of our famed society circle were mingling together in the parlors of our hospitable host and hostess, "and all went as merry as a marriage bell." Those who contributed most to the enjoyment of the evening were Misses Susie Roberts, Bessie Cropper, Grace Grant, Zayda Gaines, Nellie Duncan, Beulah Gaines, Mrs. Viola Grant and Mr. Courtney Walton. The guests were agreeably entertained with vocal and instrumental music and a cake-walk gracefully rendered by two very pretty young ladies, whose extreme modesty prompted them to petition me not to mention their names.

The chief who presided in the kitchen and provided the cookeries which so tempted the palates of the guests, was Mrs. Ann Graves who is an adept in the art of cooking. Mr. George Bird, an ex-waiter at the Burnet House, catered to the wants of the guests in true French style. Mr. Rufus Fogle, who served as fireman, was a master in the art of keeping the temperature uniform in all of the apartments throughout the morning and evening entertainment.

The bride and groom received a number of beautiful and serviceable presents in china—the most valuable of which was a handsome set of table ware, consisting of an hundred pieces, the gift of a number of friends, who pooled their contributions in the purchase.

Remarkable Cures of Rheumatism.

From the Vindicator, Ruthferton, N. C.

The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For sale by W. F. McKim, Burlington; O. N. Grant, Grant; Berkshire & McWethy, Petersburg, and C. S. Balsly, Bullittsville.

OLD KENTUCKY.

The following story rhyme illustrates the view, of an Illinois humorist on the present political situation in Kentucky:

"He was shot in old Kentucky, where they made the mountain dew, and the mother feeds the babies on hot revolver stew, where you wake up in the morning full of bullet holes, and find your sole companions are disembodied souls.

"He was shot in old Kentucky where their aim is always true, and their principal amusement is shooting people through, where the doctors use as medicine, for all human ills, a dose or two of bullets instead of giving pills.

"He was shot in old Kentucky where 'feuds' grow on trees, and the bullets from the rifles buzz through the air like bees, where the instruments they play on, when they give a dance or hop, are their musical revolvers, and they 'call off' with a pop.

"I have heard that old Kentucky is a fine old Commonwealth, that the women are all noted for their beauty and their health, but I'll stay in Illinois, where the women cut less figure, and the men are not so hasty nor so quick to pull the trigger."

"Sheep raising and oyster catching along the gulf coast here promises to be the coming industries within a short time," says a Chicago Record Mississippi correspondent. "There are now more than 30,000 head of sheep in Jackson county. This little town, last year, bought 100,000 pounds of wool. The product is what is called Lake wool, and sells for about 17 cents a pound.

"Harry H. Smith, who came to this section several years ago, and spends his winters here, gives an account of the wool production along the coast. The sheep run loose the year around. They are all branded, and in the spring all the sheep for hundreds of miles along the coast are rounded up and shorn, the owners receiving their fleeces according to the brand. They are rebranded and turned loose, running for another year. It is said that under the grass on which they feed a herb appears in the fall, and on this the sheep feed extensively. It is exceedingly nutritious, and imparts a fine flavor to mutton. However, only the animals undesirable for wool growing are killed.

"H. F. Russell, who has become interested in the industry here, says that a herd of 3000 sheep were sold to a Northerner on time. In five years he paid from wool production for the entire herd and had all of the increase besides. Spring lambs sell for $2.50, and are hard to buy at that figure. It is claimed here that this country will feed double the number of sheep without materially curtailing the wild feed supply. The town of Ocean Springs proposes to encourage a woolen mill to locate here, a large tract of land having been offered free."

What's Your Face Worth?

"I will tell you a story about a man who has a steady job as an innocent bystander," said Mr. Chas. Hart, of Louisville, to the Washington Post's hotel man. "Do you remember the Chicago drummer who had his leg broken in the crush when Dave Colson did his shooting at Frankfort a few weeks ago? I forgot his name. Just two years to a week this same drummer happened to be around when a shooting took place. A stray bullet cut through the fleshy part of his thigh He was laid up for some time. His wife took a great dislike to the place, and made him promise that he would never let business carry him there again. He kept away from the place until the time of the shooting.

"He had a little business there, and thought he would sneak over and not let his wife know. He had not been in Frankfort two hours until he was standing in the hotel when the shooting took place. He had his leg broken by being thrown down in the crush of those trying to get out of range. One of the men who was killed fell on him and broke two of his ribs."—Post.

FROM GALLATIN COUNTY.

Independent

Johnson Rogers has moved from Boone county to the farm he bought on the Dry Creek turnpike from R. B. Brown.

Ed Fry, of Verona, Ky., representing the Plano Harvesting Machine Co., of Chicago, was here on business, Monday and Tuesday.

M. L. Hance and Harry Adams, of Jackson Landing, were visitors here Tuesday. Mr. Adams recently moved from Hamilton, Boone Co., to the J. W. Hance farm, having bought from Mrs. Cynthia Chapman, of St. Joseph, Mo., the half interest if 299 acres of land at Jackson Landing, for $2,000 cash. J. W. Hance owns the other half interest.

Elmer E. Hufford, of Egypt Bottom, Ind., sold about 1,000 bushels of white corn here to farmers in this locality and delivered it Thursday. It was excellent corn and the price was 45 cents per bushel. Nearly all of the farmers in this quarter are short of hay and corn this year—something that seldom happens, but the dry weather of last summer made the corn crop very short, though last fall corn sold in some of the producing localities in this section at as low as 25c per bushel. Mr. Hufford had about 6,000 bushels on hand.

J. Edward Mitchell, at one time one of the wealthiest merchants in Owensboro, died in the Daviess county poor house, a few days ago.

A KINDLY WARNING.

Dr. Talmage Speaks Concerning Evil Associations.

Aptly Illustrates His Text That "a Companion of Fools Shall Be Destroyed"—Advice for Young and Old.

[Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage speaks on a theme which all men, young and old, will be glad to see discussed, and the kindly warning will no doubt in many cases be taken; text, Proverbs 13:20: "A companion of fools shall be destroyed."

"May it please the court," said a convicted criminal when asked by the judge what he had to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon him, "may it please the court, bad company has been my destruction. I received the blessing of good parents and in return therefor promised to avoid all evil associates. Had I kept my promise I should have avoided this shame and the burden of guilt which, like a vulture, threatens to drag me to justice for my many crimes. Although I once moved in high circles and was entertained by distinguished men, I am lost. Bad company did the work for me." Only one out of a thousand illustrations was that of the fact that "a companion of fools shall be destroyed." It is an invariable rule.

Here is a hospital with a hundred men down with the ship fever. Here is a healthy man who goes into it. He does not so certainly catch the disease as a good man will catch moral distemper if he consents to be shut up with the vicious and the abandoned. In the prisons of the olden time it was the custom to put the prisoners in a cell together, and I am sorry to say it is the custom still in some of our prisons; so that when the day of liberation comes, the men, instead of being reformed, are turned out brutes, not men, each one having learned the vices of all the rest.

We may in our worldly occupation be obliged to talk to and commingle with bad people, but he who voluntarily chooses that kind of association is carrying on a courtship with a Delilah which will shear the locks of his strength, and he will be tripped into perdition. Look over all the millions of the race, and you cannot show me a single instance where a man voluntarily associated with the bad for one year and maintained his integrity. Sin is catching; it is infectious; it is epidemic.

A young man wakes up in one of our great cities knowing only the gentlemen of the firm into whose service he has entered. In the morning he enters the store, and all the clerks mark him, measure him, discuss him. The bad clerks of that establishment, the good clerks of that establishment, stand in some relation to him. The good clerks will wish him well, but they will wait for a formal introduction, and even after they have had the introduction they are very cautious as to whether they shall call him into their association before they know him very well.

But the bad young men in that establishment all gather around him. They patronize him, they offer to show him everything that there is in the city on one condition—that he will pay the expenses, for it always happens so when a good young man and a bad young man go together to a place of evil entertainment—the good young man always has to pay the charges. Just at the time the ticket is to be paid for or the champagne bill is to be settled the bad young man will affect embarrassment and feel around in his pockets and say: "Well, well, really I have forgotten my pocketbook."

In 48 hours after this innocent young man has entered the store the bad young men will gather around him, slap him on the shoulder with familiarity, and, if he is stupid in not being able to take certain allusions, will say: "Ah, my young friend, you will have to be broken in." And forthwith they go to work to "break him in."

Oh, young man, let no fallen young man slap you on the shoulder familiarly! Turn around and give a withering glance that will make the wretch cower in your presence. There is no monstrosity of wickedness that can stand before the glance of purity and honor. God keeps the lightnings of heaven in his own seabbard, and no human may wrench them, but God gives to every young man a lightning which he may use, and that is the lightning of an honest eye. Anybody that understands the temptations of our great cities knows the use of one sermon like this, in which I try to enforce the thought that "a companion of fools shall be destroyed."

And, first, I charge you, avoid the skeptic—that is, the young man who puts his thumb in his vest and swaggers about, scoffing at your old-fashioned religion, and taking out the Bible and turning over to some mysterious passage and saying: "Explain that, my friend, explain that. I used to think just as you do. My father and mother used to think just as you do. But you can't scare me about the future. I used to believe in those things, but I've got over it." Yes, he has got over it, and you will get over it if you stay in his companionship much longer. For awhile he may not bring one argument against our holy Christianity. He will by scoffs and jeers and caricatures destroy your faith in that religion which was the comfort of your father in his declining years and the pillow on which your old mother lay a-dying.

That brilliant young skeptic will after awhile have to die, and his diamond will flash no splendor into the eye of death. His hair will lie uncombed on the pillow. Death will come up, and this skeptic will say to him: "I cannot die. I cannot die." Death will say: "You must die. You have but ten seconds more to live. Your soul—give it to me right away. Your soul!" "Oh, no!" says the skeptic. "Do not breathe that cold air into my face. You crowd me too hard. It is getting dark in the room. Here—take my rings and take all the pictures in the room, but let me off." "No," says Death. "Your soul! Your soul!" Then the dying skeptic begins to say: "O God!" Death says: "You declared there was no God." Then the dying skeptic says: "Pray for me," and Death says: "It is too late to pray; you have only three seconds more to live, and I will count them off—one, two, three. Gone!" Where? Where? Carry him out and lay him down beside his old father and mother, who died under the delusions of the Christian religion singing the songs of victory.

Again, avoid the idlers—that is, those people who gather around the store or the shop or the factory and try to seduce you away from your regular calling and in your business hours try to seduce you away. There is nothing that would please them so well as to have you give up your employment and consort with them.

Idleness is the next door to villainy. When the police go to find criminals, where do they go to find them? They find them among the idle—those who have nothing to do, or, having something to do, refuse to engage in their daily work. Some one came to good old Ashbel Green and asked him why he worked at 80 years of age when it was time for him to rest. "Oh," he replied, "I work to keep out of mischief." And no man can afford to be idle. I care not how strong his moral character, he cannot afford to be idle.

But you say: "A great many people are suffering from enforced idleness. During the hard times there were a great many people out of employment." I know it, but the times of dullness in business are the times when men ought to be thoroughly engaged in improving their minds and enlarging their hearts. The fortunes to be made 20 years from now will be made by the young men who in the times when business was dull cultivated their minds and improved their hearts. They will get the fortunes after awhile, while those men who hang around their stores, never engaging in any useful occupation, will be as poor then as they are now. It is absurd for a Christian man to say he has nothing to do.

People go to Florence and to Venice and to Rome to see one of the works of the great masters. I think I can show you the picture of one of the great masters. "I went by the field of the slothful and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding and, lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down. Then I saw and considered it well. I looked upon it and received instruction. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that traveleth and thy want as an armed man." There is no more explosive passage in all the Bible than that. It first begins to hiss like the fuse of a cannon and then bursts like a 54-pounder. The old proverb was true: "The devil tempts most men, but idlers tempt the devil!" Therefore, seek something to do. If no worldly business offers, then, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, go out on Christian toil, and the Lord will bless you, and the Lord will help you.

Again I counsel you, avoid the pleasure seeker, the man whose entire business it is to seek for recreation and amusement. I believe in the amusements of the world so far as they are innocent. I could not live without them. Any man of sanguine temperament must have recreation or die. And yet the amusements and recreations of life must administer to hard work. They are only preparative for the occupation to which God has called us.

God would not have given us the capacity to laugh if he did not sometimes intend us to indulge it. God hath hung in sky and set in wave and printed on grass many a roundelay. But all the music and the brightness of the natural world were merely intended to fit us for the earnest work of life. The thundercloud has edges exquisitely purpled, but it jars the mountain as it says: "I come down to water the fields." The flowers standing under the fence look gay and beautiful, but they say: "We stand here to refresh the husbandmen at the mooning." The brook frolics and sparkles and foams, but it says: "I go to baptize the moss; I go to slake the thirst of the bird; I turn the wheel of the mill; in my crystal cradle I rock muckshaw and water lily; I play, but I work."

Look out for the man who plays and never works. Look out for that man whose entire business is to play ball or sail a yacht or engage in any kind of merriment. These things are all beautiful and grand in their places, but when they become the chief work of life they become a man's destruction. George Brummel was admired of all England. He danced with peeresses and went a round of mirth and folly, until after awhile, exhausted of purse, ruined of reputation, blasted of soul, he begged a crust from a grocer, declaring as his deliberate opinion that he thought a dog's life was better than a man's.

These mere pleasurists will come around you while you are engaged in your work, and they will try to take you away. They have lost their places. Why not you lose your place? Then you will be one of them. Oh, my friends, before you go with these pleasure-seekers, these men whose entire life is fun and amusement and recreation, remember while after a man has lived a life of integrity and Christian consecration, kind to the poor and elevating to the world's condition, when he comes to die, he has a glorious reminiscence lying on his death pillow, the mere pleasurist has nothing by way of review but a torn playbill, a ticket for the race, an empty tankard or the cast out rinds of a carousal. And as in delirium of his awful death he clutches the goblet and presses it to his lips, the dregs falling on his tongue will begin to uncoil and hiss with the adders of an eternal poison.

Again, beware of the Sabbath breakers. Tell me how a young man spends his Sabbath, and I will tell you what are his prospects in business, and I will tell you what are his prospects for the eternal world. God has thrust into our busy life a sacred duty when we are to look after our souls. It is exorbitant after giving six days to the feeding and the clothing of these perishable bodies that God should demand one day for the feeding and the clothing of the immortal soul? Our bodies are seven-day clocks, and they need to be wound up, and if they are not wound up they run down into the grave. No man can continuously break the Sabbath and keep his physical and mental health. Ask those aged men, and they will tell you they never knew men who continuously broke the Sabbath who did not fail either in mind, body or moral principle. A manufacturer gave this as his experience. He said: "I owned a factory on the Lehigh. Everything prospered. I kept the Sabbath, and everything went on well. But one Sabbath morning I bethought myself of a new shuttle, and I thought I would invent that new shuttle before sunset, and I refused all food and drink until I had completed that shuttle. By sundown I had completed it. The next day, Monday, I showed to my workmen and friends this new shuttle. They all congratulated me on my great success. I put that shuttle into play. I enlarged my business; but, sir, that Sunday's work cost me $30,000. From that day everything went wrong. I failed in business, and I lost my mill." Oh, my friends, keep the Lord's day. You may think it old fogy advice, but I give it to you now: "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." A man said that he would prove that all this was a fallacy, and so he did. "I shall raise a Sunday crop." And he plowed the field on the Sabbath, and then he put in the seed on the Sabbath and cultivated the ground on the Sabbath. When the harvest was ripe, he reaped it on the Sabbath, and he carried it into the mow on the Sabbath, and then he stood out defiant to his Christian neighbors and said: "There, that is my Sunday crop, and it is all garnered." After awhile a storm came up and a great darkness, and the lightnings of heaven struck the barn, and away went his Sunday crop.

Again, I charge you, beware of association with the dissipated. Go with them and you will in time adopt their habits. Why is that man fallen against the curbstone, covered with bruises and beastliness? He was as bright-faced a lad as ever looked up from the nursery. His mother rocked him, prayed for him, fondled him, and would not let the night air touch his cheek and held him and looked down into his loving eyes and wondered for what high position he was being fitted. He entered life with bright hopes. The world beckoned him, friends cheered him, but the archers shot at him; vile men set traps for him, bad habits hooked fast to him with their iron grapples; his feet slipped on the way, and there he lies. Who would think that that uncombed hair was once toyed with by a father's fingers? Who would think that those bloated cheeks were ever kissed by a mother's lips? Would you guess that that thick tongue once made a household glad with its innocent prattle? Utter no harsh words in his ear. Help him up. Put the hat over that once manly brow. Brush the dust from that coat that once covered a generous heart. Show him the way to the home that once rejoiced at the sound of his footstep, and with gentle words tell his children to stand back as you help him through the hall.

That was a kind husband once and an indulgent father. He will kneel with them no more as once he did at family prayers—the little ones with clasped hands looking up into the heavens with thanksgiving for their happy home.

Shake off the Sabbath breaker. Oh, turn your back upon these men. Shake off the skeptic. Shake off the idler. Shake off the pleasurist. You may do this work of ejection in politeness, but you may do it firmly. You are not under any circumstances to lose all the remembrance of the fact that you are a gentleman and must always act the gentleman. A young man said to a Christian Quaker: "Old chap, how did you get your money?"

"Well," said the Quaker, "I got it by dealing in an article in which thou mayest deal if thou will—civility."

Be courteous, be polite, but be firm. Say "No" as if you meant it. If you say "No" in a feeble way, they will keep on with their imploration and their temptation, and after awhile you will stand in silence, and then you will say, after they have gone on a little longer, "Yes," and then you are lost.

Oh, turn your back upon the banquet of sin! I call you to a better feast to-day. The promises of God are the fruits. The harps of Heaven are the music. The clusters of Eschol are pressed into the tankards. The sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty are the guests, while standing at the banquet to pour the wine and divide the clusters and command the music and welcome the guests is a daughter of God, on her brow the blossoms of paradise and in her cheek the flush of celestial summer. And her name is Religion. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

ACTIVITY OF LAWMAKERS.

Some Curious Statutes Have Been Passed by the Legislatures of Various States.

A Georgia statute makes it unlawful for anyone to fire a gun or a pistol on Sunday in the Cracker state. A statute of Colorado makes it unlawful to dock a horse's tail. A Florida statute makes the manufacture and sale of cigarettes a misdemeanor unless they are filled with Cuban or Florida tobacco. A Massachusetts law makes it a misdemeanor for the period of three years following the adoption of the statute to shoot an eagle in that state and Michigan has adopted a system for the state regulation of barber shops by creating a board of barbers and making obligatory an official certificate for barbers. The state of Pennsylvania has a statute regulating the use of secondhand bottles, Missouri has a statute for the inspection of malt liquors, Oregon has a law as to the composition of and the ingredients that may be used in candy and Illinois has a law as to gold and silver plating, prescribing what may be done and what is prohibited in respect to the sale and display of plated ware in that state.

These are but a few of the statutes adopted by state legislatures within the period of a year and are a fair sample of the solicitude which is at times shown by legislators in various states in their effort to protect public health, morals and good order, provide against the guile of unrighteous persons and secure to the people of their respective states the full enjoyment of their "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness." The last Winsconsin legislature adopted a statute regulating lobbying. A public register is to be kept containing the names of all lobbyists, the various bills to oppose or promote which they are employed and the names of the individuals or corporations by whom they are employed. Within 30 days after the adjournment of the legislature persons or corporations employing lobbyists must make a detailed statement of expenditures to the secretary of state at Madison.

North Carolina has a law relating to the lease of turpentine orchards which provides that leases shall expire in January instead of April, as was formerly the case. California has a statute regulating the sale of what is called officially renovated butter and the state of Washington has a law which requires the capacity of milk cans to be stamped upon the outside of each by the town indtior. Missouri, now the great poultry state, has a state poultry association, and Indiana has a statute making it larceny to steal a dog listed for taxes. Vermont has a new bounty law providing for the payment of five dollars for each lynx, one dollar for each rattlesnake and 50 cents for each fox killed in the state. Missouri has adopted a law requiring miners to have certificates of competence, Washington has provided for the establishment of boards of examiners of horseshoers in cities of more than 20,000 inhabitants and Delaware has adopted a statute of somewhat prosaic character which requires gypsies to pay a license fee in that state.

Indiana has adopted a law to prevent lynching. The penalty for actively aiding or abetting is fixed at life imprisonment or death. If any person is taken from the custody of an officer and lynched the fact is made prima facie evidence of a failure on the part of the officer to perform his duty and it thereupon becomes the duty of the prosecuting attorney and the attorney general to institute impeachment proceedings against him. Minnesota has a law which makes the building of a fence more than six feet high a nuisance if objected to and the same state has adopted statutes exempting watches and bicycles from execution. Tennessee has adopted a statute which makes it a felony "to keep a place for playing craps" and Wyoming a statute prescribing a fine for wearing a hat at a theater or other indoor amusement. Wyoming is the pioneer state in the adoption of woman suffrage.—N. Y. Sun.

ATE THE BUTTONS.

They Were of Candy and Fooled Grandma, Who Had Sewn Them on the Clothes.

Grandma could not believe her eyes! She had herself sewed buttons on Margaret's and Dorothy's new clothes. And now here they were, come to have their little waists and petticoats buttoned, and not a button to be seen!

Grandma was sure they were good buttons, for she had taken them out of the package mamma brought home with a lot of shopping.

The little girls, with laughing faces, stood in front of her, holding up their little clothes from dropping down, watching her astonishment. Then Dorothy said: "I'm going to 'fess, grandma."

"And I will, too," said Margaret. "We ate the buttons, grandma!"

"Ate buttons! Oh, Margaret, you'll die! When did you do it? Answer quickly!"

"Oh, grandma, they were candy, and so good!" and Margaret smacked her rosy lips. "Dorothy wetted her finger to rub a speck of black off one, and it tasted sweet, and then we bit one, and it was just like yellow taffy, and we ate them all up before we thought, and our clothes fell down, and please won't you forgive us?"

Dear, white-haired grandma laughed till the tears ran down her cheeks. For mamma said she had bought the candy buttons for a joke, never dreaming grandma would be caught.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HOW TO REACH THE TRUSTS.

It frequently happens that a man who is hunting for something will overlook the desired article when it is under his very nose. This is true of most of the delegates to the anti-trust conference who are looking for a method of curbing the trusts. Nearly every delegate has a plan of his own—more or less complicated and impracticable—but it has remained for Mr. Frank S. Monnett, late attorney general of Ohio, and Mr. Williams, of Massachusetts, to point out the obvious remedy for trust aggression. Messrs. Monnett and Williams suggest no new legislation, no constitutional amendments, no commissions or other quasi-executive bodies to deal with the matter. They point out that the remedy already exists. The only necessity is to utilize it.

That is to say, Mr. Monnett declares that the Sherman law, if enforced, will reach the trusts. Mr. Williams adds the corollary statement that the people can have the Sherman law enforced by electing officers who will enforce it. Neither statement can successfully be controverted. The trusts now flourish unchecked not because there is no law which will reach them, but because the laws already on the statute books are not enforced by the president of the United States and his attorney general. Those officers nullify the Sherman law. They would nullify any similar legislation that might be enacted. The fault is not with the law, but with the officers who refuse to enforce it—who beg the question by declaring that it can't be enforced.

The president, through his attorney general, has paralyzed the energies of every United States district attorney in the country. Among those officers are no doubt many men like Mr. S. H. Bethea—active, ambitious and desirous of enforcing the federal statutes. But no matter how energetic they may be they dare not attempt to attack the trusts by means of the Sherman law, because Mr. Griggs, usurping the functions of the United States supreme court, has repeatedly declared that the Sherman law does not apply to the trusts and that it is, therefore, useless to proceed under its provisions. No district attorney will risk the displeasure of his superior officer by instituting Sherman law prosecutions in the face of such a deliverance. The trusts are protected from prosecution by the president and the attorney general. The obvious remedy is to elect a president who will enforce the laws instead of nullifying them.

The administration can make no defense for its attitude. It stands between the trusts and the law. Even if it be conceded that the Sherman law might be held invalid by the courts what excuse can the administration have for denying those tribunals the opportunity of passing upon it? The president's position is that of a state's attorney who should turn all the murderers out of the county jail and answer public protests by the declaration that the statute against murder couldn't be enforced and that he wasn't going to try to enforce it. It is a nullification of the law of the land and an invasion of the right of the judiciary to construe the statutes.

Nothing else can be made of it. The president and his party protect the trusts. Nay, they punish republican officers who prosecute the trusts, as Mr. Monnett himself can testify, having been denied a renomination by Mr. Hanna because he dared to institute and maintain a prosecution against the Standard Oil combination contrary to the wishes and instructions of the republican boss of Ohio.

If the people of this country wish to get rid of the trusts they must first get rid of Hanna, McKinley and Griggs, who are owned, body, boots and breeches, by the trusts. With a president in the white house who will enforce the laws the trust question will quickly be settled.—Chicago Chronicle.

A FUND FOR CORRUPTION.

The Trusts Will Be Let Alone so Long as They Give Up to Mark Hanna.

Never has the United States witnessed such a campaign for the presidency as that now impending promises to be. There has in the past been debauchery of the franchise, corruption of the people's ballot, but not on any such scale of magnitude as is now being prepared for the coming election.

In order to promote republican success a campaign fund of $25,000,000 is to be raised, and how? By the contributions of the rank and file of republicans throughout the nation? By the voluntary offerings of those theorists who see in republican doctrines the essence of political wisdom? Not at all. It will be collected from the trust beneficiaries of the McKinley administration. Two hundred combinations of capital, representing $2,000,000,000, will contribute the money. Mark Hanna recently came out in an interview absolving trusts from blame. They are doing no harm and "should be let alone," he said. Soon followed the announcement of the gigantic fund to be raised to further McKinley's candidacy. The trusts will be "let alone" so far as legislation by congress and prosecution under the law by McKinley's attorney general go, but they will not be "let alone" by the Illustrious Cleveland until they have contributed their pro rata of the corruption fund.

Think of what such a sum means when improperly used. It cannot be honestly utilized. Such an amount is many times more than the most extravagant manager of an honest campaign could spend. It is an amount of money which, if divided among 75,000,000 people, the population approximately of this country, would give each 33 1-3 cents. The usual reckoning is that one in five of the population is a voter. Then this Hanna campaign fund is great enough to allow each voter more than $1.65. Twice this amount, $3.30, would be available for each of the necessary votes to gain a popular majority. But the money will not be spent that way. It will be put in large sums in the doubtful and close states. These will be purchased outright. If the money was to be expended pro rata in the country the McKinley managers in Denver might reasonably expect a contribution exceeding $56,000 from the national committee.

In addition to the corrupt might of this immense sum, there will be another element in the campaign even more reprehensible. It is the policy of force and intimidation, employed quite largely in 1896, and to be perfected in its workings this year. The $2,000,000,000 of capital, represented in the campaign fund, will also contribute to republican success by compelling the hundreds of thousands of men dependent upon them to support the McKinley ticket.

Democratic success may not be impossible in spite of all the money the trusts can throw into the campaign, if only the vote is free and fair. But if in the large manufacturing centers of the close states intimidation of the voters is employed successfully, there can be but one result of the campaign. McKinley will be reelected.—Denver Post.

SAID BY LINCOLN.

Words Which, in the Light of Subsequent Events, Condemn Imperialism.

In the light of current events it must be clear that McKinleyism is synonymous with Hannaism, and the latter, the exponent of everything dangerous to a government of the people. American citizens who stop to think will be impressed by the gulf between the principles upon which this nation was founded, and upon the observance of which it can alone be perpetuated. Mr. Bryan points out the gulf in his summing up of the situation published in the New York Journal.

"When the republican party meets the speeches of Abraham Lincoln in the next campaign, it will find that the gulf between Lincolnism and Hannaism is so great that the admirers of the former cannot be followers of the latter."

Here is the impassable gulf dug by Abraham Lincoln, at Lewiston, August, 1858, in a speech referring to the wisdom of the men who announced the American declaration of independence to the world. Imagine McKinleyism, Hannaism, imperialism, abiding by such doctrine!

"Wise statesmen as they were, they knew the tendency of prosperity to breed tyrants; and so they established theso great self-evident truths, that, when in the distant future, some man, some faction, some interest, should set up the doctrine that none but rich men, or none but white men, or none but Anglo-Saxon white men, were entitled to liberty and the pursuit of happiness, their posterity might look up again to the declaration of independence, and take courage to renew the battle which their fathers began. * * * so that no man should thereafter dare to limit and circumscribe the principles on which the temple or liberty was being built."

——It appears from a response of Secretary Gage to a resolution of congress in regard to the expenditure of the $50,000,000 war fund that it cost the United States $105,144 to whitewash former Secretary Alger, and it was a poor job at that. The commissioners were supplied with fountain pens costing $12 each in order that they might make precious notes of testimony. Government commissions have become a rather expensive luxury in these recent times.—Philadelphia Record.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The Methodist of Greater New York have decided to raise $700,00 to clear the indebtedness of all the Methodist churches there.

Medical inspectors excluded 452 pupils from the public schools of Chicago one week recently on account of more or less contagious diseases.

On being applauded with hand-clapping during a recent sermon Rev. Dr. Lorimer, of Boston, stopped, forbade the people to clap, and requested them to say "Amen" instead.

The University of Michigan has 12 graduates, Yale 14, Harvard 16 and the University of Virginia 19 in the present senate and house of representatives.

At the dedication of the First Lutheran church at Elkhorn, Wis., a Bible was used which Emperor William gave to Rev. Hugo Stubenvoll, pastor of the church, because he wrote a poem in the emperor's honor.

The ecclesiastical record of Pope Sophronius, patriarch of the orthodox Greek church of Alexandria, who recently died, aged 107, shows that he was a priest 87 years, a bishop 78, archbishop 70, and patriarch 35.

The "English Congregational year book, which has just been issued, shows in Great Britain 4,831 churches and missions, 415,664 church members, and 3,132 ministers, with 250 churches seeking pastors and 289 pastors without charges.

While a student at Norwich university, Admiral Dewey took lessons in painting in water color, and proved an apt pupil. He produced several promising bits of work, mostly marine sketches, one of which has been rescued from oblivion, and, in a large frame, now adorns the walls of one of the university's class rooms.

The Central Presbyterian Church of New York has decided to hold an early morning service to correspond to the early mass in the Roman Catholic churches, and intended, like that, for servant girls. A similar service will be held in the afternoon. Both will last only a half hour, and a short address will be given at each. The Central is one of the largest and most aristocratic churches in the city.

MANY KINDS OF OLIVES.

They Are Imported in Casks Chiefly from Spain and Bottled in This Country.

Most of the olives eaten in this country come from a territory of about a hundred miles in diameter, around the city of Seville, in Spain. They are imported in casks of 160 gallons each, the importations, varying with the crop, ranging from 3,000 to 6,000 casks a year, and averaging about 4,000 casks.

Olives are sorted in Spain, according to sizes, and each big cask is filled with olives of approximately the same size. There are 12 trade sizes. Formerly the several sizes were described by names; now they are commonly known in the trade by numerical designations, the names indicating the number of olives to the kilogramme. Thus, 75's means olives that will count from 70 to 80 to the kilogramme.

The olives are imported in brine. Formerly many olives were imported already put up in bottles, but almost all the olives sold in this country are now packed here. The work is done chiefly by women and girls. There are ingenious machines for pitting olives that are put up pitted, but no machine has yet been invented for putting the olives into the bottles with the symmetrical arrangement in which they are now so commonly seen. This work, the building of the wall around the inside of the bottle, where it may be seen through the glass, is all done by hand, the filler placing each olive in the bottle separately with tongs made for the purpose, every olive and row being arranged with care and precision, so that the effect of the whole is attractive and pleasing. This is slow work for beginners, but experts come to fill bottles very rapidly, and perfectly as well, and with such deftness of touch on the tongs as not to bruise or mar the olives in the handling. The interior space is filled with a specially prepared brine, to be then corked, capped and labeled, the bottles being then packed in cases.

Olives are put up in a great variety of packages; a single packer in New York uses bottles in a hundred different sizes and styles. Olives are put up better shape in this country than anywhere else. The glass used in making the American bottles is better, to start with, and the bottles are more perfect in form, the olives are more handsomely packed in the bottles, and the bottles are better labeled; the whole package, in fact, is better and more sightly in appearance.

Olives are packed nowadays in this country in other cities than New York, but the chief importations come to this port, and more olives are packed here than at any other point. From this city olives are distributed all over the country, and carload lots of olives, either in bulk or in glass, are not uncommon shipments.—N. Y. Sun.

A Little Stepmother.

Uncle Hello, Dot, got a new dolly?

Little Miss Dot—Hush, uncle! Don't speak so loud. She is not one of my own, but belonged to Millie Simpson, who was cruel to her and abandoned her. So I adopted her; but I don't want her to know, 'cause I mean to make no difference between her and my own dollies.—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

The "High School" Horse.

A great deal of trouble is expended in educating the showy, high-stepping horse. He is trained to step high and act showily by being driven along a path where rails are set crosswise. He steps high to avoid stumbling, and in time always steps high.—N. Y. World.

Our Increase of Insanity.

Much discussion has been aroused lately by the alarming increase of insanity. Our high rate of living is the cause assigned. In the rush for money, both men and women neglect their bodies until the breakdown comes. The best way to preserve health is by a faithful use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. By curing all stomach ills, this remedy prevents nervous breakdown. It is also an excellent medicine for constipation, dyspepsia and biliousness.

Funny Footnotes.

If a girl can make lovely chocolate caramels a man thinks she can cook.

Success is like a chicken; if you get it cooped up, it is well to keep an eye on the coop.

When some women get the blues the family find it out by having to eat dried peach pies.

When the truth is told all our good resolutions last longer than we thought they would.

After a girl has taken three French lessons she can do the French shrug better than her teacher.

Two souls with but a single thought surprise everybody by finding an awful lot to talk about.

Birth doesn't amount to so much; indolence often presents a fine imitation of the correct aristocratic air.—Indianapolis Journal.

Primitive Emotion.

Marie Rose, aged eight years, was telling Elsie, aged seven, about the making of the world. "And Adam was the first being created," she announced, solemnly. "So it was awfully lonely for him, and one day, when he was asleep, the Lord took a rib out of his side and made a woman out of it—so Adam would have a friend to play with him."

"And wasn't Adam s'prised?" asked Elsie.

"Surprised? Why he was just tickled to death!" said Marie Rose, ecstatically.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Map Puzzle Educator.

Is Iowa as large as Maine? Which is the Pan Handle State? What state is bounded by four straight lines? These and many other questions relating to the geography of our own country answered by the map puzzle sent out by the Chicago Great Western Railway. It is a dissected map of the United States printed on heavy cardboard and the puzzle consists in putting the pieces together so as to form a complete map. It will be found interesting and instructive to old people as well as young. It will be sent to our readers sending 10 cents to F. H. Lord, G. P. and T. A., Chicago Great Western Railway, Chicago, Ill., mark envelope "Puzzle Department."

The Crowning Slight.

An Atchison man has been henpecked during the greater part of his life by a wife and five daughters. Against his will he has been obliged to take little homeopathic pills when he would have preferred quinine, to attend the episcopal church when he preferred the Baptist, and recently his women folks compelled him to be vaccinated by a woman doctor.—Atchison Globe.

6,434 Letters a Day.

The John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., received 6,434 orders Feb. 26, which is a monster day, but they expect to double this number by the middle of March. The firm is having a great trade in its specialties, potatoes, speltz, Bromus Inermis, Rape, Big Four Oats, Three Eared Corn and earliest vegetables. There is a wonderful demand for onions, cabbage peas and bean seed this year. Early Bird Radish and Lightning Cabbage, the earliest of this kind in the wide, wide world, are having a tremendous sale. The firm above mentioned is a large advertiser and use weekly newspapers—that tells the story.

Not So Sure.

At a dinner in Rottingdean lately, a royal academician stated to the company the curious fact that sugar and sumac are the only two words in English where sh is pronounced sh. There was much interest shown in the discovery, when Rudyard Kipling was heard from the other end of the table: "But, are you quite sure?"—Chicago Chronicle.

The International & Great Northern railway are sending out a map of Texas, Mexico and surrounding territory that is an excellent production of the map engraver's art, both artistically and geographically. The map is made on an unusually large scale, and is as near perfect as to details as it is possible to make it. Mr. D. J. Price, general passenger and ticket agent of the road, at Palestin, Texas, is sending copies of this map to anyone who asks for it and encloses seven cents in stamps to pay postage.

POSTED ON FINANCE.

At Least That Was the Impression She Gave Her Sister Club Members.

"It is simply impossible to keep posted on everything," said a club woman to a daughter of the American Revolution.

"Yes, indeed, it is," admitted the D. A. R. "But sometimes, if you are not quite posted, you can wriggle out of a difficult situation without seeming so very ignorant. For example, I was just saved by my presence of mind at a D. A. R. meeting the other day. Prof. Sparks, of the university, you know, read a lovely paper on 'Governeur Morris, Financier of the American Revolution.'

"'Who is this Governeur Morris?' said a friend of mine from the Fortnightly club. 'Seems to me I never heard of him.'

"There were half a dozen women around, and I was frightfully embarrassed. I never had heard of Governeur Morris, either, but you know, a D. A. R. is supposed to know all those things.

"'O, don't you remember?' I said. 'Morris was the man who financed the government and borrowed a lot of money to do it.'

"'Thank you,' said my friend from the Fortnightly.

"Now, the fact is, you know, dear," continued the D. A. R., "I really knew nothing of it whatever, except that Prof. Sparks's subject said that the man had financed the government, and I knew if he did that he must have had to borrow a lot of money."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Could Have Had His Mind.

Prof. Hendershott is well known in Pittsburgh as a man of affable temper, and it is rare that he shows even impatience. One day while traveling on a suburban trolley car to call on a friend, he asked the conductor to transfer him to the city street cars at a certain point. Soon afterward the car stopped and he was surprised to see outside the very friend he was seeking. He started to jump off, when the conductor accosted him. "You can't change for your car here," he said, brusquely. The professor passed him, taking no notice. "Can't change cars here, I tell you," snapped the conductor again. The professor, deep in conversation with his friend, merely waved his hand to indicate that the car might go on without him. "Here," cried the man in brass buttons, angrily, "don't I tell you that you can't change cars at this place?" Then the good old professor answered with severity: "But I can change my mind at this station, can't I?"—Golden Days.

Took Him Down.

A former commodore-captain of a famous trans-Atlantic line, while friendly and polite to his passengers when below, was very much the reverse if approached when on duty. As he happened to be on deck one fine afternoon, a lady, quite unaware of this peculiarity, accosting him with some trifling query as to the probable duration of the favorable weather, was both surprised and indignant to get curtly answered:

"Don't know, ma'am—don't know. Better go and ask the captain."

The lady, though taken somewhat aback, was quite equal to the occasion, and rejoined:

"Oh, I beg a thousand pardons. Excuse me, pray. I thought I was addressing the cook!"—Collier's Weekly.

Was It Suicide?

Brakeman—The trainboy dropped dead in the baggage car a few minutes ago.

Conductor—Poor fellow! Heart trouble, I suppose.

"I don't think so. He had one of his own cigars in his mouth at the time."—Chicago Evening News.

Hopeless Bachelor.

"What did Mr. Cummings say to you last night, Clara, when he was trying to button your glove?"

"Why, he said any man who made gloves that wouldn't button easier than mine ought to give up the business."

"Well, dear, take my advice and don't waste any more time in that direction."—Stray Stories.
